(c- $\overline{\mathrm{s}}$-Mf. Clay's bill in the senate, for the regulation of the tanff, reached its thrd reading in that body, whell serioue doubts began to bo entertained of the right of the aenate to originate a revenue lill-for such, and such ouly, in our estimation, ts Mr. I lay's project. The latter was then suddenly adopted by the hutase of representatives, in locu of the mangled bill of the comb muttee of ways and means, ansl very swifty passed, 118 to 85 , un T'ursday last. Sce the yeas and nays, page 12. It was imunediately sent from the house to the senate, where it yet reinainel. New Yonk. We mentioneal in our last, that some of the ohil bank-manufocturing-kcaven lanl appeared at Albany. It apprears that a cortain. Ilvah Recbee had written threatening letters to certain memhers of the assembly, if they voted agrinst the proposition to make a new loank at Itlaca, and that he hat offerel one member 10,000 dollurs in the stock, andso forth. "The surgeant-at-arms was sent to arrest him, and hee was brought a prisoner to Albany. It secoms that lie almitted the cluanges, hut justifiel them. "As to the theat to vote down other bills, he answerell that "it was in accordanee with the legislation of the state,' aml that if nembers whofor themselaes or their. friends were inturusted in a bank, were voted down by others, justice aml frofriety reyuired thot these latter shoulll be defeaterl; and the alded 'that this was a means of obtaining justice, that, as lie unlerstood, had been long practised.' 'l'he offer of stock he also defended on thie seore of 'iminemorial usuge.' "Meniburs, he said, had been constantly in the labit of subscribing for stock in banks, which thry lond voted for; and he further charged that he land been imluecel to mako this panticular offer at the instance of 'the firiends of the member'-w ho had named the precise umount of stock wanted! All which things, usuges de, the connsel for the aecused is said to he realy to sulstantiate. If so, we shall probably have a precious exposition of the art, trade anal mystery of lobbyings."

For all which, after much slelate, Mr. Beebee was Lurouglit to thw bar, nyprimaubled by the squaker, and releaseal from the enstody of the sergeant-at-arms.

The "Allany Argus" givea the following account of the ceremony:

The respondent having been brought to the bar in the eustonly of the sergeant-at-amos, the spraher direeted the following resplution to le: read to hint by the eferk:

Beatitia of tise press. From the Niew Ilampshire Patrint, of Feb 25. It will be scen that Mr. Blair has bcen defeated as printer to the next congress, and Messrs. Ginles & Seaton clected. Thus it is, the editor of the Gilobe, who has stoorl forth the champion of the people and the administration, and who has done more than almot any other man in expnsing the corruptions of the bank and the false and deceptive course of the oprosilion, has boen forced to give place to the editors of the Intelligencer, a leading and bitter opposition prine. And this too, has beell done by menibern of congress elected by the people to sustain the administration. When will these things cease? (iovermment patronage enough has been betowed upon the profligate Englishinan, Gales, to make filty prudent men rich, anil now another joh has been given him, for his scrviecs to the bask and the federal party.

A letter from Paris, of January 12th, gives the following ne the latest and most antheatic information from Constantinople:-
The progress of the pacha's troops in Asia Minor is rapid; insurrection in fast epreadug every where. The sultan has no moaey nad but few troops. He ennnot rely cither on the courage or fidelity of the latter; and it anay be regarded as certaia, that on their first encouater with Ibrahim, they will be defeated nnd dispersed, if not induced to join his trimmphat banner. All the beat letters from Constantinnple, dated the 10th ult. and received by the tast post, say that Ibratum was only a few day's murch from the capital, and express the fullest coaviction that nothing but fureign interference could cheek his progress. It is evident that the court of Russia is ansiously desiroun to preveat his going too far, and it is probnble that it will take meass to prevent him, if the danger becomes too inmminent to nliow of any time being inert in consultatioas with other Europenn powera on what ought to be done.

When the doors were reopened-
The senate proceeded to Ue eonsideration of the bill to modlfy the acte imporing duties on imports.
Atter a ronsiderable debate, the question belug upon Mr. Clay's motion to amend the bill (so as to require a home instead of a foreign valuation, nfer the year ( $8-2$ ).
Mr. Calhome snit that he regretted that this nmendinent had been offered, but, ns he lad to choose between it aud the failure of the bill, he had determined to vote for it. He voted for a, however, expressly on the ground, and with the declarawon, first, that if shouid not be so construed as to require that the value should be ascertained by addugg the anount of the duty to the valae of the zoods; and, second, that it shottd not be so applied as of violate that principle of the constinution Whieh requires that all taxes and imposta shall be uniform arotughout the I'nited states.
The question being taken on the amendment, it war decided an follows:

CAAS-Messrs. Bell, Bibb, Black, Calhoun, Chanbers, Clay, Clayton, Kwiag, Foot, Freliuglouysen, Hill, Ilolmes, Johaston, King, Kinight, Miller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Prenties, Riven, Rotbins, sprague, "'omilinson, T'yler, Wilkins- 26.

NAI's-Messrs. Benton, Buckner, Ihallas, Dickervon, Dudley, Forsyth, Grundy, Kane, Robinson, Seymour, Silsbee, Smuth, Waggaman, Webster, White, Wright-16.
So the amendment was agreed to.
On the suggestion of Mr. Tyler-
Mr. Sinifh moved to amend the bill in the secoud section, by striking out the words at the close of the seetion, consttuting the tast praragraph.
The section reads as follows, and the part moved to be stricken out is enclosed in brackets:
"sisec. 2 And be it further enacted, That so much of the second section of the act of the 1 th of July aforesaid, as fixes the rate of duty on all milled and fulled cloth, known by the name of plaine, kerseys, or Kendal cottons, of which wool is the only material, the value whercof does not exceed thirty five centa a square yard, at five per cent. ad valorem, shall be, and the same ia hereby, repealed. [And the said arucles whall be subject to the same duty of fifty per cent. as is proviled by use said second section for other manufactures of wool, whieh dusty shall be liable to the wame deduetious as are prescribed by the first seetion of this act."]
Mr. Clay expressed a mope that the amendment would not be pressed.
Mr, F'orrydh adrocated the propositlon to amend.
Some furilier remarks were made by Messrs. W"ebater, Clury ton, Clay, Fool and Miller, when the bill was, on motion of Mr. Dudley, laid on the table, in eonsequence of a message from the house, announcing the death of the bou. James Lend, a reprosentative from New York, and luviting the semate to attend the funeral to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.

The usual resolution was then adopted, and, on motion of Mr. Clay, it was Ordered, That when the genate adjnurns, it adjourn to meet to-morrow, at one o'elock. The senate thes adjourned.
February o3. Afer atuending the fuueral of Mr. Lent, of the bouse of representatives-
At lualf past one o'clock, the senate was ealled to order.
The chair communicated a report from the department of state, contalining a statement of passengers and seamen who have arrived in passeluyer slips.
Mr. Dallas presented a miemorial from the mauufacturers of worsted yara; wlich was laud on the table.
Ou tnotion of Mr. Clay, the bill to uodify the acts imposing duties ou imports, was taken up.
'The question beiug on the motion of Mr. Smith, to amend the accond section, some diseussion took place, in whth Messrs. Wright, Fool, Clay, Forayth, Huckner, Bell, Holmet, Smith, Sprogue, Chambers, Benton, Dicherson, Silsbee, FVelinghrysen and bils took part.
Mr. Sinith haviug modified his motion mo as to strike out the whole of the second section, (which goes to replace plains, kerseys, &e. where they stood before the net of July, 18,2) the reas and nays were ordered on that question.
Before asy question was taken, Mr. W'ilhins maved that the seuate do now adjourn.
Mr. Clay naked for the yeas and pays, which were ordered; and the question being taken it was decided as follows:
YEAS-Mrisirs. Benton, Buekner, Dahma, Dickerson, Dudley, Hill, Kbiglit, Itnbineon, Beymour, Sibbew, Smith, 'IMpton, Webster, Wilkims-14.
NAYB-Mcasrs. Bell, Bibb, Black, Cahoun, Chamhers, Chay, Clayton, kwing, Foot, Forss th, Fruhanghyeen, Graady, Hendricks, Holmes, Johnston, Kane, Kıe, Mangum, Miller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Pretisn, Rives, Robbun, Sprague, Tombinson, Troitp, Tyler, White, Wright-31.

So the senate refused to adjoarn.
The question then recurred on the motion to savike out the second section.
Some dscusnion took place between Messra, Webster, Clay, Chambers and Claylon, and the question was about to be takem; when
Mr. Chambers moved that the senate do now adjourn.
The yeas and nays being ordered, the question was taken and decided as follows:
YEAS-Mcssra, Benton, Bucknet, Chambers, Dallas, Dickerson, Ilendicks, Kane, Knight, Premiss, Robinsen, Seymour, Silsivee, Sinith, Webster, Wilkins-15.
NAY's-Memprs. Hell, Bibb, Black, Callomn, Clay, Clayton, Fwing, Foot, Forsyhh, Frelinghayse u, Grundy, Ilohncs, Johnsion, Kiug, Mangun, Niller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Rivee, Robbins, Eprague, 'Tipton, Tonlimea, 'Troup, Tyier, White, W'right-28.
Anter some remarka from Mr. Webeter and Mr. Clry, the queption was tiren taken ors the motion to ntrike out the second section of tie till, and decided as follows:
YEAS-Mexsrs. Benton, Duckner, Dallan, Duflicy, Forsyth, Grundy, Kane, Kimg, Hobuuson, Sulsbee, Sullh, Webster, White, Wriglt-14.
NAYS-Messts. Bell, Nibb, Black, Calhoun, Clay, Clayton, Dickerson, Ewhag, Foot, Frelinghuyaen, Ilendricks, Holmes, Johnston, Knight, Mangum, Miller, Moore, Naudsin, Poindexter, J'rmatins, Rives, Robhins, Seymour, Eprague, Tipton, 'romlinsoa, T'mup, Tyler, Walkins-29.

So the seuate refused to strike ont the second section.
Mr. Kame then unved inansend tisc bill hy adding another secdion, whels providsd that unthug ecuntamed in this act shonld be construcd to estend to the present duties on lead in plas, bary, of mimela, leaden miot, ted or wiote luad, dry or ground in oll, sugar of tend, &c. Ac.

Sr. Swith moved to amend the amendment by adding the worde "bar tron and castinge of tron, gunjowder, cannon, mortare, how itzers, camon balls, shelis for guns and howitzers," ke. Mr. S. said this propesstion was to carry out the viewn of the secretary of the treasury in reference to the protection of munibous of was.
After a iew words from Mr. Clay in opponition to the last promoition, and in favor of $1 t$ trom Mr. Sinith and Dickerson, the yeas and nays were ordered, and the question being taken, was decided as followa:
yEAS-Messra, Benton, Buckner, Clayton, Dallas, Dickerson, Ludiey, Hendricin, Kanc, Kobinson, Sinlth, Tipton, Webater, Wilkins, Wright-14.
NA Is-Messra. Hell, Dibb, Black, Calhoun, Clay, Ewing, Foot, Forsyth, Grundy, Holmes, Juhnaton, King, Kinight, Man gum, Milikr, More, Naudain, Poindester, Rives, Rubbins, Seymour, s'prague, Tomilsusmи, Troup, White-25.

Y:AS-Messrs. Benton, Burkner, Dickerson, Dudley, Hendricks, Kane, Hobinson, Silsbee, Sulth, I tpton, Wilkins, W'nght $-12$.
NAYg-Mesers. Bell, Bibb, Black, Calhonn, Clay, Clayton, Dallac, Ewing, Foot, Forsylb, Grundy, Holmes, Johneton, King, Kught, Mangum, Mıller, Moore, Naudaın, Poindezter, Kives, Enblins, Seymeur, Eprague, Tomilinson, Troup, 'Jyler, Webster, W'bite-27.
No the motion to amiend was rejected.
Mr. Forsyth then moved to strike out the 3 and 6 th eections of the bill, which attempt to blad all future congreseses untll the year 1842.
Mr. Webster made one or two nbservations on the motion.
The yeas and nays ware then ordered, and the question being taken, was decided as follows:
Y EAS-Mesra. Benton, Buckner, Dallas, Dickrrson, Dodley, Forsyth, Knne, Knight, Koluson, Seymour, Silsber, Smith, We bater-13.
NAYB-Mesara. Rell, Bibb, Black, Calhoun, Clay, Clayton, Fwing, Foot, Grundy, Inimes, Johinston, King, Magguin, MilIur, Moore, Naudain, Poinderter, Prentiss, Rives, Rubblins, Spraguv, Tipton, Tunhtaon, Troup, Tyler, Whate, Wilkine, Evighti-28.

Sou the motion was rejected.
Mr. Benton then moved to amend the bill by adding a new section, the object of which was to make a reduction of the drawhacks allowed on the exportation of articlea manufactured is the United Btates from forcign materials subject to dnty, in the same proportion as the redintion made in the duties by this bill.

The yeas and nays were ondered on thin motion.
After a few words from Messrs. Benton, Culhoun, Satth, Poindeyter, Foot aud Miller,

The qumaino was taken, nnd decided ns follows:
YEAB-Messrs. Benton, Buckner, Calhoun, Dallas, Dlekeronn, Ihudey, Fornyth, Jolmston, Kane, King, Rivee, Robinonn, Seymour, Tomilinson, Webster, White. Withins, Wright-18.

NAI'S-Mesers. Bell, Bibb, Black, Clay, Clayton, Fwing, Foot, Grundy, Hyudricks, Holmes, Knight, Mangum, Miller, Mnore, Nandain, Poindexier, Prentiss, Robbins, Sulsbee, Sunth, Episgue, Tipton, Troup, Tyler-24.

So the amendment was rejected.
Mr. Wright then moved to ameud the bill by adding a wection to re-tore the duties on coarse wool to the rates established by the bill of 1228.
On this queation the yeas and nays were ordered, and after an explanation from Mr. Wright, that his object was merely to place coarse wool as it was placed in 1898, in consequence of the adoption by this bill of a duty of $$$ per cent. on coarse woollens, the quention was taken and declded na follows:
YEAS-Mcasre. Dadley, Hendricks, Seymour, Silsbee, Tip. som, Weboter, Wright-7.
SATS-Messrs. Bell, Bilb, Biack, Buckner, Calhoun, Cley, Chayzon, Datias, Diekerson, Ewiug, Foot, Fornyth, Grundy, Holines, Johnston, King, Knight, Mangum, Miller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Prentuss, Eives, Robbins, Robinson, Suith, Tonnlinenn, Trnup, Tyler, Whate, Wilkine-32.

Mr. Sitsbe moved to strike out the words "enming from this side of the cape of Good Hope," in relerence to the diserionination made in the places from which silks are innported.
The motion was negatived without 1 divasion.
The bill was tben reported as amended.
Mr. Dallos then moved in amend the amendment made as in committer of the whole, in the third section, by striking out the words whieh sugrest the point to which the dutucs shali be ultimately reduced, to be the "revenue necessary to an economical administration of the government."
A disecussion took place on this mntion, in which It was enntended by Messin. Wehster, Dallat, Diekerson and Duckner, that these words, although not so intended, might be construed by mathern genuleinen, in the year 1842, as an abaudonmest of the protective principle, and a design on the part of those who had introduerd this bill, in make revenue alone the standard of all future duties on impurts.
Mr. Clayton and Mr. Clay regarded the lengnage as autharising no auch construction, and denied that any one would be ustified in inforting that there was to be any abandonmant of the system of protection. It was maisted by Mr. Claydon that the government could not be kept tugether if the prineiple of protretion were to be discarded in our policy, and declared that he would pause before he surrendered that principle, even to ave the anlon.
Mr. Fornth regarded the clause as an ahsurdity, on which an argument et ther for or ngainst protection might be rrected; hut as it was the only absindity which was agreeable to him, among the many absurdities conthined in the bill, he would wote for it.
Mr. Holmes said a few words to ratore the senate to good humor, quiting the juvenile ballad:

Let doge tlelight in burk and blte,
For God has made thems an;
Lrt bears and tugers growl aud fight,
For 'tis their nature, too.
Hut brethren you should never let Such nugry paswions rise,
Your pretty hands were never made To tear each others' eyes.
The question wan taken, the yeas and nays being ordered, and decided as follown:
YEAS-Mersrs. Benton, Dallas, Dirkerson, Dudiey, Knight, Prentus:, Robliow, Seymmur, Slabee, Tipton, Tomlinson, Webster, W"ilkine, Wright-14.
NAY&-Mensrs. Bell, Bibh, Black, Calhoun, Clay, Clayton, Ewing, Font, Forsyth, Grundy, Holmes, Jehnston, King. ManKph, Muller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Rives, Troup, Tyler, White-22.

So the amendmusut was rejected.
The muenduent made in committee by inserting "ateel" aniong the free articler, was not cuncurred in.

The other ainendments were concured in.
Mr. Webater then stated his intention to oppose the blll, mo its general princlples; but if the senate would take the question on the eugrossment without calling the yeas and nays, be would portpotie what he had to urge until the question should come up on lus final passage.
I'he question was then put, and the bill was ordered to be engrosaed.
On motion of Mr. Chry, the bill, as nmendet, was ordered to be printed, and 500 copirs were ordered.
Mr. Calhoun then said, that as the whole of Monday would probably be oceupied in this debate, he would pratpone the consideration of hls resolutions, which stood as the special order for Monday, unul Tuenday.
At 9 a'clock the senate adjourned.
February 25. Mr. Robbins, from the commitiee on the library, reported a joint resolution authorising an extension of the subscription of congress to the continuation of the eompilation of document publinhing by Gates & Seaton; wheh was read and ordered in a second rrading.
On miotion of Mr. Smith, the previoha orders were portponed, and the senate proceeded to conrider the bill making appropriations for the military service; which was considered, and ordered in a third readiug.
Tte bill war then read a third time and passed.
Mr. King moved to suapend for two days the order which ezelindes all perenns from the flong.
The chatir atated that it would be Impossible in preserve ondef, if the mile thould be puspended. His understond that when the gallery fronting the chair wan erected, it was Intended that the first seats should be resprved for ladien; and although it was now flled with peranos who undnabiedly had a right to necupy it, he was certain that it would he only necessary to make the sugarstinn, to taduce every gentieman to retire from that powition for the purpose of necommodating female visutors. At the same time, he sugnified his entire willingnewn to conform to the present motion, if sueh should be the unanimous wish of the senate.
Nin ohjection being made, the order whs suspended.
Thim bill to modify the act of the 14th day of Jaly, 1832, and all other acts impoing dutins on imports, was read a third titine, and the question being on itk pansage,
The yers and nays were ordered on this question, on the call of Mr. King,
Mr. Webster then rose, and gave hit rentiment in opposition to the bill. Ife mait, In the eunmencemont, a tribute in the purity, zeal and abilty of the senator from Keanncky, for whnm he had wo long entertianed a bigh respert, and to elevate whom to a situation where his falents might be atill more beneficial to his conntry, he had zvalously labored. He also complimented the talents and services of the senatof from Sonth Carolima, with whom he had no cten aeted, and for whom he had always felt a sincere regard. Ife friefly reviewed hin own course, when the former bills on the subject of the tariff were under conaiduratuu, and the conviction which was forced on the eart, and other portions of the cosntry, that the protective symtem was in be the settled pollicy of the gnvernment. New England had remisted, in the foret instance, the eatablislument of a high prosteetive policy; but when that was determined on, the enstern suates turned all their natural advantages, and their expotal of Wealth and industry, tato the new channel thus marked out for them. The bill of 1 tea6 was to carry owt the pronises made by the bit of 1824. He disliked the bill of 1828, yet he had voted for it on aecount of that feature in it winich gave the woollens the protection which the govermment had pledged itself to give by the law of 1834 . That bill decided the policy of the country, unless it was to be kept in a state of perpetual fluctuation and uncertainty.

Ather passing the law of last session, a law contaiuing some Geatures of concession and counprounise, when the country was not prepared for any chauge, the present bill, professing to be a bili of peace, of arrangement and of counpromise, is bruught forward by the distingusatied senator from Kentueky, who proleases to bave reaounced none of his former opuloas as to the conatutulionality and expediency of protection. The bill is also vupported by a gentleman whone opinious are directly the reverse of thuee eatertained by the seuator from Kentucky. When it wat supported by such upposite feclloges, it was tuportant to look into the provisions of the bill. Ife stated the varions conmiderations which ought to weigh with those who, as friends of the protective aystem, voted for thin bill.
He did not object to the prospectuve and hiennial reductions made by the bill up to 1641, bat he objected to the clauses which cid, in effect, probibit the repmaling action of any subsequent enageses upia this bill until 18t2. He also objected to the proviso in the sixth section, which was a restrictiou on the power of congress. He put it to the senator from Tennessee, (Mr. Grundy), who had introdured the clause, to say if be did not intend that it should sbow that congress was to be considered an bound by the hill, as far as this congress could biud the future legialaLuou of the country.
The protected articles may, by this bill, be reduced below 20 per cent. ad valorean, but cannot be raived above 20 per cent.
He opposed the bill because it imposed a restriction on the futare legislation of congress. Ile also opposed it, becaume it seenaed to yield the coustisutiosal power of protection. Varicus arguments were advanced by hitn to show that the gauthern poisticians would, if this bill were pussed, tell every ous of their constiments, that they liad gained some concession to the nplurone of the south. He waid that he appuruved the sagacinus simec of the southern gentlempa. Tiry wouid not suffier tiemselves to be provoked by friend or enemy to speak before the lims stouid come whien they ought to speak. They were mascers of the game, and they knew it. He commended their poliey, but he winhed them to sce that he underitood it. In giving up specific dusses, and substituting ad valorem, the bill had abasoloned the policy of all wive gavernients, and the policy of our own yovernment, and the policy alwaya advocated hy the senator from Kentucky. He viewed the bill as a surrender of the interesto of the uraalier capitalists, and a conecestion in fa. vor of overgrowa monopolins. He pointed out the effects of this ourrender on our own condition, and the handle which it would give th satiriste, and foleign writers, and the poets laureate of all the unonurclies of Earope, in turn our lnatitubotus and our pretensious intur ridicule. If this principie were carried into our navigation, he stated that it would be immedintely countervailed by Great Britaln. By limiting our coulltervailing powen, and leaving the countervailing power of Eurupe free, we puilin her hands weapouts to destroy us, and cast Fupe free, we pat in her hands weapoits to destroy ud, and cast our weapona of defenee at her feret. Under a colonial syitem, our manufacturers wruld not be more completely shackled than they will be by this bill.
He referred to tite finar powers by which the senator from Kentucky had said that aur protective system could be preserved. Ist, prolitition. 2dly, the free list. 3dly, incidental pro-tection-all of which would be found inadequate, -and the thh, diacrimiuation, or specific duties, was the only oue which would avan. Diserlminating and gpecidic dulies were the lant resource, and if tiat were to be given up, there coulll be no longer any bope for the protretive wystem, in waf or in pence. Hetansed, that unt being owners of the property, bit merrly agents of achuisistratora, we had no right in fruer a future con greaf. He regarded this bill ne the fast will and testnusent of this congress, which would be set aside by the people, but mut on the grusund of waut of sanity in thore principally engaged in baking it, for be never waw geatlemen manre fully In possospion of that sagacity, nor on acemint of any undue influence, al though the could not help thinking that panic had oousething to do with it, and that If the Bouth Carolina ordinance and replevin law had mot nppearef, this bill would never have appeared in the senate.
Its reference to the practical effect of the bill, be stated that be saw obstacled to the carising this bill into effieet, which appeared to huin to be iusurnountable. He thought that it would of difficult to ascertain the Iegal value of cotton. Ho took a view of the different vaiuca atiached to cotton, and of the professional ennatructions to which the ciause conceming eotton woald be subjueted. In relation to iron also, he thought that the diffeuities in avcertaining the value would be such as to repder the provision concerniug that article inoperative. The dutiee on Iron having litherto been specifc, no principle of valuation hat bret laid down. Ha considered that there was mo legisia.
tive proviaios by whieh the value on iron eould be aspensed. The caine remarks were applicable to sugar; and he statod a case to show the difficulty which exists in reaching a proper and boxed value sa a basis for duly. He supposed the answer wouid be, that if difficultice arise, the seeretary must get through them as well as he can; and if the caunot he must cone to congrees.

Af a measure of finance, he had no idea that the sill would be an efficient tneasure. He had not heard the aserction that the bill would at all n-duce the reveaue. Ne denied that the reduction of duties on boots and shoes and clothing would reduce the revenue. The bill would, in these branches, reduce thousanile of meebanies to ruilt, and by this operation would Increase the revenua. In this point, the bill ailas a deadly blow on the poor, the young, the enterprising; on the iaborand the ingenuity of tha country. By the introduction of foreign aleohol, st a reduced rate of duty, the revenue would be increased; but he thought gentlemea shonld pause befire they sanctioned this change. The en tire breaking up of the printiug establishonentu for printing calicoes would be one of the consequrnces of the passage of the bili; and in proof lie read sumic exiracti from a memorial of the Lowell manufacturers. 'Thewe instifutions mizht survive the three firmt reductions, but the fuurth would be fatal to them, On the spiuaing and weaving, the effect, If not mo disantrous, would scaresly the less nojectionable. The large espitaliats in that branch would be able to make noney by breaking down all young and enterprosilig evtablishnenta. In reference to woollens, with a dury of 90 per cent. on woollens, and 90 per cent. on wool, it in impossible that they can stand. The depreciation of property would be the Grat consequence, and the deprectation of eredit the nexi; and, by lim eurrender of their interests, long before this benificent home valuation can come to thwir relief, their eyed will be seated in death. As to iron, Eughishiron of Walew costs $$ 0$ dollars a ton, and the vupply is inexliaustible. Irou in Russia aud oweden costs 40 dollary a ton. English ircon has been taxed 30 dillart, and Baltic Iron Indollars a ton. The clange from sperific to ad valorem duly will work an injurious clange. He believed that this surrender once made, we could never return to the prespnt state of thinge, wothout auch a mornggle as would shake the couniry much more than any thing lias yet shakrn it.

He might be wrong. There might be no pledge, no convtitutinnal objection; but if so, why ithis bill? The people will not expert the paasage of this thill. There waw no expectulioh tht the eonminenepment of this short keswion that such a bill would be passed. The senate bad not had time th kuow the pleasure of their masters. No opportunity had been offored far otbaining a knowledge of either the eourse of public oqduion, or the etfect of this meadure no the public intervats. It was said the next congress would pass this bill if it wan not passed pow. He did not frar the nest eougress; but if that body should ehoove to undo what was uow dune, it would heve the power so to do.
If it was true, as the senator from Kentucky belleved, that the intention of South Carolias wis merely to enter into a lnw wuit with the United Btates, then there was no necessity for thie sacrifice of great interests. He helieved that if this bill should become a law, there will be an artion on the part of the penple at the next session to overthrow it. It will not be all requiem and lullaby wben this bill shail be paszid. Ot the contrary, he believed there woild be discord and discoutcnt. Ile had already pipressed liss views as in reduction in his resolutions. He believed there ought to be a rrduction to the point of neeesaary revenue; and that, as soon ast that point could be Accertained, any congrewn woulid be able to moake a tariff which would auit the conntry. The evtimatea of the sneretary of the treasinfy na to the point of revenire, vary materially frous those of others, lout if the true point eould be ancertained, he thoupht congress might at once proceed to aus adjustment of tive tariff with a prospect of sucress.
As he had commeneed with dolng justice to the motives of the renticmen on the other side, he atked that equal justice might be done to him in the oppooition which he was compelied to make to a measure whirh had been ushrred in with so much pmofession of peare and harmony. He would do as rauch to satisfy Bouth Caroilina as any man. He would take this tarifi and cut it down to the bone: mut he did not wish to ruph into untried systems. He beliseved that his constisuents would excnee hin for surrendering their Interesta, but they would not fargive him for a violation of the coustituition.
Mr. Clay replled th the senator from Masvachusetts, He paid a high tribute to the pairiotlsm and purity of that gentleman, and sald that he folt a deep and lasting regret that he had now to differ whith him. He was liappy, hawever, in find himself connected with bie friend from Maine, will whom he had acted in the final adjustinent of the Missouri quewion. He suggested that if the senator from Massarchaspte could not make soine appeal to a future enngress for forbearance, he must be opposed to all compromise. He repudiated auy share in bringing the existing evili on the country, and declared that when he saw the torch applied to a favorite syatem, he would rush to anve h , and o remiore security and peace. The honorable member had seen nothing within the laat six months, calculated to shew that the tarifl was not in danger. Had that ermilpmon not winnessed the rosulta of the recent electlons? Ilad he not heard the measage which had been received from the presinient? Did he not know that a majoritv of the frienila of the ailminiutration were opposed to the tarift? He wiwhed in put the system on in permanast foundation for nine or ten years, that the msnufacturer may go to his pillow at night without a fear that the system would be overthrown before morning. If he phould have beell abla to onnvert a set of politicians, who had heretofore heen steadily opposed to the prosective system. Into hieh is rift men, he should rejnice that he had been an succossful in making proselyter. He maintained that the net of 1824 remorted th the poliay of magkiug a tarif without regard to revenue. He (Mr, C.) winhed to In ciearly understood as to the points which he liad relied in fir the protectiop of the sndurtry of the country. He havl nanued, la, [urobitition- 2 dly, the imposition of lingh dutics withost regard to the nmonnt of revenue- $3 \mathrm{~d} l \mathrm{y}$, a limatation of the revinut affording juotertmon as far as he could-and 4thiy, by ewenuraqung the manufacturera hy letting in articies free of duty. Jle might have added a sth nusule, loy regulatiag sales by auction, all soportant bigject witech toe manutacturcerm liad eolifited eongiest in accouplizh, hut which land nut yet bren done,
He expreased his willinguess to liave the efleet of hils bill to be decidrd by the opinions of the manufiarturers themwelve日, $n$ large number of whom are now itwembled in Washington, sud whome alaust unaninous voice would Ine in favor fit his bill. He referred to eorroxpondence to prove that the bitt befine the house would be minous to their interests, whinte the bull before the senate would resuove all fear of ruin. In reference to iron he renimded the menator from Massachusctis, that, by n new process ralled eaking. Iron would sonn be manufactured in this couniry at as low a rate as in England. Ilis whole oljection to the argument of the erbabur twas, that low bounded forward to 1852 , and undertonk to phroplieay what would lie tho ptate of things at that pormol. Ile woubl an somb rely on the forecaat of the senatur fomin Massachuretts as nu any towshormf the senate, or of the combunity; bit he cond mon loulorie that the senator oo many contimencics. An Auserican sutosmas will lonk abroad upon all the intereats of the eonntry, and would comprebend in one view all its eballition. Ife wat as inaewsible to lear ss any one, and theretiore the imputation that tisa measure was introducod under the intluence of a panic, could nut affeet him. Hut he could not lse insensible to the clange which had taken place in the aifuation of thimge, even siace the commencement of the sesajos. Attiont tioue south Carolina stond alonp; but, since then, Virginia had eont a cmmusiwioner, or a ininister, to South ("aroliua, in Induce lier to dolay ber operations of linstiliiy. If South Carolina should aecede to her request, will not Virginia go whil ber in lier ulteriot measirea, in ease, ber griev ances slionld not be redrosxpd? Cival wap aight be the result. He was not willing to apjaly the sword to reduce the nouth to abpalience. Not that circumptances might not arise, which would rcnder it necrasary toreaurl to force. Itut in reference o $n$ foreign power, ticre wat aiways a remictatice to engage in war, utithl every effurt at megotiation bad failed: and, if there was this uawillifgnesp to engage in fereien war, fow much more relnctance ouglot there to be to engaze in a war at fonme, in a context in which lie who commands in chief inlglit not be willing to stop tutil he should lave placed himseifon a thmene. Ife did nut foar пny mieconstructoon of the pledge contained in the bill; and lie bopued that the nunufarturers would ear on and orgoger, confikent bat the abandiontacnt of protecios was ever intended, anil looking to more favorable timen fur a runewal nf a more calicient tarmf.
lle asw no difficulty in pattimg an ertionate on tie valne of cotton. t'ongress lays down the principls, and it will remala for the wercetary of tie trea-ury, fundor the direction of the president, to earry the law intn eftect. 'I'he rule is preseribed, and Ise conbld tut anticigate nny daliculty in acting upon it. Ife went anime Wibat at harge into statemente anil argubsenta to mus. taith his position in rejuremee to coston. In the woral form of comatruction wheh could lon put on the Jaw by the recretary of the Irwasury, the enston interest would enjoy a mistivient prritection unth the ycar $18 \$$. Ile sliewed what wosid lue hos own conaruction, which wonld leave that interesa in a still better condi. thin. It womblily competent, however, for coagrexa, who would again be in session hefiare this law enula pointorfiret, to porrect any erriofe trbith mught be imade. In refrerence in tie powers of the weretary to rause a proper apprnimement to be mads, loe guoted from the art of $185 \cdot$; but repeated that any dificuity in this matter could be ohviated by eongrega at ita next mesimu. He referred to the retuctions which woilid be effected by this bill in the article of filks, and in other items. Hut pren if the reductions should be down so the revenue point, there was a reservation 10 augment or dimisish the revenue as carcumstances might requirc. He stated that the lant series of gradationa In 184 would leave the dutian od wonliens at as per cent. There wore, he said, two classes of manufacturers, the political and the hasinesi maniffetitrers. The political manmfacturere ware unwilling to give up any thing; but there was not a huaipess manufacturer wiblin lis kanwledge who was not satsfied with the preseent hill. He explaiacd his bill as going on the byasd principle of lonking to the intercsts of all, and emsbracing the Fafety and aecurity of all, and the conciliation of the rountry, He asked If the senfor frim Massachusette was not willing that opposita intcresis shomid unite for the purpmae of bringing about harmony and gnod fceling. The mooth had aiven un lier ennatitational olijections, and had almo yipilied the bome valuation, and if conld not be sald. thorefore, that there liad been no saerifice of her interests. T'luere liad heen, therefore, mo abanitionment of priaciple, but all parta of this great family had come totethar prepured to make inutual concessions for the purpose of restoritig harmony.

It being near 4 n'elnck, a motion was made by Mr. W'iuling and Mr. Fining, in mopresman, to take n rrepsef for two hoara, but on sneste opposition made hy Mr. Calhourn and otbera, Mr. f\%z enid lie wa* willing to holbie on, and the motion was with. Ilrawn.]

position which had been offired. There were some who had sald, let the taritf go down, if the next congrean choosen, there will be a reaction afterwarda, lut lie thorght that thene gentlemen took coundel of passions alsove which it was the duty of statesmen to clevate themsclves. He whas for eneountering no certain danger for the purpose of providing eome userertais gond. He wislied to compromise all interests, and it was with this thme policy, that he had proposed nnollser great measure, which had twice received the sanction of a majonty of the scaate. He would not acquicsce in the views of thase wha relied nn reaction. Biasilar wan the expectation, at the last seswion, but there had been no beneticlal result. Ile was for ooneiliathog all intef--Ets, let whomenever might fail, and whimsoerer nsight succeed. Ile regretted that the bill, in seleet committee, had been injured by striking out the ciagac making cotion free, and stated that his was not dolie lay his vote, or hy that of his friend from Dela ware. Still it was a ineasture catctalated to promote the great nhject for which it was iutroduced. He was not diwposed to throw himself Gorward to 1852, but fue did int think that there was any cause for appreberusion as to the provisious which look to that period.
The opponents of the bill would rend out a faming aword: the friends of the bill would send out a flaning sword, accompanied by the olive branch. The gentleman from Mawsachusetts had bonght proper to say that be (Mr. Clay) would bave voted fin the revenue enllection bill. It was true lie would liave votrd for it, lutt he feit no new born zeal prompting him to make pecehes on the subject.
He thonght of the administration as he always had thouglat, and he lad detcrmined to leave it to the friends of the cxecutive to bear themselves out in defence of the bill. Ile would have onted for It, but it would have leen with reluctance, because of the consequences which may result from the measure. He tated that, with sonie exceptions, as to the high-toned doctrinea which were th bet lound in the document, he npproved of the general tone of tise proclamation of the president, and of his inessage to the senate on the subject of Soush Carolian.
The opponents of this bill rely on force; lts friends cry out farce and affectinn. One wide eries ont-power! power: power: I'he other side crien out power, but desiren to see it restrained and trimpered by diacretion and mercy, nnd not to ereate a conlagration from one end of the union to the other. Je believed fise grotlemen who opposed the hili did not wiwh for eivil war, luat the defeat of the bill would lead to consequences to he deplored. And he would tuot wish to see saekved eitier, drenlated fields, and atreams of American blood slicel by American citizens.

Ile liad been arcisenl of amhtion in introduning this measure. tle dexpised the grovelling apirits from which the pharge came, and uliemsemp tla sacmsation to the wiads, If eongress would and theibisiod this bil, be would willingly rrtire to his lumene, to the groves of Asloland, where be eosild find a filelity and an aftection which lue lad not alwaye found in public lofe.

Mr. Smith said thim bill dil not rewuce the revenire one dollaf. Tiliere will lum no reduction, hut the importations would be reatrimed.

After speaking for a few minuteg, Mr. Smith gave way at half past 4, and Mr, Silehire moved tinat the senate take a recesk till 6 o'clockayes 17, noes 19. So the inotion was negnilved.

Mr. Smilt thea resumen, and went intn a review of the various peytions of the bill. Ile agreed wath the senator from Massaehusets that thid boH repeals the whole of the gromend on which our revenue system was butit.

Mr. Kosbing then moved tisat the senate take a recesn till 6 n'elnck-ayes 17, nomes $1 \%$.
The rhair voting in the affirmative, it was ordered that the senate tuke a recess till $6 a^{\prime}$ csock.

Mr. Smilh said n few words aguinst the bili.
Mr. Hell spoke briefly in favor of the bill.
Mr. Dickerson, after mome temarks moved in serommit the bill to the committee from which it was reported, with insfruc. tions an to ansend it tlas the graumal rciluctions of dusiow shall not be more unfavorahte in those artieles which are suliject io a speeific duty than to such as are smbject to ad valorrin dutice

Mr. Grundy asked the yeas and nays on the motion; which were ordered.

Mr. Spratere made a few remarks in favor of the bith.
Mr. Dickersos made some nhaervations.
Mr. Clay then rome, and snld that as it was mndersiond tint a sunilar till liad been ordered to be engrossed for a third readitg in the otlor house, lie wnuld niove that the reante now adjourn. The apnate then adjourned.

February 26. The fhllowing resolation offered yesterday by Mr. $H B 6$, was taken up and agreed tos Resolred, Tliat the wecretary of atate lee dirreted to lay before the senate, as goon as his duties will permit, astatement, showing the iacrease per centam of the white population of each state and territory of the United Ktates, at the feverni decimal periods from the year 1790 in $$ \times 30$ exelnaive. Alsn the per centuin of increase of slaves and frpe persons of color, flowing the refative proportion whlch stich Increase may hoar to the white populatios; alon, the increase per centum of aliens within the same period, and the proportion that increase inay Jwar to natwe and naturalized citizons. Also the increase per equasmon of the militin force of the U'mited States, together with such other statistical information bearing on the same, as the secretary may deria neefit and expedient.

On motion of Mr. Hendrickr, the senate proceeded to consider the bill for the enntipution of the Cumberland road, in the states of Indiauta and Ittinns.
Mr. Headricks moved to amend the bill, by inserting an additional appropriation of $12 \mathrm{~L}, 000$ dollars, for repairing the Cumberlaud road east of the Ohin.
The amendment was agreed to; as well as another to authorise a change in the location of a certain part of the road, and the bill ordered to be read a thiril time.

Mr. Grumly, from the joint connmittec appointed to wait on the president and viee preakient elect, tuade the following report:
"The joint entmmittee appointed to wait on the president and vice prevident elect, and notify them of their election, report that they have performed that duty in part, anil have watted on Andrew Jackxon, of Tennessee, anal informed him of his election to the ofice of presulent of the United States, for fonn years, commenring on the 4th of March next, and received from him, in answer to the eommunication made by us, that he felt gratefinl for this manifestatinn of the continued public confidenee and favor, and would endeavor to merit a continuance of the approLration of his fellow citizens, by ennstant efforts, so to discharge his dutiea, as to pinmote the wrlfare of our common country."
The ehair laid before the menate a report from the secretary of war, eounmunicatiog a statement of arms mannfactured at the national armories, and expenditures there, which was ordered to be printed.
The resolutions offered sometime since liy Mr. Calhoun were taken up; ansl Mr. Calhoun, at ennsiderable length, took an opportunity to reply to Mr. Wedster on certain points inade in the debate on the bill further to enforee the eollection of datirs on importe, and Mr. Wehster rejoined. Measra. Sprague and forsydh also made a few remarks. Alter which Mr. Culhoun eonsented tiat lis resolutions should be laid on the table, without an intention to eall them up again.

The lifll from the linuse to modify the act of the 1 thin of Juty, and other artsimposing duties on importi, was read a first time, and ordered to a meennd rearling.*
The bill of the senate on the same suljeet was then laid on the tainfe. The semate tien adjourned.
[Mr. ('alhoun's eonstitutional argument thia day, and Mr. Webster's reply were very interesting, and slatll be preserved. In the ronre of his remarka, Mr. C. secmed to imply that Mr. W. wi-lsed to win favor ia a certain quarter-(with the administration), whieh Mr. C. explained and said he hail not imputed suels motives-Mr. Webster saying he lad no new lorn zeal, nor liat tie, in any way, altered his views concerning the ad-mini-tration, &e. Mr. (alhoun alluded to n "pasticular poputation in the snuth." Mr. Webster snid that no northerm gebileoman hesured to prodince evil out of it-and so Mr. C. said that lic helirved-but the "inevitable current of things" wase to di-tusb this popilation.]
Felraary 25. 'The bill to modify the act of the 14th July, and other arts impmoing daties on limports, was reall a second time.
The till beme then considrred as in committec of the whole,
Mr. Chry thon umver that the bill be reported to the senate.
Mr. Grundv inguired, if the senator from Keatheky liad exa mined the bill to ascertain if it was the same as the bill which had been before the kenate.
Mr. Cloy replied in the affirmative: and said, that he believed it eorresponderd word for word with the other bill.
Mir. Dickerson moved to amend the bill by adding a provision, that the rute by which the graduation of duties shatl be mate, shalf he the annual report of the state of commerce and naviga tion, for the last year.
Mr. Clay opposed the amendment, becanse he thonght that it was fuunded on a total unsappreliension of the bill. There woald be now no difficulty in execnting the law, if the secretary of the treasury should take it up in the ppirt in which it will be passed. At the next nension there will be a month before the bitt will go into operation, while there are but three days left of this seesion, and any amendment made now must hazaid the measare. He would take the example of the framers of the constitntinn and fotlow it. They said, plake the ennstitution, and fot it be amended afterwards, and not now hazard the measure.
Mr. Webnter said, that although he thonght that some nmendments were intispensahty necessary, yet if the hill were to pawn, it ought to pae at once, nud he hoped his friend, from New Jerey, wonld withlraw fite amendment, and leave the matter to stand over until next session.

Mr. Smith, referring to the state of annther bill, anid that he would now fire notice that he should to-morrow move to lay thas bill on the tahte, instil the ensuing bill shall have pa*aen.
Mr. Clayton waid, that although lie was in fivor of the primi. ple of the amendument, he should vose against it, beeanse the thousht that it would, at this period of the sesmion, hazard the parkage of the measure.

Mr. Rosbine expressed a wish to state his objections to the bill, but on the angestion of Mr. Clay, who said he would not press the third reading today, *Tlity in Mr. C'tay": lill, adomed by the honee of represenratives and pased, in lien' of Mr. Verplanek's - for the rrason aseigned in page $t$.

Mr. Robbine gave way untll the question on the third readiug should come up.
The bill was then reported without amendment, and ordered to be read a third time.
Mr. Chambers inoverl to pontpone the preeceding orders, for the purpose of taking up the juint resolution extemaling the sabseripuon made to the compilatuon of docamenta, now in progress by Gales & Seaton, to the continnation of the same; which was agreed to.

The nusclution was then read a second time, and considered as in committee of the whole.
Mr. Hill asked what whe the eost of the documents already printed. Mr. Robsins raid lue was not prepared to answer.
The rcsolution was then reported whout ameadrnent. The question baing on the third reading of the resolution, Mr. Hill askeil for the yeas anil muys, which were ordered.
After a few words from Mr. Chawders and Mr. Robbins, the questinn was taken and dreided as follows:
YF.As-Meswrs. Bell, Hack, C'hambers, Clay, Clayton, Ewwing, Foot, F'relinghuysen, flendricke, flolmes, Kane, Kilught, Naudain, Poinflester, Roblins, Robinson, Scymour, Stilsbee, Tijuton, Tomlinson, Wagganaan, Webster-22.
NAYS-Mesars. Benton, Buckner, Dallas, Dickenon, Grundy, Ibill, King, Moore, W'lite-9.
So the resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.
Mr. Foot moved to reconsider the vote of yepterday, by which the reanhution mifired liy Mr. Buckner was agreed to. It was his object to refer the resolution to the committes on the library, Ile maid that he was not aware of the extant to which the resoIution went, untif he saw it in the papers.
The motion was laid on the table.
A great deal of other business was attended to, and variounly forwarded fior final aetion-atl which witl fully appear in tho list of nets, &e.
Thie spate took a recess till 5 n'elock.
In the erening session, a large number of private bills were ordered to a third reading.
Fehruary 28. The following resolution offered yesterday by Mr. CAambers, (beranse of the atiandoument of all hope of acting on the subjeet at the preseut session) was takeo up and agreed to-Nesolved, That tise sceretary of the senate cause to be published during the rccess of congress, six linudred eopies of the aygtem of civil and criminal laws, reported by the jroint committee appointell for that purpose; and also cause an index to the same to be made, one copy whereof shall be delivered to each member of the next congress, and the resillue to sueh persons as may be drsignated ly the said joint commintee.
The senate made extua allowances to the donr keepers, messengern, &e. and then, spending some timu in cxecutive bumbess, took a recess till evening. We have no account of the proceedings of the evening session.

HOERE OF REPRERENTATIVES.

Friday, Feb. 20. Mr. Washington, by leave, presented a remonstraise and meanorial of a connmittee appotited at a large and lighly respectahle meeting of the citizens of Washingtow, in general town mecting assembled, on behalf nf all the citizene of said city, againet the memorial of the Baltimore and Ohio rait road company, which waspresented to the house on the 18 in inst.; whilelt remonstrance and memoriat was referred to the cominittee on mands and canals.
Mr. Joot ntfured the following remolution:
Resolrod, 'I'lat the clerk of this hopuse procure for the use of the members two thousand copies of the mannal on sitk, publishell by J. H. Cobb, of Iledham, in the state of Massachusetts, provided the cost shall not exceed one thousand dolisrs.

Mr. Clay, of Alabama, moved to lay it on the talle.
Mr. Armold demanded the yeas and wayn-whieh being taken stood as follows: yeas 61, nays $44-\mathrm{so}$ the house refused to lay the resolution upon the table.
Mr. Roof then delivered a very animated speech in its support: in which he rommenten, with some geverity, on Mr. Clay's nttempt to defeat the measure before a word could be heard in ith favor.
Mr. Clay rose to reply, when
Mr. Hoffiman rose and annonnced to the hnuse the decease of James Lent, jr, a meinlier of the honse of representatives from the state of New York. Aher zome appropriate remarks, Mr. If. snbmitted the following resolntions, whiel were unnuimously adoptel:

1. Resolred, That the members of this house, will testify their respers fir the menuory of James I.ent, deceased, tate a member of this house from the state of New York, by weariag crape on the lef arm for the remainder of the present session of congresp.
2. Resolred, That this liowse will attend the funeral of the late James Lent, to-morrow, at II o'efock, A. M. and that a comrattee be appointed to take order for, and to. superintend, the said funeral.
3. Renolred, That a message be sent to the senate to notify that body of the death of Jamen Jent, late a member of this house, and that his funeral will take place to-morrow, at 11 o'clock.
The house then adjourned.
Satwrday, Frb. 23. After attendiog the faneral of the deceand member, Mr. Lent, the lionse pursuant to adjournment, asmbubled at 2 o'elock, but no quorum appeariag, motion for adjournment prevalled, and the house adjourned.

The following were the observations made by Mr. Hoffman, of New Iork, in announcing to the bouse the death of his late coll-ague:

Mr. Speaker: It becomes my melaneholy duty to announce to the houpe the death of my friend and colleague, the hon. James Lent. Atter a short ilinews, but excevdingly severe, he died last eveuing at a iste bour.

I do not intend to detain the house by a detail of bis private virtues. As a son be was dutiful to his parents; as a husbaud, most affectionate to has wife; as a parent, kind and indutgent, but prudent to his chilifent and their teare and aftietions which I have in part witnessed, are the bent textimomals of tios private orth.
In early life, destined to the mercantile profession, that spirit of enterprise wiblh characterises our poople, led him to vinit the farther Envi-India and Chima. There, he bad an opportublty of observing the manners, morals, religion, and political institutions of those remote and distant nations, and of comparing them with the manners, morals, religum, and potitieal institutions of hus native country. That conoparison led him to a atrong conclunion in favor of our relogion and polltical institutions over those of tise tnost pivilixed nations of the enst-a preference decifed and manifest in his whole atter hife.

As a chitizen, he was liberal without ostentation. With a mild and amiable heart, practising the kindert condencension of man ner, he was in all things inflexibte in his devotiun to duty. Instructed by experience, he was aiways useful and atway honest. If be did not, froin the modest dithidence of his temper, mingle publiely in our dispunsions here, with a erirrcet knowledge of trade and business, he frequently aided by his own the judgment of others.

I have known him well. In an intimate acquaintance of several yearn while we inave been meminers of thas houseg in every thing pubise and private, I have fotind him eminently distinguished for purity of heart, uprightness of intention, and justneas of design. If others here have won my estepu, and many bave; none has deserved or acquiretl a strouger hold on my best affectious. As the depeased intimated no wish as to the dispo. sition of his remains, I move you these three resolutions expresilve of that respect I feel for him, and in which the house will eonenr.

Monday, Feb. 25. After the morning business, which resulted onty in laying eertaln bills on the table-

Mr. Wickliffe unoved that the house proceed to the special order of the day, (whieh is the tarifl bill).

Mr. Bell boped the house wouid not do so untll it lhad first disposed of the bilt from the senate.

Mr. Honldin moved a call of tie house.
Mr. Wiektiffe said that if the house proceeded to the order of the day, he hoped they wonld dixpmes of the nonendments in the bill before it, when he should oftier nnotiner bill to reduce the tariff, such an he hoped would umite the votes of a nuajurity of the house.
Mr. Boulfin withdrew his mntion for a call.
Mr. H'ickliff "then said, that as Mr. Bell opposed the execation of the apecial order, the would ask the ywas and nays upon his motion to exepute it. They were ordered hy the house, and being taken, stood as follows: yeaw 80, nayw 106 .
So the house refused to proceed to tise urders of the day.
Mr. Vance moved to go into committee of the wiole on the atate of the union and take up the bill from the aenate on the mubject of disponing of the proceeds of the public lands for a limited time.
The chair decided that such a motion could not be made until ha house had reached the orders of the day.
Mr. Vance trok an appeal.
The apeaker explained lus decision, and Mr. Fance the grouuds of bie appeal.
Mr. Fickliffe then eugrexted that the vote taken by yeas and nays, refuring to execute the epecial order of the day, was insumbient to provent the taking up of that order, Inasmuch as the rule to go inth the special order every day at one o'plock, had been passed by two-thirdr, it would require two-thirds to prevent it.
The opeaker said it was tno late to make this question now, as other business was before the louse.
Mr. Daniel asid he should insist on the same ground, and would take an appeal.
The chacir said there was aiready an appenal before the house. Mr. Vance, in order to have the question tried, withdrew his appeal.

Mr. Daniel then appealed, and insisted that the apecial order hould be ereeuted.
The question of order was argued by Mears. Wickliffe, Careon, Taylor, Thompeon, of Geg. Daniel, Sutherland and Dearborn; alter which
Mr. Daniel withdrew hile appeal.
Mr. Willams now moved to postpone all the orders of the day which preeede the bill from tive senate un disposing of the proceeds of the public innds.
Mr. Carson inquired whuther the tarif bill was Included in he ordern?
The chair replied in the negative.
Mr. Curron appealed from this declsion.

The apeoker said no appeal could lie, as the motion was to postpone all the ordere, whistever they might be.
Mr. W'illiams inquired whether two thirds were necessary to ponipone all the orderas?
The chatr replied in the affirmative.
Mr. W'ithisms then moved the poryponement of each particular bill as they were anuounced in successmons.
On portponing a bill in refation to the territory of Michigan, Mr. Piummer delivered a long and carnest remonstrance-but the bili was postponed.
On postjouing the Virginia milliary land warrant bill Mr. Lew is dematuded the yeas and ways, but the bouse refused to order them.
The house at length arrived at the senate's bill further to enforce the collection of the rerenue.
The bill was read a first tiate.
Mr. 16'hilliesry moved that it now have itn second reading.
Mr. Leris inoved tu pontpone the bill until to-marruw.
Mr. Williams moved to lay the bill on the table.
Mr. Boon asked the yeas and nays on the unotion. They were ordered and taken-and stood as fullowe: yeas 58, naye 14\%.

The bill then had its mecond realing.
Mr. Carson moved to refer the bil to the committee of the whole on the state of the union.
After mone discuavion on thas motinn-
Mr. Bell moved to portpone the bili to to-morrow.
The debate coutinuing with great animation-
Mr. Hickliffe inoved a postponement till T'luuraday.
The debate continued with increasing earnestness until 5 o'rlock, when the question was decided by yeas and nays an followd-yeas 77, nays 108 .
Mr. Bates, of Maine, moved to postpone till Wednesday; which, after a ahort discussion, was aiso negatived by yeas and bay.-y yan 84, nayw 99.

Mr. H'ickliffe inumediately moved that the bouse proceed to execute the special urder, by taking up the hatitf bitt.
The motion prevailed, and on bustion of Mr. Letcher, the bouke went into comanutee of the whole, under instruptions to stike out the boily of Mr. Ferplanok's bill, and insert that of Mr. Clay, from the spnate. Tlins was done. The bill was repirted to the bouse, and after a brief debate it was ordered to its third rrading-yeas 105, nays il. The houve adjourned at inalf past 8 o'clock.

Thesday, Feb. 96. Mr. Hogan moved to refer the report of the naval committee, in regard to alleged abuses in the navy, together with the accompanying papers, to the seeretary of the navy.
Mr. Watmongh made a spirited opposition to the motion, and In vindication of the officers of the navy, poncluded by moving to jay the subject upon the table.

Which motion was agreed to.
The other morning business wiil sufficiently appear in ite progreas. The honase proceeded to the orders of tive day.
The tarif bih, as unended, by inserting the whole bill of Mr. Clay, in the slope in which it has been ordrred to a third reading ill the penate, was read a third time, and the question boing on its pasenge-
Mr. Huntington, after a few remarks on the great Importance of this question, moved a call of the house.
The house was catted accordingly.
It appeared that 201 members were present.
Mr. Burges anoved to suspeth further proceediags on the eall, but the motion fatiod-aycs 69, noes 78 .
The door* were then cloaed, and the exeuses of absentees received. Proceeding" were then suspended, and the doors of the hall again opened.
Mr. Burges remonstrated very warmiy against the passage of the bill; and in the course of his remarks adverted with sonse neverity to the agency of Mr. Clay, In origiuating the measure. Mr. Jenifor replied with warmih to this part of the epeech, and vindicated the purity of Mr. Clay'a motives and parposes.
Mr. Fouter eaill his constitntiounal ohjections to the bill hed been removed by a closer examination of ith provisions. gull he did not like the bill, but was willing to take it as en experiment.
Mr. Denny delivered, al conviderahle leugth, the reasons that would lindnce him tn vote against the bill.
Mr. Dantel replied to the remarks of Mr. Burges in reapect to Mr. Clry, and vindiented tha generai objects of the bill. He demanded the previous question; but withdrew his motion at requent of

Mr. Burget, who briefly, but very severely rejoined.
Mr. Sulterland then made a highly animated speech in opposition to the bill.
Mr. Carson demanded the previous question; but the motion failed, only 65 rising to seennd it.
Nr. Bates, of Maine, then gave the reasons why he should vote for the bill; and Mr. Pendleton stated the grounds upou whith he should vote against it.

Mr. Me Duffie, though not believing the bill proposed to make to the south ali the concession to which they were Jaolly entitled, yet he believed, such as it was, it would give pence to the conmiry, and therefore would vote for it.
Mr. Speight moved the previous question, but-innmediately withdrew the motion.
Mr. Huntington asked for the yess and nays on the pasange or the bill, which were ordered.

Mr. Rates, of Mass. made his protent against the bill, as a total urrender of the principle of protection.
Mr. 5 flitums unw uioved for the previous question.
The motion was seconilpd-ay es 93 , noes 65 .
Mr. Dickson called for the yens anml riays on'the previous qusstion, and they were ordered by the hamse.

The previous question was then put as tollows:
Shall the main question be now put?
The yeas and nays being taken, stood-yeas 10R, nays 85.
The main question, siz: shall this bill pansi was then put, and decided by yeas and nays, as fillows:

An the bill was parsef, and sent to the senate for coneurreoce.
Mr. Willicms new moved to poetponi all the orders of the day, both geperal and apecial, which pricede the senate's bill for the disposition of the procceds of the public lands. Ile, however, consented to withdraw this general motion, and allow the or dera to be called separately.
They were so called; and when the binuse had reached the bill for allowing the herrs of Winter to sue the United states to try their title,
Mr. Plummer made an effort in induce the house to discuss that bill; but the louse refused; and, on motion of Mr. Irvis, it was laid upon the table.
The house having at length arrived at the bill further to provide for the enllection of duties on imports-

Mr. Williams moved to postpone this bill untll to-morrow
Mr. Irrin demanded the yeas and nays on the motuon. They were taken, and stond as follows: yeas 81, nays 105.

Bo the house refused to pustpone the bill.
Mr. Daniel now unoved to lay the ball in the table, and demanded the yeas and nays on that inotion. They were orderid by the house. He, however, consented to withdraw the motion at the request of Mr. Arnald, who phomised to renew the same motion.
Mr. Arnold then ssid he should change his courne in relation to thals bin, it consequence of the loonev having passed the bili reducing the tariff. Mr. A. was going into some remarks on the mockery of passing wuch a bill now, when he was called to order by the chetr. After trying several motions, with the vew of haviog it in order to proceed In his reniarkn, Mr. A. relinquished his devign, and, according to promise, moved to lay the bill on the table.
The yeas and naye were demanded on this motion, and being taken, they stood as follows: yeas 58 , nays 132.

Ho the honse refured to lay the bill nn the table.
Mr. Mordis moved that the bouse now take a reress until 6 o'elock, and denasaded the ycas and nays, but withdrew bis motion: when
Mr. Deariorn moved the previnus question on the bill.
The chatr was ascertaining whetiser the motion was seconded, Wen
Mr. Mc Duffie rose and asked leave to address an appeal to the house.
The speaker was proceeding in the count, when
Mr. MeDuffie insinted on being heard.
Great confintion arose: but amidst cries of "order" and "count," Mr. MeD"y voice wha heard, saying that all lie naked was fair disenspibn. If gentlemen were disposed to hear the opponents of the bill, he was really to mect thein, but if not, and if he enuld get forty men to mtand by him, he would eontioue to move adjournmente and call for geas and nays until the end of the session.

Mr. Carron exelaimed "I will support you, sit"-several other roiees cried ont in a similar manncr.
The opeaker called to oniler.
Mr. Bell rose aud began to speak, but his words were inandible from the moise.
Mr. McDuffie minved repentedly to adjourn.
The speaker called him to order, and udmonished him that a moniber why on the floor.
As anon as the reporter could hear any thing distinctly,
Mr. Hell was saying, that he had no wish to cut off discussion, if that was what the opponeats of the bill dexired; and if they were ready to discuss its merits, and nnt to pat it by, he should not austain the motion for the previous question.

Mr. Mc Durne moved that the house adjourn.
The efcirir decided the motion to be out of order, the house having previously revolved, that it would at a certain hour take a reeers, and meet at 6 oclock.
Mr. Wayne believed the bill to be sight In Itself-but yet, eircumstancen might be such as to induce those who thought so to vote against it.
Mr. W, suid he should vote for the bill; but, If his friends, by cutting of debate, shonld refuxe to him and others, the opportausty of expressing their sentiments, and vindicating their own eourse before the people, he flould not vote agaiust It; and there were twenty more timt would do the same.
Mr. Bell made sonie remark not heard by the reporter, which led to an explanation between him and Mr. Weyme-who concluiled by mnving a recexs ustil $6 o^{\prime}$ elock.

A dexultery ilehate on the question of order now arose, on an appral taken by Mr. Carton, on the upeaker's decision, that a nintion to adjourn was out of order, which ended in Mr. Carson's withdrawing lis appeal.

Mr. Deardorn explained his reasons for haviag moved the previous question-which was not to prevelut faur duxcustion, but to preventa circumventive course, calculated to get rid ot or defent the bill.
Mr. Daniel and Mr. Dearborn had anme further, rather colloquial, discussion; when the banr of four haviug arrived, the house took a reeves thll $60^{\circ}$ elock.

Ecering sestion.
The house met at 6 o'elock, and proceeden In eommittee of the whole, Mr. Tuglor in the cluair, th the considriation of District bunniens, on which it was still engaged at 8 o'elock, at Which tinie the following bille had been considered and laid by, to be reported to the house, viz:
A bill to Incorporate the Georgetown orphan anylum and free seliool.
A bill to inprove the navigation of tha Potomac river, between Georgetown and Alexaudua.

A bill concerning a penitentiary for the District.
A bill granting certain lots to the president and directors of Gentgetown college.

A bill in relation in the Potomac bridge.
W'edneaday, Feb. 27. After some private or local business had been disposed of Mr. Adams moved in discharge the commitiee on manufac. turex from the enusideration of so much of the president's mes*age as relates to the protection of dmuestic manufactures, and from all other matters referred to them; and anked leave to present a rrport fiom the miuonity of the conimittec on the matters in the memange.
At the suggertion of Mr. Hoffman, the mntion was divided, and the question first taken on discharging the committee, and agreed to.
Mr. Hoffman then said that If leave should be given in present the report of the minturity, he would ask for its reading, at least in part.
The report was then presented, and the reading of it commpreed, and enoutinued until 12 o'elock, when the house proeveded to the orders of the day.
Certain bills relating to the affairs of the Distriet of Columbia were read a third thme and passed.
The senate' A bll furtier to provide for the coilection of the revenue (the enforcing bill), enuting up in order,
Mr. Verplanck moved to postpone ite consideration until tomorrow, with a view to take up the appropriation bills.
Mr. Wioltuffe qave notice of his purpose 10 make a question of order whether this bill could be disensesed in the house before it whs discussy d in consultice of the whole.
On the questun of posiponement a very animated and somewhat draultory dohate aroee, in which it was very difficult to avoid runuing into the merits of the bill.
The gendicinen who participated in the dehate were Messre. Carmbreleng, Bell, Sutherland, Hosard, Hickufe, Dearborn, Verplanck, Wayne, Drniel, Hofman, Me Duffie, Blair, of South Carolina, Beardstev, Clayton, Burget and Hatel.

When the question was at length taken, and decided by yeas and nayn ma fullowst yeas 70, nays 127.
So the house refust do pratpone.
Mr. Carson now rose to address the house, and had proceeded sotne time, when
Mr. Wiekliffe rome to maks the questinn of nrder, to which he had before alluded, whereupon a very confuspd sceue ensued-

12 NILES' REGISTER-MARCH 2, 1833-MR. CLAY'S BILL-YEAS AND NAYS.

the particulars of which, together with the other details of the debate, we inust for the present defer. The reault was that the dectston of the chair was suatained by the hoase, and Mr. Carson was permitted to proceed: he therempon resumed, and continned to occupy the bouse in opposition to the bill until near 4 o'clork, when, on mution of Mr. Clayton, the house took a recees till 6 o'clock.

Among the proceedings of this day, we have the following:
Ot the bill lurther to provide for the eollection of dutiea on importa-
Mr. McDufie said-A bill which might be regarded an the ollve branch liad been passed and nent to the senate-lie would put it to the justice and magaaninity of the house whetlier the salive branch should be followed by tho suord of blood. "there was no aecessity for this bill. The other bill would be found to carry healiag eftacacy with it. If any thing could eonvert it into a curse it would be the present bill.
Mr. Hatir, of Bouth Carolina, said lis colleague lad expressed an opinion that the tariff bill whieh lual been sent to the senate was the olve branch of peace-that might he his opinion as an individual. It was not in the power of that or any other genleman hvre to express the sentiments of the convention of $\mathbf{3}$. Carolina which liad soleminly declared, that unless the whole protective syingin le overthrown, the revenue laws should nut be carcuted. The houre had no right to presume that the convention would recall this declaration in consequence of the pasmage of a bill whieh eontaned protection throughout all its proisions.
For himself, the was indifferent on the subject; bnt it should be remembered, that unless some effectunl measures were adopted, targe part of the population of thouth Carollna were exjosed to eoabscation and puuishment for paying ubedieace to your laws.
Mr. Burges anid it would not be ampected of him that lie was n friend to the preectit administration. He was a friend to the laws of the land, and, to ensure their precution, it was altogether easential that ths bill shouht pass. Is it necessary, before we provide for obedience to the laws, that we should be informed whether bouth Carolina intensts further to resst them? He was willing to admit that gentlemen, inlimately connecied with the recent course taken by that state-with what degree of ercedt to themselves history will inform the would-had expressed opinions that the bill sent to the senate woulil be antisfactory to the people of that atate. W'here then Is the harm of passing this bill. If they intend to obey the lawe, no provision in this bilt eould touch them. The olyection on the part of that state could only arise from a determination to resust she escention of the laws which fad been nullilied, which formed the banis of the bill sent to the senate. Winhont ths hill that ineasure was only throwing a volume of paper upon the hurning flames.

Frening session. 'Jo houke, at 6 o'clock, rosumed ite ritting -whon Mr. Clayton, of Georgia, who had the floor, delivered a very animated speech In opposituon to the revenue eollection bill.

Mr. Isarlis replicd ably, and insisted on the necersity of passing the bilt to vindicate the authority and honor of the govern theat.

Mr. Rtair, of Gouth Carolina, followed on the same ride, and made some pretty severe animadversions on fullification and mecession, &c.
Mr. Neot delivered an animated speech against the bill.
Mr. Mc $D_{n y}$ fite exprcssed his desire of being heard before the bill should pases, aus moved that the housc asfjourn. T'lie lonse then adjourned, [at about $10 o^{\prime}$ 'clock].

Tharday, Feb. 28. After variou* reanlutions, Re.
The speader lad be fore the hounc wundry commmnieations, viz.

1. A letter from tic secretary of war, tranumuting a statement of the expendifure incurred, and of arme manufactured at the national armories in the year 1832; which letter ant statement were laid on the table.
2. A luncr from the secretary of state, transmitting an ahatract of all the returns made to the department of state, by eollectorn of the different ports, for the yrar IR2t!. And, also, an abstract if all the pancozern whin arriven in the coited states, during the year ending septeuber 30,1632 ; which letter and abstracts wrere laid on the table.
3. A letter from the first comptroller of the treasury, transmithing a list received from the rrgister of the treasury, of the balanees standing on the books of the revenne, which have remaned insettied by eollcctors of the customs, and nthers, or appear to have been due more than three yeara prior th the SiOth of September lait; wheh letter and list were laid on the uable.
4. A letter froin the postinaster general, tran*mittong a liat of the names of the perious employed ms clerks in lite ilepartment Iluring the ycar 1832 , whth the malary of each; which letter and fint were laid on the eathe.
Mr. .Adtom moved that the further reading of the report made by him from the miaority of the committee on manufactures be dispensed with, and that it be laid on the table and printed.

Ar. Hofman demnnded a division of the question.
It was divideal aeconlingly.
'1 The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.
(In the question of printing, Mr. Hoffman addremsed the honse in npposition to it; and went into a statement of facts in relation to the report. He said it lind never lreen sutanitted to the eommuttee in time for ibe aetion. It purported th be a counter refont, of report of the iminnoity; bat where was any report from the majority? It wat new to ask a majority to agree to the report of a minority, whieh they had never had an opportunity even to hear. Mr. II. dwelt on the minchievous tendeney of puch a pactice, if anctioned by the house. He insisted there was notlung, either in the substance or manner of the paper, which ought to indnce the house to print it. It was neither a report or counter report, but a speech-an argument of an individuat. Mr. H. was proceeding to enter os the subject-matter of the paper, when Mr. Bell called for the orders of the day.
The fouse then resumed the consideration of the bill further to provide for the collection of the revenue.
Ar. Mcloufie rose and addressed the house with much anination, In opposition to the bill.
Mr. H'aync, of Georgia, next obtained the, floor; lut, before he began, a motion was made for a recesa till five o'clock, and carried.
The ercning session. An account of the proceedings han not been received-but the debate was going on at a late bour, with an avowed deterinination to press the question before the adjourntnent.

The National Intelligencer says-In our report of the debate in the fouse of representatives upon the bill to make a loan to the city of Washiugton, we are now apprised that material part of the amendasent submitted hy Mr. Homard was ornitted. The persons proposed to be appointed by the president were, in addition to other duties, "to pronounce what ouglit to be performed by cither or both, (the canal and rail road companies), on principles of law, justice, equity and a true regard to the public good.'

MR. CLAY'g BILL-YEAS AND NAYG.

We were about preparing a view of the vote on this bill, in the bouse of representatives, by states-when the following, from the Battimore "American" of Thurnday last presented isself.

The vote on the pasenge of the new tariff bill, in the bouse of represchtatives, is of so much general Interest that we have thought that a table of the votes arranged according to the states represented would not be unacceptable to our readers. We have taken the report of the Intelligeneer of yesterday morning, in which there appears however to he an error of addition. We make the number, as in the table below, 120 ayes, to 84 noes,instead of 118 to 85 noes.

MR. CLAX'S TARIF'F BILL.
Having freely expressed our own opinum ol this bili, we present nnother view of it fram the Nee York Idrecate.
The following letter is from an intimate, lighly respected and inteltigent friend, whom we know to be what he professes, no party man, and an undoubted friend to the protective policy. his reasonings are therefire entitied to great respcet and consideratua; and we give them to our readera with the more pleasare, because they present the subject in a point of view which suay not strike unany who are ignorant of the motives with buy not strike unany who are igno which Mr. Clay has been actuated,

Washington, 1th Feb. 1833.
Dran sir: You have, before this rearhes you, real Mr. Clay's bit, Mr. Webster's rewolutions, and learned from your private correspondent, and the papers, the etfi-et that has been produced. Standing in the relation which Mr. Clay does before the union, to the protective system, the introduction of this bill in perhaps ose of the most important measures, whether viewed in relatuon to its operation on limeseif individually, or in its probable etfeet on the induatry of the country, that he has ever offered for the consideration of congress. By lin encmies he will be cliarged, and many of his former supportery will, doubtless, respond to the accusation, that he has sacrificed his principles on the altar of his ambition, and bargained away, for eonthern voter and southern support, the great interest which were to his eare especially coninutied. You know that 1 am no party man; that uneasires, not men, is my motto, and that i ain an anyjetding advocate both from interest and principle, of the American syatem. In saying, then, that such criminations are gronndless, I trast that you will believe me, at lemst so far an to give me eredit for sincerity. To form a correct npinion on this subjeet, it as necessary to he fully acquainted with the aspect of affairs here previous to Mr. Clay's motion, and to have since heard Cambreleng, in the house, declare that he never would vote for a bill which he a frw days before openly avowed his antiety to ace pasael; and Renton, in the senate, state, in de. bate, that wonttens never oight to receive less protection than 30 per cent. Mr. Forsyth, in his remarka ill opponition to leave being granted to offer the hill, fully expressed the view a aml feelonge entertained by omr enemies previons to that time. They considered us as defeated and in their power, and were only hepitating as to the form and degrec of punisliment they should infict. The administration expressing, an tify stated, the putblic will, which had been distinctly manifested by the election of Eeperal Jacknon to she presideney, in the blli reported by the conataitee of ways and means, and to which they leat their whole support, Ief no alternative for Mr. tlay but either form on arrangement with the enemies of Van Buren, at the month, by whicta time could be gained, trusting that at the expiration of eight or nine years, the protective policy wonlal become universally popmtar, or silently witners the entire destructinn of founder. To be sure, there was a chance of its being again ronewed and sustained by a reaction of public sentiment which must have unquestionably fo'lowed the distress that would have ensned from itv deatruction, but the remedy was too powerfut to be revorted to, If a pallintion coulli be found. The south, fonding themselves in an mnpteasant ditemma, were willing to unite on any measure which would furnish titem the opportunity of an apparently honorable escape. All they elaimed was hibe ty to say th their constituents, that their principlea had trismphed; they wrere willing to defer for ten yearis the esthithtion of their effecti. 'Tinr, and the prompect in protection for at feast eight years, was the consilileration on one side; on the other the satisfaction of proclaining a triumph, without may gractical benefit from the victory claimed. It will be said by [^0]many, I am aware, that Mr. Clay has by this bill relnnquished forever the principle of diacriminating duties. But I would ask, ean an arrangement, which ohviousiy contains in its very provisions the princlplea of its own destruction, be considered as pernanent by its framers? If not, the fact on wheh this charge must rest, to wit, that at the end of ten years all duties are fixed at twenty per cent.-suflicient, when taken in eonnection with anotier, that eotion is then to be frec-to satisfy any mind that a new law will then be unanimously called for from every seetion of the union. The south has now a specific duty of three cents a pound on her cotton; will she be able ten years lience to sustain torevelf aganst the enmpetition of 'Texas and Brazil? Is it not more than probable, is it not certain, that she will require even a bigher protection than she now enjoys? All the stave states are no lully sensible of the benefits they derive from euitivation of sugar in Lavitajana, in the markt it affords for their aurplus negrocs, nod the employment of capital that would otherwise be directed to the growing of cottan, that, were it not for appearances, they would offer, even now, no ohjection to the present duty on sugar. No one presumes to alippose that twenty per cent. will ever the even the shadow of protection for sugar. May we not reascmably conclude that the southern politieians are aware that they shall need protection int that then, and expeet to elaim it-and miny we not also infer that it is with a viow to obtain assiatance frows other interests in effeeting thas, that they inwist on placing all on the same level of twenty per cent. If the tariff of 1832 was taken as the basts, and the various dutics were relluced in tell yeara to the reveune standard, retaining the same proportional difference to each other which they do at present, would they not have reason to apprehend that mome important interests might find themseives sufficiently protecten, and be unwilling to unite in an effort to obtain an increase of duties. I must say that the subjeet has struck me in this light, and the eoncluxion has foreed itself upon me, that the bill was not intended by Mr. Ciay, nor by the seuthern gentlemen who are understood to be its friende, to present a plan tor the permanent adjustment of the tariff. That its only olject is to allay the cxcitement which unfortunately exists at the present time, remove the subject from the operation and influence of party politics, and atford an opportunity to adjust, and fix on a permanent basis the induatry of the country, which even the southern politicians admit it is necessary to eustain. Yours, &e.

TIIE CAIP DF: VERDS.

We lave been favored with the following letter from a clergyman who went passenger in one of the vessels sent from this port, by the liberality of our citizens, with provisions tor the reltef of the Cape de Verd sufferers. The description it gives of the distress and mortality which the famine in those tslands had oceasioned, and the frnntie Joy with which the starving inhabitants hailed the arrival of these unexpected suecors, will be read with thrilling interest. Nurely no man of common aensibilty, ufter perusing this letter, can regret the homble offerings whieh he made for an object so worthy of lis chafity-worthy, at least, on account of the urgent nature of the eall, if not for any particular merit in the recipients of his bounty.
[Jour. of Commerce.
Port of Mayo, (Cape de Verle), Jannary 5, $18 \times 3$.
We arrived at this port on the last day of December, laving left the principat part of the provisuons for the islanders, at Bonavista. We are now loaded with salt for South Abreries, and expeet to mail within two or three days. At this island, and at Bonavista, there has been less wuffermg from the protracted famine, than at the other islanals. Yrom information received from individuals who have visited, and profess to be well acquainted with the condition of the islands, the suffering, wrete hedness and drsolation, has been bryond the conception of those who live in the midst of plenty and prosperity. I an not able to state the whole popitation of the islands, froin the alue ence of tatistieal doeuments;-but the estimate of the number of deaths, froun actuat starration, in all the istands, within about a year, is placed by those bext acquainted with the cirenmstaners, at hetween 30,000 and 40,000.* The itcms which go to make up this amount in the bill of mortality, are as follows: In St. Allconio, among a population of $25,000,11,000 \mathrm{hnve}$ died from starvation alune; in Foto, 12,000 deaths from the same cause; in Bravo, $\mathbf{7 , 0 0 0}$; in St. Nicholas, 3,000 , and in St. Jago the nuurber is consuderable, althouph not stated definitively. Captain llays, of the brig Emmme, of f'hiladelphin, with a flll cargo of provisinus for the anffering ieinnders, ansured ne that the scene of wretchednews and desolation at \$1. Antonio, where he touched long enought to dascharge 500 barrels of provisions, was beyond the power of tongue or pen to describe. 4'he niserable inhabitants looked tuore like inoring sketetons, than living be-ings-their flesh was gone, their musclos seemed dried uj, and they presented the apperarance of only the niked fromes of men, which conid seareely be kept together. 'The inhabitanter had despaired of obtaining rellef from any of the prdiuary resonreer; and as no vessel hat touched at the istand for several months; on account of the difficutty and danger resulting from the fact that there is no safe barlioe for vessels, a pilot was despatelied

[^1]in a buat with aome half a dozen skeleton beings, to hail the first Tessel ibat eould be seen, and beg of it to stop and sell them momething to keep them alive for a few days lungeri whell the Emana hove in wight, and was hailed, and, as sonn as possilite, the mouraful tale of wretcbedness was told, and the entreaty pressed to *top and scll them sirneUlugg to cat. C'aptain II. replied that he liad mothing to sell-but that his vese ol whas loaded with provisions to gire awoay: and that lue had rome for the express parpose of affiording relief to any of the inlanders who newded the gratuity. They meenied ineredulous at tirnt, but when satisfied of tue fact, they rased their hands in aatonishment toward heaven, intonating that he must liave been deapatelied from thence, on such an errand of mercy. After landing, eapt. H. soon found froms what he there saw and heard, that the aceeount of their deplorable, kulferinz condhtion had nut been overstated. He discharged 500 barrels of proviztons, and left them, after receiving every demonstration of gratulude frin the fur ferers which they were able to give. They evell followed hill to the water's edge, and there, io nttempting to give three cheers with all the little energy which they possessed, they made a noise which sectied more like a scputchral groan, than the voice of the living.
Captain 11. was assured that nlmost every morning the dying and the dead onuld be seell ill alunst every threctinn from the dont of his informant, and that but a short tume lofinte, a boy was seen cutting a plece of fleshlifum the cascane of a fellow creature, to lenghen out his own minerabie extitrnce, but was found somn after, dead, with the piece of theah in him haud, having erawled only a tew paces from the place where he notaned It. This was represented as otily a specimen of what may often be withessed, in its substantial features. Honavista and Mayn have autiered lems than the other Islands, which has prevented us from being eye-witnesses of surh lieaft-sickening scencs of wreteheducse, as have been witnoswed by others. Captain H. asoured the that he felt amply comprnated livr all the expenve. which lie had incurred, ill eoning nut gratuitously the tee almoner of the elinrity of Americans to these distant and deanlate islands, in the conseiountuess of the real benefit whichl had been conferred. Our nwn enuntry lias not only been first, but alone, in this work of substantial mytopathy and charity. Not a farthing has beeu sent by the people of any other mation-a chatity; whth speake volumen it favor of nur citizenn. Even the Portuguese nation has left these poor creathres to starve by thussands, when the king derives not a littie of his wealth from their tonls and sutferings. The islanders supposed nt first that the supplies recetved from mur eontrity had come from the government of the Unitwa staten-and when aviluted that the govenment had nothing to do with it-that it was from the puibice and private contrihutionis of mem, women and chitidren, as the spontaneous expression of their own feelings of kiudurse anil sympathy, as soon an their suffering condition was ulate kyowna -they sermed utterly at a loss to conprehend how it emild be: I have often herant them say - "Atmericans kindre thati our own country-we have tano kinge, bint they no sond provi-ians to krep us from ktatving-they fight one anotiter to med who thall goveru-they care nathuy alout us," $& 2$. The rains have brgun to fall in the islandx-and vegetatum ie coming forward rapidly, and the hupe se cherished thri sumpethug, in a tiew months, may the obtained foon the fruits of the carth, tusupply the wants of the peopule.
P. S. You judged right in supposing that little of intereat would be found here, relating to the vegetable kingdon. It te the innst ilesulate, barren portion of the earth wheh inver be held. There wha scarcely any appenrance of vegetanion on

EXTRAORIINARY SUICIDES.

Boston, Feb. 19. Yesterday minrning, a inost remarkable and melanctarly event was diselosed in this eity. "The dead bodies of Mr. John Carter, nged about 23 , and Miss Mary Bradlee, aged 20 , wore lound suspenced by their necks, in the tirst eliamber of her father's (Mr. samued Bradlee) store on Washagton street. Through a luop, attaclied to a hook in the ceiting, and seeured by a hlack silk neekerchiet, a couple of haniketchiefs tied together, had been pased, and thene unfortunate persons were hrund fistwned and suspeuded to each end ol these handkerchitets. Two chairs had meen plaeed together, and Muss Bradlee, bellgg not so tall as Mr. Carter, a box hat beell placed on one of the chairs so as to elevate her head to the height of his. Havtig otood in thim position lacing eacin other, the chaira were thrown from under thein, and they were left suspended. When daseovered, their arma bung down by their sides.
Mr. Carter had served his apprenticeslup with Mr. Bradlee, and had left hum about two years agos, for New Oileans, whers he entered into busincss. Last sumuer, Mr. B. having lost a coll, who was conuected with htm in business, wrote th Mr. E. to return, anil enter lits store, at a paituer, on tavorable terms. Carter had, for several years, bern on lutumate terms with Mise B. and it wax generally supposed that they were eugaged to be marrited to each other. On hits return, tie was recognized in such relation, and he was peruitted to accoanauny her. Mr. Certer entered into a ungoliainin to purehase into Mr. Bradiee's business entabiothment, with a view to inomediate nariage, and as Mr. Itradiee wished to retire from business. Hut in this attempt lving ansuccesaful, lie deatgned tir return to New Orteana. Misa B. Wisting to go to New Uileans with Imm, the cinment of tier pareuts was withheld. 'I'he pareut-, however, dud not object to their being married at some future peilonl. 'The lovers were, huwever, renlered unhappy, and in sil evil hour, counnitued the raslo deed above related.
They lefl Mr. Bradice's house on Sunday morning, at bell-ringing, pupasing to go to 'Irmatty chureh. Tlicy were seen, however, when the billo were nearly dnne tolling, below Summer street, conuthg down Wa-hington street, towands Mr. B's atore. This was the last that was seen of them urgether. Mr. Carter, however, wist Into the apotiecary's shnp, a few dours below Mr. B's store, nut sunday altertoon. No alarm was felt at the absence of Mlise E. because she was in the hubit of accompanying Mr. Cartor to lis lather's huuse, and olten remained there uver mght with his wivter. Af the walkulg was very bad, it was supponed hie hitd stand there on sunday naght.
When the lad whuse duty it was to open the store, weat there yesterday murnitg, the found that by toserting lusi own key, he buil knocked on the ntiter, whell was ins the monde. On entering the sture, he found Mr. Carter's eloak on the counter, and thought all whe not right, but did uot go up ili the chamber where the boilice were sisum, nutul some time after. Mr. Carter left two hitters ith the store, she hitected to his father and the other to Mr. Bradlre, in which he stated that lue had been unforthinate, that lie was tired of the world and took thits mude of leaving il: that lie wished his frsenda would torgive him and lier, and that it was her request that both might be buriel tugether in Mr. B's tomb under Triuity chuieh. In Miss Biadlee's trunk at Inmie was abso found a letter in her own liand writiog, in which sine thsuked her parents for all their kinducss and anked forgiveuese wif them for this last net of leaving them in this manner. Mr. Braillec is truly a bereaved man. Absut a year ago, he lost a promieing sun, abnut 11 yeart old, who was killed linstantly by a finzuent of the wheel of a coavil in which lie was roding, and anotiver snn, who was his partuce in businens, died of convomption within a year.

The above is a enrreet account of this unhappy oceurrence, so far as we have heard. Within a few weeks, Carter reerived 3,500 dullars on enme real extate which he owned, and he timmediutely lost it, as he waid, in Boston in some speculation, which lie had dechined giving ally neconnt of in Mr. Bradive or to any of his friwnds. altinugh he acknowledged that he liad lost it, and was requested to state in what manner.

THE CHEROKEES.
From the National Intelligencer.
The Chernkee Plopuix takes exerptum, withnut sufficient reason, to mur hnving copied froni a Georaia paper (the only chanuel through whicla any information of the matter has been pecived) all acenunt of alleged minder of whten hy eertaln Cherokeps. We are agailust all sorts of murder or manslaughtor, and must condeinn it under whatever color th eotacs. We are glad to be ansured that the Chernkees are in this case innoacnt of it. The following is the Cherokee account of the affair referred to:

Nev Echota, Feb. 2.
A white fanslly of four perknis resided at Ealoquayah, ten millew dirtant from this place. Lawsnn Bowman, wife, child and mother la-law. Bowman whs a young man brought up pasty in the nation, and lived 3 or 4 mitles from any house. The week preceding Chrtatrass, two Indian boys passing his place, found that the house had burned to the ground with the oceupents of ic. The boys made it known, and many Cherokees proceeded to the place to make some discovery whether this painful loss of livea was necasioned by murder or otherwise, ft appearing the house had been burned four or dive days previous, and a heavy rain; no eircumstance appeared which would jus Lify the conclusion that it was a case of murder. Nothing cnuld be found of the remains of the persons but small preces of cinders. Al out-house enntained some property undisturbed. In the meantinue, Bowman'e relations had eharged the perpetration of this crime to the Cberokeen, and the guard were sent for, to artest thetr. 'The writer of this artiele advised the ludians to aubmit. They did so. T'be Georgia guard rushed to the Indian eetiement with the spirit of sampson, when he went dnwut to Askelos, or like a lawiess stirm, frighticned the poor women and emildren from their homes in the cold days of Chistmas, and chained fast to one another 8 or 10 Cherolsees. They were kept is this condition for several days; we asw some driven along the anddy roads to some magistratea for examination, but, in the absense of aay reatunony whatever againat these men, they were all released. Tlass is the only case that has occurred where the loss of lives has been charged to the Cherokeea, and so far they have proved unfuunded.

NAVY OF THE UNI'ED STATES,

Mr. Hoese of mapresentatives, Janvary 29,1833 . the following report:-

The comanittee on naval affairs, to whom was referred the eeveral remolutions prewented mn the 17 th instant, by the hon. Mr. Hogan, of this wnuse, with the view to inquire luto and prevent certain aboses alleged therein to exist in the uaval service of the United staten, report:

That they have duly and maturely considered the same; and having referred the resolutions, with the domumente mpponded therrin, co she navy arpartineit, and received froin the secretary the annezed letter, dated January $2 \Delta t h$, 1e3y, containiug his viewa on the aubject, they beg leave respectiully to subinit the came to the honse, as follows:

Nary department, January 284h, 1833.
Siz: I have receised your letters of the qjit instant, in rela tion to the resolutions of the house of representatives, passed the 17 th instant, on the proper measures to be adopted to prevant eertain wupposed abuses antong the oflicers of the navy.
My opinion is not asked on the existence of those abusen at this or at any former perion, whether practised by the offiecr deoignated in the specitications, or by any other officets in the eervice; but only, whether any "furiber legirlation is neceenkiry to eorreet the abuses sapponed by said rewolution to exist it the vervice."
In reply to this lact inquiry, I can only say, that if such abuses have ever occurred, of should occitr hereafter, it appears to me mo further legislation is neeroxary to correct them; but that the pate and present authurity of the departinent, throuzh cousts of inquiry and courts naartual, is ample for the correetion of then: and, it is presumed, no pentod has existed when that antionty would not bave been exercised, on due complaint being masie for the purpove, supported by such probable evileuce of guilt as would jussity calling on the officer implicated for ntheial explanation; and as ont given satisfactorily, ordeunge on biun mucts ju dicial proceedings as the circumstauces appeared to require. The papers enclosed, are herewith returned. I am, very reapectully, sir, your obetlicat servant,

LEVI WOODRURY.
The hon. John Anderson, chairman of the nural commiliee of nouse of representatires.
Your comasittee avall theniselves of the oceasion to expreas their hearty eoncurrence in these views, expuressed by the spere. tary of the navy, and, entering, an they now do, their protest agamet any such future proceeding through the inedum of this hosse, sgainst either the naval or mintary officers of the gnvernment, they respectfully ask to be discharged from all further conenderation of the subject.

COLLECTION OF REVENUF AT CHARLEATON.
Treanary instructions to the collector of the port of Charleston. [convinential.)
Treasury department, Noveraber 6, 1832.
Str: The act of the legislature of South, Carolinn, passed at cheir recent special seseion, and the anticlpation of meayures which enay be apprehended from the eonventimn ealled by that ect for the avowed purpope of opposing and preventing the exeeution of the lawn of the United States, imposing duties on foreign goods, wares and merchandine, make it proper iminediatety to draw your attention to the subject, and especially to eome of the provisions of the existing acts of congrese for the collmetion and security of the revenue.
It is diffiesit, and indean impossible, to foreace in detail the precise mexsures which may be adopted by the eonvention; and the instructions now given must be more or less hypothetieal, and the partioular neto yon niay be called, in the diseharge if your duty, to perfurm, muas be, in a areat degree, regulated by the eharacter of the emergeney, as it may arice. It is putieientdevise will bewever, that all the means wheli mgenuity can devise will be adopted to elude, or render null and inoperative Within the state of Somith Carolina, the lawa of the union imposing duties on foreigu merchandive, and that a emrresponding energy and vigilance in the performance of their duties, will be required from those elbarged with the execution.

Yon will require no observation from me to impress you with the delicacy and importance of the erisis. in which you whay suon be called to act, or with the indispensable necessity of unThrinking firmness and fidelity in the lischargo of your duties. The crisis nay involve mo less than the saffity of onr inestimasble umion, and the self approbation and publie gratitude attetsdant upon all honorable exertions for the preservation of that precious paliadium of ont happinest, will insure, on yout part, all that the governinent can expeet.
It in greatly to be appreinended that the mensures of the ennvention may be fuch an not to be effectually counteraeted without further legivlation on tho part of eougrens, which, of conrse, cannot bo had in acason for a prompt application of the retusdy which their wiadom nay devise: but I entertain a conflent hope that, with a vigilant, finitiful and fearlows exereise of the authority comferred by the exising laws, atded by the monal support of the patriotic anil unprejueliced porton of the community, mueh of the meditated evil may be for the praseut aveited, is not altogether prevented.
Witiout a better knowledge than can now be had of the ineans of resistance to which the convention tuay resort, it is supposed that authority suffibive, fist the presemt, Is contisred by the constitution, which makes it the duty of the president to execute the laws; by the act verting in the departunent of the treasury, the apreial power to superintend the collection of the revenue, which masy fairly be supposed to give all powea not contrary to the laws, and neewsary to their execution; atod by the several provi-inns of the act entitled "un act to regutate the collection of duties on inports and tounaze," passed the $2 d$ of collectiun of duties on impors and tounage," passed ifie $2 d$ of Mareh, 1799 , to whinch lawt act $I$ is my intention, at prosent, to ask your particular attontiou.
It will he perceived by the 13th section of that act, that each of the collpetion distrietw, netablishival in south Carolina, and the whole and every pait of each sistrict, is constututed a port of entry; and though the collector, naval olficer and surve yor, are cutry; and though thr colicector, naval olficer and anrve yor, are directed to resiffe at Cliarlesion, and a collector at eacs of the other ports, it cannot be questimined that a veesel may Inwfully diseharge ber cargo, and, if directest, make entry at ans other pnint within the port of entry; and il uppenrx abso certain, that whenever, fimu physical ur inural neressity, the lawn shall be au*pended at the residence of olise enlloctor, and the be prevent "d by a superior and unlawful foree from the exerelant of his muthority at the usual place, it uay be competent to place ha ufficurs to rcecive and cotupel the legal cuntry at soltif other safe and eonvenient place within the port of entry, as d tecribed by law.
You are alrendy aware that, by the provisions of the sama act, no goods, wares or inerelinatise, caul be "brought iato the 15. States" frum any foreign port or pasee, ill any whip or vessel, without baving on board a purper iminifest; that, within swenty. Gour hours, after the arrival of any phip or vesorl from any in reign port ur place, at anv port in tlin United Statra, extobliwhed by law, at which an otherer of the customs resides sic within any hartior, inted or creek theresf, the master must repars to the custom housp, and inake repurt of her arrival; and, withth forty. right tumins atter surh arrival, he muot make furticer raport in wriung, accampanied by him nuanifest; and that, within fifteen dny a, (and by the act of the inl March, 1821 , in case of tesseln of tuore than three hundred tons, within twenty days), alher auch repolt liy the numter, the nwuer or consigupe of the nuerebandian: on board, muat make vintry thereof, in writing, $u$ ith the said collector; and that, it default thereof, the cullegor is anthorised to take posvession inf rand goodn, warea and merchandise, in the manner particulatly dewcribed in the sibth sertion. At the time of making an entry, the tonnage dutiea, (of any), muat be paid; and previously thereto, the rugister, or other document in lieu thereof, togther with the clraranes and other papers, muat he produced in the collector, and must revaain in lins office until returned to the master, or the clearance of the vesuel lior any other port; which clearance cannot he granted, and consequently the delivery of the papers cannot be made until all the formalition in rrgard to the veascl oll lorr ariival slinll have been eamplied with, and, (hy the 93d section), unti receipts for all the legal frex whin it sloall have acerued on the vesel, shall have heren prodised to the collector. By the 29 th nection, a veswel whels shall have arrived from a forcign port, and shall attempt to depart withont having been reported, of entered by the manter, is liable to be arrestud and brought back by the officers of the enstnms. The entry of the mercliandise by the owner or eonsiguec, already adverted tn, confirth, hewides the other procerdingen and formalitipa particularly required, in paying or spcuring, according to law, the dution which shall be ancertained by the collector and naval officer. Where the dutiea are to the seciured, it is hy bonn or bonds, which shall includa one or more yecmities, to the satisfuction of the collector; who shall be satisfied not merely of the nolvency of the suliety, hu of hid sutficiency in other resperts, and would not be expereted or authorised to accept, as surrty, any individual who ohould be underatond to have foruted a detarmination not to pay the butul, or cimplyy with bis obligation.

You will priceive, morenver, by the 50th section of the aet, no guods, wares or merchanilisp, hrought in any ship or vesepl from any furvien port or plare, shall be unlalon or delivered thut in open tlay, exrept hy rpeciad license, nor at any time, without a permit from the colicctor, under mevare penalties, inclading the forfeture of the goons; and by the 03d section we permit shall be granted for landing the same, until all da-## ties thereon shall have been paid, or secured to be paid, according to law.By the 53d section, the collector of any district at which any uhip or vessel mny arrive, and immediately on her firnt coming within ruch district, is direeted to put and keep on bourd wuch ship or vesset, whist remaining in the district, or in going from one district to another, one or more inspectors to exaume the cargo, and to superintend the delivery thereof, and to perform such aher duties according to lave, an they shall be directed by the collector to perform for the better securing the collection of the dutiet; and it is expressly made the duty of aaid inspectors in suffet no goods, wares or merehandise, of any nature or kind whasever, to be landed from such slipp or vesnel without in permitit writing from the collector of the port, and naval officer, where aly, tirst had aud granted for the purpose.

Is may be proper, also, to obscrve, that after twenty-four hous from the time of her arrival, a vessel cannot proceed from one port to another without a clearance in the manner particucarte pointed out. By the glat sectuon of the act refferred to, and by the second section of the act of the same date, "cstablishang the compensation of the officers employed in the collecvinnof the Iluties on imports and tonnage," the collectors are anthorined to employ, with the approbation of the secretary of The treasury, sucti inspectors as thu public service may require; and by the 97 th , $9 \mathrm{eth}, 99 \mathrm{th}$, $100 \mathrm{th}_{\mathrm{h}} \mathrm{nmil} 101$ nt sections of the aet firatreferred to, ample authority in given to provide the requisite number of cutters nnd boats for the better securing the colloction of the lluties. The officers of such boats are sulbject to the direction of the collectors, and are, inoreover, empowered and dirscted to go on board nll zlops and vewsils which shall arrive within the United Sitates, or four leagues of the coast thereof, if bound to the United states; and among other duties, to affix and put proper fartenings on the hatches mad other comaronictions with the hols, nod to remain on board the said vessels untal their nerival at the port of their dentuation. Thiey are fikewine to excente and perform suchother dutios for the collecton anl security of the revenue, $n s$, from time to tinis, whatl by enjoined and alireeted by the secretary of the treasiry, not contrary to luw and the pruvisions of ead act; and they are further nuthorised in fire at or into any vessel hatile to examinaHon which shall not bring ts, on being required ur chased hy any cufter or boat, as deserilued in the lobl sectoon.
Netuer the valady of these provisions of the net of the 2d March, 1799, tu which & have advertel thus particularly, that the forther observatinns which my duty regmires me to make nay be innte inteltigible, not of the act Itself, has ever tieretotire been questioned: and it is not altogrther clear that the pugposes of the couvention, to assemble in south Carolina, as deoned by the recernt act of the legislature of that state, prowisions. Inwever this may be, they are now, and always thave leen applicable to every district ant every part of the union; they are now, nad liave uniformly beeu, in daily and stivet doservance in each of them; they are not merely of universal upplicntion every where, but embrace nimost every imaginablecase, and if, as las bcen sometimes publicly professed, the meditated repistatuco th the lawa of the unton is to nsumbe the form of legal redress, and avoid a resort to mpen force of wolence, it is behered they will be found, when properly enforced, to be filly equal to every emerguncy likely to arise.

In tins view, it is presurued, your own official conduct has been and is now in strict confintinty with the provisions of the act of 1599, and that, in observing thene inatructions, yon will be nerely cxecuting your duties with, perhaps, grenter vigilnnee thnn ondinary, and adaptum cxinting regolations, of dally nete and application, to new curcomstances of greater emergeney, an they may arise. It is the more Important that you should keep this view of the subject cunstantly in inud, an it is the wish of the president, and of this depnrtenent, to take no step, nor em. ploy any means calculated to provnke nf excite to force those who are now threat'ning resistinnce, but' to delent their operations by the moral force of the lawa and the ennstitution, and to execule the former in the manner therein proseribed, and to employ force only when it shall be elearly mintlorised, and be foand unavoidable in the shscharge of your duty, anl indieppenanbly necensary to resisi its employment liy those who shal have resorted to it for the stibverstion of the Inws.
It may be sutheient, therefore, In the finst place, to enll your particolar attention to legal provisions alremly advertenl to, and to the duties which they enjoin, and to direct that, in pevery cave to which they are applicalile, you will conform to thair provisions by nll the means whoh they place in your power.
But as there are some contingencies insuparable from the nearnres of the convention about to aspemble which canuot be overlooked, it is proper that, in regard to these, you should be now advised.
Upon the supposition, therefore, that the theasnres of the convention, or the acts of the legitlature may consist, in patt, at least, in declnring the laws of the Unted States imposing dutics naconstitntional and null and void, and in firfudding thrir esecution, and the contectern of the duties within the state of Sonth Carolina, you will, immediatrly ufter it shall be fnrmally announcel, resort to all the means provilled by the laww, and particularly by the act of ahe of of March, 1799, th counteract the measures which may befadopted to give etiect to that declarntion.

For this purpose, you will consider yourself authonsed to employ the revenue cutters which may be withan your district, and provide as mony boats, and employ as many inspectors, as bay be neceonary for the execation of the law, and for the purposes of the act already referred to. You will, moreover, enuse nsufficient uumber of officers of cutters and inspecters to be placed on board, and in cliarge of every vessel arriving from a foreugn port or place, with eoods, wnres, or merchandise, as soon as practicnble atter her first coming within your district, and direct them to anchor ber in some safe place within the hafbor, where she miny be sceurt from any act of violence, and frona any uanuthonsed attempt to discharge her cargo before n coupllance with the laws; and they will remain on board of her at such place unul the reports and eutries recquired by law shall be made, both of veasel and cargo, and the duties paid, or secured to be paid by your sintidfactura, and uatil the regular permit shall be granted tor landing the enrgo; and it will be your duty, against nny foreible attempt, to retain and defend the custody of the said vessel, by the and of the officers of the custons, unpectors. and officers of the culters, unill the requisituons of the Jaw shall be fully complied with; and in came of any attempt to reinove her or her cargo from the cuntody of the officers of the customs by the form of legal process from state tribunals you will not yield the custody to such atteurpt, but wiil consult the lnw officer of the district, and employ such means ax, under the particular circumstances, you miny legally do, to resist such process, and prevent the removal of the vessel and cargo.

Should the entry of such vessel and cargo not be completed, and the dutics paid, or secured to be pand, by bond or bonda, With zuretic: to your matisfaction, within the sime limited by law, you will, at the expiration inf that time, take pomsension of the cargo, and land nnd store the same at Castle limekney, or youre other safe place, and in due time, if the dintica are not paid, sell the same according to the direction of the $26 t h$ section of the act of the ed of March, 1799; nnd you are authorised to provide such store as may be necessary for that parpose.
It miny be loped that the foregoing precaotions, nad the prompt prowecution, in all cases, of those who may violnte the aw or ressist the officens of the customs in its execution, will be sufficient for the prescnt, and as long as you may find it practucable to perform your olficial duties, and as long as the righte of your person, and thoae of the other officers of your district thall be secure, and property respected, the custom house niny be enntinued at Cobarlestinn. Hut, should the meautres of the convention, or those of the legialature, expose your person, or the persons of the other oflicers, to outrage, or to arrest and inprisonmeut, and, by force or other arcensity, runder the extcution of the Jnws of the United States impracticnble, you may remove the costom house to Castle Pinckney, or to soune other secure place within the port of cotry, where you may take and receive the entries of vessels aad thetr cargoes, and perform other duties necessary by law to be performed at the eustom hoose.

You will, moreover, cause the officers of the cuttera under your direction, in board all vesaels departing from the port of Chmrleston, and in cnse my shall be found withont liaving been regularly entered and eleared in the manner required by law, to seize nuld detaint the same, to be prosecuted according to law.
It will be proper, in cvery case of doubt and nifticulty, to consult the law offieer of the district, and, on all oceaxions, where these instructions do not afford an adequate guide, to follow his advice.

It is expected that you will promptly inform the department of any difteulty that may occur in your district, and keep it regularly ndvised of all the measures that niny be adopted by nny persen or persons for obstructugg the execution of the laws, and also of the means which you mny deem it your sluty to adopt, and that, iu every cane of imporzance, where the une will atmit of it, you, will, previously to taking any unusual or important step on your part, apply to the departinent for further instructions. For this purpose, you are authorised to dexpateh a special meseenger, whenever, in your opnion, it may benecensary either for safety or expedition.
T'o eonble you to execute the laws, and to fulfil these in structions, the revenue entter Alert has bern ordered ts proceed In Charlewton. On her arrival there will be two cutters on thnt station, and you will place them where youm mas think bent.
You will treat these Instructions as confidential, until it shall become neces.anty to act; but, in the incau time, you will exIntut them eonfidentially to the ilistrict attorney, naval officed arul anrveyor, that yom may have the benefit of their counsels, and that you may all be better prepared tonet together when occasion ahall require. I an very respectfolly, your ob't serv't.
L. Mel.ANE, serretary of the treavery.

To James K. Pringle, creq. rollector of the,customr, Charleston.
〔Similar letiers were addresaed to the enllector at Georgetnwn, and the collector it ltenufort, ditiving only in the following paruculars, viz: the reference to Castle Pinchney was omitted, and, in lieu of the last twin paragraplis, ihe following was andestithtwat:
"To enable you the better to exceute the lawe, and filfiltiose instrnetions, a revenuc cutter will be ptaced nuler $\mathbf{y}$ our dircetwon, and you will aspign her to such station, and give nuch instruc. tions from time to time to her commander, as you thay deem best adapted to thote objects. The cutter for your district will be deepatched in a few dayw.
"You will treat these instructions as confidentual until is shall become Lime to act."']

THE PAST—THE PRESENT—TOR THE FUTVRE.

00 -We are now pretty acarly through the hurry of the business of congress; bint many very valuable articles are lying-over, which shall be inserted with all convenient despatelo. Our first purpose is to present and preserve important public papers-aml, relieved of the notice of passing events in eongress, our tneans are extensive. But the mass of interesting matter on hand, and about to be roceived, is uneommonly large.

Jo-The 22nd congress adjourned at an early hour on Sunday morning-Saturday's sitting being continued. We give a very full report of the proceedings of the last days of the session. No small degree of confusion and exeitement appeared on several oceasions, and especially in the house of representatives-but mueh feeling wus expeeted, because of the various important subjeets before that body; and, perhaps, they were disposed of with as good temper as could have been hoped for, It will be reen that the evening session of Thursiay, the 28th Feb. estended to $\frac{1}{2}$ past one o'olock on Friday morning, the It Mareh-by which the bill further to provide for the eollection of duties on imports was so placed by the previous guetion, that it was promptly passed by yeas and nays at the nest sitipg-149 to 48. The details are full of interest.
It will also bo seen that Mr. Clay's tariff bill, which lad been adopted and passed by the housc and sent to the seate, passed the latter-29 to 16.
00 -In the proceedings of the house of representatives of the ist instant, is inserted a report fiom the committee of ways and means concerning the bank of the United Slates; that of the minority of the eommittee, on the same sabjeet, is laid of for our next. It is pretty clear, we think, that the safety of the public money is not contangered by being deposited in that institution-notwithranding the repeated assanlts which have been made on is responsibility to meet its engagements! We suppose that the bank will now be suffered to reach its periodendisurbed. The people are deeply interested, that the bank should be rather assisted than embarrassed, in winding up its affairs. It entirely possesses the pubhe conficknee, and so may even yet materially subserve the public interests.

做We shall soon have the proeecding of the conventoo of South Carolina, re-assembled by the proclamation a "majer zeneral /Iumilton, commanding the state troops of Suidh Carolina, in Charleston," (us "Randolph of Rnanoke," has it)-and suppiose that "the ordinanec", will be trimphantly suspenderl, and with " a flourish of trutnFts," and of "the strill fife and spirit-stirring Irum," Whin the fullness of glory to the "brave voluntecrs"-alpugt and not withstanding "the ordinance" has been rebid, as it ought, by the congress of the United States, St its conditions have not been complied with, in most ratial reapects-the act of 1832 being yet in force, Wht th be modified hercafter, commeneing on the 31 st lectaber next, but still not to be repealed, as was im-frivasly demanded by the "sorercign" state.
3) The U. S. Telegraph of the thi inst. appeared in orniog-not beeause of "the inauguration of Anilrew "ron," but for the reason that the "bloody bull," tha "wrther to provide for the collection of duties on im6," had beeome a law-saying "here lies the mortul aine of state rights;" and "it is for this we mourn," We shall next week puhlish this law.

IEx malla, The "summer arrangement" of the mails, ch was put into operation about the 200 H , Feb. was tlifed" by a severe snow-storm and frost which comcedon the ist of March; and from Saturday until WedVon XLIV-StG. 2.
newday night, we had no mail from: the east-and, at the last date mentioned, we received only two of the four that were then behind. The steam boat which was to have brought the Sunilay mail, whembargoell by the iee in the E.ik river; and, at the time of putting this sheet to press, had not arrived.
In consequence of the resumption of the ir rergular trips, by the steam boats, -the lines of stages which carried the mail or passengers on the proper prost road to Philadelphia, had been withdrawn; and the indirect route through York and I ancaster only remained for the public accommodation: hence many members of congress, and others, returning from Washington, were compelled to remain at Battimore during the whole weck, and all our extensive hotels were so filled, that a large number of persons had to seek private lodgings, The "frost king" howerer, has eased his icy fuggers-and, in a duy or two more, will probably dipart-for the present.

The close of tha session. We have given up a large portion of the present sheet to a detailed account of the proceedings of the last session of the 22 nd congress, just now elosed; antl they are very important. $\Lambda$ list of the uets, \&ee. is added.
It will be seen that, contrary to almost uni versal belief three weeks ago, that the thrce great bill-further to provide for the collection of duties on imports, Mr. Clay's bill to modify the tariff, and his bill concerning the proceeds of the public lands, ull passed both housea of eongress by large and extraordinary majorities. The latter, however,--though the vote in the senate was 23 for, aml five against it, and in the house ninety-six to forty, being unsigned by the presitent, has not become a law! If it had passed in time-so that the president must have approved, or have plaeed his formal veto upon this bill,-il is believed that it would have become a lavo against the zeill of the executive; and this, we think, may be easily supposed! from the meagre minorities which supported the admanistration in its projects for selling the stock of the bank of the United States, and withdrawing. the public deposites from it. But the "force of eircumstances," assisted, perlhaps, by the thing ealled "managenient," shielded the president from this unpleasant condition, und euabled him to cause the bill to dic an unnatural death, without the possibility of a re-action of the represwntatives of the people in its faror. We intend to give " pretty full congressional history of this bill, ans nake sone tree remarks on various proeeedings had conecrning it-some of which are esteenued as ahout the meanest ever practisell by persons-who ought to have seats in the senate! And the refusal of the president to sign a bill so much desired by a very large majority of the preople, an shewn by the votes of the sonate and of the house, is unparalleled in the history of constithtional gozernments. It is an exertion of authority which neither the king of Great Britain, nor the king of France, would venture to practice. The high self-will of the elief magistute is hus made sufficient to def-at the most wholesome mensurss of the legislature-fiesh fiom the people, and fairly presumell to obey the "sovercign." Wie speak not as party politicians-but are influencell by the same principles which led us to support the bill "further to provide tor the collection of duties on imports"-the principle that the ascertained wishes of the sajority of the people may not be set aside, cither by a president of the United States, or a governor of the state of South Carolina: and, herealter, it may beeome necessary to form and pass bills with strange tities-for examples,-"to enforce the collection of the revenne on imports, and distribute the proceeds of the public lunds"-"to defray the expenses of the civil list, and improve certain harbors"-"lior the pay and subsistence of the navy, and to appropriate money for the Rockuville road," &c. that one man's legislative power may not become assolitit, as to the passage of laws:

The new tariff bill has become a law. We stand decidedly oppowed to that bill-there are parts of it wholly irreconcilable to onr deliberately formed and long olie: rished opinions, as we intend to shew on a fiture occasion; ${ }^{*}$ but we would not have hall that bill rendered waste paper by the action of the preainlent, or the refusal of his signalure. In England, or France, if an administration has a elcar majority against it in the legislative boties, the ministers resign, as they ought, and the king yields himself up to the jeople's will. Rut what is the present conlition of things in the United States) The administration was rendered dependent on its old and avowed opponents for the only favorite meavure adopted in congress! In one leading ease only wan the wish of the executive gratified-and that hy the support of its rose resolute politieal encmien, beeunse they thought that measure was a just one. A strange state of affairs cxists. Cem. Jaekson has licen re-electell by a mighty, majority-and get so nuch are things mixed with things, and parties eonfounded with parties, that even the official organ of govermment could not obtain the vote of either honse for He office of printer; and the bank of the Cuited States was sustained by a vote of more than two to ore against the exceutive direction of influrnce and power. But we are not polticians. We have had hut litule to do with them, in the Registin, and shall have yet less; notwithstanding, facts shall be still stated, and principles discused and snstained.

The following psiagraphs give summary notices of some of the chief things that have hapyened.

From the .Vational Intelligencer, of Narch 4. The winter's tale is almost wound up. Sueh of the details of business of the two past days will be found in our columns to-day; but the important business of the seasion, from which it takes rank and character, may be summed up in three lines, as follows:

Congress have passel|

1. A bill to monlify the tariff;
2. A bill to enforce its eollection; and
3. A bill to appropriate anong the several states the revenue from public lands.
"Thene hills lave passed in a manner pari pasen, and alnost coneurrently. The majorities by whieh they have passed are large, and, whaterer misgivings may exist in the minds of our friends as to the operation of one or the other of them, we have no doubt that they will as a whole meet the approbation of the great body of the people.
We will not exult at the vote in the house on the subjeet of the bank of the United States; but it would be affectation in us to say, that we are not gratified in finding ourselves so triumplanily sustained by the representatives of the people, in the ground we lave oceupied on this sulyject. The houme wonld not even leave it doubtrul what its opinion was. It has most distinctly nud emphatically declared it to the world.

From the same, of Warch 5. The reasler will find in the preceding columns a complete list of the sers passed at the mension of congress which has just terminated. [Sce page 31.] From this list the results of the session many be ascertained, and at this moment from wo other autre.
An unusually small number of bills failed this session, in transitu between the two houses. The anost important of these was the Light-house bill, which was rejueted by the opposition of a single sunator to its passage, which, though according to the rule of the senate, seems to be the fruit of an anomaly in lugislation.
The only bill which faileal from the refusal of the presinlent of the United States to sign it, was the ituportant bill (Mr. Clay's great bill) to appropriate for a limited

[^2]term the proeeeds of the sales of the public lunds of the United Stales, and for granting land to eertain states.
Anong the acts, of which a list is published, is one, reported by Mr. Vepplanck, which passed in the night of Saturday, and which seems to us of sufficient importance to the importing merclants, an well as to the revenue offieers, to justily a special reference to it. By the operation of the general uct of July, 1832 , unintentionally, probably, on the part of congress and of those who framed It, the dutics imposed on nany kinds of haveheare were nearly doubled, and other inconveniences interposed in the way of importcrs. These are renoved by the act just paised; in which also the inconveniences from the duties on copper, brass plates, and eopper for sheathing vessels, are also remedied, by restoring the duties on all these articles to their former footing, exeept eopper sheathing, which is hereafier to be admitted free of duty.

The mmount appropriated at the late session of congrons for the contimation of the Cumiberland rond on westward, is nearly half a million of dollars.

From the same, of alarch 6. Belore the elose of tue session of congress, our readers are already aware, the house of representatives deelared, ly a vote of considsrably more than two to one, upon the reepmenenclation of the committec of ways and means, their confidence iu the bank of the Linited States. A still stronger testimony in favor of that institution, however, was horne by the senate, upon the recommendation of the committee of fimanee, of that hody, seconded again by the house of representatives, and asactioned eren by the president of the United States, in the following manner:
The elaimants for indemnity under the treaty with France, unwilling that the amount which is eventually to be divided amongst them should lie idle in the treasury, petitioned congress to canse the same to be invested so as to bear interest, until its distribution is awarded by the commissioners. In compliance with this petition, a pro-vision- was introfluced, in the senate, lito the general appropriation bill, anil has become a law, requiring the recretary of the treasury to eause the money aceruing under the tueaty, to be invested in the atock of the bank of the United S:ates, or lomenel to indivillualis or trust, upon pleciges of stock of the U'nited States, or of the bank of the Uuited States, and upon no other securily whatever. We here find all branches of the government in necord in placing the erectit of the United States and that of the bank of the United States upon precisely the same footing, as entitled to ligher confidence thain any other mode of investment: The aetion of congress or this subject fully aceords, we have no doubt, with the generml wish of the elsimants.

By one of the aets of the last assaion of eongress, ar office is entablisibled, eutitled conmissioner of pensiout (to superinfend the exceution of the whole pension syw tem) with a salary of 2,500 dolhars per annum. It give us pleasure to state that, with the advice and sonsent o the senate, Jumes I. Edisearris, who has long and frith fully disehurged the same duties, has been appointedy fill the new office.

The fineat haunch of mutton that has ever been wee in this eity, was yesterday exhilited in the Centre mat kel. It weighed 120 pounds, and was raised by Mf John Brudley, of Chester comity, Pennsylvania, and *? ent here as a present to the president of the Uwiff Staten, (though the donor is no Jackson man). Thut is in this ease, as wo have secn in other cases of grost consequence, the president's political adversaries ut lim better than his profesing friends.

From the snme, of March 8: A Among the miscellay ous appropriations contained in the gencral approprist aet for the present year, it gives un pleasure to find following for the aceommodation of the mereantile cof munity, and the government ggents comeeted with the viz:

For the erection of a eustom house at New Yo three hundred thousand dollars.

For the purchase of a site and the erection of a puil warehouse, in the eity of Baltimore, fifty thousund lare.
For do. do. in Newburyport, in Massachusetts, find thousand dollars.

For do. at Middletown, in Conneotieut, four thousand eight hundred dollars.
For completiug the custom house at New Loudon, (Conn.) four thousand dollars.

For the purchase of custom house ground at Key West, four thousand dollars.

By a clause in the general appropriation act, the priviledgy of firanking letters is given to members of congress froin 60 days before each member tukes his seat [or onght to take his seat,] to the end of the term for which he is elected, and to the meeting of the congress following.

A tetter to the editors of the National Int-tilgencer, from a correspondent at Hieliminad, under date of 24 th uit. ayy:
${ }^{\text {"4 }}$ gave you an item of intelligence which pnosibly you may not recelve from any other quarter; one going futty to demon suate, I think, the tow ehb of nultification in the capitat of this state. The governor of Virginia, I understand, had at some trouthe and expense, caused a superb Ftate fag to be prepared and painted, with the intention of taving it hosted at the quartery of the state guard, on Fridny morning last, the pzd instant. Knowiedze of its extotence, and of his intentinn, sonnehow or otbowterzu of its extatence, and of his intestinn, soinetiow of excitement thamfested itself among the repreaontatives and the peopte. Either dissuaded by his party friends, or prompted by his own fears of the consequences that would iswue from dieplaying the flag, his excellency determined to let it remain snog in the paioter's shop; and fortunate it was that be did so-for had the banner heea unfurled to the breese, and exposed to pablic gaze, it woutd unquestionably have been torn down and prostrated by the people, and in afl prohaintity with some blooilshed. Scarce a voice was heard in favor of raising it; and num bers were heard to express their determination, to rally under the otar-apangled banner of the union. It wae suppoted by eama, that luad the state fing beea hoisted on the day, the flag of the union would not have been, at least by order of the commanding chime. As it was, the union tlag, fised on a pmie, was poked out if a hole in the southern end of the eapiot lut, and is this haif erect and awkward wituation, flapping on the end of the ridge of the buidiug, and repeatediy hooked on the point of one of the tightoing rods, it was toru in many places, and pieces thereof were flying in every direction over the heads of the mititary and ciuzens aseeubled on the public square," Eabtimone and Washington. The following highly interestiug artiele is from the Maryland Republican of Baturday last:

The supplement to the hill antworising the Baltimore and Ohin ratl road company, to construet a rail road to the city of Washington, prased the housa of delegates on Wednesday, by a vote of 53 to 15 , and will no doubt past the senate-as it is in aceordance with the propositions of the rull road company, there is no doubt of the project progressing withont detay-and we may look firr ite accomptishment at an eaity period. The state subecribes one third of the eapital, and books are to be opened for individual smbseriptinns for the baliance. Tha rail road compasy are authorised to take what stock may not be eubweribed willalu thirty days after the npening of the books, and may borrous finds to a certain amount on the faith of the state, the payment of tha principal and interest of which funds le secured by a piedge of the rail road itcelf. He assigne, among other constitutional aod conscientions objections, that he cannot swear "to enforce laws which an irresponstble association has the power to suspend at pleasure," meaning, we presutne, the nulfification elub in Charleston. Mr. Weest will doubtless be superseded, and be again a candidate, and the Camden Journal promisces that he will be sustained by a triumpliant majority in the district. THE TARIFF BILI.
The following are Mr. Rutchie's remarks on Mr. Clay's tariff bill. We have no prevent comament to roake upon them.

From the Richmond Enquirer of Mareh 2.

THE TARIFY atli.
We hope it to now a law of the laud. It passed the house of representatives on Tuesday. Every vote south of the Potnmac, we believe, with the exception of Mr. Mereer, being in favor of it. It in erpected to pass the senate without dificulty. It Ik not the beat blll to which we are eatitled-nur it all probability the best which tha whole moral force of the united south could have wrung from the next congress. But we take it for the prosent for what it it worth. It will give peace to South Carolinawhose messures have been marked by so much precipitation and danger, and calculated to shake the union twelf. And we, for one, shall hasl the measure with sincere satisfaction.
We do not understand Mr. Clay's course. In his speech on Monday last, be hopes "that the manufacturers would go on and prosper, confident that the abandonment of protection was never intended, and looking to more favorable tumes for a re newal of a more efficient tarif." Renewal of a more efficient tarif! Now, what says his Lill? That "from and after the day last aforesaid" (30th June, 1842), all duties upoll huports shall be collected in ready money, &e. &c. aod such duties (not exceeding 20 per cent.) shall be laid for the purpose of raising turh revenuc as may be necensary to an economical administration of the government." How stand the hope and the pledge together? Does Mr. Clay mean to tantalise the manufacturers with the hopa of "more favorable tumes for the renewal uf a move effi cieut turif" "-or, does be mean to eay, that notwithrtanding the pledge in the bill, a more favorable tume is to be veized upon for the renewal of a mare efficient taritr?
Mr. Clay disclains any slare in bringing the existing cvils on the country! Why, has he not been one of the great clampions of the American System?-and is it not this most oppressive system which lias applied the "torch" to our political fabric? Ile now declares; "that when he oaw the torch applied to a favorite system, he would rush to save it, and to restore secarity and peace." Why, this is nothing bat right-for, well is it, that the incendiary bhould ruch toextinguish the flames he has priacipally contributed to kindle.
He deelares, that he wishes to put the system on a perinanems foundation for nine or ten yeara!!-and adds, thst he is willing to test bia bill "by the opinions of the mauufactirers themnelven, a large number of whom are now ansembled in Washingtoo, and whose alsonat unanimous voice would be in favor of tis bill." Well, if they are content, we can have no objection. But how foolinhly would the south have acted, is submiting longer to a system, which the maoufacturere can now afford to modiry without a murmur? We doubt, however, whether Mr. Clay will find the manufacturers an quit. MP. Webster seema to think differently-but they may rely upon it, that their oppressive syotem is now gone-that n n more favorable times will ever come for renewing a more cfificent tarif-- Wat Mr. Clay himself cannot bring it back-that the south bas seen how gradually and insidiously this system has growo upon us-that they have scen the error, and will hereafter repudiate every retura to it, with a jealousy and a determination which nothing can subdue. The die is cast, if this bili-passes-and this unnatural system, which is so much at war with the genus of the age, and the institutions of a free and a young country, will never be renewed after 1812 , by all the Clays and the Calhouns in the country.
We shall be delighted to see it down-and though 9 or 10 years is pretty long for us to subrait the it , yet we are willing to allow so much time to the manufacturets to accomunodate themselves to the ehange-always reserving the right of cutting down the revenue to the mowt ceonotaical wants of the government. We hail the paesage of the bill with satisfaction-as calculated to proserve the peace of the country. Mr. Clasy has been the most active nasn in bringing it about. If was what he owed to the enuntry-and we are glad that he has paid the debt. But, depend upon it, Mr. Clay. that your hopes about the return of more favorable times, nud the renewal of a thore efficient tariff, will never be conaummated with the consent of the south. And another thing? you will never succeenl, as you hint, in converting the southrons into "hugh tariff men" -that toope is gorie: that souree of joy is dried up. And another! the south have not "riven op their consititufional objections"-and what is more, they never will-for, independently of thesp pecumary interests, they regard the whole sywtem as contrary to the gemus of our Inatitutiona-as involviug expecially a jurisdiction over the rights and pursuits of the people, which was never, and never will be, yielded to a limited federal government.

LETTER FROM GENERAL MERCER.

WanAington, b. C. Mareh 4, 1833.
EAgar Snowden, esq. editor of the Alerinniria Guzefte:
Dean sia: In the analymin, which lately apprared in your paper, of the vate of the thoune of representalives, on the bill modirying the tariff of July 18*2, I appear to the the only member from Virginia opposed to that measure: and, as it was regarived, by a large inajonty of those who voted for it, as one of pacification, I avail myselfof the channel of your paper, to state briefly, the grounds of my diwsent to it, sustained, as it was, by mapy of my persowal and pollical friends.
Those grounds would have been publiciy submitted to the bonac, of which I was a member; had I not regarded it as a duty to forbear to protract a debate which consomed up a very large portion of the late session of congress; and, at one tume, threatened to render an extra session of that body necessary to the administration of the governmimt.

It is known to all my intimate friend\%, that, although I was mot an original odvocate of the protcetive syotem, beyond an adequate provision, in peace, of the means of defence in war, I consider the public faith an molemuly plightied, by the various tardf acte of congreas, sunce the last war wrth Great Britain, to those citizens of the Uaited states who have accepted the invitatioa of those laws, to place their eapitai and labor under the shield of the protective policy.
The testimony of mo many men, representatives of the eastern and middle states, in both boures of enngress, -in whose knowledge of the condtion of the manufactures of the country I had much confidence, as well on account of their integrity and ability , as of their better opportumity of information, derived from beir place ofation greal proportion or whon voted against the bill in question,-occasioned in togive to it the alanction of my vote.
int an earnet desire to pacify the existing discontents, to the south, if practucalfe, in a manmer consistent with what is due so the authority of the laws, induced me to declare to the friends around the, atter the bill had come from the senate called the "enforcing act," that, if it passed the house, I would yield miy assent to a modificatuon of the tarif: for which, bille were then under diacussion in both houses.
The order in which those bills should pass the senate, had been, in my judgment, yery properly arranged; and that arrange. ment I regarded as of inaterial consequence to the character of the nation.
South Carolina had nullified a law of the United States, and threatened resiatance to shy attempt to enforce the execution. To vield to this threat, would be, in my opinion, a virtual renubeistion of the sanction, not of this partucular law only, but of the entire authority of congress. While an attitude of defiance was matntained by that state, I regarded any concession from the federal government, prinr to a provision of the means and the expression of a determination to maintain, unimpaired, the authority of the union, as wholly derogatory to its character, and as eminently tending to endanger its future existence, by aviting similar resistance from other quarters, and a general and fatal distrust of its authority every where.
It was by no means certain, at the moment at which the late tanif bill parped the lonuse of representatives, that the "4enforeing act" might not be defeated, provided the former preceded it. Many cancee led me to cnnsider the passage of the "enforeing aet," in sach event, as doubtful. Among thase, were the ad vatsed period of the session, which must terminate in a few days, and the anxiety of many mernbens to pasa another very moportant act, called the "land bill." Accordingiy, after the bif of conciliation liad passed, there were more than 70 votes to lay the "enforcing act" on the table, with the avowed jntent ot again th connider it during the session.
As both acts have now passed, I have only to make, In Jnatiee to myself, this explanation to my constituents.
While I eongratulate you and them, on the reasnnable bope which thome murasures aflord of the restoration of harmony to our union, without material injary to any clase of citizens, Lake this eccastou to say, that I never, for one moment, consjdered its existonce seriously endangervd by the political move. ments of $outh Carolina. That glorious bulwark, not nf our own freedom mierely, but of the itberty of miankind, I regard as incapable of being subverted by the madness or folly of a single erate. I am, dear sir, very reapectfully, your obedimt servani

Ife then proceeded in an andible and firm voice to pronounce his innugutal address, at the close of which, he wax aqain grected with cheers and applause. The chief justice then approached the president and administered the usual oath, at the ennelusion of which the was akain cheered by the multitude. The oath was also administercd in Mr. Vaußuren. The president and vice president theil retired amid the plaudits of the asemylily.

Ixaceeral apdrese of the paestdent of the unitid

 NTATER, FOORTA OF MaxCA, $18 \%$.Fellow cillzens:-The will of the American penple, expressed throagh their unonlicited sutfrages, calls me before ynu to pass through the matcminities preparatury th takiag uimon myselif the stuties of president of the United States, for another teias. For their approlation of my public conluct, through a period which has not been withnut itd difficnities, and for this renewed expreasion of their confidence in my good intentions, I am at a loge for terms adequate to the expression of my gratitide. It shall be displayed, to the extent of tny humble alilitier, in contiaged etforts sh to shainister the goverument, as to preserve their liberty and pronsote their happiness.

So many eventa have occurred within the last four yeare, which have necessanly called forth, konctines under cireum stances the inost drlicate and painful, my views of the principlea and policy which onght to be pursurd by the general government, that I need, on this occiasion, but allude to a few leadug considerations, connceted with pome of them.

The foreign policy adopted by onr government soon after the formation of our present coustitution, and very generally pasphed by suecessive administrations, has been crowned with almost conaplete sucecse, and has elevated our character among the natious of the earth. To to justice to all, and submit to wrong from none, hins been, during miy adininistration, ite governing maxitn; and so happy have been its results, that we are not only at peace with atl the wortd, but have few causes of controversy, and thowe of minor importance, remaining unad justed.
In the domestic policy of this government, there are two obects which eapecially deserve the attention of the people and their representatives, and which have been, and will contiuue to be the subjects of my increasing solicitude. They are the preservation of the rights of the several states, and the integrity of the union.
These great objects are necessarily connected, and can only we attatued by an calightened exercise of the powers of each within its appropriate sphere, in confurinity; with the public will constitutionally expressed. To this end, it becomes the duty of all to yield a ready and patrintic subaision to the laws constitutionally enacted, and thereby pronote and strengthen a proper contidence iu those institutions of the several states and of the U. States which the people themselves have ordained for their own government.
My experience in public concerns, and the ohservation of a Ife somewhat advanced, confirm the opinions long stgee inabibed by ine, that the destruction of nur state governments, or the annilulation of their contrul over the local concerns in the people, would lead directly to revolution and anarchy, and final y tu despolista and inilitary domination. In proportuon, there fore, as the general government eneroaehes upon the riglats of the atates, in the same proportion docs it impair its own power and detract from its ability to fulfil the purposes of its creation. Bolemnly impresaed with these considerations, my conntrymed will ever find sae ready to exercise iny coustitutional powery in arresting measures which may directly or indirectly eneruach upon the righta of the states, or tend to coneolidate all palitien power in the general government. But of equal, and indeed of incalculable inportance is the union of these states, and the asered duty of nill to eontribute to its prevervation by a hberal support of the general government in the exerctse of its just powern. Ynu have been wirely admonished to "accustom sourvelves to think and speak of the union as of the palladiuin of your pohitical eafety aud prosperity, watching for its pruservation with jealows nnxlety, discuuntenancing whatever may sugzest even a suspicion that it can in any event be aliandnned, and indiganntly frowning upon the first dawning if any attempt thalienate any portuon infoar country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred lies which uow link together the various parts." With out uninn our independence and hberty would never have been acliteved-without union they never ean be maintained. Dhvided inth twenty-four, or even a smaller number of separate communitien, we shall see our internal trade burdened with numberiess restraints and exactions; communicatinn between distant points and sections obstructed, of rut off; our sons made soldiera to duluge will blood the fields they now ull in peace the mass of our people borte down and impoverished by taxee to support armies and navies; and military leaders at the heal of their victorions legions becoming our law-pivers and judges The loss of liberty, if all good government, of peace, plenty, and happiness, inust inevitably follow a dispolintion of the union In supporting it, therefore, we support all that is dear to the freeman and the philanthropist.
The time at which I stand before you in full infinterest. The eyes of all nations are fixed on our republic. 'The eveut of the existing erisis will be decisivedn the opinion of mankind of the juraeticability of our federal systum of government. Great in the wtake placed in our hands: great is the responsihitity which must real upon the people of the United Staten. Let us realize the importance of the attitude in which we stand befure the world. Let us eserciae furbearance and firmness. Let us extricate our country from the dangers whlleh surround it, and learn wisdotn from the lessous they ineuleate.

Deeply impressed with the truth of these nbarrvations and under the nbligation of that molenin oath whith I ann nbout to take, I shall continue to exert all my faculties to maintain the just powern of the constitution, and in transmit unimpaired to posterity the blessinga of our foderal union. At the same time, it will be iny aish to lucnteate, liy my ollicial acta, the neceasity of exercising, by the guncral goverument, those powers nily that are clearly delegated; to enenurage simplicity and econominy in the pupendiumes nf the govermment; to raice no more money Crom the people than may be requisite for these objects, and in rom the pill mf ail classes of nuanuer that wif of all portions of the union. Constantly the community, and of ent porig into wociety, "individuale muat berring in mind that, in enterimg intorest, it will be my dagive up a share or iberty to prcser foier, with our brethren in sire so to discliarge my dutica as to form, wincession and comall parts in the conntry, a spirit of tiberal cunces and coapromise: and, by reconciling our rellow chizens to they partial promise, which they must unavnilably make, for the preserva are of ereater giod, tocommend our invahable governtone and affections of the Amarican menta finaily, it is my most fervent prayer, to that Almighty Baing before whom 1 now stand, and who has kept us in his hands from the infaney of our repubise tof the present day, wat he will so overrule all my intentions and accons, and inspire the bearts of toy follow citusens, that we way he preserved from dangers of all kiude, and contunue forever a UNITED AND HARYY IEORLE.

From the Globe of March 6.

Festerday, the diphomatue tepresentanves in the different foreign goverimeats, wated upon the presidunt to offer their congratulatuns ou his re-election, and tu ansure him of the fuendly dispo-dtun of their own countries towarda the United Siates. They werc received and introduced to the preasdeut, by the cieresaty of state, in the precence of the heads of departments, at one o'elock; and Mr. Serrurier, minuster plenipoteutiary of Y'rance, ande the whllowing addresa on their behalf:

Mr. Preaident: The diplomatic body aceredited to the government of thas repubiie, hasteus to offer to your exceilency their regpectrul felicitations on your second inauguration as president of the United states. They feel asoured that this new and fatteriug proof of the contilience of your feliow citizens csnnot bet greatly contribute to confirm those frieudly relations which already exist between this republic and the governmante represented at Waahington-rylations which yourexeelleney so bappily preserved and extended during the four yuars of your firt preandeney.
1 enteein it, Mr. President, at once a happiness and on honor In be, on an oceasion on intareating, the interpreter of the sentiments wheh anlinate the diplomatic body tnwards yont, pereonally, and to offer th you, in their name, the sincere wishes whicb every one of them traiy entertains for the increasing prosperity of this republic, for the firmness of its unton, and eapeciaily, Mr. Prealdeut, fot overy thing that can contuibute to your own preroual ghory and happiuess.
To this addrese the president made the following reply:
It gives me great ploasure, geatlemen, to receive by the organ of the eident aud lughly reepected member of the diplowatuc body, near the goveinment of the United Scatee, the congratuiations you are pleased to offer on my re-election, and, above all, the assurancen for my country of the friendly disposition of thooe which you represent.
It has been a prinelpal object with me, in culturate that disposition by tie sluecrest desire to cherish kindiy feelingi, extend the advantages of comamerce, promote the interehange of every diecovery in arts and scipnce in peace, aud lessen hy humane stipulations, the evils of war, wheu, unfortuantely, that ecourge of the human tase becomes inevitubin.

Repeat Hiex masurances, gentiemen, to the peveral governments you repreacnt, as the invariable rule of my conduct towards them; ond, for yourseiven, aceept the offer of the high reepect and regard for you individualiy, with which your conduct during your reaidence bere bas inspired me.

TWENTY-gECOND CONGREAS-BFCOND SEBSION.

EEMATE.
Mareh 1. Mr. Grundy, from the select committee appointed to wait $n n$ the prewident and vice preaident elaet, to apprise them of their election, reported that the committee had perthem of their elvetion, reported that the conmmitice had perrecrived tor answer, that he received thls evidence of the confidence of the people with gratitude, and wouid enter on the divelarge of lise duties with a determination to act so as to justify that ennfidence.
The bill for modifylug the dulies on Imports, as passed by the hnase of represpntauves, (in effect Mr. Clay's bili), beigg under coupideranion and on, ite passage-
Mf. FatSins spoke at some length, in opposition to the bili. He nljected to the idrat which seemed to pervsile the bill, that the protective policy of the conuntry was an evil; an evit to be deprecated, and only to be tolerated for a monselt, to prevent a greater evit. Tlita policy wan now placed in the situation of a state criminal condetrned to die, but allowed a shiort ume in prepare binself for death, siace dio he must-his doom being fird and irreversible. He took a view in the true character of the resonrecs of the comntry, and the oblizatun which true pofiey imposed inn 114 to cherinh and protect then. With the correet path so distinctly marked before us, he expreaged tis great astonishument that cougreps shnuld be unwilling to pursue it; that there should alwnys appear a reluctance to ndopt measnres Ionking to the Aevelopement and judicinus direetion of these roanurses. and a readitiess to rescind theat where they had been arlepted.
In reference to what had been said as to the preservation of the principle of prntecuinn by this bill, he anked what was the Whe to he athandoned. Ife deprecated this bill as suicidal in its efferth upon the great interests, and the general prosperity of the eonntry. What Great Britain, with her thousand shipe, and ber Wrilington mrmies, could not nccomplish, was given to her by this singie aet of nur nwn. It had been said that this bllt was necospary in preaerve the union, and that without it the union would the dissolved; but he quentioned the correctness of this view, and paliey of adopting this measare in the present atulude of South Carolina.
Mr Calhown then anid, that althongh he objected tn many of the drtails of this lill, he whould vote for it. He thought the time ton Inng, the descent of the duties too slow, and the hoine valuation as execptionabie; but all these are countervalled by the genersi apinit and principle of the bili. He stated that he did not regard the bill as containing any plighted pledge; but an a measure adopted to aneet a peculiar state of things. He bwlieved that $n n$ alinmpt would be uade to diftarb the arrangemrut of this lill, and if it was, that it would be repelled with indiguathon. He fiurther believed that as far as this bill ts eoncerned, peace will be given to the land: but he mant say, with cerned, peace will be given to the band: buthe mast say, with this body, and had just been returned with the sanction of the other house, which would disturb that peace. It would not do It immudiately, but it was a precedent of the most dangeroua character. Hie believed that this bill wan orepeal of the ennstituition, and, "so help me God!" suid he, "If would rather have that instruinent repealed on the face $n$ f it." He viewed it as a measure which must inevitably tend to cansolidation. It wonld not be ocquiesced in. It would be resented, not by force, but by a long course of public oppoeition, which would nover cease until the bill eball be expunged with diagraee from the ntatute book. The verdict nf enngress was agotnat South Carolina: bat there was an appeal which would lia to the people. The grwat republican party wnuld again be rallied und re united, as it was in 1798, and by its force thil evil will $\mathbf{1}$ enrected, or else the liberties of this country are gone forever. He refolced that oba suinject of controversy was settled ond put to rest, but he deeply regretted that another should be opelved which presented a different isaue, and oue of a most formidahle character.
Mr. Freiinghaysen then made some remarks in explanation and justification of the vote he shoutd give. He admitted that When this bill was originally lutroduced, he had sarring doubta as to tis wisdom, deeming it so be a precedent which was of doublful, or even dangerous tendency. But the result of a free enterchange of opinions, and of the knowledge which be had acquired from the manufacturers of his nwn mtate, had been the removal of all these doubts, and a eonvietion that this measure ought to pars as a peace nffering to the south. He asverted to the growing dissatisfaction in relation to the protertive poliey which prevailed in the mouth, and which rendered it tecessary that something should be dane to cheek the furtiar increase $n f$ that policy. He comphinented his honorable friend from Kentucky, for the great Pffort he had now made to reatore peace and harmony to the conntry, and slated that, however that zentleman might be assailed, and his motives mirrepresented by the presses of the country, the time would sonn artive when bis course would be correctly nnderstund, and properiy appreciated. In his enrrespondence with oome of the manafacturers of his state, to whout be liad applied for information, he had ascertained tbat the gunrantee of its permanence whieh this bill contained on tis face, and the circumstawee in which it was enacted, would be of far greater advantage to the menufacturers, than high duties, on the steadiness of which no reliance could be placed. He read on extract of a letter from one of these mnnufacturers to this effect; and then decisred that he was satisfied that his course of duty was to give liss vote for a hill which he was assured on the ouc hand, wnuld tienquilise the south, and an the other, would be sa: lisfactory to the manufiriurers. He truated that the effeef of this compromiwe would bu to induee gentlemen from the nnrth and south to mert with kindiier feelings than they bad exbibited for the lart ten years.
Mr. Dallas said that althongh the senatnr from S. Carolina had steted that tite annth would not view this bill in the light of a pledge to ahandon the protective aystem, yet the gentlenuan Who had opposed the bill had indicated a different opiniun, aud for himself he was opposed to all that kind of legsslatinn. He expressed his fenr that while we are tranquillsing one part of the enuntry by this bili, we may be diaturbing the tranquillity of another part, and thns be only shining the reene of discontent. The bill wruid throw ant of employunent a great mass of people now ocecupied in the state of Pennsylvaina in manufactaring estabdishmente, and would reuder useless and profitless all those pplendid works of internal improvement, her canals and rath mads, for the tratisportatinn of the fabrics which may be prepared by nur domentic indastry. It wonid diminish the value of her enal mines; and opprate as a misehierous check on her prosperity. He thought that a bill invoiving such important results ountit to have been more maturely considered and wrizhref, before any finni decivion was had upnn it. Cnngress had acted bastily on this questinn, which affects the whole prople, and which onght to have proceeded from enme popular bapis. He couid have wiblied the portponement of this measure until the next congress shall assembic. In that enngress thpie will be a fuiter representation of the woice of the people, and if tiat body should then deterinine th destrny this aystrm, he would acquiezee cheerfully in that decision, and so also would the state which he represented. All the eonflicting Inieresta liad evinced o dis. position to nut off thia question till the next kersion. Sonth Carolina ind deturnined to suspend her operations until that time, and the subjeet might have gone over till then without any danger to the peace of the couniry. The tariff bill of the last session was passed afor the most nerinus examination and discussion, and be belleved that if a hill destroying that measure war now paspid, it would be dificult to avoid the cliaracter of Inennsiateney.
Bit be thought that as a substnntive measure this bill onght not to pask. It had lwen hastily prepared, was Ionee in its struc. tore, and had too few guards in it. He restated the viests he had suegested while this blll was in mreparatinn before the splect committec, and the abjection he had arged. The genman from Delaware had gone with him in movt of his views, in all except the return to cash duties which that gentleman had been willing to give up to the hoane valuation. He dd sot accord in the oquutons of that gentucman as to the advantage of this house valuation. He deviarel that the Inamediate edeet of this bill would be to reduce the value of all the property invested in manufactures, and to destroy the meaths willeh theossands of persons eupulayed in them rely on for their daty mustenauce. He expressed his inability to compreliend the bebebta whelt he was sold would result front the passage of the bill. A skilful piltet might be guiding a vestel in a atorm safely to her harbor, while a less skiful landstuan might suppose that hn was runuing the vensel on the roeks. Soit might be with the gentleman igon Kantuck $y$, who misht ses advantages which were likely to artse under this bill, sucb as a less skilful poWuetan mititit be unabte to discern. He lookril on the passage of thas bilt by the votes of the senatore froas siouth Carolina as an abandonament of the doctrines of bullificaum, since, after dectaring the tariff of 1832, hy her ordinance, to be nill and vold, they vote for a measure whieh regards that very law in active and efficient operatuon. Ila had no doubt of the pasange of the bill, and although he felt it would operate opprensively oa the intereats of the state wbich be repiesebticd, he wat atill disposird to give it fair play, and to look upon it as a masasure of soaciliation.
Mr. Ening succeeded. He declared that the bill contalins nothing which is more of the charactrr of a pledge, than is to be fouad in the resolutions of the senator from Massachusetts. He reptied to the statements that thia bill ylelded the principle of prutection, and quoted from the language of the gentleman from Peasaylvania to day, and sonie days since, for the purpose of thewlug that aven he had chaaged bis firet views of tive sulyject. Me advertad to the doubts wliteh he had originally felt ln voting for this blll at the present sewsion, but said that these doubts had subsequantly given way. Ile totk a viow of the courve par. sued by the senator from Penneylvana, in referenes to the lant tarid, in order to ebew that bis opitions lind not alwaye beea stable and uniform on the subject. He stated that there was no reason to believe that the senator from Pennsylvalia would vote against asy mpavure which carries lito affect tha views expressed by the prerident lu this message at the openiag of the present mention, until bis friend from Kentucky lad iutroluced this bill.

He expreseed his regret that he sloould be fousd on this question in oppo-itton to the views of ble filiend from Massachasetts, hat be could not help thinking that his friend had attached te:? maseh inportance to ilie evils to witich he thought this bill would give rise: Totally difering from the views of the senntos froin Goutb Carolina at to the right of that state in piace luerself in Une position which slie now oceuplez, be would never have woted for the bill, until the other uncasure had bsen passed. He remarked that the seator from Mavarchusetts had objected to this bill because It was prospective legislation.

Mr. Wetster atated that his had not oljected to prospective legislation, but hef had said that this bitl, excepting the first sectlos, was not prospective legislation. All our legislation is prospeetive. We do sot legisinte for the past.
Ar. Ering then reeurbed, and argued that the oll given suff cient protection to the manufachurers. It atso waves the principle of protection twlich be would never have ennsputed in abandoe. It leaves free all articles which are neceswary for the samaufactarer. He believed that thry who had bithertu opposed the protcctive system, would, when they should cease tin view this questoou through, a party medium, be daspused to yleld a moderate protersion to domentic induntry.
Alr. Mangum then oblained the floor, and pxpreased his regret that the gentionian from I'eansylvania biouid have endeavored so mix puison in the cup which had been tendered to thes south, in order to Induce her to puall it away from ther. Fie stated that no maa wished auch an aljustnient of the taril! as, by proatrating by a suilden action the great interesta of one section of the union, miyht produce the dauger of reaction. He said that the fealing of the sonth would he one of deep gratituile to thone who bad come to her ald, when her frlends were upoa her, and in the dark tous when there whs not a particfe of light save the apar thes withch came froia the steet of hicr enemiy. He depricated the panacea againat paisie which sone zeutetnen offered to them, and thankerl thoac who had zealomsty hastened the present elorioun consumaintion. Ife trusted that, although the prosent bilt did not gn to far as had been bojprd, it wuuld atill conelitiate the conntry, and ohtain from all parties drep gratitude for those who have stepped forward, and by sacrificing a part of their system, saved the reat, and tranquiliged the coantry.
Mr. Clayton then made snme obrervations on the assertion that the pribcipte of protection was abaindoned, a statement which be denied. He could wot understand bow any gevtieman could stand up, in the face of all the exeunplions which the bill eontained of articlea used by the maaufacturer, and say that there was any intemition to abandon the principle of protection. He would not wacrifica any of tha great interewts of the couniry, but would look abmad upon the whoie, with a dexire to extend to all an equal and an efficisnt protection. He belicved, that Inetead of belag abandoned, the tariff system would herrafier be placed on a better footing than any on whieh it had heretofore atond. It was from no feellog of paaic that he had beea induced to vote for this measure. IIe had been dlapored to soothe the feslinge of the people of South Carolina, and to prodoce a state of things which would bring all the areat interests of the country th aet ingether. He replied to mane of the remarks of the nenator from Masachuscits, (Mr. Webater), especially to the one in whileh he had sald tbat this bull contained a pledger which would prevent an bemorabie man fron votug for a repeal of this law. In such a case, he wished the sruathes from Massachusets ta entablish a rule esclusively for lito own governmeat, and to leave others to the same frec course of actuon. He also went over the groumi he liad turuerly takan an to the concurrence between the rebulutions of that gritleman and the hall now under consideratuon. He then replied to what had fallen frow the senatir froui Pennsyivania, (Mr. Dallas), as to the cuurse guroued in committee, and inmated that iliè protectoos secured by the bill wh it now atande fo more efficient than that which would loave been obtatined by the amendurent of that senator. He almontated that be had eutiversed with practical thanufacturars, and had been satisticd that none of the great interests of the eouatry would the sacrificed by this till. la refereuca to the statersents asade by the senator from Pehnsyivania, relativa to the ruin wheh this bill would briag on the establishments Ia Peansylvawia, he expressed his belief that as much injury would not resule frow the measure as wonld have resulsed from the proposition made by the senator from Pennsylvania. Hnwaver Penasyivanla may have legislated at hone, the had not, on the floor, sliewn that steady, Inflexible deterinination not to surrender a particle of the primeiple of protection which was now manifrated. He would not perunit it to go forth to iha world that be and tise friends who were about th record witb pleasure, because it would give peace to ihe conintry, their names in favor of this bill were atritut to yield suy titing of the prinelpla of protection. He regretted that he had occupied the winate so long. He would ant go through the clauses of the bili, which was printed. He trusted that his sonstimelits would uuderxiand the piotives which had iaduced hun to vote for thils bill. If ha whould tind at the axpination of tie nine years that there liad been too much ylelded of the intereats of the matufarturers, he would williagly go with those friends with whon the bad so lung acted, lu reatoring thinge to their former conilition.
Mr. Webofer replied that be stond on the ground that specile duties and diacrimination in laying them, ware the essence of the protretive wystem, and these had been surrendered In this bill. He would leave this point to bet settled by the people. He then made soine brief answrers to the rrmarks of the stitators from Delaware and New Jersey. He thought it wavaung the possibilities that when gentiemen came tugether next sersim, they woutel be told that a now law wruld the neeessary to carry this into effect. They would then be told that this bill would produce no dimiaution of the revenue, and that if the revenue in tn ba reduced, it must be by a different inodification of the taritr. He redied that as to what had been said about practical men, the oplnions of half a dozen or a dozen suvh convened here was not to be mistaken for public opinion; and he was far from helteving that the npinions of practical bien were always the surest guided for politicians: Ile repeated that artivans and mechanles would be severe sufferers under the operation of thite biti, whith would take off the protection from those artictes.
lie maile a brief reterence to what had been said concarning his reaolutions, and concluded with saying that he did take the ground tiat this bill was an abandonnictat of the easence of the prntective principle.
Mr. Frelinghuysen made a few observations to explain a point on which he had beca uilsunderetood by the seinator from Massachusctis. He stated that he had received hio information from the manufacturers, theffore the lef home. He now maid that his manufacturers would, if it cama to tbat pitut, surrender the tariff for the preservatiou of the union, and so wauld be-he wauld live and die by the unlon.
Mr. Sitrbee said a faw words on the suliject of ibe home vauation, which he deemed to be hupracticable, and said that if it was practicable, the reault would not be so favorabie to the manufacturer as had been supposed.
Mr. Clayton repeated his views for the purpose of extricating them from auy doubt as to the home valuation. He paid he tbouzht there wouid be no difficuliy in attaining a uulform rata of value by the sama process.
Mr. Formph sald it was evident from the discu*sion that this was a very bad bill, and satisfied nobody. He expresped bla eonvietion that pubtic opinion is correcting, and afmost corrected, on the subject of the tariff; and that the tima th coming when this question will be put on lis proper fonting. He staved that this bit is the same with the tarifi of 1832 , with the exception of the high duty on wooliens which was comcedsilqant year as a hoon frmen the gentlemen from Ptniuylvania, (Mr. Wibins), and from New Jersey, (Mr. Dhiterson), and fir which they were then serionsiy reprehended by thone who now take the oppenite gronad. He thrught it extraordinary that gentlemen on the other wida hat came se near together as they had.
In reference to the enforcing biti, and the reinarks made by the senator from Bonth Carolina, he said that he was glad to bear from litith that thie bill was to be disecurned in the south hereafer, inntead of tha tariff. He rejoiced at this, suld would oneet the contpat with pleasire, for it would be one which conid be suttled by the cannone of the prors, and not life cannous of arillery, when, Instead of nteel bayonets, wteel pens inight be the weapons, and the eariouch bor would he latd avide for the batTot hox. Ont the question of protection, the sill provided protection for nine years, and thrin afterwards for provection of 20 per cent. The araount is notilag. If the bill protects to a memall amount, It adinits the power to protect to a large amount.

Mr. Sprague replited to what had falien froun the last apeakaf and axpressed bis regret that the gentlauman from Georgia should make his speech run counter to his vote. He repeated what he had formerly said, that this was a concension from the stroug to the weak; and argued that a rliange had taken place in conseqsence of the influence of the desire of concesstos, In the opinions of anany who were opposed to any legislative action. If the spirit which ran through the speech of the senator from Georgia was the prevailing *pirit in the south, there would have been found in this part or the country a differeut epirit than that of concestion.

Mr. Holmes said he was astonished that any one mhould spenk of consistency in his prenence. Fivesy thing be saw or heard convinced lun that lic was the only consistent man in the wenate. The wenator from Masachusette threw charges of inconsisteney againet South Carolna, aud the Iatter threw them back, aind on and so forth. Ife was bound to believe them all, an they were all honorable men, and consequently he was bound to believe that they were all ineonsistcat. He then wewt into an examination of what had been said pro and con, on the subject ot the pledige contanned in the bult. In reterence to the representative itbligation, be was lisppy to be supported by his friend froun Ihelawarn!, who had satd that he dud not view hinseif as the exclusave rupremensative of Delaware. Now, he did not regard limaself an the exclustre reprementative of his astumed eonotiturnts; and wien be receivid mome tiuc since instructions from those who, hke himself, were merely representatives of others, he thought them entitled to any thiog rather than respect. He had ahawered thein, and lie belipved they were sincerely sorry they had ever passed their resolutions; for what with lus answer, and what with their disposition of it, they had msnaged to make themselves eupremely ridiculous, Ile went on to state that the northern inanufacturern would deem thenisclves auticiently protected by this bifl, and that the possibality was, that the nuit applieation for protection would be froon tse sutth. Ho then declared that all the legisative efforts whieh might be brought aganst the manufacturers would never be found able to put down yankee industry and yankee enterprife.
Mr. Wright then rose, and ,tated the defects which he found in the bill. He otyeccted to the propowed iate of reduction for the eight years, and m the want of a uniforn rule of valuatiou. Ile objected to the inequality of the protection given by this bill. His next objecthon wan that while the dnty on negro cloth cxists, it refuecs to impose any duty on the material which entera into that fabric, nond which is grown in absudance in this country. He also objectrd to the system of bome valuation, which he deemed to be anpracticalic, or If practicable, most unequal; and he nbjected further to the abolition of all specific and diseriminating dutses, anl suhstitnting a mode unjust and opprossive. He would not aliseuss the question of the pover of congress to protect our thatufactures by imposing duties on foreing articies, but be thought that this bill did nut sufficiently recognise that powef. No this point, lie quoted the lsnguage of the address of the free trade convention which inet last year. He expressed his own opision to be in lavor of laying finposts for the purpuse of raising sufficient revenue for the wauts of the country. So far, he was assured that the power to impose duies, was vested in congress.
Ilis strougent-olijection to the bill was that it endeavors to bind the action of Cuture congresses. He considered this as a provialon which was purgile in ltaelif, and oue which would never be conplitered as binding. He then fiewed the circumstances under which congress was called upon to act out this bill, imperfect as it is. He knew that he should be eharged with logislating uniler tite influence of his fears. He aould not puffer lis fark to govern his conclusions. Bus the would not disregard them. T'liere load been a deep and mettlod discoatent In a certain portion of the country against our legielation, and he could nos bring lainself 10 regard that discontent lightly.
Under the expressinn of that feeling, enngress had done what, If they had not done, would have left the union dissolved. The operation of that discontent was againat the whole body of laws for the colirction of the revenue; and would, if carried on, have destroyed all the meanw of the goverament. And without the purwe no governnuent conid exist. He had therefore come o the question deeply impressed with the conviction, that it was his duty to give his vate to prevent such an evil. He had been long of the opinion that the reventse ought to be rednced. He had also been long Impressed with a sense of the inequality of the tariff syptem. Nn one had questioned the principle on which thas bill was founded; it whe only in refereuces to the deatha that difference of opinion exiuted. A part of the couniry in deeply excited, deeply exasperated; by what meane, it was not for him to inquire, but the condition of thinge was such as to render it uncertain whetier the union can exist even until the month of Deecmber, unicss something slall tre doue.
Mr. Bisb then stated, that he rigariled the bill as a peace offering, so offrred and so accepted, for the purpowe of conciliations
"Now is the winter of our discontent

Mfr. (Zay then sairl a few worte in reference in this bill and the enfareing hill, both of whieh he convidered that it was ne. engsary to kend forth, as well to sinew that the Inwe must be executed, as well as that there is a disposition to make concessions. Ile stated, that on the subjpet of the government beang a compact, he principsilly agreed wish the semator from sonth Carolina, but with some difference as to the character of the right conferred by that compact. He did aot adopt the opanion that there had been any advance mada in the lusurpation of powers by the general govermment. IJe then went into a view of the listory of this system to shew, that tweive or thirteen years ago, there was no opposition raised aganst the power of congress to protect dompstic industry, The opposition on constitutional grounds fad subsequently grown up. He then stated, that in his opinion no state could so practieally construe the constitution as in nullify the Jaws of the ${ }^{*}$ United. 8tates, withont plunging the country into all the miseries of anarchy. Ife said that lie adhered to the doctrines of that ablest, wisest, and purest of American statesmen-James Madison-who stili lives, and residea in Virginia-the doctrines which wers ad vanced ly him in 1799. The answer of that distinguished man to the resolutions of the other staten, and his address to the people, cffected a sudden revolution of pubhe opinion. Tise people rallied around lim-the alien and sedition laws were repeated-and the usurpations of the general governnuent were arrested. He tiewed the government as federative in its origin, In its clasacter, and in its operation, and under the clause nd the conatitution which gives to congresa to patis all laws to carry into effeet the granted powers, they cond pass all necessary lawe. He hoped that the eftect of this bill woeld concitiate all classes and all sectuons of the union.
He did not arrngatc any merit for the passage of this bill. He had cherished this systein an a favorite chald, and he still clung to it, and should still pling to it. W'hy had he been reproached? He had come to the child and found it in the hands of the Plilimtince, wha were desirous to destroy ft . Ile wished to save and cherish it, and to find for it letter and safer nurses. He did not wish to empiny the sword, but to eflect his oligert by coucesaion and concilation. Ife wished to see the system placed on a securer batgs, 10 plant it in the bosoms and affections of the people. The genilemaa froin Pennsylvania, who had learned his views of the system from the senator from South Carolisa, had spoken of him as the pidot who was directimg the vesnel. If it was so, he woblil ask if she had heen secured by a faithful crew? If all had lieeu faithfin, be believed there would have been no danger now nşsailing the system. He assailed no one; he merely defended himesif against the reproaches of othess.
Anollier motive with him was to preserve the union. He feared lie saw hands uplifted to deatroy the aystem-he saw the union endangered-and ingpite of all peril which inight assail hinnelf, be had deternsined to stand forward and atternpt the resure
He felt himeclf paincd exepedingly in being obliged to separate on the question from valued friends, eapectalis from his friend from Nassachnecte, whom he had alwayn, respected, and whom he will respected. He thea replied th the argament fotsoded on the idea that the protpetive principle had been abandoned by this bill. He adinitted that protection had lieen better secured by former bllis, but there was no surrender hy this. He considered revenue as the tirst ohject, and protnction as the perand. As to the rediction of the revenue, he was of opinion that there was an crror in the calculations of gentlemen. He thonght that in the article of sllks alone, there would be a considarabie rrdnctinu. The protection to the mechanic arts was only rediced hy the whole operation of the hill to 24 per cent. and die did not know that these wonld be any jugt groand for eomplaint, as some of the inechanic arts now enjoy only 25 per cent.
The argament of the senator from Now York was against the bill, but he was lisppy to find his vote was to be for it. If his argnnient brought other minds to the pame conclusion to which it had brought his, the bill would tut be in any danger. Ife would say, save the country-Fave the union-and gave the American Byntem.

After a few words frotn Mr. Smifh and Mr. Wright, in which the latter eaid he had $s n$ mach confidence In the people, as to believe there wnuld not be a worse congreas than this.

Mr. Clay made a slinet rejninder, in which he reminded the gentleman from New York of the whris of a much greater inan than any memher of congress:- "Confldence is a plant of slow trowth," whiclt nay be accelerated of retarded by circilmstances. The gente:man slvould not outdo him in prepossessions of confidence in the people.

The question was tien taken. and derided as followes:
YEA&-Measrs. Rell. Rihh, Maek, Calhoun, Chambers, Clay, Clayton, Fwing, Font, Forsyth, Frtlinghuyeen, Grondy, Hill, Holmen, Johneton, King, Mangrm, Miller, Moore, Naudain, Poindexter, Kives, Rohinenn, Sprague, Tomlinson, Tyler, Wiag' gaman. White, W'right-29.

The the bill was finally pasarb.
The penate then took a secess of an hour and a half-(until a quarter past 7 o'cinck.)

Erenfing servion. The chsir wan resumed at half past 7 o'rlock, and, antil 9 o'clock, the senate was engaged in execstive bu-『ineps-after whirh a prrat nuany private or Incal bilis were varintualy dispmed of, generally ordered to a plird rending of passed-as will oufliciently appear in the Nat of acts. [If was hard to keep a quorum together this evening.]

The senate then took up the nmendinent made by the house of representatives to the bill authorising the ilistribution of the proceeds of the pablic tands.

Mr. Clay said that, altimugh the objerts to $w$ hich these proceeds are to be applied, werc a fiavorite point with him, yet as he had found that he was ditfering on this tupie with some of friende, and as it had been snggensed that turere might be do eatty in another quarter, if the words struck out by the hous were retained, the wouth move to eoneur in the amendment.
Mr. Robinson expreswed a bope that the question would not be pressed at this late hour, in so thin a senate, when many wese absent who are so much interested in the measure. He hoped that the question would not be takiri, except in a full scante.
Mr. Clay expreesed hix regret that, at this late perion of the session, the senator from Ithmois monatd winh for delay, which might endanger the paswage of the bill. It was not the fanlt of the nembers present, that there are sun puany nosenters.
The yeas and ways were then ordered on the motion to enncur.
Mr. Clary wished to take the quextion to night, in order that the extcutive might have the to act bifon the hill.
Mr . Chambers said he shonld vote against the amendment. He would rather vote agant the bill, than take it with the aneud. nent.
The question was then taken on the mation to concur, and decided an follow:

Mr. Sprague oppored the bill. Je warned the senate ngainxt returning to the practue of inversting the pullic funits in tocal banks, by which the gnverimpent had already snstanned heavy lowses. The system establashed had been found eonveriont, ensy and secure; and there was no roason for departing from it. The question was then taken, and the motion was decided as followes: yeas 20 , nays 17 .
So the ball was taid on the table.
Mr. Clay then rose, and addrgased the chair to the following effect:
Mr. Clay. An incident nceurred a few days agn which gave me very great pain, and I am quito kure that in thit ferling the whole senate participated. * Jallude to some of the observations made hy the fionoralite senator from Miskinsipul and the honoraBe senatmf from Maseachusptts near me, with refircence in an important bill then pending. I waspersnaded at the time those remarks were made, that they were the result of mistual misenaetption, anil were to be attritutrd solely to shint zeal whicht each of those honorable nenatoyn fott-in thic pusition in which they atond tnwarda cach other-the one to earry, the other to defeat the measure, with reapeet to which my friend from Mississippi and myself unfortunstely took differrnt views.
The concluding observatious of the seuator from Miesisuippl, after having deflvered a very nble and argumentative apeceh, one which I need not say to lim and the menate embodied all Ife saitl that the entiator frim. Sonth Cerolina way with himi in the limuse of representatives at the perisal to which Mr. P. allualed, and if that senator wivhed any ceplanatios of his conruerat that time, he wonld pay the most cheerfisl and respectful attention to his request. luit he did not feet himastf calfed ugon to take nny nitice of the revinrks of the senteinnli from Misoikpippi. which could be lurought to bear on tiveside of the question, and made me regret that wa hall lost the benefit of his ability. In concluding hav remarks, it did appear to sonic memicre of the sonate, and to myself, and 1 tave no ilnubt thas it was no felt by the honoiable menator from Masfachusetta, that there wat something personal, and pecalinily hassh in his tangunge. Acting on tbat supposition the lionorable senntor from Massachusetio, in the course of his otsmervations, also used langunge which may have wcented to be unnccessarlly harkh. Ilut in the sense whicb t understood the: remwrke of the lionorable senator from Misolssjpui, the senator from Maxzachusetts might have found some Justurication.

I can perfectly well conceive, lioweter, that the senator from Misgissirpi was influenced in his conrke by nothing begnod the ardor of the momentary exritement to which he bad yielded himself. I know the respret whet he bears, has borne ht least, and 1 am sire, yw bears to the senator from Mameachusette, the personal and mently hitescourse which has alway's existed between thein, amit the respect which they bear to each other, and 1 ain perfiectly persuaded that the honorable senator from Mossissiplit, in the renarks with which he conctuded his speech, relierted anlely to the publie course-the public measures-of the honorable senator from Massachusetts, and the character of the partiphlar measurc nuder consideration, without intending to rellect on the permonil character of the gentleman from Maspaclinserts. Ant I ann sure, it was not the purpose of the honorable senntor from Mnssaclimeett to give any perkonal bearing to olmenvations which he felt called upon to make. U'inder these circumstances, I nhould fiel, and I an sure the serate would also feel, grent pain, if these tho genttemen, who have breen for so long a time on a footing of friphdship, should he separated by any circumstance: attributable to hostile feeling; or, rnther to the misanderstanding which has arizets. I am sure, that the senate an well na ingself, would be glad that these two gentlemen should ptill pmrsuc their frlowdy feetings to each other; atod 1 bope such an explanation will be given as will produce a reconciliation betwren the two gentiemon, who have ani frequently acied in coneert together on Important subjects, and who cutertsin towards each other the bighest respect. And I do hope that, in some wily or other, meane will be found to remove dhis urcumentary interruption of thesc gentlemen, and that mothime will soceur to diaturb, nmong the maspliers of the senate, thai tmariony ant pence, which I trust will plevail among ati the members of this body.
Mr. Poindexter rnse and said, that the circuinstance which thw honorable ernator from Kentucky had alluted to, as baving parsed betwren hin and the tonomable wrator from Masaachuretis, was to him $n$ source of regret. The measure under emonsideration at the time, was one to which he was strongly opposed, anil aqainst which he cntered bis sollemn pmont. The honorable semator from Mlawsaclonsetts had advncated that men*ulue with lue usual zeal nud ability. In the course of his remarks he niluded to the courxe of the sonth in opposition to the American $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{y}}$ stem. and chinged upon citizens of that section of the umion in general, nud mori particularly on Sonth Carolina, acts whifh amount to treasin and releeliom, and a disposition to rupture nui happy tuion, and to burn the constitution at the point uf the liayonct. Coming, sir, from that quarter of the nution, if felt it to be my sluty to vindicate it from those aspersitus, and to thow liack to the honorable senntor, as far as I could, $n$ Rolnnd fir lian thiser. Delieving that the suruth was right in the position which she has ansumed, 1 felt authorised to nllute to the phat bistory of the enontry, and to the political conduct of the homormble gentleman himself, in lltustration of my argument. Peohap, in the ardor of my fecting, I went too far; and, if mo, I derply regret it. For it wns far from my purpose to violate the decorum of debate which lans ever eharacterised this hody, or to express mynelf with harsluces towards the bonorable penator from Mnssachuegtts. He well knowe the respect and kindnesd which I bear for him; and I assure him that I had moninfention to reflect cither upon hin personal ebaracter, or the purity of his political motives. Tlaving said this, I truat I have put myself "rectue in curia" on this subject. It was assurediy far from my intention to treapass on the feelings of the bonvoralife member from Masnachissets.

Mr. Hebster. It is not more a mitter of regret to the honotathe acnator from slispissippi than to myself, that nny musunderstanding slonuld have oceurred between ina. Since our acquaintance in this body, we have been on a footing of kindness nad conrtesy, and there is no gentiemnn in the senate towarda whmi I loave been less inclined to mnnifekt any warmth, which might be attributed to want of decorum. I certhinly thought that the last portinas of the honorable senator's remarks had a very strong permonal luaring on myaelf: I centainly thought they were intrided tu tuve that effect. I am very loapgy to hear tha loouorahte genticman diansow that he intended to give them meli a bearing. I reapond entirely to the decinration that there has ber in between ms, alwaye, kindnows and a good understandligg. There are ineidents eonnected with our relative situations towarde earli ntier which wonld make it extremely unpleasans that any thing should oceur which can ilisturb the good underalanding which ought to exist between honorablo onembers. I therefire entircly disavow any tutention to offer any permenal distespect towards tilm, in my answer to the remasks which he maule towards me.
Mr. Poindester then rose and said: The diselnimer made by the gentieman fiom Massarhusetts enlis for further explanation froni me. In reply to what I deemed a personal affront, towarda:
elynelf, from the honorable senator, I used expressions which tr auch was not introded, might apprar laneh, and a vinfation of tite reapect whith ought to be preserved betwer'll menbera oft thes honorable body. Fiusling tron the explanatom whels has offer me atsy personal menth, or to wentul my prustinity an an indtibiluel, I take this ocea-ion voluntarily, and with gerat plea surt, io fetrict the offeli-ive expres fons, hastuly need, muln. the umpulse of the obment; and I tender my hand to the bono rable benator with perfect freedom ant eoribility.

On motimn of Mr. Dulley, lie senate thell proceeded to the conalderation of executive busluexs.

When the disora were re openen, Mr. Clay was found apeak Ing. He was engaged in expressing his appruhation of the conduet of the president pro tem. of this body. The present, he said, had bewn a very arduous geapion. fie should not have voled for the present prexiding offleer, had he been present whem he was rliceted; aor did lie mu:an to say what would be his vote. If the election were now to be made. But lin gave with great plessure, hits tenitmony in favar of the falthful and able and lupartial manner its which that offieer hatl proformed tis dury. Ile coucluded with ankiug leave to present the following reanlution:

Resolred, That the thanks of the senate be presented to the hnn. Hugh L. While, for the dignity, mbility, and impartiality, with which be has discharged the duties of prevident protem. port of the senate.
The resolution was then considered, and unanimously sdopted.

Late in the conrse of the evening-
Mr. Poindezter moved that when the senate adjourns, it adjrurn to meet at 10 o'eloek to morrow; and asked for the yeas and nays, which were taken as folluws:

NAY'S-Messrs. Benton, Chambers, Dallas, Dudley, Ewing, Foot, Frelinghuysen. Grundy, Headricka, Itill, Kane, Knight, Naudain, Rubinson, Ruggien, Seymonr, Sprague, Tipton, Tomlinson, Webster, Wilkins, Wright, White,-23.
In the course of the evening-
A bill from the house of representatives for making approprinthoms for buitding light bouses, &c. was read a first ume, and on the quention that it be now read a second time,
Mr. Grundy objected: and the motion requiring by rute the unanimous consent of the scnate, the bll was of course rejected.
On motion of Mr. Fbot, the resolution offered by fimm anne days agn, calling upon the secretary of war to firmish a plan for equaltzing the pay of the army, was taken up and agreed to.
The chair communicated a mesange from the prexidellt of the Unlted Stnter, communieating information respecting the consular establishments of the U. States; which was ordered to be printed.
The senate spent about three hours in the consideration of executive business.
several attempta were made to induce the senate to take up the bill for the relief of the beire of Matthew Lyyon, but the seate refuspd to consider it.
About half past $4 o^{\prime}$ elock, a commitice on the part of the enate was appointed to join such committee an the huuse might appoint, to wait on the president, and inform hlin that the two monses were ready is adjonrn.
The house having appointed a commiuee, the joint eommituee walted on the president, and returned with an answer that he had no further communication to minke; whereupon,
Mr. King moved that the senate then adjourn, sine die.
Mr. Whitt, (preadent pro tem.) then rose and addreased the enate to the following elliect:
Before the presiding officer leaves the chair, he is desirous of asing a few words.
We met under circumstances ealculated to induce us to beWeve that matters of high eveitement would arise during our mojonra lere. It was by the will of the majority of this body that I was piaeed in this chair, to presite over your deliberations. I looked upnn the high bnomor thns conferred to be but lemporary; for could I then have foreseen that I was to act in this eapacity till now, most certainiy my dratrust of my experience would have induced me to sirrink from underinking the task. The duties of the chair are at all times arduous, but the more partieniarly son, when topics of high literest and import ange are under discussion. My experiçice, however, han con viseed me that even under these circumstances, the presiding ofieer may have a pleasant task to perform, when every menn ber submils himseif in be gnided by the rule of this body, intead of having a law frur himself.
I take pleaure in stating that during the whole course of the weainn, no net has been done by any one member, and no wingle expression has reached my ear, caleniated to give palin to the presiding offieer. If, in the discharge of the duties confided to me, I have had the miafortune to injure or to wound the ferl ings of any individual, $t$ trust he will do me the juatice to beHeve that it has happened without any Intention on my part I have endeavored to act lmpartially towarda every meimber of thty body; and I would have them to bear in unind, that if, during the arduous dutien I have bad to perform, and ainidst ati the exciternents that have existed, any thing like order has been preserved, it must be attributed more to the kindness and courlesy of senatori towards the prestaing omeer, than to the capacity which he was able to bring to the duties astigued him. It is not probable, in the course of himman evenis, that wean all ever antemble in thits chamber again. Procendinga of Thuraday F'eb. 20, continued-Evening sewion. Ainoug vartoun senate bilis which received their first reading, the huuse twok up a foint resolution from the senate, suspending the rule which forbids the sending of bitls from one house to the other on the three last days of the sestion, so far as to allow them to be seat on Eriday and 太aturday.

Mr. adasm moved to amend it by extending the suspension alsu to the ruie which prolititu billa to be sent to the president on the last day.
Mr. Wichliffe wisbed to limit the effect of the suspenation to the ordinary appropriation inils only.
$A$ fer a desuitory eunversation, ill which Messrs. Adams, Toylov, Wickiffe and Ellsworth, took part, the amendiment was made spectioc, by enumernting eertain bils to be excepted.
Mr. Hoffiman supported the amendments of Mr. Wicklife, and protestid agannst consuming the morning of Bunday in legisiaUni.
Mr. Irtin hnped the land "bill would be included, and Mr. Ve uton, the light houre bill.
Mr. Davis, of Mass. Mr. Cambreleng, and Mr. -fdams, opposed the limitation proposed by Ifr. Wicklife.
Mr. Putton moved to lay the whole subject on the table; but tis was negatived.
Mr. Wickliffe's amendment was then rejected, and that proposed by Mr. Adums was agreed to.
Mr. WiekHffe then proposed that both houses be adjourned by the preaiding officers thereof, on $sturday night, at 12 o'elock. Mr. Ste:rart moved the previous questiou on thit motion, which was seconded-yeas 69, nay: 40.

The joint resolution, as aineuded, was then ordered to be read a third time.
The house then resumed the orders of the day, being the Mal further providing for the collection of the revenue; when
Mr. Wayne, of Gcorgin, took the tioor, and cbutiaued to oecupy it in a speceh in support of the bill, and in repiy to Mir. Mc Duefis'e argument of the morning.
Mr. Fosier, of Georgia, sueceeded, and apose with very great foree and aoiwation, in opposition to the bill.
Mr. Daniel, of Kentucky, next addressed the house, and did not resume his seat until a quarter before twelve o'clock; when Mr. Craig, of Virguia, afur sume prevloua remarks, demanded the previous question; but withdrew his motion at the request of Mr. Carcon, of N. C. who, under a protnise to renew the motion, inade au explanation in reference to something which had been sald by Mr. Daniel. He then, neeording to promise, renewed the motion for the previous question.
Mr. Levis moved an adjournment. The motion was negeIved.
Mr. Clayton wished Mr. Craig to withiraw his motion for the previous questiou, to allow his to explain; but $1r. Craig deelining to do so,
Mr. Wickliffe anid he had an amendinent or two to offet. He wan calted to ordec, at the uotion for the previous question was not debateable
The demand for the previoue question was seconded-yeas 103.

The previous queation was then put, as followe: "Bhall the main question now be put""
A call of the bouse was moved, but negatived.
The previous question was then carried by yeas and nays, as follows-yeas 110, nays 44.
So the touse determined that the main question should now be put.
The main questiot was accordingly put-"Shall the bill be ordered to be engrosed and read a third tiace?" and deternisied as followes:

Mr. Bell moved that the bill have its thild reading now.
Mr. Carson remonstrated, and proposed to-morrow.
Mr. Lerifs desnanded the yeas and nays.
Mr. Gordon opposed the third readigg at this time, on aceount of the absence of many gentlemen who wished to record their samea againat it. He wished, lituself, to offer some retnarks apon the bill.
Mr. Davis, of 8. C. said he had been anxious to have addreas;od the house, and would, If it werv the wish of the bouse, oecu. py about twenty usinutes. But he could not ask it. Were hen minere denagogue, lie woild wish no greuter advantage than to bave the bull thas driven through the mouse.

Mr. Fonker maved an adjnurument; thit withdrew his motion.
Mr. Ward waid a few words, propo-ing a cosurate to be adopted.
Mif. Wickitife sald be ne ver trad known the previous questuri ealled on a bill which had nevar bees read, either in the house of in commitice.
Mr. Letcler remonatrated against proceeding at this titne, as the bill was eompletely in the power of the house, and its pasage eoutd not be prevented.
Mr. Couller hnped those opposed to the bill would eommitt it teto the hands of thin nrajortig. It was plain that the bill must peas. He should have hiked to address a few reunarks to the hosse-but be was not solicitnus on the subject-because there was asother way of reaching the public than by apeeches in that hoase.

Mr. Carson satd he shnuld resign the bill to tha majority.
Mr. Podt thought it would be better to delay the third reading of the bill antil the house was fuller.

Mr. Bouldin said there coald be no need to postpone, unlens those opposed to the bill could be heard. He had nn other word to say, whetlier the bill pass tw-aight or to norrow: it was the same thing to the part of the country be represented; but he ought to be allowed to deciare their sentimenta before it beeame a law.

Mr. Beardoley pressed the question to-night: the house had no time to har further debate.

Mr. Craig said he was eonscientious in voting for the bill; but he should do so without knowing how his eonstituents viewed if.

Mr. Lypn thought it would be better to read the bill now; and he would, in the morning, inove the previous question; when all would reeord their votes.

Mr. Coke eald the indications of the will of the house that the bill should pans without hearing the viewn of the ninority were so dechied that be should not oppose it: but he should prefer deHivening his views.

Mr. Pollk inquired whetber, if the bilt should be ordered to the third reafing, and then the previous qucstion should be ealled the bill would be the first order In the morniug?

The etatr replied In the affirmativa.
Mr. Foater moved an adjournment: which was negatived with out a count.
The question was at length put on deferring the reading of the bill until to-morrow, and decided in the negative, without a eount.

The question was thereapon pot, on reading the bill now.
Mr. Beardsley znoved the previoas question: and it was seconded.
Mr. Puster asked the yean and nays.
Mr. Wicklfo inquired whether the apeaker eould rerngnize the motion for the previous question as in order, before tha bill bad pever been read at all?
The speaker referred to the jonrnal to prove that the bilt had been twice read.

The chatr then inquired whether any member wlohed the reading of the bill? if they did it shnuld ba read.
Mr. Whoktife again made his questinn of order, and Insteted tbat the previoue queation could not have been in order till tha bill had been read through, as the honse had nrilered.
The chatr decided that the bill mast first be read. It was then reas through at the clerk's table.

Fhiday, March 1. Afier eome minor business-
Mr. Verplanch, under inntruction from the eommittee of wayz and meany, inade the followiag report:
Tlie cominitice of ways and means report: That, among the ouhjects referred to the cosnmittpe of wayn and meanm, at an early perind of tha session, were the trausactions of the bank of abe United Statex, in relation to the payment of a portion of the pablic debt; and the lequiry Into the prearnt pecuniary and financial otate and managoment of the institution.

 tuent whidet if inquirs, or to call for or aduat any actoon of eongreve nyman th.

The commattec have esamined several nf the ditvetore on this sulject, an weil as upon other prints commected whth the mauagroeut of the institution. Their testimentiy ta hrewith submitted, and the comunttee apecially refer to the evidence ot Mr. Bevan and Mr. Eyre as explanatory of the history aud motives of this transaction.
It is due, however, to the gnvernment to exprese the opinion, that, in tise arrangement made by the bank agent in Eugland for the purchass of the three per ecut. stuck, nud the dtwotion of the certificates, (which measures were alterwatde disclaiwed by the bank), tite bank exceeded its legitumate authonty, and that this procueding had no sufficient warrant In tire eurrespondence of the secretary of the treasury.
The inquiry into tha present condition of the bank, the general character of its business, and the woandnens of He capital, is a aubject of much greater interest and impontance, fince itiavolves not only the question of the anfty of the pubic depmsites, but the vatue of the large amount of stock beld by governinent, and the still more monientous consideratione of the sounducas of a large portinn of our currency, and the consequent security of Insecurity of the domestic exchanges and eommerce of the enuintry.
The president, In his message to congresa, at the opening of the present session, Informed them, "that sueh measures as were withln the reach nf the necretary of the treasury had been taken to enatile him to judge whether the publie deposites in the bank of the United States were entirely rafe; butt, as his limited power might prove insuthelent to that object," the presideat recommended the subject to eongress, as partieubarly worthy of their Investigation.

Since that period, the report nf the agent appointed hy government far this examination, has been conmunicated to eongress, and referred to this counnitice. The committee of ways and meaus have also received from the directors of the bank a report on the prineipal points of Its arlministration and lis present statc prepared by the exchange eommittee of the bank, and allopted by the band of directors.
The importanee of the staterinents and results, contained in that report, induced the committer of ways and nieans, in the eourne of the examination of the directors comporitug the exchange committee, to require their attestation, under oath, to the facts and statements of that paper, as distinguished from its opinions and argusbents. This was done very fully. Thas same, and other directors, (two of whoth had heretofure been government dirpetors, one under the present, and one nnder two foriner administratlins), in reply to various interrngatories, stated, as will be seen in the evidence herewith submitted, the meane at the command of the board of directora, or any member of it, for distinclly knowing the operations of the several branehee, and the character of the paper diseonnted at them, together with their own opininn, drawn from tress sources, of the general safety of such paper.
Tha commitice of waym and meara have to regret that the constant and daily pressure of the various duties whith have devolved upon thent, during this short and labortous sersion, did not permit a more tibil examinatinn Into the conccrns of the ibatitution. If, bowever, in the entire absence of any evidence caleulated to refute, or in any way, impeach, that which is before the committee, the statements and nplaions of the treanury agent, selected by the treasury to examine the eondition of the bank; thnse of several of the prexent directors, men of eharacter and intelligence, long conversant with accounts and banking business; the officinl returne of the bank Itself, and the repurt of ita principat committee, atteftef to under ooth; if all these can be relied upon, as farnisbing satisfactory inforination on the present state and pecuntary means of the institulion, the following results will appear:
First. The directora of the bank at Plalladelphia recelve from the betarde of their hranches frequent, regutar and minute returne of the paper dincounted by them. These returns, together with the separate correspondence of the enshiers of the seversl branelies, afford stich informatinn of all the businese of thace branclies as to rnabin the board of the mother bank, or any ningle dircetor who may wish to inquire into it , to ascertain the eharacter of the braminess of thome branches: ns, for instance, whether the mase of paper dinenunted be frundral on ordinary commercial transactions, and to be paid from their proceeds when at inaturity, or whether any ronsiderable propartuon $n f$ it consinth of what is ealled aecommodufion paper, regnarly renew. ed. They ean know, in like manner, whether the domentic bllls of exchange, purelonsed at the hranches, arise out of business tranzactions, and to be pifid when at maturity, or whether they are mere arcommodation paper in another form, to he repentedly renewed ty drawiug and re-drawing between distant offices. Second. Thepa returns tngether with the reports of the boarde of the several branchex, upon whose character und Judgment thes plare grent rellance, form the around upon which the directorl have miated, undar nath, their full confidence that the mase of paper discounted by tha bank and lis branchee, and mase detailed as actire debt in thelr statement, is safe. On this, they believe, no serious loss need be apprehunded. The dishomored paper held by the bank is atated to be ruturned as doubtful or suspended paper, and to be extumnted, not nt its nominal, hut at It presumed uctuot valuc. The real catate of the bank is, in like manner, valued, not at cost, but on estumates tounded on frequently renewed apprainals of the probable market value. They depose that, to the best of their ksowledge nnd belief, the whoie amount, with inconsideralile exeeptions, If any, of domestie bills of exchange purchased by the bank and its officen, Is regular busimese paper, founded upon the agricultival exports nad commercial inuports of the colntry; and that by far the greatest portion (probably nilie tenths) of the notes discounted in of the same ctiaracier. Thaey Alsn assert, with much eonfidence, that most of their accoumodation notes are well secured, nind form, in fact, the safest investment of the bank.
The inquiries rexpeeting the amount of necommodation paper were made to ascertain the pharacter of the general bnsiness transactions of the bank; and not liceaume the eommite theliev. ed that aecomenodation paper, discounted to $n$ grent extent, would necessarily endanger the polithty of any moneyed institution. Such paper may frequently be as safe, nod such loans as useful, an any. Put it is certain, that, when moncyed institiltions nre in a hollow and unsound ntate, it commonly arisess fron the eapital hoving been invested in daultful paper of this deacription. The very tiet, therefore, of the discounts of a bank being prineipally applied to the ordinary business paper of an active cominereral communily, will whow, that, nllowing for onIy ordinary judgment and integrity in the selectuon of filch paper, nothing short of nome general overthrow of mercantule credit will produce materinl lose.

Third. In general corroboration nf their statements on this point, as well as of their opinions of the security of the bank dabe, the directors nppral, Int, to the fact of the great fluetuntion of the excloange business, nt the same points, at ditierent periods, enrresponding with the perioula of the shipments of apricultural produce in the west; ns, for instance, at Nasloville, with.
 nt the ame place, ill 1802, within ntont half a year, from $\$ 2,760,000$ down to $\approx: 503,0000$. 221, That of the eary reduetion, during the last year, of nbont one eighth of the whole amount of the bank delot throughout the union, and specially to the nmount reduced in the wentern offices. 3 d , To the very small amount of losses which hare occurred for some time past in those officer, and to the facility with whirh, in nddition to the agzregate reduction of Inans there, a very econsiderable proportion of the local debt, on pronnissory notes, lias been eonverted into the more secnre and manageable forni of domestic bills of exehango.
If these statemente, and this evidence, ean lie reliod upon, the nvailable and secure renources of the bank amounted, in the first of January last, to eighty million right hundred and sixty: five thousand dollars, whilst nil the clainse agamst it, for hills, dehts and deponites, including those of the governmiris, nad for the redemption of the pullic debt, were but $$, 77,800,000$, Iraving nbove forty-three millions as a guarantee to the nation against nny losess. For an the whale nmount of debts, bills and depmsites manat be paid before the stockbolders, the whole capital and the surplus must be considered ns in pledge fior the delitg due to individuals and the gnvernment. As the capital ronalits of thirty-five millions of doltars, th would apprar, from this state. ment, that the bank lod earned, and then poasessed, a murplus of tmenty-two per cent. above the amount of its capital. Whether that surplus could or could not lee realised, at a final wind ing inp of the bank, is a sulyject only internsting to the huyern, nellers, and holders of stock. The single point of view in which it is important to the nation, is in regard to its bearing on the liealthy atate of the bauk, and the convequent suffly of the puhlic deposites, and the sound state of the errrency. For those objecta, it is Eufbeicint to inquire, whether this rurplus iloes or does mot afford a sutficient guararitec that the original capital of $$ 35,000,000$ is unimpaired.
The whole amount of bills and paper heid by the bank, on the lst January last; wra* $\leqslant 61,695,000$; of whieh $\mathrm{g}^{2}, 2676,000$ is atated Un be the local dcht of the wextern states, leaving $\mathbf{8} 21,749,000$ as the debt of the Ainnatic coinmercial citirn, nud that in the shape of donneatic lailla, betwern them and the tuterior. There mems no reason to doultt that the paper of the deacription last memtionsd, is of the same genernl charac fes ar thut of other city banka, managed with ordinary diwerction. Now, it is well known. that, in our great rities, bnsiness paper is coustanty gnaranteed hy commercial houses of prudence, plability and weatth, for $n$ del cradere commitsion of two and a half per rent. On mueli of the bettre elass of paper, and in wome of our northrm citios, upon most of it, the ordinary cloaree is nomelı less: lont a greater proportion of Iows lioan this ouzlit errtniuly not to ocenr in a well managed cdy bank, where the Juigment and inforination of a bonrd of directors is combined with tiast of its olfieers. In point of fact, it is believed tieat two and $n$ half per eent. on their dipeounted paper actually expeeds the Inases of prithonly managed invtitutions in rur citipa. But, allowing the loes an the Atlantic and eominercial deht, in rearh four times that nmount. say ten per cent. then $\neq ., 50,000$ of the surplue, wonld the nn ample gunrantec again te such Ios as a surplus, which would mifit the Inas of ahout one third of the local western delit, without impairing the nriginal capisal of the bank.
The committee do not mean in be underatond an neperting their belief thit the western delit is more liagardous than that in any other part of the union. The bank directors erpreas ther convietion that it is not sol and the agett appointed by the treasury doea not hesitate to say, "that le considers that debt in a safe and wholesome state, and that $n$ greater aurount of foon need sot be nppreleended from It, than from a minilar mass distributed In the clites of the Atlantie frontier." Hot ulis estimate has heen made, because the extent of the western transactions of the loask has been mentioned as one of the subjecta peculiarly calling for investigation.

These gencral views of the nituation of the lank, and tha conmequent safety of its depositors and bill holders derive strong confirmation froun the finct of the large proportion of the specie In the country whieh is held by the bank. It appears from nifieial documents of unquentionable authority, that the specie, actually in the vaulta of the bank of the t/nited States, is within one-tenth of the amount held by all the otice banks in the union, wirint ils circulation of paper is hut one fourth of the aggregnte of theirs. In other words; the bank of the United States lias above nine millons of apecie, with a circulation of notes to the amount of seyenteen milionannd a half whilst the agaregate of all the other banks, with specie in their valitt, but a litile nbove ten millions, have a circulation of sixty-eight millions of bank paper.
If, then, the evidence harewith subnitted, can be relied upon, which it is for the loouse to juige of, there enn be no doubt of Uhe entire eoundness of the whole bank capitnl, afer meetung all deminda upon it, cither by its bill lolders or the government; and sueh is the npinion of the committee, who feel great confidence in the well known character and intelligence of the directors whose teatimony supports the facts above $\begin{gathered}\text { stated. }\end{gathered}$
The committee conclude by reapectfully recommending the adoption of the following remolution:
"Resolred, Thint the government depoaites may, In the opinion of thin house, lie safely continued in the bank of the United Staips.'
'I'lue report wan acenmpanied by sundry documents.
Mr. Watmough moved the printing of 10,000 extra coples of the report and documents; which was agreed to, (Mr. Horn, who had objected to the inotion, having withdrawn bis objection).
Mr. Polk then made a report from the minority (thren meanluefs) of the commuttee, of which the same number was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Dawiel, from the aelect committee to which was "referred so mnch of the preaident's mesalage as related to the esercise of doubtful powere, made n vetbal report, miating that there was unt a single protut on Whirlitie committee could ngree; and he lind therwfore been directed to move that the committec be dischargrd from the further enssideration of the subject; which was, nfter some jocular converantion, agreed to.
The question recurring on the mution fieretofore made, to print the report from the minority of the committec on uanufaptinem.

Mr. Adamt said that lia shonld liave been glad to have mada some rrply to the remarks of Mr. Hoffmon, mercly to satisfy the lonse that there had been no unfarnesalion the part of the mitnority. The report was not a speech, as the gentlemen und intimated, but a report, signed lis thone members who had agreed In it. Hit on account of the precfoushese of time, lie should be contetht with liaving the gucstion taken by yeas and nays.
Mr. Hoffiasn concurrit. He lial inerely meant to sny that the paper, though in the fortu of a report, was, in fact, little different from a "peerh.
Mr. Barbour shid that though there was "carealy a position in the report to whwh he ngreed, he hoped it would be printed.

The yeas and naya were then taken, and the printing was ordered-y yas 93, nays 50 .
The bill from the senatr farther to proride for the collection of the duties on imports cmme up on its final passnge, (the previoun question therroul having been last night ordered).

Reaslred, further, That the secretary of the treasury be directed to eommunicnte to this house, whether said Canby, late receiver as aforevaid, has not cntered lands to a considerabie areoent, in his own name nod that of others, with the puldic monies by, him received; which lands yet remain unpatented: the purchase money of which go to swell the amount of his de-falcation, now in progress of collestion against has sotenritica.
All the sueceeding onders of the day were then, by suceessive mations by Mr. Wirklific, postponed to to morrow, until the lend bill was reached; when, on motion of Mr. W.

The house resolved itself into a committec of the whole on the state of the union, the speaker ealling Mr. Polk to the chair. Mr. Verplanck moved that the committee take up sonne appropriation bills, but the motion was negatived; and then, by a deelsive majority, took up the bill, from the sonate to dixtubute the proceeds of the public tands, in committee of the whole.

An amendment was offered by Mr. Duncon to aet apart 20 per eent. of the value of the public land in certain of the new stato beffore the division of the proceed thould be made, instcad of $12 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent. as in the bill. But it was negatuved.

Mr. Dhenozn moved an amendinent, proposing to fis the mini sousus price of the public lauds at one dollar. Hut it was rejected wrthowt a couns.
Mr. Widilfe moved to amend the second aection thereof, by striking out the words which restrice the applutation of the funds accruing to the several statea to three specified objects, (internal improvement, education and colonization), and to leave it to the states to apply the funds in such manner ae the legialaares thereof shall direct.

The amendment was adopted, without a count.
Mr. Wicklide also added a proviso poatponing the effeet of the bill, notil the public debt should have been paid.

Thus was adopted, yeas 67, nays 43.
Mr. Plummer proposed to amend the blll so as to require the expense of surveys and salcs of the publie lands to be first deducted, before the distribution sloould be made among the states. He made a whort speeeh in support of this motion, and

The question being put, it was negauved.
Mr. White, of t'londa, moved to amend to tbe bill, so as to inelude Florida in the distribution of the land; bot it was negatived without a connt.

Mr. Clay, of Alabama, moved to amend the bill so as to allow the luestum of the granted lands in traets of eo acres, instead of 320 aerey, as froponed in the bill.
In support of this motion, Mr. Plummer addressed the house for konne ume; bat the motion was negntived.
Mr. Clay thell moved to amend the bill, by otnking out the whole bill after the euacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof two eections, which he read.
[Hir amatidment went to graduate the price of the lands, dlmiushug 11 in proportiun to the time they bad been in market, and renained unsold.]
Mr. Sprighl nuw muved a receas, but the motion was nega-tived-yeas 29, uays 86.

Mr. Clay thicn comnamened a speceh, in explanation and support of the plan he had proposed. Having proceeded about an hour, he gave way to Mr. Mardis, who moved a recess. The motion was again ue-gatuved-yeas 11 , nay $=97$.

Mr. Clay restuned, and having again proceeded for some time, gieldeed the floor to
Mr. Juncan, who proposed that the bill be for the present laid aside. But fle committee was manifestly averse to doing so, and some confusion arising,
Mr. Duncom withdrew his inotion; and
Mr. Clay procecded, and having concluded,
Mr. Mardis obtained the floor, and addressed the enmmittee for about an hour in opposition to the bill, and in favor of the amendaent proposed by Mp. Cley.
Mr. Plummer next obtained the floor; and held it until 10 o'elock, in a speech direeted against the bill, and in support of the amendment. Repeated attempts were made to moluce himi to resuine lass beat, and the house was frsquently in a state of exireme confusion and dianoled.
Mr. Potk, who was in the ehair, earnently remonstrated, and implored the house to be mindful of its own dignity, and however anxiqus they mught be to act upon the bill, to respect the constitutional right of the unember from Mississippi to be heard.
Mr. Plummer said that whell lie roze, he Jad been prepared for taterruption and insult; but should not be intinidated froms the discharge of his duty.
Mr. Root ealled Mr. Plummer to order, as having reffected in an offensive manner upon, the latise.
The chatr, however, pronnuneed him to he in order, inammeb as he had not said that the lusult up whish he alluded was intended or offiered by the members of the housc:-
Mr. Piummer laving at lepgili conctulled his remarkn, tho question whatakelt on Mr. C'fay's aumendinent, which was rejeeted without a comnt.
Mr. Clay offered it again as an additional rection to the bill. t was afgan negatived.

8o the bill was passed, and returned to the menate.
[It was now near 11 o'clock; when]
Un mintlon of Mr. Verplanek, the bouse went into enamituee of the whoie on the state of the union, Mr. Taylor in the chair, and took up the harlogr hill, (Making appropriatuons for carrying nn certain woiks herrtofore commenced for the huprovement of harbura and rivera, and alon for comtunlng and repairing the Cumberland road and certain territorial roads.]

Mr. Coke moved that the committee rise, belleving the house to be too much exhauctull to procerd.
The mothon was promptly nequtived, and the committee proceeded to read and amend the bill.
The moat huportait of the ameadmenta were an itean of \$25,000 for the conthuation of surveys under the act of $\mathbf{8 2 2 4}$, and 834,000 lor the repairs of the Cumbertand road in Virginla.

Varous attempts were made to insert provisions in this bill for new surveys, and the coinmencement of new works, but they were all joromptly rejected.

The bit was then laid asithe, and the committes tonk ap the general appropration ball, for the expeases of governament for the year 1633.
On motion of Mr. Eeerett, items were added to provide for arranging the papers In the state departinent, and making an Index ui the whole of them. Also fior completug the publication of the diplomatic correspondence, suld the printing of the last ensus.
On the subject $n f$ the expenses $n f$ the general land uffien, Mr. Wickliffe said tinat the comanittee on the public lands thad trot been able for want of time to complete the investugation of the concerns of that department. Bint lion the progress they had made in it, be was tully convinced that the conmissioner had made ant iuproper application of the funds piacen in his hands.
Ar. Verplanck propposed an item to cover certain arrearagen whech thad umpmperiy acerurd lit the land othice. He did it with great relnetance, and mereiy becanse the Ünited States munt of eourae pray debts coutracted thy its authority. But the expenditure had the decaded disalppsbation of the committee ol ways und means.
Mr. Wickliffe concurred in this sentiment, and hoped that this instance might prove a warniug to all subordinate bificers In the government, against exceedng the limit of tire expenses liny wern authorised to inenr.
A groal deai of discussion was bad in reapeet to extra cierks in that dopartonent, and the great amount of its contingencies. Mr. Ferplastrk proposid an allowance of $$ 34,000$ for extra clerk bure in the powt nffice departinent; whirh wan promptiy negatived; $\% 63,000$ was provided tur enmpleting the survey of the Choctaw lands: 16,000 for the Crcek cesrion, and 80,000 for that of the Clicknnaws.
Iteups were inserted for continuing the printing of the publie document-for 250 empies of the debates of the old congresn; and 2,bi0 enples or'Cinbt's Manual.
Mi. Wishington moved in insert an liem of $$ \mathbf{2 0 0 , 0 0 0}$ in enable the eorporation of Whalhington to pay up its nubscription in the etock of the Chesapeake and Ohio causi. This amushiment was negatived with the snderstanding tiat it was to be renewed is the honse.
The bill was then laid aside, athd the committec took op a bll appointing a cieik to sugn the name of the, president to land warinuts, which was agieed withnat amendment; when the committee rose, and reported the bittr to the house; and [a little after one o'elock in the inorning)-the house adjourned.

Whereupon, on motion of Mr. Barbour, tha house adjourned alne die.

The apeaker then rose, and addressed the house as follows:
Gentlemen: I pray you to accept my grateful acknowiedg: zents, for this renewed expression of confidence and approbs: tion, in the dischange of the official duties of this high optice.
$I$ meetive it in the satne spirit of kindness, in which I flatter myself it has been offered, and shall cheristh it with feelings of profound respect and the deepest gratitude. For the last six years, it has been your pleasure, that the afduous duties of this chair, should be assigned to me.

This whole perind of service, has, na you well know, gentiamen, been distinguished by events, well calculated to reader this atation, nee of unire yian ordinary labor and responsifility.

I have zealously and futhfilly endravored to miet this re. eponsibility, and 8 hope I thall not be devined arrogant, when I eay, that I fiel a protid conscioncnesm that the duties of this high traet, have been dioclorged by me, with a eingle eye in the cha. recter and dignity of this house, the intereat of my country, and

That I have nften erred, I most rearily admit; but they hava been errors of rule and principle, bot caprice or passion; and if Uuere has been any apparent rigur or harsliteses in the chatr, you will do ine the jastice to believe, that it was unintentional and indiscriminate.
If, Fentlemen, in moments of excitement and commotion, any thing unkind has occurred betweon myself and the individual members of the house, let me assure you it has long since paeved from my micmory, and been turgiven and forgotten.
1 lave no injuries to romplain of, aud to menory for them, If they existed, and I shall part with you all, thus night, in this spirit of peace und good will.
Before we separate, gentlemen, will you pardon me for a moment, in offering a single suguestion?

Our connciln of late liave been grealiy divided, and their harmony and peace dixturbed.
thur country has heen decply and painfully excited, and the safety and security of the union itselfitireatened.
May we nut alt how hope that the catuses of excitement are hourly subaldiug antl passing off? That peare and harmony and hroliterly afficction, will moon shed their holy calen and blessed influences aroutid ue, and that onf beloved country will agaia thecome united, pracefal and bappy. "
In aswuming this station, sonas years ago, I took the liberty of then expreasing to the house a sentiment which 1 had long cherished, nud what I now seize thin fit occavion of repeating from this chair. It in this: that our confederated republic ean only safely exist, under the Intluence of wise, equal nand Just Iawn; by the tien of common Interest and brotherly affections a ppirit of mutual forbearance and moderation, (colleclively and individually), and by cherishing a devotion to that liberty and union, pecured to us by the blood of nur common fathers. Theso are the atable fonndationn upon which our liberties and free institutions can alone reat; and God grant they may be eternal. This, gentlemen, in all human probability, is the moment of separation, with many, very many of us, forever. Is there ons indiwiduat present to whose hoson a final separation from thnse with whom he has been en long and intimately associated, will but cant a painful and bitter pang' If there be, I confess I anvy not his feellings.
You will carry with you, zentlemen, my cordial and best wishes for your indovindal prospentity and happiness, and $I$ pray you to recerve this my most affectomate, and posaibly, last farewell.
The speaker then adjourned the house sine die.

THE PAST-THE PHESENT—FOR THE PETURE.
EDITED, FHINTED AKD FUBLISHEN BY G. NILES, AT $$ 5$ PER ANNEM, PAYAHLE IN AUYANCE.

Colt will be seen by a brief article inserted below, that a veteran friend of donaestic iudustry has made thas valedictory to the "Avericas Bratsu", in a settled belief that the principle of protection lise bees abandoned. Mr. Carey will carry with him, into his retirement, the warm wishes of thousande, that the remainder of his days may be as happy as those of liis past hife have been useful; and the distinguislied talent and sivinterested seal with which be pursiled his inunificent purposes, will loing be, and "sweetly, remembired." Whetber (conaniting both faclination and intereat), I ouglit not to follow this lead of ayy old and valued fiiend, is a question that will be held yet a short seamon under advisement-for the senee of what was es teemed duly lo blanted, in a hopelessness of rendering deeired envice; but of this I shall sprak at length when thes "migns oi the times" more distinctly appear. The Ilag of the "American Syatem' mast either be run up to the mast-Itead, to loap the "batile or the hrecze" $\rightarrow$ or be "doused" and cast overboard. It oball wot fly at half-mast in the Rearstar. If any thing is worth dolng at all-it is worth doing well, with all one'd heart. It is exy to retire from a position-to give it up altogether, and obtais paes in submiesion; but I am not sufficiently versed in the doetrine of the "non committal," or either-beither-sidean sehool, to condnet this work between the wauts and the right of free iabor, and the demands of nullifieators and anti prutection men. The doubt $\ddagger$-whether a plank retuains afloat to suatain the "nystem." Perhaps, there is-In the phalanx whilch voted apainut the new tariff law in the house of representatives; but is it worth while to take bold of that plank, in the circumstancea usder which we are placed?
Os two memorable occasions, I have stood upon the same gound, with reapret to the saine subject-inaiatimg, thiting the long embargo, ke. and the war, that congrean bad a right so to "regatate comanerce with foreign nations," as to prohibit alt interehanges or intercourse with them; and more recently, that this power to "regulate commerce" might be surely" exerted for the purpose of protecting the industry of the American people, as foreign nations protect their industry. In neither case, would ladmit the existence of a rightful authority, in any section of the ention, or particular state, to "nnllify" the laws of the Uniteffates. It was no matter to inc , whether "moral treasnn", was eberished oo the morth or the south of the Fotomac. What was wrong on the onc side of that river must be wrong on the other side of it-at tenat I think so! But the right to "regnlate cepperce': being perfect is congress-I would not have any lawapon that subject "nullified," excopt in appeals to the eober judgment of the peopie, and by firce of the ballot. No ennsideration has get presented itself to my mind that would lave indoeed me to vote for the tariff law recently passed-for any action on that snbject ohould have beell preceded by a repeal of the opliaance of South Cardinn; and besides, I cannot aduit that the main purpmese of amarowing duties on gonds imported thald be the eollertion of reveme. The practice of every civilized nation is against this hetesy:-and such tarcs are unequat If, and, of course, imjuntly, imumaed on the penple of the l'uited sutes. In their proteried laborr on the onv hand, they shoutd have an indembity for the extra anomut of the publie contribu thous which free working pernons are requirest to pay, and of publie service, which they are expeted in render, in timos of seed. Yet, the law being praacd, must be obeyest; thought beliesing it impossible that I shall ever yould an accumeacence to its principles, as I "nndersland' them, and as every citizen has as undoubted right to interpret them-if he pieares.
I tmpeach no man's motuves-rome few of my nearest and dearest friende, men worthy of all honor, In mil estimation, voted for, of now render a qualition supıort th this law. I condemu then ment-xall not guarret with thein. I affeet mus mastery over other men's opinions-but will admit of none ovar my own; escept in a submistion to the reasun and fitnees of thinge. As before intumated, I shall, as soon as the histle of businesm is a litte nver, and tine is allowed for the people to reffect on VisL. XLIV-Sis. 3.
the subjeet-present my views of the operation and effect of this bill, in extcaso;" khew why the power to "nevulate comarale" was inserted in the consutution; and, if I can, expose the grand hereny, that rezulations of comenerce etiould only be governed by the mants of the trects:ary. How has it beptr-how in it-wits respect to the luterepts of the nerehants and ship owneri?

In a subsequent page will be seen what may boesteemel the opinions of buth parties in South Curohna, coucerning the aew taritf law. The "mullifieators" betheve that they have obtnined a glorious victory-and the "umou party;" also offposed to the protective system, appear filly ratisfied. The latter resisted the application of force to ancud the laws-and certainly deserve much prnise for the steadiness widt which they nmaintained their ground.
The "Wa*tington Telcgraph""says- "WC presume that South Carolina will arquiesce in the compromise which has been offesell ill Mr. Clay's hill; and wheli, by-the by, is very slmular to the thll drawn up loy Mr. 'Tanewell at the Inst xesston, which bill inct the approbation of the southern meminers, but it was not bronght forward, as it way clearly ascertunt that such a bin had nus pewsible chance of passing.
"Nutlificition iv trimmphaut. What hat produced the aetllea : & of the tarif gueation? Nullificatbon. Wouldwe have - Mr. Clay's ehi, had it not been for the action

The "Georgia Journal" of the 7th March, annnunelng Mf. Clay"s bilt, leats the news with "Destr to paotictiox."
The "Kichutond E:opniret" says-"Wo bid Mr. Clay's bll weleome, on acernint of its concilantory tendenctes-but it is a fince of patch-work which is very tuperlect, and will require grat anm-bhencut. It will, however, be: amended, in the tobr, not techuteal sthese of the word. It will be improred, and tot made worse hy the chamee. L,et Mr. Clas be assured, that eur chams will be relased, not made tighler. ILe may try to soothe the tuonopuhnta by hopes of better days. He may beg them to wat for more fortundte times, and a more effulent protection. That time will never come. Tlanks to Mr. Clay! Ile himself has eontrihuted to wing the regaicm of bis protective system. We linal the euthanasia with deligit."

* . "The tantif has received its drath blow -and so has inilification.t By a singular fatality, it liappens, that the two ludiviluale, whon have loen moxt active In raising up this monstious tanfi, have been forced by public opinion to slay it."
The "New York Evening Poot" after much aelf-compliment, becmise of its effirts in the support of "free trate," nays-_"Our readers who have gone with us in this contest will now permit us to tumder them our cordial comgratilations on witnessing this pruof, that the politicat muperatition of protection is passing away from the land. A myetem founded in the most short-sighted self. ithness has receired its death how. There is no fear that another rongress will undo what this has done, further than to make the meature inove perfert. The experiment has been fully-almont futalty, tried; and it will be recorded in our kivtory only to avoid ite reprlition."

man, who, with his firminesp and decision, had mare calinness of temper, and acted lewn under the intluenee of personal feelings.

We liave postponed a dangervus erinis by the pasnage of theme bils; and at the same time we have distinctly declared, that the gavernment has the power to enforce its rights.
'The taritl' bill, while it accomphinlies thewe desirable ends, is not, however, withut objectuops. By nitimately abolishing all discrimtuation in dutued, it surrenders a power of the lederal government of great value, and one which the people will not consent shall be a dead letter: and it does it, tont, upin compulaion, and thus encuurages future malcontents to vellture upon the dangernas caperiment of relhelliou, to relieve themselves from all laws whle'l they may tmagine to operate injurinusly ngainst their pecuhar interesa. The law, too, will be ditheult to earry into effert, trom the peculiar manner in whieli the reduetion is to take place, in oriler to bring all duties to an ad valorem duty of $2 \theta$ per cent. Many articled how pay a specifie duty, ns sugar and spirits. Others, i. e. paper, cuttons and woollens, pay a duty partly specific, and partly ad valorem. For the purpose of dedtucting the $1-10$ it $n$ f the excexs of the present duty over an ad valinem duty ot twonty per cent. It will be uecessary to ascertam the value; and it io not promed ont in the law bow that in to be slome, nor whether the market value or cont at the place if production, on the lume value, pliall be taken as a standard. The bill, therefore, may be regariletl rather as an experiment than a permanemt measure; and it to font mpossible that lt may be repealed nexs year. sull, however, it aives time to rrflect; and thile may furnish the cure which skill cannot. On this point, Mr. Clay did not agree with Mr. Webeter. The latter was unwilling to sanctinn $\#$ bill which he thought was caleniated in delude the poblic mind, and never litended to realse the benefits it promined. In this difference, bowever, there wey no petty insinuation as to nuot ive, but, nas statesmen and gentiemen, they paid a proper tribute to the anotives which bad compelled theas $\omega$ differ.

We have oniy to add-for the present: "llk who atves up EARENTIAL LIBEETV, TO PORCHABE A TEMPUAART EAKKTY, DBE nekves neth her litheiv mek sarkty."
(c)7-We have n eopy' of Mr. Cathown's speechs in the senate, in opposition to the passinge of the bill further to prnvide for the collection of dituse oil imports, and alen Mr. Webster's, in reply. We mould, probally, and promptly, have given to these speecher an insertion in the Rrusetra, proper, but for the reason that Mr. Cithons, (especially), refurx so nfted to the arguinents of genllemen who had preceded hin in the debate, that justice could not be rendered the tatter-their apeeches heing onitted: and an we have flought it not ouly the unost expedient, but aloo mosi jusl, that theme specelien should simply have their regular places in the supplement for the lant volume, trow in the firees, and to be pulisisted next mosith.
The very great length of these spreches would, also, have much enulairassed the current businews of the Reoistan; and besides, most persons anxlotis to read the iu, will have fiad an opportuaity before we could present them. Thery will be preserved, for the deliberate judgment of Use people.
We pity the poor things who eondesuned Mr. W'ehater's reply to Mr. Hayne, about twa years ago-and, "on their allegiance," are now compelled to approve Mr. Webster's answer to Mr. Calhoun.
0 -Aceoriling to enstom, we present the ofler side of the ques. tion-by inserung the "supplemental report" of the minority of of the conntaitife uf the house of representatives on the subject of the bank, while regretting the roum that it necupies-for we do not see that it enntains any thing of practical usefulnesa, being made up of high-pressire slateurents; and which, if even sustained in the mont ample manner, would not have any fort of effeet on the question at issue, as to the safety of the public deposites in thu bank of the United Atates: for if the whole amount of the much-talked uf werturn delits were lost, the safety of these deposites would not lie at all endangered. It is "Iabor In vain"- the eommuon sense of the people utterly rejcets this weak insvement if a small fragment of political party-as the decided proceeding of a great mijority of the bouse of representatives inost clearly shews. Ciedence was not yielded tu certain statrments-however strongly they had been endorsed.
This supplemental report, howevir, shews the truth of a statement whieh we were loath to believe-that perwons had been engaged in the honorable bnsiness of making "a run" ugon one of the weatern branches-and, in an embarrassment of that branch, thus wantonly, or maliciausly, eaused-boped to find the semblance of proof for certain asertions, which, perhaps, not one intelligent man really believed-untens in that devotion which furces all asserit to all that "the paity" sende out to be be-heved-white being black, or hlue red, in the fulnemo nf political orthodoxy. These persons have no generous affections. To defcat an enemy-to render litin hors de conabat, imeapable of Nurther resistance, is not sufficients the dcad or the dying must still be assailed-and even the goodness of their bones to monure the land* bequestioned.
The semi-weekly "Globe" of the 13th Inst. has twenty-two columns of matter "about the bank." Hardly twenty-two persons, we think, will ever read it, excluding those who are directly Interested in the discumion.

07 -The report of the minority of the counmittee on manufactures of the house of representatives, signed by Measm. Adams and Condict, han been rrceived. It la able and highly interent-lug-plain, pointed and Instructive, prepared in Mr. Adams, own strong and peculiar manner-and we must publish it, for numernus reasonvi but the great length-filing righteen of the capacions and elone columns of the "National Inteligencer"compels a present postiponement. It is a powerful exponition of the prinelples of the protecting "sstem, and a review of certato proceedings had to overthrow it.

The Intolligencer, speaking $n$ f the report says- "It is from the pen of Mr. Adams, and signed by himapif and Mr. L. Condict, comprising the minority of the comnittee on manufaetuies. To that cominitive, at the commenceiment of the session, the reader will recolieel, was referred an much of the miessage of the presideit of the U'ited States as related to the subject of manafactures. The enmmitu-e was po adversely organzed, and the committee of ways nid means moved upon tlem so promptly With the anti tariff bill, that there wan no hopere of any action by the committee of manufactures in favor of that ibterent. UnWilling, apparently, that any duly lupowed upon hims stroulal be heglected or pretermitted, Mr. Adams then set about and has prepared the dicumurnt we refel to, which, to кay the loant of it, may be colastdered the anowt Important of those to which the seasjun gavu burth.
"The report does not confine itself th the comparatirely narrow queation of the relation of manufacture and haportation: Int it eonsiders the subject of the protecuve policy, in a larger view, in eonnectiun win view, in eonnection with the other ohjeets of recomineadation
In the mesare, ta which In the mesarage, ta which it was decidedly adverome, as it is to the reduction of the uniff. The report ks , in fact, a review of the schense of poliey unfoldell in the aunual uessage, which, we hal secasion to renark, at the time, if carrived niti inlo action, would leave us uothing in the government worth contending for.
co-Our old and valued frieud-Mathew Caker, cuq. has sent us a eopy of lis valedictory "to the manufaeturers of the United states," recapitulating his efforts tes establish and wustain the "American Eyatem," and stating the reanons for his retirement from discunstons of that subject. The following are the closing paragraphs of his circular:
"Let us now see the actual state of the couniry.

"Philadelphia, Feb. 28, 1830."
It is proper to observe, In explanation, that Mr. Carey eomplains of the want of liberality In the manufacurers, with rerpect to contributions for the publication and dintribution of his

[^3]own essays, and other papers, having reference to the system: that is, for mere payments for paper and print-Mr. C. haviug no sort of pecuniary interest in the mntter.
$0-$-Two letters were received by the editot thin week, which It may be well to autice. One contained a five dollar bill, with the brief writing, "no apology is necessary for pending you payment for the Register for $1833^{\prime \prime}$-and on this letter 30 cents postage was paid. The other was a long letter on speculative nutters, and contained a one dollar bill, in payment for thie supplement for the last volume, on which we paid $37 /$ cents post-age-a larger sum than the proft on the supplement ordered will amount to.

As onif $n$ small comparative number of this supplement is printing [and if any copues remain beyond the prounpt demand of the subscribers to the Reolater for thent, will be offered for general sale,] it is necessary that we should be apprived of the wishes of our friesuly to possess them; but other than the expensive mode just mentioned of making known such wishies, ahouhl be resorted to. And, as the debate in the senate is eminently ealculated to increase the knowledge of the people in matters of high public intercst-and as, besides, the tronsmiseion of the supplement, by matl, wall increase the ntnount derived from postages-we think that it will not at all interfere with the strictest duty of postmasters to send on the names of their neiglibors, if disposed to accomodate them, in this respect.

Manefactergs or iron. We feel much montifed in pre. senting the following exhibit of four- o'clock-in-the morning pro eceding: in congresas but it may serve as a warning for future leghalation.
In the lant Reonstinn, page 1s, we inserted a paragragh from the "National Intelligencer," saying-"Anung the acts, of which a list is pnhbished, is one reported by Mr. Verplanck, which passed in the night of Natirday, and which scems to us of sutficient intportance to the tuporting merchanth, as well as to the revenuc officers, to justify in upecual peference to it. By the operation of the general act of July, 1822, unintentronally, probably, oll the part of congrews mud ot those who franied it, the duties mposed on nany kinds oi hardenare were nearly doubled, and other inconveticncen haspomed in the way or importers. These are remused by the net juat in the way of importers. in whiph also the inconvenienees from the dutues on copper, brass plates, and copper lor sheathing vesseln, are alsu remedied, by restoting the duties on all therse articles to their former fonting, except copper sheathlag, which is hereafter to be admitted free of duty."
And the "New York Journal of Commerce," perhaps taking it lead from the "Intelligencer," has said-
"We learn that the lill introdueed into the house of represen tatives by Mr. Verplanck, tome tine sinee, finr correcting the error in the nct of 1832, which imposed ine reased duties on ltard. ware, passed at a late hour on Slaturday night, and has become a lave. It was aniended, by an additional section relatiug to brazier's copper, copper Alseathang and brass plates: all ol which, with hardware, are restored to their folmer mises, whuch were whatentonally changed by the act of 1 dity."
Now we have good reason to lellieve, and surely do believe, that the parts of the law of 1832 whieli are repealed, were not put into that law "unintentionally," or in "crror," but deliberately inserted for the exprens purpose of preventing frauds on the revenue, and for the just encourageument of Amurican makers and manufacturers of iron; as we think will appear from a simple reading of the following clauses of the second seetion of the act:
Tenth. On axes, adzes, lintchet, drawing knives, cutting knives, slekles, or reaping hookn, seythes, fpades, shovels, -quares of iron or strel, plated brass and polished steel saddle"Y, eoach and harness fumiture of all deacriptions, steclyards and sealebeans, socket cinsels, viees and screws of iron, called wond serews, thirty per eentum ad valorent; on common tinued and japanned saddlery uf all descriptions ten per centumi nd valoretu: Proolded, Tliat said articles shall not be imported at a less rate of duy than would have been chargeable on the material constituting their chlel' value, if iuported in an unmanufactured rtate.

Twelith. On japanned wares of all kinds, on plated wares of all kinds, and on all manufactures, not otherwise specified, made of brass, iron, steel, pewter or tin, or of which elither of these metala is a component material, n duty of twenty-five per centum ad valorem: Provided, Tlim all articles manufaciured in whole of sleeet, rod, hoop, bolt or bar iron, or Iron wire, or of whieh shert, rod, lioop, bolt or bar iron, or Irnn wire, shall constitute the greatest weight, and which arce not otherwise upecified, shall pay the same duty per ponnd that is charged by this aet oll shept, rod, hoop, helt of bar Iron, or on iron wire, of the same number, respectuvely: Prorided, also, That the said last mentioned rates shall not be less than the said duty of twenty. five per centum ad vnlarem.
The protisos in these elauses are repealed; and certain mamufactures of metal, (socnlledt, to evade the duty), may be admitted at a less rate of doty per it. than the uere iron out of which they are so mauufactured would pay; the absurdity and injustice of which need not be pointed out-but would be hardly worth mentioning, in the present state of abandonment, except by way of cautron as tut thingr whiteh have no relation to, or concera with, the seemingly rojectod "Aneracan Syntam."
We shall ouly give a statement of the facts wichel belong to this impurtant clange in the tanur law, in the words of a friend who was present when the bill parsed the senate:
"Mr. Clay's connpromise tanuli" bill leceane a baw about 3 o'elick of the morning of the idd tost. and an hour afterwards the prineiple ol the conquroulse was vinhated, for the firat time, by pussiong a bill ruspending until the lit of June INtil, the operathon of the prorisos in the stith and l:3th clanses of the 2t section of the net of 1832 -iatrodsced bito that bill to foylide the importanion of nanuinctured uronat a lens rate of duty than was meposed upotithernw material, and to prevent a variety of Fraude in the inuportation ol ifon.
Gen. Snuith had lutroduced a lull lito the spnate to repeal so much of the law of " 52 as iexpseded hra-ier's coppuer, copper bottoms and leaf tobacco, whell wat cru-idered and passed. The houne of reprexcutanses, entertainag an oplation that sweh a bill zlonuld tor originate in the renate, originated the rame bill them-ives; lout added to it a pectuon pontponing the provisos mentionerl. Which poseral that bouly withasut discuspion, :athl was selt to the senate. Ass puon an it was received, Mr. -rose, sud rated that this bill was identically the shme with the ote weinf from the sesuite, and, therenpan, he moved to dispense with the reading of it. Is was read by its tutle three tinem and pasafil, all in leas than five unnuto. Ax soon as the bill what Jah upon the scerctar)' $\approx$ di*k, Mr. Dickerson wok it up and direncred thit wew scctuou-and informied the senates thent thes liall bren surprised into the pussiug of an important section which had wevr been ifad In the remate. Mr. -, mortified that he laal, ujon tie information of some third pemon, stated that this was the identieal lull which liad lorinerly passed the surnate, moved for a reconsideration of the vote on passlug the bill. It was recousidefrd-lint, on n mntion to amend the bill, by strikling out the obbestions sectiont, it was objected that this canld not be done wilhoitt raconsiditing the vote for orderiag the lill to a third readmg. A mntion was made for rreonsider. ing thts vote, but failed tor watht of a fumoruit. It was then urged that the bill onght not to pase, inasmurle as the negative of a thigle wrnitor coald, and no doubt woulh, have pr:vented a seeond reading of the bill, had it been sead otere. It was further urged, that inewe provinos ought not to he wuspended, inasmuch as they were adupted for the pulp pose of giving the manufacturers of iron in thes country some compenratun for the great reducIlon of dinty on that article which they lad heen obliged to submit th, and that it was unjuct to take trotn them this altsantage, unless on like suspeavion should apply to such part of the law as reducell the day upon irno. It was alao urged that this was in violation of the prifighe of the conupromise law just passed: on taking the vore, a bare quorum of 2 s were prewpht -17 of whoas taking the vole, a bare quoruth of 2 were prespntvoted in favor of passiog the bill, anl 8 agamat it."

"TaE Bloody ntle." The law "further to provide for the enllection of duties on imports," is called "the bloody bill," by alt the nulltiers, and some yet talk about lettiag blood, because of ths passage!' We have not had time to examine the provisions ot this bili in coniparison with certain parts of the embargo laws, passed uader the administration of Mr. Jefferion-the great state-right president, and author of the sentument, that "nulification ts the sightful remedy;" but if inemory serves correety, the laws enacted to enforce the embargo, went, at least, as far, tif not much further, than the "bloody bill." But there is thas difference: the taws, in the one case, were infended chter. Iy to operate on the "federulists" of the east, and, in the other, on the "democrats" of the south-which "matcrialiy alter the case:" These are two sides of the "Tweed," as the noble Potumac has been enntemptibly designated by southern oratora, fof lack of brainw, or want of resolutiou, to describe American things by Aunerican naunes.

Dakabrieserteriso in Soutit Caboliva! The Charleston races have been uncommonly well attended, with great displays of fasbion and weath: and the Merenry of the lat Inst says-

We see further-that 'the frienda of Juia, by Mertrand, dam Transpon," &c. have cinailenged a race agaiost her-for tun thoueand dollats, not excepting any borre in the United States.

The tanify-tin Mississipfi! We lave been favored with a copy of somie intervitung papcra concerning a proposed extension of the charter of the bank of the atate of Minsissippli; whiteh are laid aside for insertion at fult lengit, for severai rensensbut experially to shew the aw fuituess of the poverty and suffering with winich the people of that state have bern afticted because of the tantr-winich takes from them "Forty bates of enton out of every bundred" produced by them, to pamper the pride, and glut the avarice of the nabob uanufacturers and monopoinsts of the north, as the fuliowing sentences from the report of the computtee of the baik will conthasively shew:
"For severai years pact the inhatitants of this state have been prosperous beyond eaumple, capital jndiciously invested and pros. perly managed has ytelded at trast ten per cent, and in many instancer the rate of profit has been doubled-as a consequence, capital has be-en cagerly sought affer," & $c$.
"In the midille and horthera states, moncy does not command more than one. hulf the profit which it readidy vields Arre."
And that capital may abound, it is proposed that the disenant on noter having more than four monthas to run, shait be cigit per cent. but if over a year, nime per cent. becanse it is believed that twh honns soontd be adruntageous to the planting interest. And it Is stated that five militons of additional banking eapital will be ngeded, innurdiately alher the withdrawal of the oftice of the bank of the United States-if not before; to discount notes at nine per centuan!
We believe that many inillions are borrowed in J,ouisiana at ien per cent. and not a stmail amount in Atabama at 15, or more. The grent wonder is, that, after the planters are "plundered of forty bales of cotton out of every hundred" which they grow, and are compelled to pay six and a quarter cents a yard for shirtings for their negroes--that they are able to return ten per cent. for money thveated in cotton tands, and slaves to work them!
The fact we believe is-that ail weil-managed estatws in Mis sissippi, Louistana and Alahama, one year with anotlier, yield unore than tuenty per cent. clear provit, on the capitat invested in thell.

The pabt and the pazaent. The New York Commercinl Advertiser, severely censuring the aupplemental repont of the minurity of the committre of the houpe of repreacpatativea vu the subject of the U.N. bank, says-

The wuth is, beyond a doubt, that no weatern debts were ever more sound and available, than those at thes moment due th the I. 8. bank; and never worc the means of the went so ample, or Its resourees so fluurivling. To sustan thin remark, a gentleman from Cincinnati has furnished us with the following selifitule of prices there in the suar 1819, and the year 1833. In 1819 the eurreney was at a discuunt from specic of thirty per cent. At that time bargess were from three to fuur monthe coning up foun New Orlcans, and freight was five cents a pound. Now the steam boats conse up in eight or ten dnyw, aud freight is Uree-fourtis of a cent a pmind. If the west had any resources of a pecuniary wature in 1819, those resourees must be ummensely yreater now.

$0-$ The high prices in 1819 were in the then diatracted currency of the west-and the low prices of other artictes in the want of a demand for them. The difference in freights, and the support of the bank, couid not bave brought about such important changes. Other causes were also in operation. A market for the pinducts of the west has boen opened in the east, or more nearly at home, by wholesome divisions of labor, and briak circulations of values-at every change in their character adding to the common weaith, and promoting the "general welfare.

The ivawnano, an offictal journal, contains in the No. of the 9th June, 1832, the following document:-
"The intendancy of Coquimbo Serana, 7th June, 1839, to the mininier of the interior:-A wunderful diwnovery of silver ore has heen made in the mountain chain of Topfapo, called Chanercilla and Mole. It in afinmed that the veins are immense. Since the 2ed of May, sixieen, more or less rieh, have been discovered; and travellers who have been upon the spot make the number even fify. The ore is of the purest quality, snd expelienced miners entertain not the smallest doubt of the richness of this discovery."

${ }^{4}$ We have before ui several letters from the most reepectable persoss of the province, who unamimously contirm the wouderful discevery which we have mentioned in a preceding aumber. The anne liess at the south of Topiapo; it extends aborut fificen feet in length, and un in breadth; it touches the following places Claunercilla, Kitacus Pan de Azercar, Pagonales and Mofe. Chance led to the duccovery by a wood-cutter, who conmmunicated lus geod fortuage to owe Godoi and Don Miguel Gallo; they remolved to keep the wecret to themselves; but certain aigns and uaces, which they could not couceal, soon made the matter public. Four days after this, wixteen veins were already diveo-vered-on the eighth day there were forty; and when the post lef. Atty-not to tnention the number of samalter veins, of whieh no notice was taken for the mounent. A mass of ore which was purchased by an Englishman for two hundred piasters, proved to be worth a thousand. Besides the podigoous quantity of the ore, it in extremely rich in quality. The intendaut has sent to the tninister of the interior speriuncas from three different veins, the analysis of which provee what is here stuted; and, as if it were not enough to give that diptrict a name by a siagle event of this kind, a diacovery has been made of rich gold amines in the adjacent canton of Jancos; that hitherto uninhabrted and desert mountain region, is, at this monient, animated by the presence of above 3,000 people,"

There is no duubt that these important discoveries will have a great iafluence on the future political aud combuercial sitnacios of the country. Iu one respect they have aiready beren in-jurious-for the copper mises are abandoned by the workmen.

MR. SOUTHARD'G LETTER.

His excellency, Samuel L. Southard:
Bin-The undersigned, as a committee of the laut joint meeting, bave the bouor of informing you, that you were appointed by that body, senator is congress of the Unitod States for six years froas the fourth day of March next, and of respeetfully requesting your acceptance of the wame,

With great respect, yours, Ne.

To the honorable Etias $P$. Seeley, vice president of the legislative council and the hon. John P. Jackson, rpeaker of the general acsembly.
Bias-l have been honored by your communication, by which I am informed that the joint meeting have conferred upon mee, the ofice of senator in the congrems of the United States, for six years from the fourth day of March next.
I beg you, sirs, to convey to the mewbers of the joint meeting, my acceptance of the appointurent-and the expression of my gratefal sense of the confidence manifested towards me. It in the more deeply felt, beeause the daties and the responaibilities of the station are greatly enhanced by the present condiuon of our country-and because it is bestowed after a long period of public service, during which my conduct and ophuivas have been known to my fellow eitizens-and after a reseut expression of many of those opinions, in the discharge of the dutles of may present office. 1 canuot but rejoice that my election gives me an assurance that those opinions have not been misunderstood, mor disapproved by the members of the joint meeting, bowever they have been misrepreseated by some others.

Ia acting apon my own strong convietions in regard to constitutional questione and the policy of the conntry, 1 , feel, that I shall but follow the wishes, and aid lu protecting the interests of my fellow citizeus. I believe with them, that the nultitication of the lawz of the union, by the authoritios or people of a single etate, is a heresy most dangerous to our mstitutions; and tnust be diecountenanced and repressed; and the guvernment auply and vigorously sustained, in the enforcement of the laws-that the power and the right of congress to protect the industry, of the coantry, clearly exist, aud that their exercive cannut be surrendered without an obvious neglect of duty-that a sound and convenient currency is indispensable to the common prosperity, and that it is not wise to dewtroy the means and instruments by whieh it has, heretofore, been secured to us-that the public tands are public property which ought neither to be given away, nor squandered upon objects which are not connected with the cominon interests of the whole-that the independence of the judiciary, is interwoven with the beat portions of our institutoona, and itu defence while in the exercise of ita legiumate authority, is the high duty of every pubtic agent. While endeavoring, in uyy humble maeasure, to smistain theae and other important priaciples, 1 thali tely on the generous confidence of my fellow citizens-and feel great consolation that in the diseltarge of my daties, I am associated with a colleague, in whose known opinions 1 so graeraily concur, and on whose purity, intellisence, and faithfulness we all have entire reliance.

Sis:-Entertaining the same sentiments of respect for your calents and patriotisin as a statesman and republican, as the great body of the people of the United States, by whose sufforages you have recently been elevated to the second office of the republie, the undersigned, on behalf of their tellow eitixens, einorace tha opportunity of your prevence in the second city of the union, of luviting you to partake of a pablic dinner, in which they, in comnoon with many of ther polntical irictsds, would gladiy joiu.
The situation of the enuntry id po peeuliar at this moment, that public men, whowe seutimeats are known to be fu faror of moderate but firm meavures to meet the present crivis, deserve and ought to receive the countenance of those who have only at heart the gnod of their vountry. The democracy of Penneylvania, have from the commencement of the government, always shown themaelvee firn for those praclples and measures which will preserve the usion, as weil as the rights of the atates, the prosperity of the cmuntry, and the advancement of eivil liberty. In this sentiment, they unite with their brediren throughout the country, by whose putfrages you have been called to give your aid and support to the measures of the present chief now at the head of the government.
Believing that the cosffideuce of the rountry has not bren misplaced, in elevating you to the high uffice, the dutien of which you will shortly assume, and that the wise measures of the president will always recelve your firtin supoit, thry loge to assure you of their esteem for your character ns a statexman, and rospert for your private worth as a centizen.

Philudelphia, Feb. 25, 1833.
Gevtlemen:-My stay in Philaiklphia will bet too zhort in enable tre to coniply with your polite rrquest. Hat I am not therefore, I assure you, the less senuible of ywur courtesy and kindness. There is no portion of niy fellow ellizeny whose good opinion I value more highly than that of those yon represent, and I shall ever cheriwh with the mowt grateful feeling*, sent, and I shail ever cherish with the most grateful feelimg*, the tiatering and affectionate $\leqslant$ xpression contained in the consthe thattering and affectionate expression conta munication with which you have fionored ine.
I concur freely in the views you expresa is regard to the ne-ces-ity and proriety of moderate but firm measures to tneet the present erisis in our publie affars. 'The intlexible support which has been given by the democracy of Pennsylvania to those principles and measures which will bost preserve the union as well ins the rights of the states, promste the prosperity of the country, and advance the cause of cival liberty, will be attested Ly all who are in any degree conversant with our pablic lintory. It is by this patriotic and hoaoralle courie of her citizens, that Pennsylvania has aequired so large a sliare of the respect and confidence of the nation.
The present condition of our country b, as you Justly observe, a peculiar one; yet I cannot but think that the dangers which menaced our institutions, are aiready quietly, leasened, and bid fiar to be speedily and happily renonved: it is to me must obvions that the difficulties attending a matinfactoty aijustment of the tariff, are now reduced to naratimns of time merely. The repeated and earneat recommeniations of the president to congreas In faver of a reduction of duties to the revenue standard, by means of a law, which shail be certain in its ultimate effeet, but yet so graduai in its operation, as to give the greatext ex tent of protection to exliting establishments, that shall be found consiatent with the paramount obligation to relieve the people from all burthens which are not necessary to the aupport of go-verument-recommendations, on the propriety of which he so distinctly placed himself before the American people at the late presidential canvass, and in which he was so triumphantly sustained by a vant majority of thetu-seem to be now unembarrassed by any opposition, and to have becouse the favorite and universal senthnent. These important poiuts established, there can surely be nothing in the resilue of the subject, nor in the details of a bill, by wheh thoy are to be cerried into effect, that if acted upon, in a proper sparit, may not be overcome without thruatening the public peace, or endangering the stability of our union. Any measure which shall successfulty accomplish the objects proposed, and which shall be of a character to recorumend itself to the uoderate men on both sides nf the queviton (the only securities we can have for ite permanency) will, without donbt, receive the approbation of the people and rwetore the different wections of the country to those relations of peace, affection and good fellowship, which are so Indispensable to the prosperity and happiness of each and all. Tiat these gront obJects shall not friil for the want of such an arrangrment, is so muphatically demanded by piblic sentiment an to allay all apprehensian: should the present congress, unfortunalely, be utable to effect it, we may count with condilence upon the speedy and successful efforts of the sext. Until this derirahle resuit shall be attained, we have a snfe guaranty ngainst violence and discorde In the discreet exercise of enecutive authority, the pervading patriotism of our countrymen, and that sacred mextinguishable love of unlou which is so predominantly and mas-ter-feeling in an American bosom.

You do me but justice in expecting a sineere support on my part, of the administration of our worthy and venerable chief magistrate. I regard that as the most useful and honorabis portion of my publie life, which was spent ander hia insmeslate direction, and canhot tabl to appreciate, as I ought, the honor of being pernitted to co-opprate th thie advancement of then public intecest, witi one sin whose eapacity and patiotiont, uy confidence is unqualified

LEGIBL,ATURE OF MAINE.

To the senate and house of representafices:
The order requeating the governor "to commanicate to the legislature the report of the commissioners nn the north eastern boundary, appointed under the resolve of March 3, 1832, if the same has been received by him, with any other documents whicb he may deem proper, and as soon as the same can, in his judgment, be communlated consistently with the public good," has received the attentive consideration of this department, which has come to the conclazsion, that tbe publleation of these documints, at thie time, could not fall to be prejudicial to the success of the negotiation instituted by the president with Great Britain In relation to the north eastern boundary; and in that view, could not be conslstent with the public good, but adverse to the interests of the state, and of the United States. The legislature and people can be assured that no definite action will be, or can be had in relation to the disputed territory, on the purt of this state, till the whole subject shall receive the consideration of the legislature, to whotn, at the proper time, the documents will be communicated, and by whom such direction will be given to this important coneern as shall bevt comport with the rights, honor, and interest of the state.

Michigan. But Massachusetta has something to say about the bargain.

Au aceount of the proceedings had on the preceding mesenge ay-"It was reterred by the senate to a select comninitter; hnt, au hour afterwards, a motion tor recomader the vote of reference was carried by a vote of 11 to 9 . A motion was then made to lay the communication on the tabie; but was withirawn, that it anght be sent to the bouse. In the hasume, a mation to refer it to a select conminter was rejected, $\tau 6$ to 31 , and it was finally returned tw the srnate.
"It is obvious fron the language of the governor"s message, that a report has been made by the combnusinners. What the teuor of that report may be, is not fully known; but from the language used in the debate relailve to tive diapusition of the enumunication above referred to, there seems to exist a persua. sion that the commassioners have epterod into a negotiation for A surrender of the territory in dispute, on the receipt of some indemaity. Among other objections to the action of the consmissionerv, the following was suggested by Mr. Buatelle, a menober of the senate:
"Suppose our commissioners make a bargain and obtsin an 'indemnity,' we cedc away terntory of whels hall the soil belongs to Massachusetts, and thet conmonwealth loses ber share, or looks to us as rexponsible for selling lier land."

Just lefore the adjourmment of the legislature, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolred, That so much of the resnive passed the 3 d day of March, Ikis, reapecting the nortih enstern boundary, as provides for the subinission to the leginlathre, "for approvaior rejection," of the agreement or treaty theren contempated to he made by the conmbissionere therein mentioned, be, and the same is bereby repeaied.

Resoleed, That no arrangement, provisional agreement or treaty, aiready made, or that may hereafter be made, under, or in pursuanen of, the rewolve to which this is additional, shafi have any tindiog force, effect, or operation, unthl the same shall bave been submited to the people of this slate, in their primary asecmbiies, and approved by a majority of their votes.

LEGISLATUTE OF MARYLAND.
IN THE HODNE GF DEH.DATE.
Mr. Wright, of Dorebester, submitted the fotlowing preanble and resolutions:

Hy the house of delegates, March 4th, 1833. this geucral assumbly, thas in the opinion of the lemelature of the staic of Inclaware, it would greatly promote the intereet, comfort and propperity of the inhabutants of the peuinsula, formed by the waters of the Clessapeaker and Delaware bays, if they were united under one governuent:

That it comports with the wishere and views of the peopls of the state of Delaware, that the peopic of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and those of Belaware, whould he united undet one goverament, and that the rogion of country inhabied by them reapeetively, whould be deuominated the state of ficlaware. And that the governor of Delaware is authorised, in case these virww of the state of Delaware should meet the appribsation of the legislature of the state of Maryland, to appoint ilirce ecumanissionern on the part of the state of Lilaware, to meet such as may be appointed on the part of tie state of Mary land, to carry the mea*ures into sxecution, annl sethe the preliminaties and details thereof, subject to the final ratification of the legislatures of the two states, and that of the congress of the United states;-therefore,

He it resolved by the gencrat assembly of Maryland, That, holding the pursint of happuness as the unshienabile right of alf men, and that political associatiow and zovernments are but means to galn that deairable end, we refer the overture made to thia general assembly, by the iegislature of the statr of Delaware, to the candid and serious consifleration of our feliow citizens, in the rospective cauntics on the Eantern Shore of Maryland, who are immediately and inowt particularly interested in the propnpition. And we leave the snlject to be first entertained by our fellow citizens on the Eastern shore, in a general convention, to be held ainong themseiver, or in such other way as to them may seem most fit.
Resotred by the general assembly of Marytand, That in cave it nhould be anthentieally notificd to the governor of Maryland by any proper authority from the countirs on the Bastern Shore of this state, that it is the winh and pleavure of the people in those meveral counties, that commissioners should be appointed on the part of the state of Maryland, to meet those to her nppolnted hy the state of Delaware, in onler to adjust pretiminartes and details, that all may the better underatand the preclee termm of the proposed change, befire any final decision is made. 'That the governor, hy and with the ardvice and eoneent of the council, is herehy authorised and empowered to appoint three commistioners from the Fantern sloore of Maryiand, for that purpose, as soon after the notification an may be-and the sald cummizaioners are direeted to make full report to the governor, to be by hin laid before the general assembly of Maryland, at the earliest period after its reception.
Resolred, That the governor of thin state be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to the governor of the state of Delaware, with a solicitation to present them to the legislature of that state.

THS NEW TARIFF LAW.
The following is from the Charleston Mercury of the 93d February. The writer is a very pious man-pertiaps a litule pro-fane-bur to te frota the "right side of the Treechl", "and may not lenpeacined: We have masked a few words in itulics and sMala. Capirat.s, to shew the notionu of the writer.
${ }^{4}$ Mr. Clay ${ }^{\text {a }}$ bill is the subject which now eugages all tongues and oceupies all attention. And well it may; tor it was certanisIy an anexpected, as it is gratifylug, cousidering the source fiom which is cosnes. Who would have thought that our wounds would have been liealed by the hand that infficted them? or that peace would have been restored by tie individual, who bas done unore than any other to dentroy it? or that the union would thave been preserved by hia who brought it literally to the verge of the precipree? "There is something, not only peculiarly right and beautitul in this, but that shows distinctly the superinteuding Providence of God in tie affairs of our country, and that as be blesses and sustans the cause of justice, so he woiks out its triumph even by the instrumentainty of the chief of our opprebaors. Is it not right that he who has injured ins, abould be the means of redressing our wrongs? And is it not retributive jusLiee, that even at a period like this, when all hope of relief apparently was gone, and South Carolina was caluily preparing for the field, determised if she could not regain, not to wurvive her liberty, he soho had forced her to resistance, who had dricen her to seccesion, showid now appear as her friend and champion? Wai does not peaceive in this the hand of the Almiunty EUPFOETING THE CAUSE OF THE OPFAESBED, AMD TUANING KVKX THE HEART OF THE OPPAEssoa TO THE PORPOBES OF JUSTICE? What less than the potrer of Gon could have induced Mr. Clay to consent 10 the abondonment of that system of which he is the father, and which he has zealously maintaincd figanst all What petions and remonstrances, even to the prueent hour?What less than that rowes could have torn him fom his daring policy, and from all bid cherished notions of government, and bave itaduced him to sacrifice them all upon the altar of peace and union?
${ }^{46}$ Keally, Mr. Editor, I know not how others think or feel upos ths subject, but, for myzelf, as I have never doubted that our caute was just and that the God of justice would enenre its Iriumph, so I percelve in this movement of Mr. CIny a distunct manitestation of the Divine twteaposition in our facor, and of the overruling eare and protection of that Hzino who makes the wrath of man to praise His, by making even our grestest enemy himself the instrunent of our deliveratice from tyranny, Lotl un be gratefill to GoD, that as he gave us intelligence to suderstand our rights, and frmness and resolution to maintain them, so he now opens a prospect of peaceable suecess, in a way wlich II Fi only conld have opened, if not by actually convertiag our principal antagonint to a friend at least by turning his thougtits to harmony and conciliation. As to the bitt itself, there are but two or tharee questiona worthy of consideration. Ougbt if to satisfy the south? Will it beconc an act? How will it affect Mr. Clay in the differest nectionn of the union? In relation to the first point, I have no lresitation to say, for one, that is ought to satisfy the south. I could have wholet, indeed, that the perlod for the finai reduction of the inrifis to the revenne standard bad been shorter, but the time fred, long as it is, onght not to constitute an insupmrable objection. The great objects are, to abolish the protectire policy, and th reduce the revenne to the legitimate wants of the government. Both of these objects will be accomplished by this measure. It will reduce the protectiee dufies, biennally, till they come down to 20 per ceut. and afer that an uniform ad valorem duty vill be laid upon all articlev findiseriminately, exerpt such as may be admitted duty frce. Heag then aveay thino is orfired FOR WHICR WE MAvE CONTENDED. THE BILL QIVES UP THE PKOTECTIVE PRINCIPLE, AND WILL ABANDON THK PROTKCTIVE Foticy, we dive them time, so that the system may be let down fradually, without uny PUBLIC CONVULBION or individual ruin."

The following is from the Charleston "Mercury" of the 5th Inst. We regret the necessity of adminting that certain of its most important pointa seem true-and that the friends of "fres trade," so called, as well as of "nullification," have gained a victoryfor the time being. A littie more modesty, however, in proclaiming it, might have been well-under the circumstances of tbe case. We add some extracts from the "Courier" and "Patriot" -union papers.

From the Charledion Mercury.  THE ADSUETMENT.

It will loe seen that Mr. Clay's bill for the gradual reduction of the tariff to the revenue standard has passed the house of representatives, and there la mo doubt that it las also passed the wenate and becotne a law. This is a result whicli we confuss we did not anticipate. Henry Clay, the father of the American Byatem, after his long and zealous advocacy, and after carrying through the abominable tarif of 1832 , has found it necessary, even before the time appointed for that bill to to into operation, to abundon it, and to Intrualuce a bill providing for the eventual reduction of duties to the anount of revcuue "necessary for the economical udministrution of the gorrrument!') 'rinis in iudeed surprieling: and although the jrovisions of tue bill fall sloort of what we could have dexired, and are not such as the south had a right to demand, and in sirict justice to fasiat upoul $\rightarrow$ el we canmint but has with graffication this decaded evidence of a dispmaition on the past of congress to do juintice, to respect the consutution, and restore the sound principios of the goveruusent.
Tine fiual reduction is too long deferred. Four or five years would have been a sufficient coucession of time to the masnufacturess, before the reduction wan completed: and 15 . and not 20 per cent. tuight liave been safely assumed as the extent of duty to be altiunately allowed them, and an being a rate muthelently high to rhuse the amount necemsary for the econonutcal adininistration of the goverument. The cash duties-and the Hone valuation are also objectionable featares of the bill. Bull it has theen a comprounive, between our juat claims, and the rested interests of the mannfacturers, which inunediate and full justice to the south would turers, which involved in certain ruln-a consubanation, which whehave ther mented or iwt, the routh did not dasire. In making nuch a comproaise, rome obnoxious provisions were unavoidatbly in be pernitud. The prinriple too hat been yielded to us, for which tre contended from the first, that revenue, and not protection, should be the object of dulics; and it has beenvielded under a gindge that gucranters to ms, that protection of manufatures will not be hereafter again asrumed as the object of legistation. ot pledge which, excn if it whald be rioluted. will secture we a decided resistance $a_{g}$ ainat att attempts to return to the American System. .ft thercfore, we have neivr complained merely of the amount of the exactions lecied for the bencfil of the manafactureri-bui contended against the principte, that being yielded and the definite prospect of fall relief secured, we hure gained the onain poinh, and mastered the ciludel of the odious syitem, and we nay subait to the conepssion of time for the manufactursp to slape their specalations to the new arrangement, though we do thank their apeculations to the new arrangement, though we do tunk that ane than seasonable period has been allowed them; considering bow fong the south lias beea denied eveu the luppe of redress at the hands of congreas.

We rejoice therefore in the prospect of a pacification of the confederacy, in spite of the haurpicious influences which have been exurted, and whielt untal now induced ns to devpair of a peaceable issue of the struggle, which has slaken our union to its foundation, though we acver despaired of tho ulinuate triumph of the good uld cause. We are of ofigion that Einiti Carolina has not induceurent mow left her for a furtier art of oullafication, and that it is probalile that when the convention reasseublese, no new ordinance of uullibcation will be adoptwd, that alseady paseed, having now been rendrred isoperaswe by the abolition of the obnoxious enactments against which it was fratned to operate. Our convention will not, we think, reject a cotmprunitse for which our ourn delegation and that of the whole south woted in solid phatumr; againat which we are glad to see recorded the ootes of all the ultra-larifites and which tume frosn the south sought to embarrass, but a few underling impleineots of the kitchen cabinct. "This is our prearent imprestion, though evente may intervene whicti we do not anticipate, which anay require turther action for the defeoce of theit rights on the part of the people of Nouth Carolina.

The passaze of Clay's bill effectually kills the enforcing bill, Which, however, from the indicatons lu the house, will probsby pass by a large majority. If so, it may be considered as nothing more than an ebultition of spleen. It will record the spite of the administration agninat certain men, and slietv what enormities it would perpetrate, were the opportinnty atforted. But the president wall lave been effectually precluded from the opporinuty of chastising our resixtance, by the retimeval or all motive to our ressustance, and by there consequently being no re. sistance for hitn to punish. The ulira tarifites will, in ressuge, and from prinetple, eumbine to pass the enfurcing bill. Chur convention will do no more than declare it null and void; and it will remain deall upon the statute book, 'brutum fubmen' a monument of the corruption of the times-a record of treason to the constitution and liberty, which tin authons will ere long wish in vaia to have utterly emsed from the memors of the republic. The paswage of this bill will be ardently desired by the adminimtration, as mone compenaation for the beavy blows whieh have fallen in wuch quick succeasion upon them of late: and they will claim it as a triumph of the prinelpies of the proclamation, lout it will be an empiy triuagulı, ns worthless as that of the buffonn tyrant of Rome, who, returning from his pompous and futile invaslon of Brisain, consoled himself by picking up, and brought baek as trojulies the sleells which he had gathered on the sea shore.

From the Charleston Courfer, March 5.
The question settlci.- The Washington papers, received by the mail vestrrilay, confirm the matifying intelligence as to the adjustment of the tariff, received the day before liy the way of New York; and eontain the additional Information, that on 'Tuerday last, Mr. Clay's bill, is a aubstituts for Mr. W'erplanek's finally pasaed the house of representatives, by a majority of 34

[^4]Votes, and was sent to the senate for concurrence, where, at the date of the last accounts, it wan rapidly progressing to "the cousumanation devoutly to be wished," thrisugti the usaal forme of legislation. T'liere can be nodoubt that Mr. Clay's bill, ere congress adjourned, must have passed both houses, received the signature ot the presudent, and beconie the law of the land.

We eaungt but minulge in the expression of our heartfelt graification, at this utiexpected and auspucions berbiuation of a controverny, which has been such a prolitie source of mischirf, political, coummercial and social, in our comusunity, and which, as it were, but yeaterday thrcatesed to plunge us in all the loorrors of civil war, and lay in ruins the notule edifice of union, erected by our fathers, as the paltadium of our liberties. 'I'ine union has been thus once unore anved, in the spirit of concession and compromide, that presided at ils formation. T'ise settlement of this questum has tikef place too, at a Ume in other respects most opportase-at a period, wisen the government had assumed the atitude becuining the assertion of its lawfll supremacy, and when nullification, the spirit of evil that laad crept fir purposes of misclifetinto our political paradine, had received the rebuke and ruprobaiton of every section of the tuton. We canuot then but commend this aet of our national hegislature, tas a magnatimons concession from the strong to the weak, dictated hy a spirit of conciliation that will disaria the enemuse of the governatent, asul a spirit of wisuoun that will strengtien the ties and perpetuate the isstitutions, that consutute us one peopic.

From the Southern Petriot, March 4.
Gratifying intelligence. We have the satisfaction of announcing the passage of Mr. Clay's bill in the house of representatives on last Tuceday, by a majorty of thirty four votes. It bas no doubt before this become the law of the land. We do not think this is as good a bill as we had reason to expect, but we hail it with gratification, as assuring peace to the country, and is it is not binduag on future congresses, bowever, indiriduals who thay have voted for it, consider themselves under a pledge of hous uot to diaturb the arrangentuent to which they have leut a sanction, we shatl bo ahte to see the working of the theasure long before the lapse of the period when it is to receive its final character. It in to be hoped now that the wounds which have been Infleted on the peace of this community by the deadly breaches whieli have been made in the social chnities and enjoyments of ite members, will be permanently loealed. Let us all foiget and forgive, in the spirit of liberal uinds and geuerous dispuaitions, the mutual provocationa and injuries to which the late unliappy controversy has led. Let us hury all feuds, and luanish to the shades of everlastimg oblivion, the demon of party. lett us, in short, recollect that we are cluzens of a common country; and, howevef we may differ about the means of glorifying and exaltiug It; the end we all have in view being the same, untual charity dictates gencrous oblivion of all past ihfferenees.

BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.

Supplemental report of the minorily on the rutject of the bank. motse of Representativen, magch 2, 1833.
Mr. Polk from the minority of the committee of ways and means, made the following supplemental report:
Since the body of the former report submitted by the minority of the committee of ways and means, was drawn up, the correspondeace with the western offices which had been called for, has been received, and they ask to subunit the foitowing additiogal report in confrmation of the views already submitted in relation to the western debl. It in to be olaser ved an stated in the former report, that the exchnage committee in thetr report state, drat "as soon as it was known that the agent had arrived in Fingiand, and that an arrangement of some kithd would be ae. complished, no time was lost in communicating to the board the fact that the preparatinns of the bank were such as to make it practieable to secure the usual facilties to the community. The subjeet was therefore immediately hrooglit to the view of the board in the manner stated in the following cstract from the minetes. Thesen ininutea are dated "bank of the United Stater, Seplember $91 s, 1[3!, "$ and conelude with authorising the comsuntee on the offices "to monlify the imstructions under which the uthicers of the bank have been acting, at such points and in each manner an they may deem most conducive to the Interests of the bank." Instruetions were addreased to such of the western officers as wouid mowt nensibly feel the reatrictions, anthorising them to rexuine the purchase of domestic exchange, aed draw checks on the bank.
As the informatinn that "an arrangement of some kind would be accoaplished"' in Eugland, did not reach the exchange comnutlee before the Ist Getober, it was difficuit to percelve how u could have had any influcnee in producihg the proceedings oa the 21 st. It now appearn by the correspondence with the weatera branclies, that they were not proaluced by that canse, bat by an apprehension for the safety of the lexiagton office, which the other offices in that quartor were calted ugon to sus. tain.
On the 1th September, as appears by the correrpondence, the casbier of the Lexington branch wrnte to the principal bauk as follows, viz: "The disposition by organized concert, to make a rua for aperje peens to increase. Since the 281 h May, we have paid out about 823,000 , and in the last 7 days 86,200 ." "t We have heen apprised of calls that will be made for ahowt $$ 25,000$ Which we are looking for every bour," &ce. On the lith Scpt. the cashier of the principal bank wrote to the leexiugton branch at follows, viz: "Your letter of the thth inatant, to the late acting eashier has been roceived and we have in consequence to despatch by the mail to morrow, two of our clerks, Samuel Masoa, jr. and Edward Wheeler, with fity thonsand dollars in U. Staues gold coin for your office. 'I'hin sum we trost will put you quite at your eare, at least untul you can receive a supply of dollars frum New Orleans. In addition to the other offiees in which you have written for aid, that at C'incinnaumay be resorted to. $n$
On the 14th $eptember the enshier at Lexington wrote that the demand upon them still continued.
On the 21st, the day on which the proceeding before adverted to took place, the president of the principal bank wrote to the Lexington branch an fotlows, vizi

Bank Unilod Stater, Scplember 21, 1832.
Deas str-I recelved this morming your letter of the lith hant. and in consequence have ropneated the caxhicr to send immediately an additional rnm of stio, 000 in gnid, which with the prevous remittanee of $9: 00,000$ and the uide which I hope you will have received before this time from some of the neightiormg nefiees, will place you at your eave. If from diny in day as we hear from you there should reem to be a necessity for a greater supply, it will be forwurded to yon, meanwhile you will bike care of course to keep out of the way of any large demadeds by confining your receipts to the paper of your own of fice; and keeping your buriness within sate humits.

Very reapecifully, yourn, (xugned),
N. BIDDLE $\mathrm{F}_{1}$ president.

In addition to these $$ 110,000, $ 10,000$ more are furnished from bowistille, 830,000 from St. lennis, $8: 35,000$ from Natehez, and 8110,000 from New Orleans, unaking in all 8275,000 .
This is sufficient, without the aid of the news of the arrangement in Enrupe, whith could not have been recelved nutt more than a wrek alterward, to account for the pruceedings of the 2lst Neptember, and the instructions sent to those western branches which were expected to sustain the branch at Lexing. ton.
Ia relation to the condition of the western debt, Involving the satety of the institution, the ebrrespondence with the wentern braches affords evidence, uot before the committee when their former report was drawn up, and whieh goes strongly to confirm the opinions therein expressed.
To Ifr. Bevan, the following question was proponuded, viz: monthly statemients of the year ista, do yoil beported in the monthly statemients of the year $188^{\circ} 2$, do yout believe any considerable proporion to be of the character of accommuodation japer to be rencwed by drawing and redrawing between the bank and its branches, or between several branches? Ansicer. If any, it must be a very humted amount, berause the directors and intemanced and refused, when they knew it to be much, and 1 presume the same course to be followed in the branches,

Which have instructions from the mother bank to guard against that description of paper.

Mr. Fyne was asked. Is there any ammunt of the bills of exchange discounted or purchased by the bank, which counsists of accommodation paper prodnced by drawing and redrawing.2. Insicer. I know of none-such paper is not countenanced by the bank.
To Mr. Iippincolf, the foliowing was propounded: "Of the nmnont of domestic bills of exchange reported in the inonthiy statements of the years 1831-2, do you believe any conshlerablo proportion to be of the character of accommodation paper to be renewed by drawing and redrawing between the bank and the branches or between the several branches? Ansver. I don't recollect of any.
Mr. Lippincott was also arked: Ilave the directorn of the bank the meank of detecting any hahitual practice of Nrawing nud redrawing jut referred to, if lt shomitd exist hetween the branchea when carried to any cxicnt? Antwer. They have, by mieans of the periodical returns of the branchos in the mother bank of the businwes done at those branches respectively.

Of Mr. Eyme and Mr. Beran, similar qnestions were askad, who, each gave similar replica.
The preceding testimony of the two members of the exchange committee, one of whom was also chalrman of the committee on the offices, is before the house, and we take the following extract from their report, viz:
"In further illustralion of the character of the westem debts, the returns show that the total amonnt of domestic billa of exchange, purchnsed at the western offices from the lat of July, 1831, to the 31st of Decenber, 1872, is $816,397.09498$ On which the amount protested and unpaid is Of which the estimate of probabte loses if

"The canse of a loss on little proportioned to the amonnt of the investment is to be found in the fact, that the exchange transactions of the western states, grow out of the setual bueiness, the arlual shipmenta of the produce in the place of 119 exportation, furnishing to the hank the tripie sccurity, of the perannal rexponsibility of tive shipper, the propeny which he exports; and again, the personnl liability of the merchant who receives it at the piace of exportation. As an illimetration of this, the following statement of the exchange aperations of the bank at Nashville, mav furniuh an interesting example.
1831. October $$ 366,51263$. When the fow billa ramaining ourt of drafis on shipments of the previous crop, had not yet run to maturity.

1839. Jan. $9,9,019,612$ 02. The shipmenta of the present erop having promemacil to smme extent, the amonnt of hilis is naturally awelled in proportion.
The lranch which the exchange committee had selected to shnw the sound condition of this dpht, we select to khow tha acthal condition. On the 10th day of Novemiber last, the following letter was addressed to the president of the Nashville branch, viz:

Bank of the Viniten States, Norember 201h, 1832.
Deam mis-Yon will receive, through the pashler's rlepartment, notice of the appointment of G. W. (iilhs and H. M. Rutledge, Mags. as members of your board. These gentlemen have long been known th us by repntation, and 1 ain snre whi make nseful and agreeable aseociates in the adinintstration of the office.
Allow me to ask your attention to my letter of the 27th of July last, In which I communiented the swish of the board, that you wond abstain from the pureliane of domestic bills ercept in reduction of pre-exiating debte to the hank. At the period when my letter reaelied you, ynur aecount of domestic billa waa abour $8: 00,000$. Your siatement of the 2 hh ilhimn, the latest which ha* reached us, shews that amount to be upwards of one million of dollars, being an increase of more than $$ 500,000$, and makine an aetnal purchase of bilts to the amount of eight handred thousand dollars since the middle of Aumat. We are aware that many bilis have returned upon the offiec, which, it was neecssary to take up by redrans. But still the amount exceede much what had been anticipated by the hoard, and now that this source of demand must have ceased, I cannot tno etrongly invite yowr attention in the iastructions contained in my letter of the 27 th July, as the receipt of your notes oces-sioned by the purchase, may become very inconvenient to the bank. As the season advancer, $t 00$, it wonld be desirable to shorten the term of all the bulls which you are under the necessuy of purclosaing, to a period not execeding four mouthe. Very reapectrully sours.

N. BIDDLE, president.

Josiah Vichol, eay. presidenl's office, D. and D. Nashrille, ''cnn. By this letter, it will be perceived that it was known to the bank at Pliladelphan, that many bills had returned upon the Nushville offlec, which it uras necessary to take up by redrafle. This Jenter called out an explanation lromn the prevident of Uie Nashville tranch, dated the November, which was followed by another dated the 240ti, a note at the end of the first, says,
"We will not be able tu get the debts due this ofice pald-indeed, if ally, it will be asinall part-the means are not in the conitry."

There are some thoosands of dollars of bilis from New Orleans and other offices yet to mature, which ean ouly be met through our bill operations."
Tue subject was aubmitted to the board of directors of the branch, who adopted unanimously the following resolution, viz:
"Resolved, That for the very sntivfactory reasons assigned in the letters of the president and caslivier of this office, addressed In the president and casluer of the parent bank, one dated on Ute 22 d of November, 1832 , the other the $$ 0$ th November, 1832, that the board recommend it to the parent board to permat this office to continue ita purchases of domestic bills at six monthe date, until the lst day of March next."
Notwothstanding the confidence of the directory of the parent bank, that little or none of the debt based on domestic bills of exchange, was in the natmre of accomanodation paper, to be renewed by drawlug and redrawing, we have bere concluaive phoof, that nearly the entire deht to the Nashille branch, is precisely of that description. some of it, as the president of the braneh admits, had already been drawn for three times, and be antucipates that it will again eone back from New Orleass. By the monthly statenopist of the lat Noveraber and Ist December, It appeans that the whole aunount of domestic bitts at Nashville on the 17th Octothr was g895,228 30, and on the 7th November, 31,245,510. Thic casliner states, tiat nearly the whole purchases made in Septenther, October and November, nmonating to 81,097, di7, were redrafts, and he says, there are some thonsands of dollars of balls from New Orlvans and the offices which can he met only in the aname way. The presideat of the Iranch, In his Irtior of the $24 t h$, says, that the bills already of fered and purchased werr more than the preeent crop of cotion and tohaceo will pay. Yri, as the conumittee of exeliange state, Hee anount of thear bills had increased on the 94 of Jansary, 1833 . in $82,449,61292$. From the statemente of the eashier and preaident of the bank, there eannot be a doubt, that a large amount of this whole debt is redrafts!
We have locre the reason why there are mo few protests in the west.

It is with all this evidenee in the bank, that the committee of exchange iuform us "Hhe exchange transactions of the western stater grow cimi of the actual busimenn, the actual slipments of produce to the place of exportation," &e. and give us an illustration of the wimall museront of bills at the Nashille branch in Detolicr, 1831 and 1832 , and the large amount: in December, 1831, April, IN: 2, and Jannary, 1833. If they had examined this evallence, they would have seen, that the reasoll of all this 14, Ital at the proriods of the lowest deprimsion the racers were at the other end of the course. The blits at New Orieans at the times stated were as follows, viz:

| 1871 , | November, 4th, | 81,766,828 68 |
| :---: | :---: | :---: |
| 18 ts, | June, 2ith, | $7,031,96807$ |
|  | Noveulier, 2d, | 2,501,840 38 |

In the Call and first part of the winter they start from Nasbville and other western ofices on New Orleaus, and in the Fpring and early part of the summer they start bock again. As the auougteinks in Nushville, it rises in New Orleans; and as it sinks in New Orleanos it riven in Nashville. The bilis on New Orleaus discounted last Septrmber, Ortober and November were at six months, so that they will be falling Ine in March, April and May next, nt which time the bill aceount at N. Orleans will rine aod that at Nashville sink. Sille on Nasliville will be discomited in pay the bills from Nasliville, and again those balls will be paid by new lulls on New Orlenus.
There is no reasoll to ruppose, that the bill business at the Other wratern branches, is any better than at Nashrille. That it is no better at Louisville is shown by the letter of the cashies It is no better at Louisville, is shown by the Intter of the enshies of that bramelt written in November last, and already adverted to in the body of this report. The whole amount of domestic Hilla under discount in the valley of the Miskisulpui in November last, as sliewn ly the inonthly atatements at the close of that minth, was $\leqslant 10,112,10637$. Upon the supposition that it is an in the shune condition ax the bill debt al Nashville, at least seven out of the ten nullions is secured by paper ealled vace Aorse bills, which iv runnuig trone branch to branch, waituga for empa to be raised to mert thelit, aod running the drawers with Interest, excliange, comulasoton for endorseinent and acceptance, and other expenses.

In our oplnion, no system of hanking operations could be invented, mout desolating and fatal to the trading and planting community of the west, than this extension of bank credits and overtrading in dotnestic escliange.
The facta now dinelowed throw additional light upon the other branch of the wostern debt. To ngruat extent, the same parties which are engaged in this extensive buxiness of drawing and redrawing, are undoubtedly principals and securituea in the notes discounted. From the letters of the cashiers at Cincinuati, Louisville and Nasiville, it appears to be as difieult to eolleet this debt as that hased upon buls.
It is proper that we should add In ennclusion that we cannot suppose the directors called before as, or the exchange committre in their report, could have bern fully apprised of the facte disclosed in this correspondence, which is herewith submitted

THE PAST-THE PRESENT——OA THE FUTURE,

EDITED, PRINTED AND PCBLISHED BY B. NILES, AT $5 PER ANXUN, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

0F-Wc insert the speeches of Messrs. Clay and Grundy, on the land till-as presenting a general view of both sides of this great question. We shall, in our next, give the enrrected epeeeh of Mr. Clay on his lariff bill, and that of Mr. Daris, of Massaeborette, in the house of representatives, against it. A subseqoent aumber will contain the debate on the bunk. Next, in order, the report of the ininority of the committee on manufactaros, algned by Mesors. Adams and Condict, &c. In the arragement and publication of the valuable "ptock copy" whieh remains on hand and must be inserted, we shall endeavor to sive it "the spice of variety."

The proceedings of the re-assembled convention of South Ca mila fill a considerable space in the present zheet, and we bsve.added soune things to shew the spirit which prevails. It will be reea that the "action of the convention" is regarded as having produced an abandonment of the principle of protection! It appears most probable that the convention will rullify the "enforcing law," and prescribe a new oatit to be then by persons holding office under the laws of the state, and by eoter:. We shail make a due record of all that is done.
It will be seen that the grand committee of the South Carolina eonvention have had the late act of the congrens of the United stafes under consideration, and been pleaved to recommend an seceptance of the same-having "cause for congratulation and triumph."
The debate on accepting the report of the committee appears to have been pretiy bot, on the part of Mr. B. B. Smith. He said the report was false, in expressing a love for the union, te-which he explained so far an it regarded inimself-anter has meaning had been demanded by gen. Hamilton; who, on the present oceasion, bebaved with much moderation.
The convention had been addressed by Mesmrs. Miller, Barn. well and McDuflie, stating the reasons which bad induced them to vote for the new tariff law, &c.

A decent respect for the action of Mr. Clay, and others who went with him in support of his bill concerning the tariff, we think, ought to keep down the song of triumph in South Caro-linn-for no one will affect to believe that terror, because of the andianace, had any influence over the proceedings of Mr. Clay, ad the gentlemen more direetly alluded to. They had their feary-but not on sccount of "major generai Hamilion, commanding the state troops at Charleston."
The supreme court of the United States terminated ita annual tension on the 15 th inst.
Late sdvices from Ewrope are noticed. The most important ting that haa happened is the decisive viciory of the Egyptians over the Twiks. It reems admitted, that the dominion of the mitas at Constantinople must speedily ceape-unless preserved Is the interference of some of the European powers. The ald of Rasia has been asked, and appears to have been partialiy granted, is the way of negotiation, between the sultan and the pacha. We have inserted various interesting articles to show the prenetatate of Ireland-which is, indeed, in an awfui condition. If the present reign of outrage be not stopped-a territic depreciation in the moral character of the people mumt ensue. There is no eiter seeurity than force, for the preservation of property or life, in many parts of the island! O'Connell has lasued a long and ardent prociamation to the people. His purposes are to putdown the "protestant ascendancy," and "and repeai the anionth-but he exhorts his countrymen to avold the perpetrating of erimes, that they may not give the ir enemies any advanliges over them. degree of ansiety, by certain classee of placemen, and pensioners, and priesth-and persons interented in property and slaves in the West Indies. It is even thought that the corn laves may be successfully attacked! With these prospects realised-important changes, indeed, will follow in succession; and it is posvible, that, the value of labor being increased, the burtiens of the poor rates may be reduced. We have made a collection of important papers relative to slavery in the British West Indies-bit are compelled to defer its insertion. The ministers, an well as the people of England, seem determined to end It-in one way or another. The subject is one of great interest to a largo portion of the United States, and on many accounts.
Exchange on London was lately quoted at Boston as at only 5 per cent. premium. But it is not said whether the poand sterling was placed at its new comparative (or real) value of 480 cents. If so-the exchange is considerably against us. The average of the par of the pound sterling, for several years past, bas been about 488 cents.

We are exceedingly harrassed, and mneh injured, by the longcoduring irregularity of the mails, and the excessive carelessness or gross ignorance, or somethiug worse, in a good many of the pout offices. It is useless to complain-but proper that our subscribers should understand, that we can do nothing more than is done, to insure the regular and safe arrival of their pa. pers.

The enfonciva act-or "Bloody Bill." We expresseal an opinion in the last Renasten, (depending altogether on a recollection of things long past), that the old laws to enforce the embargo, which was laid in the administration of Mr. Jrfferson, contained provisions at least as strong as any in the aet lately passed "further to provide for the collection of duties on imports;" but have sinee obseryed that a correspondent of the "Rielimond Enquirer" load already examined into thin matter, and settled the question-certainly shewing that the measures recommended and adopted in 1808-9, to "regulate commerce with foreign nations," in the absolute frohibition of all commerve with them, were more decided and severe than the Jaw of the late session, to "regulate" such commerce so far as to collect duties on goods importedSouth Carolina having "ordained" that such ducies should not be paid within her "sovereign"' limits!
Previous to quoting a conple of sections from the law to enforce the embargo, in 1809 , and that to enforee the collection of dutics in 1833, it may be well to remark-that those who doubt Mr. Jefferson's "democracy," cannot have faith in his opinion, that "rvellification is the ntortver nexkdy !" It is not worth the while to go inio particulars. The sections of the two laws will speak for themselves,

And they are likewise authorised in the meanwhile, and until the eargoes shall have been duscharged, or bonds puv. en, as the canc may be, to take possession of such vessels, and to take such other measwes as may be necessary to prevent their departure.

Eee. 11. And be it further onaeted, That it shall be lawful for the president of the $\mathbf{U} . \mathrm{S}$. or such other person as he shall have empowered for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces or militia of the United States, or of the territories therenf, as may be judged necessary, in conformity with the provimions of tils and other acts respecting the embargo, for the purprope of preventing the illegal departure of any ship or vessel, or of detain. ing, taking posseasion of, and Keeping in custody any ship or vesael, or of taking into custody and guarding aam specie or articlen of domestic growth, produce, or manufincture, and also for the purpose of prerenting and suppreesing any armed or riotous assemblage of persons resisting the enstom house ofhcers in the exercise of their duties, or in any mamner opposing the execution of the laws layiag an einbargo, or otherwise violating, or asesting and abet ting violations of the same.

States as may be deened necessary for the purpose of preveniting the removal of such veacel or cargo, and protecting the officers of the customs in retaining the custody thereof.

See. 5. That, whenever the preaident of the Uaited States shall be officially informed, by the authorities of any state, of by a judge of any circuit or district court of the Unted States, ia the state, that, within the limits of sucb atate, any law or laws of the Enited states, or the exceution thereof, of of any process from the courts of the Cnited Staten is obstructed by the employnnent of nilitary force, or by any other unlawful mranif, too great to be overcoare hy the ordinary courve of judicial proceediugs, or by the powery vented in the marshal by existing laww, it shall be lawful for him, the prexident of the United Suaten, forthwith to desue tits proclamation, declaring such fact or information, and requifing all mateb military and other force forthwith to disperne; and if any time after issuing such proctamation, any such opposition or obstruction ahall be inade, in the manner or by the means aforesald, the preondent zhall be, and hereby in, authorised, promptly to eanploy such means to supprews the vame, and to cause the said Inws or process to be duly exccuted, as are authorised and provided in the cases thereis mestioned by the act of the twenty- eighth of February, one thoustand seven hundred and sinety-five, eatitied "an act to provide for calliag forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress Issurrections, repel invasions, and to repeal the act now la force for that purpose;" and also, by the act of the third of Mareh, one thou saud eight hundred and sevea, entitled "an act authorising the employment of the land and naval forces of the United States in cases of ineurrection."
These are the chief forcing sections in both bills. Those in the act of 1809 are, by fur, the most "arbitrary" and "deapotic," and "ty ranniea!" and "bloorly"-for the mere suapicion of an intention to violate that law justificel the use of an armed force. This bill originated in the senate, (reported, if we remember righity, by Mr. Giles, of Virginia), and passed that body $\mathbf{2 0}$ to 7 -and the house 71 to 32 . The following are the yeas,-which took in the whole "pesmocratic" force ia both houses.

Yeas in the senate-Mesars, Anderson, Condirt, CYanford, Franklin, Gailland, Giles, Gregg, Kitehell, Milledge, Mitehill, Moore, Pope, Robinson, Santh, of New York, Smilh, of Maryland, Fmith, of Teanessee, Sumter, Thrusion, TIfia and Tur-ner-20.

Teas in the howse of representufires-Mesers. Alesander, L. J. Alston, W. Aleton, jr. Bacon, Hard, Barker, Hasseth, HiHb, Blaekledge, jr. Blake, Blıunt, Ir. Boyd, Boyle, Brown, Buther, Cal hown, G. W. Campbelt, Clay, Clopton, Cutts, Deane, Deeha, Kippet, Fisk, Franklin, Gbolson, Jr. Green, Heister, Hollaad, Holsees, Howard, Humplireys, J. G. Jackon, Jolanson, Jone⿻, Kenan, Kirkpatnck, Latmbert, Macon, Murion, J. Montgounery, N. R. Moore, T. Mowre, Jer. Morrow, Julen Morrow, Neleon, Newbold, Neirton, Nicholas Porter, jr. Rhea, of Penn. RAea, of Tean. J. Richards, M. Richardy, Seaver, Shaw, &onitic, J. K. Suith, J. Buath, Storer, Story, Taylor, Troup, Van Allen, Verplauck Wharton, Whlelall, Wilbour, D. R. Willians, A. Wuson, Winn.

Now-let any old democraf "thumb" these namęs, and lie will find that every "true man" of his party, in either housc, voted, uot only so lar for the "regulation of commerce" as to prahibil all commerce, but for a law of enforcement more arbitrary, more "BLOODy," than is the bill of 1833. We have nuarked a few names in italie to which we invite particular attention.

It may be added, that Mr. Gallatin, then aceretary of the treasury, in reply to a letter from Mr. Giles, ehairman of a committec of the senate, as to what measurca would be most effectual to enforee the embargo laws, proposed to forbid the lading of any vessel without the permission of the collector-to give power to seize unuwal deposito to use the whole naval forec and ten or twelve alditional cutters-to call out the militis-to put down writs of replevin issued by states' eourts or officers, and so forth! And the law also contained a provision authorising collectors, or other officers of the United States, to scize upon carts, wagons or sleighs, or other earriages, "if APPankxTLY on their way Towakus the tertytories of a foreign nation,"-and the whole "denioeracy" of the south supported this bill! There is, iudeed, a grent difference in the character of sclf sane things, happening on the worth and on the south side of the Potomac-is the opinion of "generous and chivalrie" men!

But enough. "The play is not worth the candle." Nullification was resisted and put down in the east, as well by the returning good sense of the New England people, themselves, as in being discontntenancel every where else; but has it not suceeeded in the small state of South Carolina? The "Columbia 'Teleseope," the orga of the nullifiers, says-
"This little state, in the mere panoply of courage and high priaciples, has foiled the meageering giant of the union. Thirty thousand Carolinians have wot ouly awnd the wild weat isto Te spect-compelesd Pennsyivania stolidity into smorthung like sense-Naw York corruption into momething like decency Yankee rapacity into a wort of unage of lonesiy; but all this has been loftily and steadily done, is the face of $17,000^{\circ}$-what shall we call them! What epithet is of a shame wide, lanting and deep enough, for the betrayers of the llberties of theit own coun try-the instigators of mereiless slaughter-the coutrivers of ar-try-the insagatorn of inereitess shaughter-the contrivers retrievable servitude, against their owa strugging state?"

Equal and exact justice to ale men. The case of Dr. Watking has been trumpetted in every cotmer of the United States. The newspapers have contained more than ten thousand colunus of matter, selting forth his offences. He, in an evil hour, appropriated to his own use three or four thousand dollars of the public money. The act cannot be justified; but no ohe whe knew this unfortnuate man will believe that he intended to retain it. For this, and in consequence of this, he has been confined in the penitentiary as a criminal, and yct remains in jailfor a period of about three ycars and a lualf, without any present ןrompect of being released; his claraeter blasted, and an amiable family cast upon the cold charity of the world-deprived of the near eadearments, and proteetion and aid, of the husband and father.

On the other hand we see it stated, that a eertain person in the west, "rewarded" with a plave in the land office at about the time when. Watkins was arrented and tried as a felon, has defaulted to the amount of sixty-three thousand dollars; and it is mhled, that he had further used his official situation to appropriate portions of the public lands, (as well as of the publie money), for hisown benefit, in a manner not less criminal than Watkins used to obtain the tlaree or four thousaud dollars above mentioned. And it is hinted that sevaral other like cases have haypened. But this single case iavolves a larger amount than alf the alleged defalcations or frauds that was so luudly prow claimed in the summer of 1829 -and out of all which an action was sustained against proor Wackins, only. And the person in the land office above alluded to was "rewarded" in the "ponishment" of an hovest man dismisscd, for opinion's sake.

That, in the multitude of its agents, the government should be sometiaes defrauded, must be expeeted; hut a refusal to kiss, or a lowly kissing of the "black stone"" of politieal party, should not aggravate and emblazon the sins of one inan, nor expiate and conceal those of another. Hut had this "affair" happened in one placed in offiee by president Allams, hy the turring-out of another person beeause of politieal preferences-what would the "kennel presses" have said of it? The na me of the defaulter, in flaming eapitals, would have been gibetted at every eross-roads tavern in the United States; and, as he had fled, his person would be deseribel with all possible accuracy, that individuals might not be confaminated by giving hin a crust of brad or cup of water.

The lavo mile. We publish the speech of Mr. Clay, in favor of Lis bill, and that of Mr. Grundy againet It-and intend, speedily, as promised, to give a congressional history of this very important bill-addiag xuch remarks as certain atrange proceediags concerning it so sichly merit. Its beginning and ending were in acts of arbitrary porer.
With respect to the bill which the president, in familliar phrase, "put into his pooket," the "Natioual Inteligencer" of the I9th says:
It bas been the subject of much conversation, since the adjourament of congres, whether Mr. CLay's LaND aill be not in fact now the las of the land. The argumrnt on the subject, we discover, thas travelled to New York. We copy it below, from the joarrial in which we find it, for the information of our readers. We have not ourselves made up a judgment apon it. We bave italicised, however, the points on which the question turas, whicls, if uot conclusive, are at leaut suticiently plausible to afford a case for a moot court:

From the New York Courier and Enquirer.
Butwe learn from Washiugton that a question has been ralsed, whieh, in our opinion, is well taken, and, if so, then is the land bill the law of the country-the executive's detention of it to the contrary notwithsianding.
The constit ution, sec. 7, eays-"If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented th him, the same sliall be a law, in like manner as if lis had asgned it, untess congreas by their adjowrnment prevent ito return; in which case it shall not be a
Now, it is contended, that inasmurh as the constitutional term for which the late congrest mas elected expired on the $3 d$ of March; they did not "by their adjomrnment prevent its (the bili) return." It is argued thal this provision ouly relates to cases where congress might, by an adjournment, attempt to coerce the erecutive into a prewnat ure action upen a bill, and that it cannnt apply to any case when the adjournment is in fact compulsory under the constitution. When the exteutive received the bill, he well knew that the late congress would cease to exist, as such on the 3 J of Mrach, and therefore it uras his duty to have rcturned it to the bouse in wbich it originated before that period, with his objections in w riting. This view of the subject is atrengthened by The fact that he cannot return it to the next congresas, in conse guence of ite being a different onn from that "in wlich it originated," and that therefore the president, and not "congreas by their adjourrament," prevented the bill belog returned.
It is plain frous the whole reading if the constitntion, the fram ers of that instrument Intended that all bills not returned to the congress in which they originated, unlets such return should be prerented by their awn act, should hecmine the law of the land. They intended that the expecutive's veto ahould not be of ally aval untess so refurned and sanctioned by a rote of more than opethird. The question thrn arises, tho prevented the return of the bill in question. Did "congrens by their adjounument" prevent its return! - if so, the constitution kays it shall not be a law. But we contend that ihey didnot, and that the executiec, knoming eongress must adjoum on the 3d March, precented its return to $0 \rightarrow$-We have no hesitation in raying, that a bill which passed both houses of congress with such overwhelning majorities, and would probably have passed by two-thirds, in despite of the president'y veto, thad it been given-ought not to have been nullified in the mavner that it was; yet we belleve that the constitution will bear out the procecding, whatever may be thought of the proceeding itwelf.

Indian ottragas. A emmpany of traders were attacked ng titeir journey from Santa Fe to Miwsouri, on the Canadian fork of the Arkanfas, about three months sinee, by a large body of Cannanche Indians, with whom they had a long light. The traders at last escaped in the nizht, with the luss of two of their number killed, and leaviug 10 or 12,000 dollarm in the prairie; nud oome of them hat arrived at N . Lounv, after alinost umparalleled hardshipe and privations. They were 42 days in rachiog a wetticment, eucumibered wuht sevelal worunded men, and the whole nearly starved, for they had lout thelr horses.

Patpea ntatistics. During the year $1832-342$ persons were receivel into the poor house of New Castle county, Delaware, of whom 38 dienl, 173 were diseharged, and 131 remained. Of those admitted 80 were foreign ers, and 60 persons of eolor. The average expense for cach pauper was $$ 4354$ por annum, or 84 cents a week. This includes elothing furnistred, &ce. The poputation of New Castle conntry was 29,720 , by the census of 1830 .

The whole of the expenditure of the Chester county (Pennsylvania) alins house, incluling all salaries, for the last year, was $$ 7,176892$. The averuge number of paupers in the house for the year was 168. Average cost of each pruper $$ 12$ 70. The population of Chester county in 1830 , was 50,910 .
In these establishments the poor are well taken care of -plentifully fed and comfortahly clotheal, though not enjoying many of the luxurics of life! A rigisl eemomy is observed, and nothing is wasted by neglect. Hence it would apprear that abont forty dollars, per anmum, may be considered as the minimum average cost of the subsistence and clothing of persons, of all ages and cither sex.
"Palparle hits," The following thrwats were given and taken during the discussions on fenleral relations in the Virginia house of delegates:

Mr. Moore having concluded his seeond speceh-Mr. Dickerson of Caroline, rose and said: "That the gentle man from Rockbridge (Mr. Moorc) was mistaken, when he said that he, (Mr. D.) lual boasted of having stabbed the member from Rockbridge under the fifth rib-it was a mueh greater Ox (Gen. Jackson) than him (Mr. M.) that he gored."

Mr. Moore in reply sail, "It was possible he might have been mistaken but still he was atrongly under the impression thut the gentleman hall said something about stabbing the Delegate from Roekbridge under the fifth rib. However that might be, he entertained no doubt but that the great Ox to wbich the gentleman (Mr. D.) had just alludenl, wouln be as little apprehensive as he (Mr. M.) was, of being gored hy an antinal more remarkable for its ears than its horms."

A mast exceliznt neasux! The Vandalia, (Illinois) paper of the 27 th Febuary, hall the following article:
"A bill has passed the honse of representatives, ineorporating a company with a capital of $$ 500,000$, and the privilege of increasing it to a million, to construct a rail road on the surveyed canal route, between the Illinois aml lake Michigan. The company is allowed to commence operations as soon as __ of the stock is taken, and is required to have the work in progress within two years and completed within ten-otherwise the eharter is forfeited. At the expiration of teal years, (if the work be finished and the assent of congress be obtained) the lands granted to the state for the construetion of a canal, are to be trausferred to the company: The state then becomes a joint stockholder to the present value of the lands, estimated at $$ 275,000$.
The terins are very favorable to the state: perhaps soo favorable, to induce capitalists to make investments in the stock; of this, however, adventurers must jutlge. Owing to the late period of the session at which live question was brought forward, it doubtless will fail in the senate for want of time to discuss it, ant cousequently this jaded holby of ten years serviee, will be forced to run another two years heat, with some halt a dozen or more riders.
0 -The rail roal bill ahove alluded to, was, on motion of Mr. Daviitson, laitl on the table ( 8 o'clock- last evening) till the 1st Monday in Dee. 1834 the bill is deant, The last argument we lieard against it, was "we don't want our tolls taken out of the atate by New Eingland speculutors."
[Now a more excellent reason why this rail road company should not be chartered, we think, could not have been given! What-suffer New England to expend half a million of dollars in lllinois-to scatter so large a sum among her peopile? Its not to be thought of! They would be "foreign stockholders" and those, in the "entire" devotion of the day, are not to be emlured. New York made a great mistake in accepting the use of forcign eapital, for her canals ic $^{*}$ it is true, that, without it, her canals might not even yet have been made; and, though they may have adiled more than 100 millions to the value of property in New York, and do save several millions a year in the cost of transportations, giving also a clear profit to the state government of more than half a million, annually-it would be more patriotio-more purely ilemocratic, to fill up these cansls, than to pay the interest of the "foreign" debt which was incurred by the digging of them.
"The rither-netther-nideas" school. The following from the "Albany Argus" of the 9th inst. is one of the best specimens of its kind that we have ever met with:
"Among the important and responsible duties which devolved upon the "Great Pacificator," so called, at the close of the late session of congress, was the bringing about of a reconciliation between Messes. Poindexter and Webster, an acconnt of which we publish to-day. Of the value of clese nutual professions of returning kindness and personal respect, they will be best alle to juilge, who have remarked the degree of asperity which characterised the objectiomable passages between the two combatants on the floor of the senate. If the whole affair shoult chance to be regarded as farcical, or as the evidence of insincerity rather than of voluntary reconciliation, it eertainly will not be a matter very surprising or very unnatural."
All which may be real back wards or forwards, without materially affeeting the sense of the jaragıaph.

The Franifing Privilege.-The franking privilege to members of congress, las been extended during the late session, to sixty days before the new member takes his seat, to the end of the term for which he is elected, and to the meeting of the congress following.
"Goov!"-Mr. Beebe, of Ithaea, Nero York, who was lately reproved by the speaker of the house, for an attempt to bribe a member, has commeneed a suit against the speaker for false imprisonment, and lays his damages at $$ 20,000$.

New Hampamar.-The election for representatives to eongress took plase in this state last week. The following gentlemen were undoubtedly chosen, as there was no opposition ticket, viz: Henry Vfubbard and Joseph MI. Harper, of the last eongress, and Benuing M. Bean, Franklin Pierce, and Robert Burns, new members, in the place of Jolin 13rodhead, Thomas Chandler, Joseph Hammons, and Jolin W. Weeks. This state loses oue member under the new ratio of representation.

The Italiax opera company, which has been performing at ${ }^{\prime}$ New York, and now at Pliladelphia, is supported at a very heavy expense. The following may serve as speeimens:
Pedrotti and her Ausbant-40,000 franes per annum, or $$ 8,000$, and the entire receipts of two benefits, which have prollueed inpwards of two thousand dollars: all dresses to be found by the managers, as well as a coach to and from the thentre.

[^6]Montreson- 25,000 franes per annum, or $$ 5,000$, and one elear beneft, dresses, eoach, ke.
F'ormasari-25,000 franes per annum, or $$ 5,000$, and two clear benefits, coach dressen, wigs, ke.
Rocea, treasurer-24,060 francs or four thousand eight humired dollara.

THE IRISH VOLUNTEERS.

Duhlin, Sunday, January 13 . Yesterday the Irish voiunteets assembled at the corn exchange, and Manrice O'Connell, M. P. was moved into the chair.
His father spoke at great iength on his Intended organizatinn of tise volunteers and the national rent which he was particularIy anxious the tithe martyrs and their destitute families stonid speedily derive aasistance from. He dwelt particularly on the cases of Twiss and Hennessey, in Cork, and wished be had more information from the county of Wicklow reapecting the suffering nf individuals there; but that was the businws of Mr. Jas. Grattaa, who ouglit then to be at home atteading to she distreases of his patriotic constirments lustead of disporting himself in London. (Hear.) He moved the appointinent of three volunteers to take charge of each county 10 Ireland, and correspond with each parish on the subject of organizing the collection of the national rent, forwarding petitions to parliament, inquiring intn the claims for compensation of the tithe martyrs, and commeneing the enrolment of the parochial voiunteers. Fach man of good character, (certified by his elergyman or five of hia neighbors), was adunissible into his own parochial corps on payment of 1 s.
The mntion was then carried nem. con. and the details lef to the standing comunittee.
Mr. $\mathrm{O}^{\prime}$ Connell then apoke in terms of strong regret at the extension of the mystem of nidnight association and outrage, which be was ansured, fronn undoulited authority, was reviving with new energy in the countien of Kikenny, T'ipperary and Louth. In the latter enunty, there was wome extrandiwary underhand proceedings going tinward. Strangers of the Inwer classes were seun wherut any vixille mpans of wibsistence by trate of oceupation, yet with plenty of money, which they spent freely among the prople. Midnight asnnciations and marcining were also got up In that hitherio quiet colnmy, and he understond that numbers of the pesantry had been prevaiied on at these meetings to receive a plitting bounty and sign their natmes to a livt. In the countles of T'ipperary and Kilkenny the state of affaira whs fast appraaching that of Louth; the consequence was, that the pohice wnuld be douibled, and crime increased in proportion, as had always been fuund by experience.
Mr. Finn, M. P. also etated that in his county, (Kilkenny), ha couid deciare, on his own experience, that men known as robbers and murderers were allowed to go about the country with arms in their hands, unmolested by the magistrates; that these men had plraty of mouey, and were constantiy seen spending n in the public houses, when, doubtiess, they were incting to tresh erimes.
Mr. O'Connell, in continuation, said he would not accuse the leaders of the governinent in Ireland of laving mada these arrangerments or furnith funds to lead the people into rebellion, but he strongly anspected some of the underings of the castle of taking the tmuble to prepare a case for parinament, with the bope of introducing marnal law into Itrland, and driving the peopie into ingurrection. He ptrongly inslnuatedtinat the money employed In treating the peanantry, came from the eonservative anciey. The prewent was a crivir very like that which preceded the formation of the Cathoinc association in 1e38. Then there were 11 countica proclaincd in Ireisind, and 7 countles nader the peace preservation act. It was maid that the organization of tha Catholic associatlon would inflame the peasantry gtili more, but what was the fact? ilefore 9 anontis after its farmation all these counties were quiet, and the stroug incasnres of gnvernment were withdrawn. The truth was, a wtrong government in Ireiand was always productive of Whateboyism or Whitefootlimm, while the hope of constitutiottal redruss always efferted the mnat perfect tranquillty. (liear.) A crisis piuniar to that of 1828 had now arrived. The people were prevented frinn expressing thelr grievaneca opwnly, peaceably and ennstitutionally, they were in despair of good goternment, and unles: the Irish volunteers immeniatrly beatirred the inselves and took the peace of the country under their own protection, and kaved the people from despair, he feared that instead of three counties in a etate of nightly invurrection, (Mr. O'tonnell was not, th appeare, aware of the state of the county of Wexford), there would next werk be 12 countion in the same alarming state. (Ifear.)
Mr. Steel, whn frlt prnud to call humelf "Mr. (1)'Connell's principal parificaton:"*offerpd to go to etither L.outh or Tipperary, or wherever the liberator ptrased, to exhort the people to prace, as the only means of saviug the country from martial law, aud promntine the measure of repeal.
Mr. O'Conacll aceeptel the offer, and it is understood that he will start to morrow for either louth or Tipperary.
Letters were read from the foliowing nemberi of parliament, promising to attend the national councul, vis: O'Coaor Don, G.
5. Barry, R. M. Bellew, Fitzstephen Prench, W. J. O. N. Daunt and Nichoins Fitzimon; and from the following decituing: sut T. Gladmtone, Mervin Aichdautt, F'. Jones and N. A. Vigors.

Mr. O'donnell made lomorous expose of Mr. Blake Foster's conduet at a former Galway elechon. Thiree catndadates liad started, atd Illake Foiter sotd all lis 40s. frecholders to rach? "When 1," kaid Mr. O'Connell, "taxed him with this, he allmitted the charge, but declared that it only proved lis impartialty; for he had, after making his own hargain), allowed each of his freeholders to sell themaelves to any of the randidates as high as they could." In conclusion M1r. O'Connell undertonk on this day, "afier mass," to prepare an address to the peasantry on this day, "aller mass," to prepare an address, or the peasantry of Ireland, beseching them to keep the peace, or their country of Ireland, besecching themi to never would become a nation.

From the Dublin Fiening Mail, of Januery I6. Begiments are arriving daily at meveral of our ports, with a hope, on the part of our misguided rulers, that therr appearance will operate sa a check upou the rebellious manifentations which are masuming on fixed and formidible all apprarapes. Nothing calt be more preponterous than such a hope. "Tlie people," as they are called, sneer at the military displays of the marquis of Anare calicd, sneer at glesea, and Iaugh outright at his sham fights and stage spectaglesea, Already have the priests commenced regular approachies towards the soldiery, through the columus of their acknowkedged journal is the south of Ireland, which contaius the following concillatory paragraph, presenting, as the Reginter uf this day says, a "very mational view of the subject." It ways-
"We would like to have the troups liere, by all meang-the majority of them are our ourn cownerymen-and thry would ypend nmong us mome of the taxes which are raised from our sweat and industry."

There is no mistaking tha meaning of this patriotic appeal to the national prejudices of such of the soldiers as may happien to be Jrish. Whether the bait gaks or no, just depends upon the number of Papists that each regiment may conthin, or the quantum of inflnence that the privels may be permitted to ex. ercise. If they he treated with the same deference at mulitary head-quarters ibat they receive at those of the ctivic authoritic: -at the cratie of Dubilis, the worst consequences misy be apprehended.
In fict, there is but one course now apen to any government -whig or tory-a suspension of the habeas corpas apt, the proelamation of martial law, and the arming and callugg out the Protestant yeormanry Dublin, Jan. 13.-The account from the country are terrific; and those countles which huve been butherto tranquil, are now and seene of the amme system of outrsges whiph have lately the seene of the mame systemn of outrsges whinit have tately characterised the more soathern parts of Ireland. A novel addition to the catalogue deservea to be naticed. The tenantry have kysternstically commenced refu*ing to pay rent except to the landlords in pervon. The avowed object of this is to compelt the return of the abmentece; but the consequeners are ob vioun. A privy eonncil was held at the cartle yesterday, but I have not heard the result.

state of incland.

The search for armv, and the maduiglit marches in the comties of Louth and Kilkenny, are going on with the shine rcek Iess deternination on the part of the unfirtunate pensantry. In the former county they pall themsolves Rilsandmen, and seem intent on mose serious and extensive work than their brethren in Kilkenny are ocpupled with. When they enter houses their principal lusiners in to ebtain arms; hut the Kilkenny "Reguia tors," as the Whitefeet sotnetimes eall themselves, are alan oe cupied in dictating terms to fandlogd, teuant, cmployer and la borer. The nightly asaemblies in the county of Louth are composed of multitudes, notwithstanding the inclement seasoas of the year.

In the county of Kilkenny the lipt of outrages contiuues undimiluistied, fither by the presence of an increased constabalary Force or the apporach of cavalry. Details of attacks on 12 houses are given betwren the Th and 13 th Jan. Inclasive, in various patts of the country. In these visits the Whitefect sevarely beat and wounded thrce of the lismates, houghed two cows and a horse, and burnce some stacks of wheat and out offices. Sinme wheal nud hread were also carried off from a mill and a bakery. On Thureday night tu-tween 800 and 300 men assembled in $n$ field near the village of Pantetown and epent some hours in military manoruvres, without committing any ac. tual minchief.

In the county of Cork, on Thuraday night, four cows were boughed, and shrepr killed and carried off; 100 police have with. in these three dsys beea adtlod to the conitabulary there.

The neightorhond of Ballina also dixplays a Whitefoot spirit. On Finday the mills of Grorge Irwin, of Gouran, were entered, and the machinery destrnyed, and his brother John wan severely benten. The mifiter had voted for the present conservative members. The house of Mr. Studdart, of Dulcastlo, In that nejghborhond, was aleo robbed of fire arms on the sanic night. RISH NATIONAL COENCH.
O'Connell's astional councit met at Dubilin Jan. 17. Twen-ty-nlue Irlsh menibern of parliament were preaent, incloding four by the namie of $\mathrm{O}^{\circ}$ Connell. The hon- col, Butler, M. P . for the county of Rllisenny was called to the chair.

Mr. Thomas Steale attended as Mr. O'Connell's private steretary, and Mauriee (')'Connell, M. P. acted as secretary of meeting. At 12 o $^{*}$ elock Mr. Staunton wat called before the council, and infurmed the chairman that he fad undertaken to subanit to Urem some financial information on the following aubjects, viz: on the prrbent amount of the Irish funded debts; ии the consolidation of the exehequers, and on the effects of that consohida. Hon; on the burdens endured by Iruland; also the progress of reveuue in Ireland since the union.

He then entered into a long financial dntail on these subjeets, on which ha was interrupted by Mr. O'Connell, who requested that he would have the goodness to get his information printed, as it was impossible to follow hin in converwation. Mr. Stauston, however, continued his statement at great leugth, the priscipal points of him expose have already been printed to the Morang Reginter, (about three monthe pluce), on a motion paseed by the natioana politieal union. One of bis positions was that the consolidation of the exchequers was illegal (vide aet of union); anotier was that $£ 2,000,000$ clear surplus were due to Ireland, on a balance of account with Finglaud; another, that all Irifl expenses were paid out of Insh taxes; and, lassly, that lrish revenues had improved from lige to 1200 , and deelined diace to ledy. The thanks of the counch were then gaveu to Mr. Statunton for hid conumunication, and he nodertook to print his rtatement for the use of the Irish nuembers.
The courention was expected to continue for several days. On the 19 h , the latter part of the dny was chiefly occupted with the discusxion of four remolutions on the abolition of tithes, which had bren previnuily agreed on at Loudon last session, by a mestiue of 1uth menslors, viz: "That it is essential to the people of Eingland that the system of tithes in that country should be extiuguished, not in name only, but in substance and realuty."

From the Dublin Evening Pout.

"There is a "suppressed insurrection" in evrry county, and nunost in every parish, not a day, not a ofagle day, passes over our heads without receiving an account of a murder, or of an outrage of wame kind or other. There is no wafety. The very roots of the comaunity are foosened. The frame of society tis almost poing to pieces. The constabulary, when not actanally mischicvous, as in the horntle case at Kanturk, have become powerless, and the tronps of the line, the only force upon whose prudence and devotion confidence can he placed, are harrassed to death by the inglorious duty they are oblized to perform. It is also quite notorious that plundering for arms is not confined to one district, or county, or province, but that the system has pread in aft directoons, from Dublin to Cork, to Limeriek, to Wraterford, and even to Galway. There is no safety for life or property in twenty counties out of the thitity-two. And here we may exemplify this state of things by an incident which oocurred on Sunday, in the broad day-light, near Slaannon harbour. The canal boat from Ballinasloe was stopped, the insurgente having previously ancertained that it contained fourteen stand of arms betonging to the water guard; a party, well armed, entered, smashed through the cabins, placed the eimmander of the boat under arrest, with two bayonets at his bomom, and posspssed thempelves of the arbis. This oreurred, we are assured by a gentlenan who was preaent, within a quatter of a mille of the police station."

PENNSYLVANIA LAFGISL,ATURE.
Harrisburg, March i2. At 12 n'elock the two houses met in convention, for the purpose of again attempting to eiect an Unted Btatea wenator, in the pisce of George M. Daltas. One ballot only was taken, of which the fillowing in the reanit:8anuel McKean, 46; Richard Rush, 39; John Sergeant, 17; H. A. Mublenburg, 16; Walter C. Livingston, 7; Gearge M. Dalhas, 3 .
Mr. Brack then moved that the conventina adjourn, sine die. Meror. Mitler and Larock allempted to speak upon the queation of adjoarnment; but the prewident (Mr. Burden), decided the quention not debateable. Mr. Maller apprated from the decision of the ehair. Upon tis quention a long and animated debath arove, in which Messra. Millep, Lacock, Breek, Packer, Wal her, Lewis, and Read, took part. Mr. Lacoek, in the cnurme of his remarke, took a wide range, and spoke upon the propriety of adjournanent, when Mr. Burden called him to order, and wished him to coufiae himself to the question. Mr. L. defied the power of the president-said be had no right to call him to order, and that the prealdent couid enfirce no mie which the ronvention tiseff had sot estabfished. Mr. Burden said he should aitempt it-Mr. L.. "come on;" but the altercation stopped amid cries of "order," "order," and Mr. Lacock sat down.

Mr. Packer then suggented to the senators the propriety of withdrawing te diseuss the question in their own chamber; but the proposition was not favurably receved, and order having been established, the convention adjourned to meeet agnin this day three weeks, (Aprii 2d.) The convention refued to runtain the declsion of the chair, on the question whether a motiun to adjuurn was debateable, by a vote 97 to 97.

Dear sin: The eonvention of the state was re-asssembled to-day, at noon. The president called the assembly to order, preciscly at that hour; the rev. Mr. Ware (a member) officisting as chaplain.
The roll being called, 137 nembers appeared to be in their filaecs.

Mr. Turnbull rose, to tender the excuse of a venerable friend for his absenee. If it lasl been possilile, he said, for the strong wishen of the heart to trimmph over the wishes of the body, his friend woulll have been in his seat on this floor. He hal begged, however, to say, that in spirit, in sympalhy with the high motives, that direoted their aeto-in the full confilence which be gave to their course, in all that the publie necessities might demamphe was with them still; and would gladly, if the forms of such an assembly permitted it, ask jermission to recond, upon their journals, his concurrence in all that the spirit, which lie knew direeted that body, conld lead them to Ilo. The name of his friend, Mr. T. said, was James Ilamilton, seri.

The preaident then adidressed the convention in a speceh explaining the motives of his re-assembling them. It was as follow :

Gentemen-In exersi-ing the power of ealling you together, which you were pleaseal io place in my tisate at your adjournment, I have regretted the inconvenience to whichi I muat have muljected many of you in being compelled to leave your hoines at a seawon so esswatial to the success of the agricultural labors of the whole year. It mast linwever have been manifest to you from the nature of the proceedings of this body at its former meeting, that its reassembling after the adjourument of congress, was an event of highly probable nceurence. Before however this necessity was ilemonstrated, I was offieially apprised by the governor of South Carolina, on the 5th Feb. of the arrival of a commisuioner on the part of the state of Virginia, hearing certain resolntions adopted by the general assembly of that state, reancelfilly soliciting of this state, a suspension or resciading of the owlinatuce of her convention until the adjournment of the mext session of congress. These resolntions were accompanied by an appliention on the part of the gentleman in this commission that this convention showlil be convened at an carly moment. The high sonrce from which this mediation emanated, the friendly dispositions by which it was obviously dictated, horne too, and adrocated hy a gentleman so long and so advantageously known among the most able and devoted champions of the rights of the statea, left me by what I was quite sure wonld be your own decision, no other altcrnative fif my own inclinations had been wanting) than a compliance with the wishes of that distinguished commonuealth as communicuted by her representative. As I was however profectly satisfied that no decision on the propositions of which he was the bearer could be made prior to the adjournment of eongress, the period of your asserubling has been arranged to meet both contingencies.

You hare thms assembled, gentlemen, and the proposed mediation of Virginia is met conenrrently by the passage of an act by the eongress of the United States, modifying the tariff of the 14th of July laet, and by an act entitled "sin act more effectually to provide for the exceution of the revenue laws,"

In bringing both thene lawa to your view, and invoking your matnre consideration of their provisions anil objects, it woull not beeome me to make any suggentionsas to the course it behover you to parsuc in refereuce to these mensures. If the first is not in all respects satisfactory, as coming up to that measure of justice, to which the south had a fair claim, and is liable to some important objections, it nevertheless, provides for the commencement of an early though gradual amelioration of that system, against which we have so long compluitsed, and for an ulterior reeognition of the constitutional prineiples upon which our rights are assumed to rest. In forming your estimate, however, of whatever may be its intriusic vnlue, yon will not be insensible to the fact, that it is a conipromise of extreme vexatious and eonflicting interests made in the spirit of peace, as an officring to the coneord anal tranquillity of our eommon country. In such a spirit our representatives in congress voted for it, and in such a spirit must we consider it whatever may be our final deelsion on the measure. This adjustment, however, comes to us, at least with this compensation for the justiee which it yet withiolds-thint all that has been beneficiall. .ecomplishell by it for the country, is to be attributed to the aetion of this convention, and the energy, decision, and love of liberty, of that people, by whom our proceedings have been sustained. We may surely say this without any unworlly vaunting, when the most able of our opponents has borne testimony to the turth of this finct.
It is greatly to be rugretted, with $n$ single view to the harmony nnd repose of the country, that this adjustment shmuld be aceompanied by the other measure to which 1 have invited your attention.
If we eould regarl the act, which prosides by its title, "for a niore effeetual execution of the revenue law s," hut which, in finct, provides for the enercion of a sovereign state in this union, as an empty defiance got up as a mere salvo for the wounded pride, or to gratify a worse passion of the executive, we might permit it silemty to pass by, with that reprobation with which, not posterity alone, but at an early moment, a contemporary nge, will visit it, standing impotently, ns it will stand a dead letter on our statute book; but an a mere precedent cagrafted on our laws, it is of ine most serious and portentous import, furnislang, as it does, the most unequivecal evidence, that as far as the authority of Inw extends (independently, thanks be to God, of the spirit of a free people) by a single act of legislation, the charracter of our goverument is changcd and a military despotism placell at the disposal of the executive, when he slall determine in his own diseretion, tint a fit exigency has arisen for its exercise. The broad usurpation in this law of the right on the part of congress to cocrce a sovercign atate in this union, when this power Was solemnly withheld by the conrention, that format the coustitution, the utter anniliantion of our judiciary in cases elearly within their exclusive juriadiction, nad the still more revoling eireumstance that in oberging the lnws of their own state, and executing the inaniftes of their own courts, the lives of our citizens are placed at the mercy of the standing forces of the union, all eoneur to present an epoch in the public liberty of the country, which ought not to be allowed to pass withont your anii mallecrion. And y ou will permit me further to remark, uhether the atjinstment of the tariff be decmed satisfactory or not, that much remnins for you to do, in making of constitutioual record in an enduring form those great conservative principles, which have borne us jet through this contest, to say nothing of the necessity of providing those seenrities which may in all future time, command the fualty and obedience, of those who receive the protection of our laws,
You will now I trust, allow me to refer to a matter which is personal to myself. The distinguished station I now occupy, I owe to the aecidental circumstance of my having beent the chief magistrate of this state, when the convention first assembled.
Another individual now on this floor fills that post. I feel that I am not alone paying a proper deference to an established and valuable precedent, but a just hormage to superior personal claims and more eminent qualifications, when I signify in the presence of this eonvention, that it is my mirpose, after the reading of the cerrespondence I now communieate, between the commissioner from Virginia and the public authoritics of this state, to resign this seat.
In making this declaration, permit me to superadd to it my unfeignell acknowledgments for your past kindncss and enufidence, and my fervint prayer, thint the God of all merry and iruth may so order and goverv our proceeding, that they may redound to the liberty, peace and happinens of our country.
The clerk then read the correspondence of the governor and president of the convention, with the eommissioner on the part of Virginia.

A further conmunication from the governor was also submitted, which conveys a communication from the Virginia cominissioner, which will be sent.
According to the intinuation given in his speech, the president then requested the convention to regard the chnir as vacatenl, by lis resiguation; and to proceed to ballot for a presinlent.
The billot was neeordingly made, and governor Hayme elected who, being eouflucted to the clair, liy judge Johnston, and col. Thomas Pinekney, addressed the aesembly in a short and unadoried speech of thanks.
On motion of gen. Hamilton, a seat within the bar of the house was assigned to the Virginia commilasioner. He was introduced by Messrs. Heywnid, Earle and 1On, the assembly receiring him uncovered and standing.
On motion of col. 10 m , seats were also assigned to such of our members of congress and of the legislature, as may be present.
Junge Coleock, for the purpose of the speedier despatelt of the business before the convention, noved that a general committee of twenty-one be aypointed to which the suljeets placed before them, by the president's spereh. slould be referred. The motion was adopted.
The committee is the same as was that of the former sitting, except only that four other gentiemen will be substituted, for gen. Hayne, col. Manniug, Mr. Robert Barnwell, and Mr. Middleton; the latter three of whom are absent.
Juilge Hinper moved the printing of the docaments submitied by the president of the conrention. It was ordered.
The convention then adjourned to 10 'cloek to-morrow.
Twesday, March 124i, 1833. The hon. C. J. Coloock, from a select cumpuittee of twenty, nne, reportid to the convention an ordinance and na accompanying repoit, on the subject of the aet of the late cobsress of the United Etates, entitled "an act to madify the eft of the 14th July, 1&゙2, and all other acta inposing dutices on impotis."

The committee th whom was referreal the communication of the Inonossite B. W. Leigh, commassioner fromy the state of Virginia, and all other maiters connected with the subject, and the course which khould be pursued by the ennvention at the present important crisis of our political affairs, beg leave to "pport, in part,
That tury have had under consideration the act passed at the late sessinn of cougress in moslify the "act of the luth of Juity, 1872, and all other acta iniposing duties upon haporis;" and have duly deliberated on the course which it brcontes the people of soush Carotina to phrsue at this interesting crisis in our political affairs. It ls now upwards of ten yesrs since the people and constituted autionties of this state, took ground againut the profectice system, ns "uncoustuluional, opprestive, nud unjuat," and solemnily declsred, in language which was then cordially respondeil th by the othersonthernsiates, that it never coutd be mubnitted to "gs the sentied palicy of the country." Anter remonstrating for veers against this system in vnin, and making every poesible rffors in produce a redrese of this grievauce hy invoking the protectinn of the constitution, and by appeating to the justice of our brethrrit, we saw during the ression of congress, which ended in July last, a moditicauon effected avowedIy as ihe final adjustment of the tariff, to take effect after che connplete extingulshmeut of the public debt, by which the protoctive symtem conid only be considered as rivetted upon the country furever. Belleving that, under these eircumstances, there wha no bope of any furtber redurtion of the dutica froma the ordinary action of the fideral governaieats nid convinced that under the operation of this sywtem the labor and capital of the plantatinn statem must be forever tributinry to the mantafraciuring statea; nad ibat we should in eflicet be reduced to a conditoon of eolosinl vassalage, Suuth Carolinn felt herself constrained, by in just regard fir her own rights and interesta, by her love of liberty and her devotion to the constitution, to inferepose In her sovereign capacisy for the purpose of arresting the progress of the evis, and nuaintaitsing, within her own limits, the authnities, righta, and hberties appertainiug to lier as sove. reign slate, Ardently attached to the union of the stater, the people of Bouth Carnlina wrore still more devnted to the righta of the stules, withonll which the uninn itspif would cease to be t blearing; and well convincrd that the reguintion of the whole Iabor and capitat of this vait eanfederacy by a great central goVernment fisint lead inevitably to the toial destruction of our free institutions, thry did nnt bewitate to throw themselves fearlessly into the brrach, in arsest the tnr rent of usurpation, which was sweeping before it all thnt was truly valuable in our political systen.
The effect of this interposition, If it has not equalifed our whises, has been beyond what existing elrcumstances wousid have authorised un to expect. The spectacle of a single state, unnided nnd aloue, slanding up for her rightis-influenced by no other motive than $n$ sincers depire to manintaln the public liberty and bring about a salutary reform in the admiatstration of the foversaneut, has roused the attention of the whole country, ann has eaused many to pause and reflect, who bave heretofure seemed madly beut on itie consunimation of a seltrime of policy absofuteiy fatal to the hberty of the people, and the prosperity of a targe portion of the union-limugh reviled and slanilered by those whoee pecunaty or political mitereats sfond in the way of a sausfactury ndjustincut De the controversy-demerted hy many to whom she had a right to bosk Inr succeur and support, and threatened with vitneuce from abroad, and eouvulsions within, Bouth Caroina, cotiscious ot the rectitude of for intelitimus and the justice of lier cause, has stond ummoved; frmily resolved to maintain ber libertues, or perish in the confict. The result has been a beaticial modification of the tariff of 1832 , and even before the tume appointed for that act to go into effect; and within a few thonths aitrrits enactment, aceonupanicd by a provirion for a gradual reduction of the duties to the revenue stindard. T'linugh the reduction provided for by the bill, which lias just been nawserl, 2, neither in its ansohnt or the titue when it is to gnimio effect, such as the south had a right to requirc; yet such an approach bas been made tnwards then trise pritueiples on which the dintiem
 Be of South Carolina are wiling, fo far to yivid to the ineaoure, as to agree that their ordinanee shall heuceforth be constdered as having no force or eflect. Untgual and oppressive as the -ysteu of ralaing revenue hy dutire upoo inponta nmat lic upon the agricultural states, which furtinh more than two thirds of the domentic exports of the Unlted Spites; yet South Carolina al. way* las bren, and atill is willing to make farge sacrifices to the peace and harmony of the union. Though slie beilevee that the protecting system is founded in the assumptimn of puwers not granted by the ennstitution to the federai gozernment, yet she bas never inslsted on such an immediate reduction of the dutice ss should involve the manulacturers in ruin.

That a redyction to the loweet amount necessary to pupply the wants of the governmpnt mught be wafely effected in fiour or five years, caniot, iti our eftimation, adnait of a reasnnalise drouht; still, in a great struggle for principlet, South Carmlish would dtsdiein to cavil about a smaif amount of duties, and a few ycars more or less io effecting the adjustment, provided nity shir can serure substantial justice, and obtain a distinst recoguition of the principle for wlich slie has wo Iong coutended. Aruong the provisions of the new hill, which recrummend it to our scceptence, is the establishment of a sytcm of ad valorem duties; and the entire abandonment of the apecife duties, and the mindsoums. Tyrannical provisions, by which duties, rated nominal. ly at twenty five per cent. were in many casem rated to up wards of one innaired per crist. And by which the eoarae and cheap articies, uned by the poor, wore taxed unch higher than the cspencive artieh's used by the rich: an unjost and othmus recuiatioo, againat which we have constantly protested in the most earnest terme. The reduction before the expiratinn of the present year of ma-tentin part of the dutios on nil articlean "es ceeding iwenty juer cent. on the value therenf," cmbracing the entire mase of protected articles, and a gradual rednctum, thereafter, on such articlez, down to itwenty fer cent. the dutien npon which under the tariff of 1832, range froan thirty to upwards of one hundred per cent. and average mpwarile of tifty per cent. are great and manifest amplioratimus of the aystem to the benuSto of which we camuot be Insenpible. But, great as tuust be the advastage of these nductinns, they are sriall in comparionn with the distinct recognition, in the new hill, of two great priuciples, which we deem of inestimabie saiue-that the duties shat il ceratually ie brought down to the revenve atandard-cven if it slisil be found neecssary to rrduce the duties on the protected articles helow twenty per cent. and that ito nure monicy shal be raised than shall be necessary to ant economieal administrasion of the governinent.

These provisions embody the great princlplee In reference to tbis walject for which Routh Carnlina lias oo Inng and so earseatly contended; and if the pledge therein eontained shall be fulfilled in good faith, they muint, in their operntions, arreot the aboses which have grown out of the unanthorised apprupriations of the publie money. We should consider the raluction of the revenue to the amount "neceamary to the econotnical administration of the governinent," as one of the happiest reforms Which eould posstbly tate place in the practical operation of our aystem; as it wonld arrest the progress of corruptinn, limit the axcrcise of executive patronage and power, restore the in dependence of the states, and put an end to all these qutsxtunk of diaputed power, against which we have colf*tanlly protpsted. It is thia aspect of the question whieh has reennciled us to the provisiuns of the new hill, (certainly not free from nbjections), wbieh provide for the Introdvction of IInens, silks, worsted and number of other articles, free of duly. T'lie reduction of rete cenue which will thereby ine efferted, anal the benpficial iufluence of a free trade, In meveral of thewe artitles, whichare almnat exelusively parchased by the asricultural staples of the outhernsutes, and which will firnlsh an advantagouse eschanze for these productions, to the amount of several millions of dollars annually, are considerations not to be overionked. Nor can we be inweinilile to the bencfits to be derived from the anited efforts of the whole sogath, aided by other states having interents identifis-d with our own in hrhagine about the late asjonstment of the tarit, promising, jve trust, far the future, that union of sentimeot, and concert in action, which are neeessary to secure the rights and interess of the onuthern staten. On the whole, in whataver appect the question is contemplaled, yonr comantise And in the late modification of the tarif cause for eongratulation and triumph. If we have not yet succeeded in the complete establishnent of the great paiociples of free uade and constitutional thberty, such progress diss been made fowarda the accsumplishmenil of the foriner, as must serve to rekindle our hopucs, and lagexcite on tu Iresh ratertions in the giorious work of retorn in which we are chgaged. Influrnced by these views, the evnumitued is satiofird thit it would tont cmuport with the Itopral lecilngin of tie people of south Caronina, nor be consistemt with the pincere desire by whicls they liave always been aninated, not only to I ve iu trarmony with their brethren, but to preserve the unton of the statew, cnuhi they buatate, inder exishing circuenstance, in rowommonalius that the ofslinance of nitifificatinn, and the acts of the logistature cunseque nt thereon, be henceforth lielid and deenued of uo liorce and eflect. And liey recommend the following

ORDINANCE:
Whereas, the congress of the Ubited States, by an act recentiy paseed, late thadrench a reduction and modification of the duties njuin foreign imports as amount substantaully to an ulthmate reductinn of the duties to the sevenue standard; and that to lugher dutucs shall he laid than may bg necessury to defray the economical espenditutew of the governinent-
It is therefore ordained and dcclared, 'That the ordinance entitled "an ordinanee to nullify certain acts of the eongress of the Uniled states, purpotung to be lawa laylng duties un the importation of furcigh commoodities," and nil acts passent in parsuanee thercof, be inenceforth deremed sud freld to have no lorce or effect; proviled that the aet entitled "an act further to altyr and amend the mifitia in w's of this state," jassed on the 20th day of December, J&22, shail runain in fuil force until It shail be repealed of momified by the legishature.

Col. Wilam, alter a few explanatory remarks, introdueed the bllowing resalntion, to wit:
Resolred, That a committe be appointed to wait on our senaturs and representatives lately in congress, and now in the towil of Colutubia, to give us genuine information relative to the late procepdiugn of the federal govermmeot towarda South Carolina, in consiquruce of the ordinance nf nullifieation, passeil by the preople uf thim atate, in convention, iu November last; and that the comnitue report what arrangenents miny be mada as to the mawner and time of giving the information desired.

On miotinn of judge Coleock, the resolution was ordered to lie on the table.
After a short interval, eol. Wilson moved to take it ap for immediate eon*ideration.
Gien. ilamitton moved to posipone it until to morrow.
After woine slight debate, the vote was take on the question of posiponement, anil the motion failed-ayes 66, nnea 69.

The resolution was then adopted, and col. Wilsoo, general Hanniton and chancellor Johuston, were appointed the committee.

Col. Wilson then Introdiaced the following reeointions, to witt

On inntion of col. Elmore, the convention adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The Columbia correppondent nf tha Chartenton Mercary says: Nrither Clay's nor Wilkins' hill has yet reached the greater nart of the members in Ite fual form. With the former, there in a discontent, among some few, ainounting to thorough repagnance. These are uttras, of course.
As to Wilkins' iniquity, it excites an anmingled indirnation. I have litile dount that it will be nullified. If it lo not, the doeIrine of nullifleation may be considered as ahandoned.
I am elad to perceive a gencral and most liearty horror of the conduct of Blair, Miteineil and Drayton, upon this detentable bill. They are regarded as ultra parrieides.

Oor members all ngree that the paasage of Clay's bill was looked upon on all siden, ai the rffect of nullification alone. The

THE "GI.ORIF,N" OF SOUTH CAROTINA.
From the Columbia Telesrope, March 12, IES3.
The convention of South Cnrolinal ha onec more assembled. Expectation will be etrongly fixed upin its proceedings. We will endeavor to say what they are like to be.

The convention will accede to the present arrangement of the tariff, by Mr. Clay's bill. The atate liesle that the present ndjuatment is less than was due. But she will not, for the dogree by wo incans impurtant, in which the bill falls sthurt of a periectIy fair settemsnt, dinturb the peace nf the confrideracy.
The adjustmeth, Interif, is one, at which all men minst feel bound to rojoies, white it is imponsilite tor be contented with It. Yel it is much hs have been gained, hit a single effert, and againat ath reat odds. Never way there in poonder linstance of the might of just principlew, backrd by a lugh courage. This little state, In the mere panoply of eomrage and hizh pincipled, has forted the swaggering yiant of the uniom. 34,000 Caralinians tinve nut only awed the wild west into respret,-comprilled Penneylvania stolidity into komelbine lite sensen-New York corruption into mothething like diceency-Yankee rapacity tuto a *ort of image of fomeaty; but all this las bien lofily and steadiIy done, in the face of 17,000 -what thall we call them? What epithet in of a sharae wile, lawtime and derp ennugh, for the leetrayers of the litwerties of their own conntry-the inetigatora of merciless sinughter-the contrivers of urretrievable servithde, against their own struggling state?
The tiriff, then, it overthroan; the corrupt majorities in con greas Aare idelded. The mudnese of the gorcinment has, nt last, found a stipht lucid intoresl. It is an interval only. For, es if found a alight hocid intorpsl. It is an tuterval only. For, as if in the mere wantunness of fally, they have jained to the concerkion, thus arranz from them by mere fear and interest, a votura act, eapabie in its cousequences of utterly defeating tire comprombe, at which they gra~p.
We poeak of Wilkns' bill; the "bloody bill;" which they have passed, we belteve, ia mere bravado-only to eover the phame of their drfeat. They may fint it, trownver, in the hands of the ehief of this atrocious administration, thal lise mere brutem ful. men that it wno intended to be.

Whether ar not he seize at once npon the dangerous powers of this act, nad brandi-h them. to drive this state inin a montlict, it is quite certain that the Bloody sill will not he suhmitted to by this afatc. The convention, we make wo doubt, will nultify it. Such fereme distinctly the puhlice view.
We have as little iloubt, too, that the state, taught by the refent events, will adopt an oath of paramonnt allegiance to her antburiues. Tbis whole eontest, indeed, has been nothing else thnn one of allegiance. If we ever monsurt ngain to place our aelves in the same duficiste, in any future stringele with the genneral zoverninent, we slabll hamost deserve that lose of liteorty, whieh hat an urarly boen the frgit of onr pant omisxion of that which nor civilized state ever yet milted, that had heen vislted, (as all states tuust suonter or later br), by a domestic contest for iberty.
The Iegialature will probably have to aksemble, in order to repeal suct of lis late laws an are founded on the ordinance of the $24 t \mathrm{t}$ November. It may aleo have to ponvide statutes for carrying intu effect acts of the preacent sitting of the convention.

It would srem as well. since "four father gen, Jackson' appears detetmined to athacie ns, that he shontd begin to think of - the who, and the luw, and the where and the when. Let tusee. He has 700 nurn, (all told), in the Charleston fort:. At Aughena, he has Jut tede.
While the lidianin threatron the north western frontier, howe many more men, of the pron'int ariny con be sent aguind us? Onr information in string and elear, thut he cannot add 300 to the troops upon onr thorders.

DEBATE ON THE: LAND BHLL.
GENATE-MOVDAY, JaM. 7, ikts.
The question being on the atmendaent reported by the eommittee on pulilic latids to the bill thappropriate for as limited tane the prowedx of the public lande, &e.
Mr. Clay tose and ytated, that he hat a few observations to make tu the sethate before the question wins taken. Tite sentutor Irom Illmass liad, it the commencenicmi of his remarky, totid the senate thut it was not neressany to orenpy their nttention loug, and low (Mr. C.) eomrurred in a similar theclaration on bis part. The bill lind undergone an anyule disen*ion at the laxt efssion; there had becon but a shgit change sume that time In the consiruction of thas bouls; and it would be urnucersary agnin tig govers the whole gronthi of argument, whets liad once and yo recently been empleyed. The: bill which he hal introdueved at the pro sent session, and wiluch had beft keut to the committer on pubIne tandx, was identically the bill whirh bad alreatly mence parsed this Inofy, and the gronnds being the name, it wontil bat lne neeeneary to eonsthe mieli than lit the observations be fett himself cnlled upin th makp. Ife wontd, howevir, avail Idmself ot the Blportunty to offir a few gencral olservationc, whth a view to a eomparison of the bill wibich he hat introduced, with the amentmetut if the combititiee on the public lands.
In the first place be wonld descritie the bill wlich he had brought forward,
By than bill it was propoxed to ect apart for the henefit of the new states twilve anil a hall per cent. oit of the agerezate penreeds, in nddition th the five percent. which wan allowed to them by cumpact, liefore muy division tork place sinong the statea generalby. It was this proposell in asuign, in the first place, su ventem an! a lialf percent. to the new rhates, and then ta divide the whole of the resibiuc amons the fwenty fonr klatee. And, in order to do away anv inetpality among the now states, grants are upecifically made by the bill tin thoue which load nos from the general gos rurment, so as to put all the new states on an expual footing. This twelve and a half per cent. to the new stater, in be at their dispnanal, for either education or internal impenvement, and-the residne to be at the dispersition of the states, suliject to no other limitation than this, that it eball be at thar opution to apply the anooumt received elther to the purposes of enluratuon, or the colonization of free penple of colar, of for internal improvements, or in dehta which may have been contracted for internal improvements. And with rexpect to the duration of this selieme of distriluition proposed by the lull, it is limited to Ave years, unless hostilitios shall occur between the Cirturd States and any foreign power; in which event the proceede to be applied to the carrying on of shch war with vigor and effect against any common enemy with whom we may be brought in contact. After tise conclurion of peace, and after the discharge of the debt created by any such war, the aggreagate funds to return tu thai peaceful degunation to wheh it was the intention of the bill that they should now be directed, that ts, to the iutprovement of the moral and plysical coaditimin of the country and the pronsotion of the puble bapphicsa and prosperity.

Such are the general features of the bill, which was reported by the comiutitee on maaufactures, under circumstances to which he would not now advert, at the laxt session, ald was passed; and which was introduced by bin again at the present seenton, had been referred to the committec on putbic lands, and reported by that committee, with the ausendueut now uinder consederation.
The firat remark which seemed to him to be called fir in reference to this subject, was, as to the expedsency, he would say the secessity, of its imonediate setulement. On this priut he was happy to believe that there was a unanimnua concurreace of opinion in that body. flowever they might differ as to the terms on which the distribution of these dands should be made, they all agreed that it was a question which ought to be prompty and finally, he boped amicably, allusted. No time more favorable than the present moment could be selected for the settlement of this question. The laxt session was much less favorable for the accomplishment of this object; and the resons were suficiently obvious, without any waste of time in their specification. If the queation were not now setted, but if is was to be maile the subject of an annual discusslon, mixing itself up with all the measures of legistation, it would be felt in its influence upon all, wonld produce great dismensions both in and out of the house, and affect extenaively all the grent and important objecte which might be before that body. "Tlury' had had in the several states some experience on that subject; and, without going into any details on the subject, he would therely otate that it was known, that for a long perind the emall amount of the public doinain possessed by motus of the states, in coinparison with the quantuty possessed by the general goverament had beea a cause of great agtitation in the public mind, and had greauly influenced the course of legistation. Persons coaning from the quarter of the state in which the public land was situated, united in sympathy and iaterkest, conatituted alwaye a body who acted tugether, to promote their common object, cither by donations to setuers or reduction in the price of the public laush, or the relief of those who are debtors for tha pablic domanis; and were always ready, as men always will be, to second all thome measures which look towarde the accomphishment of the maia object which they have ta view. So, if this qusstion were not now settled, it would be a source of inexpressible ditheulty hereafter, inflnencing all the great interests of the country in congress, affecting great events without, aad perhaps adding another to those unhappy caunes of divistou wheh unfortunateIy exist at this moment.

He was very happy to find in the meanage of the president, some reference made to the subjcet of the public lands; and especially an expresnion of the upinion that it was tuae this question should be put to rest. Ife wan also glad to see it asserted, from the same high authority, that congress had a full and uncontrolled power over the subject, to diapose of these Innds or their proceeds, for the common benefit of the whule country, according to ith sound discretion.
Next to the setilement of this great question, It was undoubtedIy of the first importance that it should be equitably reitleri, wo as to comprehend the interesta of all, and to show that those inter. Ants have not been loat sight of by the general governusent. And, he would akk, could any mode of setuling the question, so na to consult and protect the interests of all, be offered, which would be more worthy of the acceptaace of congress than that which was propowed by the bill of the last session, which had been sent to the commutce on publie lands. In dotermis. ing upon the merita of that bill, it would be necensary ia the course of the few remarks which he should feel himself called spon to make, to contrast it with the bill which had been teported by the committee on the puthic lauds, and to make sonse observations on the argoment In which the eenator from Illinois had advocated thint pian, in order to induce the senate in take it, in preference to the bill which had alrvady unce received thetr sanetion.
In the first place, the gentleman from Hhnois contended that the whole of the public lands were ceded to the general government for the purpose of paying the debt incurred in the prusecution of the revolutionary war-that this debt had now been pait-and that as the land had now performed its office, it onght to be set free from further claim on the part of the grneral government, and to follow the sovereignty of the difierent atatus in which they are located. And the gentleman frotn Iltinoin, in order to enforee his argument to the senate, appealed to the meseage of the president, t? show that sach alon was the view taken of the subject by the evecutive. Now he, (Mr. Clay), Selt hirnself constralaed to say that both the president and the rentleman from llinole had taken a much too limited view of the subject. All that portion of the public landa which lies beyond the river Misrissippt, and helow the state of Musisoippl, and all Fiorida-were they thus condtionally ceded? Were they ceded to the zeneral governinent for the pmipose of paying the revolutionary debt? Not they were purchased by the common treasure of the whole United States. But, wapposine that the proposstion of the gentleman from IHinols were conceded; that the deht lieing paid, the mortgage lifted, the ne lands ought to be applied to promote the Interesta of the new etatea alone in which they are located. Was thio a true history? Did the lands which were ceded hy the peveral statea pay the debt of the revolutiun? 'What whe the debt of the revointum? That debt amounted, prucipal and interent, to not less Uban 400 or ti:0 mithona of doilars; and the whole of the public lanls which had been mold, lind only produced about forty millions. The lands then had not paid the debt of the revolution. They had not performed their office. The debt liat beea paid by the pockets of the people, and not by the public landa, and to performi their office the thuds must repay this deft to the people. Ite, (Mr. Clay), would have no objectuon to adopt the prineiple of the gentleman from Hlinois, that the landa slomid be applied to the pasment of that debt so loug as any of it remanard unpald; and, aiterwards, to the riimhurrement of the porkets of the people of the unoney drawn fiom them, by taxes, to make up the deficiency of the publte lands. Ir the honorable gentleasan would apply his own pitneiple, he (Mr. Clay), would be satis. fied. If he had mortgaged his extate, and the mortgage was lined by a friend, he was bound to rcimburuc that friend. So, if the debt of the revolution, which the public lands are pledged in pay, was paid by the peopily, thry ought to receive back from the fands both the principal and interest. If the gentleman would bring forward a proposition to pay all the revolutionary debt out of the public lands, stunated on this wide of the Missussippi, and to relmburne the people to the anount which had been taken from their pockets, he (Mr. C.) would vote for the proporition; but that was सnbatantialty the objeet of the bitl which he hat introduced. The only difference was, that instead of keeping an account which would be complex in its character, and almost impracticable, a simple form was adopted, in the bifl, by providlug for the division of the funds among the people of the United States, upon the nost equitable of all principles, that of federal representation. With respect to that largest portion of the public domain, which was acquired by treaties, it could not be contended that it was incuubernt on the governmeat to appropriata auy part of that th the payinent of the debt of the revolution.
The zentleman from litinols hat said that the scheme which he, Mr. C. hat presented was extremtly fascinating, addressing ituelf powerfully to the shatca, and to every individual in the states. And was not the scheme of the honoralile senator atso rascinating: IDid It not address liself powerfully to thoae who occupy the public domain in the new states? The difference between $u$ is thls: he wonld, from that which was made by the deeds of cewslin, and the treatica of arquisition, the common property of all, take what remaina, and appropriate it for the cxclusive benefit of a few-he would take the property of the twenty four stater, and appropriate It for the benefit of the seven new states, and of such as may hereafter hernine mfinters of the union. Thi4, said Mr. C. Is a plan of lomad, librrat and comprelensive juwtice; white his is a narrow, partial and unjuat acheme of appropriation, looking to the interexts only of a part, and that, although a highly respectitble, in inconesderable pari of the whole.

But it was paid by the gentleman, that the new states were not on an equality with the old states; that they coulit exercise no authority over the public domain; that they could not take it for state prorposer; that they had not the power of taxing it; and, int khort, enjayed in benefit foun it whatever. Now he, Mr. C. took it, that the property of the United Ntatex, every where, was bryond the conutrol of the states in which it was shuated. Inad Peunsylvania any control over the milut or the arse nial, over any part of her terriory which alun had ceded to the United States; Hver the pulbue shipa, or over public property of any deacription, within ler limits? Had any state any control over the property of the C'nited States? The dhifrence, every where, was merely ona of extent of national propporty, and tuis dillicence exlathd among the new states, as well as betwren them and the old. (thio had only five millions of acre", for example, of public lansla within her limits; whle Missoun hat thirty elght mitions. Accordug to the doctrine of the gentlemen, they ought to have the right of eontrol uver this jurnperty, in order to phace thein on an equality. The Incquality of OLio atal Mosnuri as to the extent of lands, was as 5 to 38 , while, as to populatomn, the mequality stond as one milliun to 150, toon, for Chin nasin-t Mivanuri: the smalter number, haviug under this punciple, the contml over the areater extent of the pullic domain. That whel belonga to the general quvarmment is not sulject to state legiatiation. 'There were pome states in which thr libited Stat's held no property. In Keutucky there was no Vinted states priperty; white in the inacitime states there is murh of this property which is beyond the coatrol of the states. The gentleman from Ithmois, therefore, could derive no atrength to his argument from his ground as to the extent of the public domain. It should be recoilected that the time was coming, an it had almont already come in the utate of Ohio, when the public domain will be dizposed of, and then there will be a perfect equality, as indeen there is now between the states, in their rights and powers over whatevar may be in their respective limits.

The gentlenan from Hhnois hal asked, but withont dwelling tmeh upon the point, where was the power to make this divirion? He, Mr. C. whuld refor. hlm to an authority which, he believed, the lonomble senator wisuld be the last member on that floor to contrivert of depreciate-the authority of the president. He would also refer hith to the deeds of enssion; to the acts of congrewn; to the understanding of all inen; but especially he would refer him to hin own amendment, and the report of the committee on the public landa. What! had thev a right to give away the publlc lands by a partial and unjust distribution, and none to establish a broad and comprehenaive scale of ap.
propriation, doing justice to all portions of the Uuited Stateas But loe would not dwell on this part of the subject, which had been fully discussed duting the latt sesmion.
He would now beg leave to call the nttention of senatora to what was the present condition of the uew stater-what would be the eflect of the opurntion of thim bill upon them, and what would be the subsequent advantages which they would derive fruu its passage.

What whs the complaint of the new states at present' It wat that a vast amount of their money was drawn from their limits, to be expeuded in other portins of the union, to theit impoo: verishouent aud ruin. Continue the preacnt system, and the evil is perpectuated. The unnery of the west will stlll flow into eastern states, and still be expeuded there. But what would be the condstion of the new states, if the bill which had been otricken out by the committee were to pass? They would, in the first place, receive $15 \frac{1}{6}$ per cent. of the amount of the uroceeds of the sales of the lands. This 17 t per cent. was prohably equal to the amount annually paid lyy the rexident popolation of the uew status themselves, exclusive of what is paid by emigrants golug into the new statew. He derived this infereuce from a letter which was laid before the senste at the last res. sion, from which it appeared that the thirteen states of the union, in which there are no public latids, had increased only 17t per cent. within the ten yeara from 1820 to 1860 . If you give 17 per cent. to the new states, befure you divide the proceeds, it would be in proportion quite as great as the increase of their population, If it were not augmonted by emigration. Or, if there was no tide of emigration to the new states, and migrations from thetn similar to those which take place in other states, the amount which the people of the new states would expend in the purchase of the puhlic lands, would not probably be equal to more than the $17 \frac{1}{f}$ per cent. If, therefore, you glve thein 1 it per cent. before you give any thing to the other states all complaints on the score of the drain of money on public account, must be put an end to.
But this is not all. You not only give this it per cent. but after aswiguing this particular amount to their exclustve beneft, you then divide the residue of the procerds among the whole of the twenty-four states, including those which have already received the 17 per cent. This additional divinlend is about 16 or 17 per cent. more. Thus there would be a total amount payable to the new states equal to near one third of the entire aggregate derived from all the putbic lands of the United States, wherever situated. About one sixth of the population of the U. States, which the new states contatin, would receive near one-third of che whole amount of the proceeds of the public lands. Now, if this was done, would not the condition of these new states be zreatly bettered?
If the bill should pass, and the new ntates should thus acquire the amount to which they would be entitled accordiag to it provisions, they would not merely obtain the $17 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent. and by a participation in the residue of the fund, some Indemnity for pecuulary centributions made by the mi to the general goverument, but they would still enjoy their present proportiou of the expenditures of the general goverainent within their limite. There would still be large expenditures in the event of war, sa wan the case during the lasi year; and there would still be the annual dishursements tn Indoan agents, and on Indian anmuities, \&c. All theme would continue.

The gentleman fram Illinoss spoke of the new states as if he expressed the seutiments of all of them, and ns If their wants and wishes were ouly known to him, and his construction of them was the only one deserving of respect. Now, at the last session, when this bill was passed, the senators from the seven new states were equally divided on this nubject. There were, If he mistook not, two from Ohtio, two from Indiana, two from Louisiann, making six, and one from Mikajssippl, making exactly half of the representation in that body of the seven new states. Regardiug the subject in the lizht io which he did, that there would be, If things remained as they now are, no reflus of the money of the weat drawn from it by the federal governinent, and that large and loberal grants inf money were made to the new ntatea, by the provisions of this bill, it onght to be satisfactory th the most ambitions western heart. The senate wnuld recollect that according to a table presented at the last sespion, the new states liad increased at the rate of eighty five per cent. during the ten years from 1820 to 1830 , and that the atate of 11 Ilaois, during the same periord, had increased at the rate of one hundred and eighty five per cent. while many of the ofd otates bad Increased only at the rate of twenty five per cent. The average increase of thirteen, having nn public lands, was only oeverteen and about a half per cent. while aome had searcely any increase at all. The pettlement of the new states is already eufficiently rapitl; and any fresh impetus given to it would only be productive of minchief.
A strugele always taken place at first among the new settlers as to preponderance, and this struggte is in proportion to numsbers, and the varipty of the places of their origin. It reguires come time before the new settiers can beconie acquainted with each other, the Inws, cu-toms and habits, relisious and political, of the respective states and conntries from which they pmigrated. It smnetimes happens that the most opprobrious epithets are Interchanged, until they become well sequainted with each other, perceive the gond which each bring to the general gtock, and, becoming reconilied to their condition, proceed harmoniously in advancing their new setulements to the wilderness. If emigration were more rapid, there would be still mors of this spirit of diseord, and alf must agree that an increase in the ratio of eighty- five per cent. pught to be sufficient tosatisfy the wishes and ambition of any man. All that is wanted is monsy, ankistance, nid from some quarter or other, in inaking soads, providing for sducation, protuoting the general inuproveosents, and turning to advantagc all thosu flessings which abound in those states, and wiuch are desugned for the prospronty of society. He must repeat, that a comparimin nf the conditmin of those states, under the operation of this bill, and without lis advantages, onght to enlintin favor of the bill, every mind which was not prejudiced by other nhjrets, and which was not looking too intently at the powsibality of grasping, in some form or other all the public domath.
It inust be clear to every unblassed and impartial mind, that It was better to accede to the ariangemeuts of this bill, than to remain in their present condition, with the mere possibility of getting sonething more at a future day. If the views of gentleonen who euppohed the anendment could evea be admitted, was it likely that future harmony would be the result? Other new states woold spriug up beyond the Mississippl; and as they succespively arose, followiog the example of the new states of this period, would lay claim to all the puhlic lauds within their limits.
This consideration should induce the new otatea to feel an interest in the passing of his bill. Tiose new states beyond the Misuissippi never would, never ought, never could, agree to an exelusive appropitiation of these lands. They constitute a common fund, purclaned by the common blood and treasure, and are the couminon property of ali. It was the duty of congress so to regard it. It resulted from the treaties of acquisition, and was declared by the deeds ofcession, to be for the common benefit of all; and he would venture to say that the day will never cotre when congress, for the sake of partlal benefits to a comparatively small and Inconsiderable portion of the people, will abandon this exhausilese source of public income. Kentucky Included no part of the public domain, and enjoyed very few of thome advantages which fiow from the disburacments of the gethowe advantages which flow from the disburaements of the general governnient. Her benefit In the common concern was chiefly indirect, consiating in beliolding the prosperity of the whole, and the security of all from the union. But, if this bill passed, she would participate in the more direct advantages of the common governitent.
As an original part of that state which made such a vast cession to the federal governnient, he, in her behalf, entered his oplems protest against any violation of the terms of that munificent grant by which Kentucky shall be stript of what belonga th lier in common with Virginia and the other members of the confederacy.
As It respects the new states themeelves, he could not but think that, if they would diapaspionately exanitine the project undri consideration, they would find that it possesaed the strongest recomeneudation to their aceeptance. And he would repeat the assurance to them of his settled cnnvietion, that, if they decelved themselves by the hope of nhtaining the whole of the public dominion, and refuse what was now offered, they would have just occasion hercafter to reproach themselver; of If not, they would be reproached by their posterity, for throwing nway the practical blessings within their reach, in order to obtain an object which he solemnly believed would never be accomplished. He would now call the attention of the genate to the provisions of this bill, and their equitable character as it reapecta the whole of the comunon union. Having already shewn that the fuad itself was derived from the common blood and comman treasure of the country-he wnuld ask if it ought not "till to be held for the common benefit' The country enjoys, he was willing to admit, anexampled prosperity. But dial we hope that we slinuld exist as a nation for centures to come? Did we hope that our union would iast as long as the repablice of antiquity, If not much longer? And are we, on the strength of such expectations, to make a wastuful disposition of the rich patrimony which has been bequeathed to us Are we always to be free from wars and troubles, and difficulties? What nation had always been exempt from themi Look at Earope from which we sprang It had eajoyed, be believed at this time, one of the Inngest intervals of peace which had been experienced for several centuries. It was only seventeen years and a half sinse the battle of Waterioo was fouglit, which terminated the wars of the French revolution-and we now see the whole of Eumpe apparently on the eve of general war. And do we expect to be forever at peace? Never to want money again? Never to be in debt? But to be free from all ernbarraspments and debts hereaftr? No thinking man could Indulge these chimerical ldeas-these vain speculations. What then was it our duty to do? Now was the time, ahove all others, when we should nurse. and take care of nur resources. What nation of antiquity-what nation of modern times-han ever possessed such vast resourcea as the Immense public dounain-the capaclous womb of unborn republice? He had had occazion to remark either in his observations lapt seasion, or in the report of the committee on manufactures, that five hundred years hence, If we discharged our duty and took care of this Important interest, they who will come after us may be lesislating in this very hall, which he hoped would then be standing, as lt would stand apon this great and aboorbtng subject of the publle domain. He reenllected, during the late war, when the distreas of the conntry was at its helght-when we wanted money-wanted credit-when our arme were paralyzed for want of the neees-
cinddened every patriotic heart-when the exhaustless nature of this immense national resource was elnqnently depicted by a member of the other house. Enough not onty for that, but for sity or a hundred other wars, should we unfortunately becone involved in thens. And now we are out of ilebt; and it would eeem that we are aever again to be in dalot-that we are out or dificulty, and never agaiu to be in difficulay: and a buinlred schemes are suggested ta dispuse of these lands, beca use of our unbounded prosperity; as if we could not tho sunn get rid of the fund. Happier would it be for us, and bappier too for posterity, sbould we be wise enough to homband weil this resource. He trasted the senate would $n$ nt be deceived by these vain projects. Itrasted the senate would not be deceived by these vain projects. It was said that there is some discintent
He denied the fact however-there never had been any general discontent on the subject of the public lands; there was pothing like discontent titere. It was true, that snone gentlemen, in various states of the weat, had lield ont to the people of that quarter of the union, alluring projects of the aggrandizement of their own states, hy metting up a claim to the lands within their limits; and it was very likely that some of the peopla may lave indulged a dream that something like these projects might one day be realised: but there was nothing like discontent, with the great body of the peopie, on the subject of the public lands. But if there were diacoutents, what wuuld be the proper course to pursne? We ought to examine calmly into the causen-to endeavor ith a parental manner, to investigate the extent of the disaffection. Slonold it appear to be well foanded, it wouid be our duty to endeaver to alleviate it as far sa possible. But if there was no forundation for it, if you discovered that It was merely one portion of the union denaanding that which belonged to the whole; if there was no juat ground for complaint; would you, to gratify this murmuriug portion of the ninion, give to it that which was the property of all?
Would you behave like the weak and foolish parent, who seeing one child erying for the banble which another posoepsed, would unjustly take it away from the posseseor, and by giviug it to the other, set the one who bad been bereaved crying alsor, Would you allay diseontent, if discontent existed in a new state, by raising a more formidable and greater discontent in the other states? and would you not do this, if you adopted a partial, narrow scheune of diatribution which was proposed by the subatitute of the eommittee on pulalie lands? Beware, Mr. President, on this, as on other great subjects of contention, that you do not shin the theatre of discontent.
It beeomes us to take carn that we do not mise a storm fuli of menace, not only to the integrity of the usion, but to every great interest of the country. He could not conceive of a more happy disposition of the proceeds of the public lands, than that whieb was provided by this bill. It was supposed that five ysars would be neither ton lone nor ton short a puriod for a fair axperimeat. in chse a war shoulh break out, we withdiew frmu tte peaceful destination a sum of from two and a half to three and a hair miltions of dollars per annum, and apply it to a vigorous prosecution of the war. A sum which would pay the interest on sisty millions of dollars, wlich might be required to sustain the war, and a suin which is constantly and progressively inareasing. It proposes, now that the general goveruinent has no ane for the money-now that the aurpius treavure is really a source of vexatious embarrasmment to us, and gives rise to a suecessint of projects, to supply for a short time a fund to the states which want our asolstance-so advance to them that which we do mot waut, and which they will apply to great benefieial national purposes; and should war take priace, to divert it to the vigorous support of the war; and, whea it ceases, to apply it again to its peaceful purposes. And thus we may grow from time to time, with a find which will endure for eevturies, and which will augment with the growth of the nation, aiding the states in seasons of peace, and austaining the general goverament in periods of war.

The bill propmees to nurne and preserve this fund, to apply it when wanted to the purposes of the general governmant; and when its application is mada to the states, what are the objects? The honorable senator complains about colonization; and asks what interept Illinois has in it $\mathrm{He}, \mathrm{Mr}$. Clay, was somewhat surprised at the question. His aupposed every part of the uniou wha interested in the humane object of colonizing the free blacks. Ha snpposed that if any part were exempt from the evils of a mist population, it would atill not boindifferent to the promperity of less favored portions. The darkest spot in the tmap of eur country is andoubtedly the condition of the African race. And every benevolent and patriotic mind must hope that at anme distaot day it will be effaced. Colonization has opened the only practicable scheme which, by draining first the country of free htacks, and then, either hy the authority of the etates, or hy individual emancipation of tiose now held in slavery, holda oat a hope of the ultimate deliverance of our cnuntry from this great evil. Suppose that ant ir a hundred yeara bence, the country coonld be entirely rid of this African race, wowid the genileman from Illinois-would any gentteman asy that he shoold be indifferent to such an anepicious result? Io bis judgment, if the people of the United States were ready to maite heartily in any practical scheme, if there could be one devised, by which this conntry enuld be delivered from all portions of the African race amongat us, both free and bond, it woeld be the happlest of all eveots for the uoion. But why did Ohe gentleman from Illioois restrict his viaw to thia single point?
The bill did not confine the states to cologisation. What wes the bill? It presented three great objects for the consideration of the states, out of which they were at liberty freeiy to select It proposed enlowization, edusation, and internal impuovement in the rvimbsrseipent of such detbes as thay bave been incurted for internal improvemeuts in the atates. The gentlennan objects to thas latter clauve. But Mr. C. would ark, why those states, whieh have gone aliead in the canme of internal inprovement, Peunsylvana, New York. Ohin, should uot be allowed to rid themacives of the dybts which they nayy linve enntracted If tikey had outstripped the other stater, why should they be required to remain under burtheasome debts, and engage in new objucts perlaps not wanted.
Wibt regard to education and laternai improvement, these are objects in whieh all parts of the union are interested. Education and internal improvementa in any part of the union, ara ohjects which affect, mure or less, the interents of ail other parts of the uninn. There was a restriction upoo the stater. They were not lef wihhont limitationo. Thic fund was directed ae cording to the views of enngress, and the states were not lef unrewtrieted as to its application. They were required to apply it to one of three great objeets in which all partics were histerested, as olvjects of oational importance.
Thus it liad bern shown thal, according to the plau of the bill, the fund was to be applied, in times of peace, for the benefit of the states, which may stand in instant need of the means which the general goverument does not want, fint the improvement of their moral and ployical condition; and in war, the find was th be resunted, and appited to the generai objects of the war. Thus, it was th be applied, in peace or war, and accorrling to the provision in the various acts of cession, the great objeet of the common benefit of all the states wruld he kept in view. This ample resource would be preserved for all the vielssitudes to which this nation may be exposed, and we should be enabird, if free from war for 20 or 3.4 years, to accomplish most of the great ohjecis of laternal improvement, in the completion of which the country fcels an interest, should the states determine so to apply it.
But there was another and the greatest onject of all connected with the passage of this bill, to which is conclusion of this part of the subject, he was dexirous to refier. Ha slluded to the effeet of this measure on the durability of our union. He lioped he ahouid not be tuistaken, when he made the Fugrestion that, above alf former periods itt this country, this was the moment when it wan most imperative upoo every American statesman to bend all the effitis of his nitid to the infusiou of new vigor into the unioo. It wasa melanclinly fact that in ali parts of the conniry the sentiment of anion appeared to have been grently weakeaed. It was a melancholy fact that there was every where springive up, daily and hourly, an appreltension of insecurity, a fear that our repulilic canunt last,-that in is des lined to premature diasolutioo. He did not rpeaik of one part of the unink, hut of ail parts. This was a policy which unhappily prevailed. Whatever course could restore contidence, produca loarmony, create anew an attachment to the union in all its parts, and which could prevent the greatest eaiamity that could befal this people, nuzint to receive the favorahle attention of the legialature. He would arkif thrre was any prnject conceivable by man which was better calculated to strengiheo the uninn than the bill which was now on the table? What was it? It proposed that a mum amovnting to abont three millions of dollars, and annually increasing; which, twenty years hence may be ais millions, and forty years hence, twelve milliona-tha eource from which the fund is drawn being specifically ceded or acquired for the beneft of the whole uuion-sinall be aannually and parentaliy distributed by this government through the whole confederacy, amongst alf parts of it for the purpone of improving the moral and physicai conditinn of the whote. Let this project go into operauon: let all the statea be satisfied that it will last as long as the fund from which it is to be distrifuted, as loug as the alinost exhaustiess public domain ohalf continut, and we shall cement this uninn by the strongest of ties for five hundred years to come. Wialal state will then be disposed to go out of the confederacy, and sacrifice the great advaniages administered by this government' What state in the union will be diaposed to give up the advantage of this annuai tivideod, with all the rich fruiti which are to result from the improved moral and physieal condition of its people, and go formin in tis forlorn, weak, and destitute condition, an outcast without bope, the scorn of its neighborn, an ohject of contempt with foreign powers, and exposed to the insults of the meanest of them, and even to the agrressions of Iawlesn pirates? Pase this bill, and satisly the slates bf this confederacy that this fuad, which is constantly increasing, is to be applied forcver, in time of peses, to them for the great ohjects which are sprcified, and in time of war, in free them from that taxution which whuld the incident to a state of war, my \|fis, (anid Mr. Clay), mi the snfficiency of the security which this would present ior the conninuance of the union. Xo section, no state, will be found so lost to its own interest, ns in be induced to cut itself Inose, and to abandon ite participation forever, in this rich and growing resnuree.
One or two worfa on the question Immediately beforn the senate, and he would conclude. That question was to substitnte a new proposition, hy adnpting the amendment proposed by the commitiee on the pullie iands, in lipu of the other bill. And what was this new project? It waa at one stroke th cut down threefiths of the revenue derived from the public iands. The mintmam price of these lands is now sil 25 per acre; and it is proposed to redace it to 50 cents per acre, on ali the lands which remain unsold at public anction. It thus proposes, hy a single provisinn, to take three fithe from this fund, and what does it propose to do afterwarils, Here Mr. Chry read a clanse from the bill of the committee.]

Now this was not a profect for the proor. No suell thing. Any man, withont any rogird to the amount of his weath, of bis condtion, may mente downon the lands, and require a right to them by five years fultivation, but he has to mette upht the lands. By the pioclamation isinued by the king of Great Britain in the rear 1763, and atterwards by the rnyal culonial governments and byeveral of the states which nutsequensly becaine indepenient this condition of entitivafion has been required to perfect the title in waste land, and yet invasiably, as far as his knowledpe went, this provision had beell dispen*ed with, or heen considered a mere uullity. 'l'here were various kinds of settlementif formerily required by Virgima.
(liere Mr. Chry rpecifed the varinus conditinns, but was not listimelly heard.]
She required that the Individual should mette on the Iand. Nuw what tid they do? 'They went on the lande and put up a sinall cabin, somewhat restrithling those which are set up in Kentueky as traps to eateh witd turkeys, and this was consulered all improvement? Well, wull regard to the pultivation of the soil; sometimes they turned up the earti and planted a few hilis of corn; and thn was emnidered eultivation. '1'lie seltiers hained ther abject and there was no atteropt to exact a too gained their ohject, and threre was no atterspt to exact a ho rigud observance of the conditions. No one nat down upon his property with a view to make 11 him permantrnt rexidence. Now, at this moment, old James Manterton, who lives nunr Lexlugton, and is eughty yeary old, exeepted, he did unt recolleet a siogie individual, or the demcentants of any individual, who had remained on the lands wheh they liad originally settled. The entilers acquired their landa, made their entrics, and then disposed of them for bear skiny, nifles, or any other marketable commindity.

With regard to the settement and the culnivation $n{ }^{\prime}$ the soil, In the project of the eonnuinter, there is nookpecificntion of any itaprovement required-there is no conditiou for the cultivation of any specific quantity, nor in any deflned mode. What does the amendment propone? It nllows any man, whether rieh or poor, to aequire the right of sptting the land, by paying fifty eants an aert. Ilere is a man who will selld one som of smintiinte, to set up a cahin and cultivate half an aere on one sude of his farm; another who may eet out his potatoes, of plant nome Corn, and raisu a few purnpkins on the other side, and su on, to acquire their patents; and they will afterwards find their way into the matket, and be sold as cheap as military patents have been sold at the brikers in 1'ennsylvania avenuc.
How many of the soldicrs, during the late whr, are now to be found residing on their lands? All their patents were dieposed of for a mere song, and go luth tic hands of speculators in our great cistes. He had lieard of a single individual in New York, holding at this moment a prineipality in thinois, and who is retarding the mettlement of trat part of the pountry by holding up the lands nt nn extravagnnt priee. Land is not the only want of man; he must have money to meet his necessities, and gratify his plesusures; and many have lexs Inclination to the oceapations of agrieulure than to nther pursuits. He regretted that every man did not appreciate farming as he did. But it to illopossitie to change the pharacterw of mea. Many who are pager for land, desire it not for the purpose of cuitivation, but will part with it as mont an they have nominally eomplied with the conditions whieh the laws proseribe. He objected to the amendment bocause its henefits were not confined to the poor setilers; and on account of ita inequality. What chance wruld tise people of Virginia, Kentucky, New Vork nr PennssIrauin, stand with the peopie of Illinols, who were well acquainted with the vncant fand armund them?

We had been tuld by the president as well as hy the gentteman from Illinois, that population is more important to the country than land, and the sentiment is undoubtediy tric. It should be recollected, however, that the inere transfer of population from one section of the country, of from one part of a plate to another, adde mothing to the sum total. If it be mat important to augment and not to shin the populatinn of the United Statell, the privilege of setteruent whonsld be heid out to foreignern to indace them to cone here and inerease our nunbers. When Georgia dixtributed her landa by a Iottery, aithough one man might obtain more lands shan he possessed brfore, it proditeed no increase in the popuiation of the arate. It was uot a shifing, but an increasing population whicl was desualsle. He wished that our eoumiry wan densely populated, from the sinoren of the Atlantie to the Pacitic Ucean; and that all were endowed witit our prineipies and our love of liberty and devetion to human rights. Int he conld not, because he felt this mpitiment, consent to be eaught hy a project whieh, altozether delusive, whist its tendency is to anerifice the publie domatia, leaves the Whist its tendency is to *acrion mon thentically the samae.
taars the ampudment of the cominitiee and the lands will be swept by those whot are on the xpot; but the population will remain proctifly as it is now. The seheme, white it would deetroy the pablic domain, would eugender speculation, and lead to anmerona frands and evavione, and while franght with palpabe injuatice to the people in all stlier parts of the union, would be found to be far leas conducive io the proaperity of the now otates than the propmed atiatrilsution of the proceeda of the lands.
He had not intended, when he calle iuto the senate, to make more than a very few observations; and regretted that he had been induced to take up oo much time. He hoped, however, that the nenate would exeuse the leugli into which he had been betrayed by the deep feeling which the entertained of the vast impartance of the subject whet was now under consiteration, resultiag from a thorougt ponviction that no neasure which does not cmbrace the interents of all the people of the Usited states, onght to receive the favorable consiteration of congress. Ite irinated that the meante would rejeet the amendment, and settle foreder on the basis of comprelsensive equity proponed by his bill, this important quastion: which if not speedily and per manently settled, was more likely to produce dixaension through out the country, than any other sulyeet which at this tume pressed itself upon the consideration of congress.
In conclusion, the should oniy invoke the senate to extend to his bill the same favor which it had received at the last sesmion.
thumeday, saneary 17, 1833.
Mr. Grundy said: 1 pon this sulyept it is manifest that there are two opinions tistug up in different quarters of the country, directly in opposition ta each other mad both of thein, in my liumble julgatent, finunded in error. One portion of our polithchans think that the new states in whith the lands nec situated, have a clatin to the explavion of all other portuons of the eountry upon that prineipie of nutional law whelt eonficrs on the soveregnty of a state a right to all the soil within its Himits. Against tha opinion, I have heretofore, and now eantend, let it come from what authority it may. Austher set of politicians eay, and the buli ofl your table if gredicated on that idea, that the states, as such, have some other, and datferent sind of claim to Hese lauds, or their proceeds, than they bave to the monry in the treasury of the U. Btates, ariang Iromother souress of the public revenue. I differ from thome who entertain this opinion likewise. My proposition in, and I shall endeavour to matisain it, that the lands belong to neither the new mor the old stater, nor to both of them combined; but to the federal goverament, and that their fropeeds eannot be applied to other objects than those to which the United satces call constitutionally appropriate money. In order that I may be able ta establish my propontion, I a*k tha attention of the renate do the mode in which the titles ware nequited, and I call upon the advocases of the title of the new ntates to show upon what they found their claim. Bid the new atakes purchase these lands from the onghat proprictors or ow a ere? Ilave they made any eontract of agreement, which would authorise them to put up this claint? Nothing of the kind is pre-trinded.-Thwir sole rrlatice ba upon the principle that sovereignty conveys the title. Thas pronciple it is admitued exists, and is unquestionable between nations or ktates, foreign to each other, anil between whom there are no stipulations or compacts to the coutrary-bat it is wholly inapplipable, as betwren the general government and the Hew states; to adopt it would be in direct violation of the agrecnients and compacts entered into by ench of them, in the most solemn manner. When about to become members of this uuton, they diaflaimed all right and pretenee ol utit to the lands of the foderal government, within their respective limits; it is their own ileclaration, it is engratted in the constithtion of every otate; the very charter wbich gave them their existence arknowledges that thry have no mght of elaim to these lands. There is no ntate in which It was supposed the geberal government owned land, which has not, in its constitution, relinguiwhed that right which sovereignty confers, except the state of Tennessee. Slue was adinitted into the unton withom any such stipulation or condition, and therefore stands in a different situntion in relation to this subject from the other states in which there may be vacant and unappropriated lands. When the new ntates, some yeara since, canme fnrward and put up their claims th theae lands, I took the liberty of saying that it appeared to me to be a violation of good faith and the sacredneas of a solemn agreement, and gave the reasons at length in support of the opinion I then expressed, and will not detaln the se-nate by a repetition of theilt, hit with this short veew of the sub jeet slanil take it for granted that the new states have no right to these lands, mure than the ollier stavea in the union. At the same time, I wish it to be understond, that I do not object to the appropriations which have or hervafter may be made to the new states of portious of the land whthin the ir limits, for internal improvenienls; this, however, is not bepause they have a better claim than nny other portion of the country; these appropriations are made upon the ground that it is sound poliey to ithprove the comntry, and thereby add value to the residunm of the public lands; lience a right an well as a duty is created on the part of the general goverament to enhance the value of the public domain.
The next inģuiry is, what right have tife atates an smeh to put a clain to theve lands? To arcertain this, we must look to the derivation of the titie and sec to whom it has been made. During the revolutionary war it was urged by several of the states in strong and impressive lauguage that it was anjust that the witd and uninhabited tracts of land contained in the charter of Virgimia and other siates similarly siluatwd, whould be ennquered and neenred hy the juint armin of all tien atates, and then not be disposaed of for the benefit of all; they thurefore remonetrated with the old congress against thow infustiec, as they comsidered it. ©ougreas acknowiedgrd the jn*tice of their dernands, and applind to the several ntates within whose linnits the lands were situated, to relinquiah their tite in aupport of the eommon canse in whieh all the states were pugaum. The suatem gielded to hio application, and Virgihin surrendered all her terrionry west of the river Ohio, meludiug the presebt states of Ohio, Indlana Illinmis, and Michugan territory; the othor states followed her example, but for wiat purpose did they make these grants? Was It that the pocceeds mhoistal be given nway either to the states or individuals, or scattered to the winds? Nucb an idea never entered the misds of inen nt that period. What whs the great and important object which operaterl upon a portion of the statem in demanding, and on the othery in surrentering these land to the dispositinu of the old congress? it was knotvin that we werr engaged in an expensive war, and were deeply yivolved in debt. The issue of the controversy was doubttul, but it we aucceeded, one thiug wan certain, that we had $n$ barge ncenmulatuen of drbe exsting aganst the old congresp, whelh it would be ditfichit to discharge luwwever prosperous the termination of the war inight be. In order, then, to promose the public credit and to provils: a common fund to meet the various engagements which the prosecution of the war neceasarily created, nimost nll the statea which had vaennt and unappropriated lands came forward. Anl what is the declared intention of each of the atates in making the surrender? I have examined atl the acta of cession, the same language is used, they afl way for the enumon eharge and expenditure, for the comnion ben- it we surrender the lauds; nad to whoth dill they surnender thein? To the congress of the United Statey, to, be applieal for the cominon benefit; for, and in discharge of the drebt incurred by the war of the revolution. It osue, the debs of the revolution, an it is osually derominated and considered, is diwehargod; there is whilt, howrvir, a henvy inesinbrance upon the pubtic: iande, which cannut be discharged for many yenra. I refier to the pensimns allowed by law, to the ofticers and knidien of the revnlutiou-there conntitnte a cliarge upon this fund, and form a part of the commion expenditure for which these lanis were pirelged, nod until fully paid, the lands cannot be releaved and applied to other parpones. It is supposed that not less than three millions a year will be necessnfy tu meet this demand. The sales of the public Inuds will probably not naount to that ryin; we know the net proceeds will not-at present, this fund is answering the purpose of its origmal destipntion, nud it ougbt nut to be diverted from it.

But let us see by what means the debt proper has been paid. The procepds of the poblic lands have chselarged a very mmall portion of it; all the nther kninferes of revenue liave been resort. ed to, and the nobies art-ing from them applied th the extinguistment of this debt. When the money thus expended from other sources to this object shall be reptacud in the gutulic trea. enry frmm the sale of the pabine lands, surely it stoutd nut be used or employed in any bither way of for any other purposes than those til wheh monies arising from any uther sources could be legitimately approprinted. To make my idras upon thas subject still painer; we have taken money nrising from lite dinties upon imports to pay the public duht, instead of usiug the Innd for that purpose; now, when we sell the lande nud receive the proceeds of the sates, the money should be substituted in the place of that whineh was reecived from imports. The treasury of the United Enatea has furutished all the means, by wheh the lands ampired from Georgia, by her cession, hinve been pald for-L, Lousiana was obtained from the emperor of France, by the federal government, nad paid for by lis own money. The flori. das were parehased from Spain, and patil for in the same manner. To none of theme landa, can I discover the least color of claim on the part uf the states.

It is not nrgued hy the friends of this hill that congresn can give away the public money or distribute it to inllividuals or states, od hi/mum. Uuleme, therefore, its ndvoentes can succeed in ahowing thm congress bas mnre power over this source of revenue arising from the pubise lands than it possesses over other puthic mondes, this bill mast fall. This brings me to the provisions of the bill under consideration; and I will endeavor to show to the senate thnt this bill is calculnted to put down the poliey of this gnvernment as now administered. That it in doung that inditectly which we cannot do directly, and we know it to be so. We nre to give thas money to the states, nud for what parpose? To make internal imprivements, and can we anake such internal improvempints as the states, will make if you give them this money? There is a difference nmang politicians as to the powers of the general gnvernment upon this sabjeet. Great national objects of internal improvement, it is conceded by both parties, may be carried into effect by this govermuent; but local objects are not conceded; and as this government is now officered, we know that no bill for wuch imsprovenents ena become $n$ law. Whatever congress nijht be disposed to do in anch eases, the esecutive sanction cannot be obained. But grant the states the money to make any lmproveasents they please, however focal or unimprirtant, nad you you cannot overconte by direct actuon. In short, by giving the you cannot overconte by dirfct action. In short, by giving the it apon nbjects which the most z-nlous friends of internat itnprovementin by the general governureut wonld never dream of If this mot doing, as 1 have said, tbat, indireetly, which you cnn not do directly? Would you not hy the instibinentatity of the state legtisinture, be doing nets which you have not the constitutional power to perform yonrselvem? The meeond object to which the money is to be applied by this bili, is education. I samit of nny pablic man, that congreas could extablish a system of edveation in the different stnten? Ench n proposition has never been made, and if made nt any future pertod, it surely can meet with no favor in thas boily; nnd I ank senatorm to refiect and consider whether there be any subatantial difference, in point of constitutional power, betweev this government'n doing it itrelf, and giving the moucy to the states, aud diructhag them th do it.
As to the third provision in the bill, which is to expend the money in trabrpurting the free people of color to Litberia, on The coast of Afriea, I con-ider it pertectly visionary, mid this proviston in the bill would be harmiess wire it but for the in fraction sif the constitution involved in it; because 1 do not be heve that the etat- ligh-latnrew wonld no apply the money; they would exprnd it on abjects it their own stated. Fronn what part of the constitution is the power thus to expend money derived? How can it be contended that this zovernment can furhish money to betier the shuation of the free mun of colos, When it is adustted that you cannot give money to a pror man to better his situation? No-not evin to pemove hins from one part of the United states to mosther.
I will now proceell to another branch of this aubject. If I were it favor of this meanury; if I believed it anthorsed by the constitution; if I belleved it wise and politte, I would not at this time, give my musent to it. It is, aud it caunot be conceal ed, a tarif mensure. It in to keep up the dutles on imports and liere I whill to be distinctly understood; I have contributed nuthing by any vote or net of mine to produce the proment state of exvitement whef exurts in the country. I will do nothing to incrense or aggravate it. I will guld nothing to intimidntion or to that hostile array whish is di-playing iteiff in the sotulh. I will neather go faster nor slower. I will neather be aecelerated or retarded in my movemonte thy any occurrence of that kind bus there nre ennsulerations to which 1 nm prepared to yield inuch. To that deep sense of injustice Ionz continuell, which ia felt by the wimele sonth, and by a great partion of the west, would sirid much. To the apprehension that oppresation, lon perxisted in, which ix heavy and eaunit be always borne, migh weakrin and in tune alienate the nfferctions of any great portion of the eommonity from thas government. I min ready to gield any thing wheh will not proalnce mjustice to others. However, whether the uniff be reduced of not, I am in favor of executing the laws and prenerving the nutow; and so fur as my voice will go, the expenhive shatl be furniylipet with nll the inpans necespary to accompli=h these ntyects. Under this view of the subject let as examine the effert to be produerd by the passagec of this tull, nnll asecrtain whether, insteral of alleviating the pultic burdena unl renwoviug the grirvanera now frlt and eomplained of, we are nut giving a certain assarance, that they never shall be removed? I'te public seathuent scems bow orthleil, nud we senreeIy hear a voice to the contrary, from any quarter, that the public revenue mist be brought down to the wants of the government; if you, however, eive away mnnually near three milloons of your money, arisug from the pale of the putblic laude, you thereby create the necossity of kevping up $n$ thiff to that anount, higher than wonld be necessary if the proceeds of the jublie lands wrep placrd in the trrasisy, to alefray the rxpenditures of the goverunent; therrfore, linstead of rrducing the public burdewn, instead of dolne away the just causes uf complaiat which exist int the conntry, you are fastening the in upon the community. Make, if yon plenae, the mont liberal allowance for the support of the government of the United States, a tartff, prodneing tweive millions added to the three milhonn arising fron the salen uf the public lands, will support the guvernment; but give this three millions away, and you crentu the neconstity of adding tiree millions to the Lariff; thia, therefore, is a tariff measure. It is to create a deminnd of neceasity for more monry, anil when this necesrity is crrated, I shouthl niyself feel brund if it depended $n$ n my pingle vote, to fix the rate of duties high enough to produce the requisite amount. I lave been eompelled to give my opinion in reference to the tarill, becallan it is connected with the subject matter of this bill. There is another reasnn why 1 object to this measure; it will operate deseptively; it ooks like a gif upon tis face to the states, but at the saue timo the people of the plates are taxed to make up the ninount; it looks as if the states were getting something Irom the geucral government, hat when it in recollected that in tax is innosed to supply the deficiency in the treasury, necasionud by this menaref, the deception is nt once discovered and the delusion vaniahes.
The politicians of the 1 f . Statea have been speaking nnd writing about state rights and state independence from the very fimndation of this goverminent, amil nersurding to my humble judgment nothing thint could be invented by congreas, would operate mo fataity against these dretrines an this mearure. If the mtatem are to receive annually from this government large sums of money which may be withheld at pleasure, can yous expect that maniy spirit nud etrong languagn of remonvtrance from state Ivgishatures, which we have sometimes witnessed. It is with communities as with indivuluals, that man logem his lidepen dence, who is in the hablt of living upon the bounty of another. He knows that to incur the dispteasure nf his benefactor mny produce $n$ withdrawal of that bounty which "he has enjoyed, and the fear of this leseens his intependencer; he lows his own will nnd adopts that of anotior as the rule of his conduct. The true mode opon which to ndmintster this govirnment, is to kerp the operations of the federal and wtate goveromintid distinct and separate. In this way, that confliction which produces diseord, is avoided. The state governments poskess certalu means of raising revenue to enable them to perform their respective funetions, and the state governments should never depend upon the general gnvernment for the menns of acting upon the subjects confided to them. So long as each government depends upon ths own means, it is independent, nhd no longer. We niready see the effects produeed in mome of the states by this nnticipated reflance upou the national treanary. Furtier, I aus opposed th this inll, because it will retard the Improvement and sottiement of the western pouniry. In what I a3y upin this subjeet, I know I feel, and whall apeak as n western man. There is a greater partion of my affections, of my regards, ilgn can exist elsewhere. If yous way that the priee of the public lands, ( $\mathbf{N}$ ilich is evidenily the design of thas prif), even of poor quality shall wver be reduerd, but at all States, for the purpose of ihuibuing amouk the sevrral states, you thereby prevent $n$ dense population, nnil the eultovation of sonil of taferior quality. It canuot be expectod, under tinn inw system, that any favors or Indugenee will ever be extend. ed to the setilers in the new states; a feehniz in opposition to $n$ libaral spirit towarde the inimabitants of new states will be engen. dered in the different states; and avariec, the novst nuleeling passsion that Inhabits the human breast, will forbud the distribulith of favors nmonget thase who most ueed them. I readity adntil that the shifting of poppintion from sme section of eountry in nhotiver, does not fuervase the population; but I by no means ndmit that it may not inereane the natioutal streugitr and prosperity. The governaient owea it to its cuizens as a duty, in furnish all the means in its power, to render them collectively nind ludividually liappy and independent. When you put it in the power of every man, however poor and huable bs may be, the power of every man, however poor and humble bs may be, neres of lind, the government has done its daty, and if itie and dissipated meas will not take eare of themsilves and household, will not embrace and enjoy the hounty of their country, the government is not reaponeible fot their lallure.

At the last session I was inld, that my argument upon this subjeet wan unt sound, lecause those wino workod in the mapufnctories were as good ellizens nat timse whot enlitivatud thie soll: that muy be son: my priuriple, however, lo this, make your citizens indepeudent, and no unan ir so independeni ax lue wlon gets his owu livelibood upon bis own soul, and is not dependent tpon the will of others. A man thus pitnated in drperident upon l'rovialence and hia own exertions alonie; he is mot -ubject to the whin and eaprice of others hy wlum he may be employrol: tha livelihood entuot be endangernd by the failure of eapitalist:, which is the ease with all thense emplisyed lit manfacturneg es:
 jurovide, by its lawx, that every man of industry pay arquire, int n eheap rate, a poribin of the public dominis. With respeci to the policy whieh I advorate, thiking offa poruon of the jupplation of the old stmer, I ean fully apprectate it. Tennessee witI be deprived of many of ite mmat valuable eitizens; with me, bowever, this forms no obtction; I will never legisiata to keep men where they nre, that others may be benefitied hy titepr. Jabor. Slioult nny of my fellow ritizens consult ine upon the subject of their removal, my language to them would be, "we ahouid te alad if you could find it to your interest in remain amongst ua, becanse we are unwilling to part with you; but if you ean make yourself more happy and intependent, if you eaul better provide for yourseives nud fanlities, by going to a new country, ROF, and prowperity nttend you." This is the way I feel, and inis is the way I luelline to het townrds the eitizens of my and state; nnd why should we feel any prejudice agninut this po-own OWn state; nnd why shouid we frel any prejudice amanst that moend childruns ehildren; let us then ndopt $n$ liheral policy for tieir improvement; tt should also be recollected that we have a veiy extensive exposed froutier in the west: we have gathered ali the Indian tribes together; we have coneentrated that whiph makes $n$ formidable force, which mny at some future period, be employed against the United States. How enn we provide ngainst intaeks from that quarter in any way so effectually ns by having $n$ dense population in the immediate neighboriood? By this means you will alao lesaen the expenditures of the government nid give sceurity to those who nre now most exposed to dinger. Another combideration of great weiglit upon this subject is, that New Orleans, the great eommerctal eity of the west, will always be the point of attack nimed at by a powerful foreign enemy, with whoni we may be at war. The best sceurity you enn afford $1 t$, will be fonnd thiekly lining the banks of the Missiesippi, and filling up the adjncent couniry with freemen, Interested in the soil. An opportanity to do this is now presented by the recent nequilutions of terrinory from the Choctaw and Chicasaw tribes of Iudians. It has been said that these preference or ocenpant rights have not proved beneficial to the enfly adventurers of the western country. Gentlemen who make this statement pinsess less knowitedge than I do or $n$ different language would be used by them. The state of Virginia gave to each of the eariy meltlers of the now statu of Kentincky four hundred neres of the sctilement-right and pre-emption of n thonsand acres ndjoining at in price merely nominini. The state of North Carolina, actuated by a eimilar liberai spirit, gave a pre eniption of six hundred and forty acres to each of the veniy settlers in what is now West Tennessee; and nithough it is true thnt but few of these men remain nt the present dny, having true thmt but few of thase men remain nt the present dny, having bean elain by the hoptile esvages, or having died by reason of great expoaure and hardships nnd from other enuses, yet I win venture to say, that the descendants of mo elass of inen in that vast region of conimity, are more reapretid, or buve more distimensibed themelves in the learned prnfemsons, or have bees greater mramenta to the brehehes of jnetice, or have acquired nosp tume in Irgisiative lialls. If regard t" what is entied the cireen iver epsultry, in the vtate of Kentwrky, it was settled upan the prinelple of oceupaney, nad there ts no portion of Ittat stite, cossidering the quality of sont, whech contains in better of invee substantial population. As to Tennessee, this lias been her unitorn policy, and by uts wisdoin we have changed tenants alld day taborers ints, independent freeholders. I ain tuelined favorably to the nmendment proposed by the commituee ou publie lands, and will vote that each settler upon the public dowain shall lee eutitled to $n$ preference right at tifty cents per acre, upon eondition that be reside on tt for five gears in sacexsuloll; this latier provisionn will prevent all fraud and ppeculation, and secure to horr whu needs it, $n$ hmane $n t n$ cheap rate.
Upon a fill view of the whoie sulject, my reflections resalt in tha-that the new states have no exclusive elaitn to these lands, and that the states, as surh, taken attogether, hava no other rlaim to them or their poceed than they have to monies arising from other nources of revenue, and of course congreas has no power to give it to the states, or noply it to any other oljecets or purposes than those coufrrred on eongress by the consuluthot., Hy giving this destination to this fund, we fulki the deaign nind expectation of the original donors, as well as the inteuminn of the old congress, to whom the donations were made. By the eonstitutmu if the United States the titie to these lands is transferred to the new government, on wbich, by That instrument, tion burden is plaeed, of paying the nitional debt-of earrying on our foreign lintcreourse with nill nationsof ralsing and supportung the army and navy-of sustaining the exeeutive, jucheial and legisiative hratielies of this government. These are legitimnte subjects of public expenditure, and to these should this luus be applied; they nre fir the eommon benefit of all, and therefure withlu the meaning of the derds of eessinn. Uyon the subject of graduating the price, Ithink the governturnt aloould adopt the snave rule witueb nny prudent man, who owned $n$ large quantity of land, anil was nnxious to pell it, would pursue-that would ecertainly be to tower the price, would pmisue-that would eertainly be to tower the price, wher alt the lands of firsit quality were sold, and he erpuld not find purebinsers who would buy lands of inferior quatity at the preee orizinally fixed, nffer the pulbie lands lave remaisoed in market at the minitum price for ten or fiteen years. Surely It would be somind poliey to offer them at a lower rate; this woubl non ouly be beneficinl to the general government, but the advantage to the new atutrs woult be inenleulable, at thereby the whole tands whinin thelr rexpective limita would becrama subject in state taraton. I therefirre, nm willing at this time to vite for giving vettiement righte to occupants at fity ceenta oper acre, ind to graduate the price accordinit to the differ eat qualities of iand, and io rejert at once the pmoposition enntal wed It the original bill. Still, my impression is, that thin to not the peoper thene to act finally opon the subject. At the next mepesiod ofeongress the new states will linve n full representation in the other house. They nre more partieularly interested in this subjeet tiaan the other states. I am willing they ahould have the benpft of tifir adelitional numbers. It has been urged thnt this anbject thas been before congress at the last semaion, that $k$ was then amply diseussed, that the different able reports of the rommittre on manufactures and the committee on poblic lands have been published nud submitted to the peopla for their considuration. This is all true; but bas the subject been consiflered? has it been decided by the people? I think not. It was Inwt sight if in the all absorbing topic of the presidential election. That, like Aaron's rod, swallowed up every other consideration. I am, therefore, prepared to vote for an indefinite poetponement of this bill, whenever thmi motion shall be made.

Preamble and resolutions respecting the pubtic linds.
Whereas the publie lands of this union hnving been nequired by the nnited exertion, and at the common expense of those who achieved our independenee, and ratabilshed thin povernment, it is proper nnd just, that in the future disposition of thit splendid domain, the wishes and interent of those who nequired 1t, should be expreesed and consultied; ind whereas; the peopie of New Jersey, freling a deep interest in the decision which ie nhont to be tiade upon this subject, (involving in its result as wefl a most vacred prineiple of justice, an na immense nmount of revcnue), we, their representaitves, copsider it due to them in express our sentiments apon this important measare-therefore,
Resolved by the council end eeneral assembly of this atate. That the publie lands having been aequired by the enmmon blond ind chminon treasure of the country, sound poliey and equal jvetiee require that they should be held or disposed of for the comusan benefit.
Resolred, That we conaider the Innd bill, now hefore congresa, as embracing and providing for the interesta of all the peenple of the United states and that the impartial justice and comsprehensive equity of tie provisions deserve the support of our anatorn nid representatives in congress.

$07^{-M r}$. Clay's corrected apeech in favor of his tariff bill, and the brief one of Mr. Davis (of Massachusetts), againat it, will be foand in the present sheet. The high and bonorable character of these genticmen will insure, for both, an attentive perusal. There is another of Mr. Daeis' npeeches that we deaire to make room for-and several others: but the "stock" is large, and carrent thingx must not be negiected.

It appears by the "National intelligencer" of Thursday iast, that a corrected speech of Mr. Webster, (and which, in its order, should have preceded that of Mr. Clay), may be expeeted. We shall insert it, of courve.
0 -We publish sundry instructions from the treasury departneent with relation to the tariff laws-and are apprehensive that these laws, unleas speedily amended, will reat more upon the interpretations or instruetions of the department, than on the statutes themselves; for it seems imposaible that the meaning of the statutes should be generally uaderstood and uniformin applied, without the exertion of an extraordinary power in the meeretary concerning the revenue, generally, and as to the amount of duties payable on particular articles." This should not be sa. It is the business of the department to execute-not make the law; but tringr are so conditioned, perbaps, that the law, to be executed, must be settled-dy conetruction! 'The general tariff law of the last session, with the act explaining the 18 tb section of the act of 1832, and the iaw suspending the operation of the provisions of the 10 th and 12 th clauses of the act of 1852 , (in which latter the principle of Mr. Clay's "compromise bill" wan swifly violated), taken together, present a tangled web, or "Gordian knot," easier "ent" than unravelled or untied.
As to the act coneerning the i8th section, we have the following from the "New York Journal of Commerce," It in well ascestained, we think, that there will not be mach "surplus revenue" in the present year-unless the importations should be excensiva.

Government deposits.-We understand the much taiked of measine of withdrawing the government deposits from the United Btates bank has at length been accomplished. What is more remarkable, thin has been done, not by the order of the president of secretary of the treasury, but by an order of congreas adopted by a very large majority of both houses. And this notwithstanding the house of rapresentatives voted at just about the same time by an equally large majority, that the depoeite anight safely remain in the bank. If aay thing ean add to the remarkable eharacter of this remarkable transaction, it in that no other place of deposit has been fixed apon, or is likely to be, and that in fact the very balances have diaappeared aftogether, havieg been paid to the merchants as return duties undet the leth ecetion.t
And another New York paper, the Commercial Advertiser, sayw-"We are told that the reduction of the duty upon iron, has already been followed by a rise in the market of 10 per cent. and also that some staple articles of hardivare have risen 90.

* Some think that the mindmaum on cotton yarn, and cloths, will remain even after 1842 , to proteet their manufactare; and athers eontend that specific dutics will be untouched till then! Aa for instance, the intelligent editor of the "Nantucket Inquarer" says-"The operation of Mr. Clay's bill upon the article of olive oil is to retain the duty unchanged for ten years!" The present duty is 90 cents per gallon. If this opinion be correet, iron, coal, spirits, sugar, ke. ke. will remain as they are, "for ten years"" But, we muat believe that we are to have a wev tarif every tiro years until $18+2$, in reapeet to all articles on which the present rate of duty exceeds 20 per cent. on the foreign cost of them. is the secretary of the treasury to lisve entire Bommand over the revenue and the tariff, and determine, from thane to time, and at all tumes, what dutica shall be colleeted on this or that article? This power is not conferred, and surely it aever will bo; but how else are the collectors to know What they shall charge upon cottons subject to the mininnum; on dams, which paym both a specific and an ad volorem duty; and on suear anbjeet to a sperific duty mily-the kinda of each having different values in foreign places?
We have not yet met with any perman who pretended to an ahbist to answer this question, except in referring the whole mattep to the secretary of the treasury.
These payinents to the merchants hnve been since suapend-
-and clamis mast be made on the treasury.
Vor XLIV-Sio. 5.

The market has also advanced in Furope-partly from an inerease of consumption there-but chiefly by the belief that the domand for the foreign article is to be greatly increased in the United States.
It should be recollected, that the daty on "inardware" was much reduced by the suspension of the provisos above aliuded to. We wish that some friend in New York would make particular inquiries into the mattere just stated, and give us the result of them. That most of the leading articles will rice in price as the duties on them ahall be reduced, mud the wages of laboring persons diminished -we surely believe, because of the want of an excited and steadily increasing competition. But of this more hercafter. We have carefully obtained and laid aside about thirty specimens of American eotton and woollen goodn, with the present fair wholesale cash prices, &ce, marked upon them, by one of the ofdest and moest reapectable dealers in them -to be compared with goode of like quality at a future day, that the nullifiers may find out bow mnch they shall have saved by redueed Juties!*
The words "to be continued" are so offenxive, it numerons eases, that we have sometimes incurred the expense of a supplement that we might avoid the use of them; and, when an extra number of pages cannot be given, various exertions are made to preserve interesting articles from injury by divisions of them. An instance of the latter is now present. We give the reports, resolntions and ordinances of the Sondh Carolina convention, complete, we believe; but an aceount of the proceedings of that body, with sketches of some of the apecelses, aro postponed. The parts are separated; but each may be considered aufficiently full in itself.
This convention adjourned on the 18 th inst. Among other things, the aet further to provide for the collection of duties on imports, is "nullifed"一o anllification is not dead, though nearIy every state, in the United Stater, has declared. Itself againat that heresy.
A collection of the proceedings had in the several statea, on this subject, would be interesting. Perhaps, we shall make one.

07 -We have given more than usual attention to foreign articles and news-for a general record of events should be kept. It will be seen that the affairs of Ireland have reached a criak. They cannot resamin as they are-much longer. The British ministry hae resolved to preserve the peace of the country, by the operation of laws which are justified only on the "plea of necessity ${ }^{\prime}$ " and nothing is ien to the Irish people but a quiet submission to arbitrary ediets, or open organised resistanes in arme.

The cuolera has broken out at Havana, with great violence. The deaths were already from 100 to 150 per day, principally among the blacks. Many had fled from the eity-business was eompletely at a ftand, and goods were lef at the enslom howe day afier day-the merchants not wislung to take them out. Not many deaths had occurred on board of the vessels in port. Some very respectable white persons, of eorrect habits and robusl frames, had died.

FOREIGN NEWB.

From London papers to the ecening of February 5.
OHEAT ERITAIN AND IKELAND.
London, Feb. 5. This being the day for the delivery of the kiug's epeech, his majesty arrived at the huuse of lords sliortiy before two oclock; and on alighting from lits carriage was received by the cabunet mututers and groat otheers of state.
His majesty tmuediately proceeded to the rotoing room, and from thence to the interior of the house of lords. On his ma: jesty lakong this seat on the throae, the uslier of the black rod sunimosed the house of commoas to hear the royal speech. Bhortly afterwarle, the spenker, attended by a great number of arembers, appeared at the bar, when lus majeaty delivered the Followng inual gracious apeectr:
"My lordo and gentlemen:
in'The period bemg now arrived at which the buslamss of parlimment is usually restimed, I have culled you together for the discbuige of the lupportant duties with which you are entruated. Never at any time did sutyects of greater interest and unaguitude call for your attemion.
"I lave still to laneat the coatinuance of the civil war in Portugnl, which for wonse months bas existed between the princes of the bouse of Braganza. From the commencement of this contest, I have abstasined from all saterference, exeept such an was required for the protection of British subjects resident in Portugal; but you may be assured that I shall not fail to avail myseli of ant oppurtunty that may be afforded une to assist in restoring peace to a country with which the interests of my dominione are so intimately connected.
"I have also to regret that my enruest endeavors to effect a defintive arraugernent betweea Hollaud and Belgum, have hitherto been unsuccewsul. I found myself at length compelied, In conjunction with the sing of the French, to take measures for the execution of the trealy of the ISth November, 1831. The capture of the citadel of Antwerp has in part accomplished that object, but the Dutch government wull refasing to evaenate the rest of the teritorves assigned to Beigium by that treaty, the embargo whicts 1 had directed to be imposed on the Dutch commerce lias been contiluued. Negotiations are again commenced; and you maiy rely on their beiag conducted on my part, as they have uniformily been, with tie single view of easuring to Holland and Belgimin a scparate existence, ou principles of mutual security and independence.
"The good falth asd honor with which the Freneh government han acted ia these transactions; and the assurances which I continue to receive from the chinef powers of Europe of their friendly disporition, give me confidence in the success of my endeavors to preserve the general peace. I have given directions that the varioun paperi which are aecessary for your informatoon on the affairs of lloliaud a ad Belgiute should be laid before jou. you.
"The approachiug termination of the charter of the bank of Eagiand and of the East India company, will require a revision of these establishumeats, aud I rely on your wisdom for making snch provisions for the hinportant interests connected with them, as may appear, from experience and full cousideration, to be best calculated to secure publice credit, to Improve and extend our commerce, and to promote the general prosperity and power of the British empire.
"Y'our attention wiil also be directed to the rtate of the chareh, more particularly as regards it temporalities and the maintenance of the clergy. The complaints which have risen from the collection of tuthes appeal to require a chanage of system, which, willsout diminishing the ineans of maintaining the eftablishod ciergy In respectabality and asefulsess, may prevent the collision of interests, and the consequent derangement and dissatisfaction which have too frequeutly prevailed between the miniaters of the church and their patishinuers. It may alan be necessary for you to consider what remsediea may be applied for the correction of acknowledged abnses, and whether the revenues of the church may not admit of a more equitable and Judicious distribution.
"In your deliberations on these Important subjects, it cannot be becessary for me to inapreme upoia you the duty of carefuily attending to the security of the clurelo ertablished by law in these realars, and to the true intereats of religion.
"In relation to Ireland, with a view of removing the causes of complaint which had bese so severally felt, and which basd been attended with such anfurtunate coasequences, an aet was passed during the tast sesaton of parlumaent for carrying into effeet a gencral compmation for tithes. To complete that salintary work, I recominend to you, in conjunction with such other amendmente of the law as may be found appiliable to that part of my dominioss, the adoption of a mevasure by which, upon the principle of a jast comanutation, the possessons of laad, may be enabled to iree themselves from the burtion of an annual payenable ment.
"'To the further reforms that may be neceseary, you with probably find that, sthought the eatablished church of Ireland it by law pernanuently uaited with that of Eugiand, the pectuliarities of their resp-chive circumstances will require a eeparate consideration. There are other subjects hardly less important to the general pence and welfare of Ireland, affecting the adaninistrauon of jusuce, and the local taxatiou of the country, to which your attention will also be regiared.
${ }^{1}$ G Gentlemens of the Aouse of commons:
"I have directed the estimates for the service of the year to be laid before ynu. They will be framed with the mont annious attention to all usciul econotay. Notwitustanding the large reduction iu the estimates of the last year, I am happy to Inform ywu that all the extraordinary services which the exigencies of the tumes required, have been amply provided for. The state of the reveaue as compared with the public expenditare, has bitherto fuliy realised the expectations that were formed at the close of the last evesion.
"My lorde and gentlemen:
"IIs this part of the United Kingdom, with very few exceptions, the public prace has been preserved; and it with be your anxious but grateful duty to promote by all practicable meane, habits of industry and good order among the laboring classess of the comanunity.
" O a my part, I shall be ready to co-operate to the utmost of my power in obvlatugg all just cause of complaiat, and in promotiag all well conaidered measures of Improvement. Bet, it is iny painful duty to observe, that the disturbances in Ireland to which I adverted at the close of the last seasion, bave greatly increased.
"A spirit of iasurbordination and violence has risen to the most fearful height, rendering life and property latecnre, defying the authority of the law, and threatening the mout fatal consequences, If not promptly and effectually repressed.
"I feel confideat that to yoer loyalty and patrotism, I sbatt not resort in vaia for assistance in these aflicting circumstances, and that you whil be ready to adopt such measures of salutary precaution, aad to eatrust to im such additional powers as may be found accessary for coatroling and punishing the distarbers of the public peace, and strengtiening the legislative union between the two conntries, which, with your support, and uader the blesaing of Divine Providence, I am determiaed to maiataie by all the meass in my prower, as indiusolubly connected with the peace, security and welfare of my dommions."
In reading the speech, (alay a London paper), the king laid particular emphasis on the passage relating to the distarbed state of Irelaad, and was particularly emphatic when he expressed his determination to uphold the unhos of Eagland and Ireland. The tronblen in that kingdom evidenity caused much uneasiness. A London paper remarks:-"We have reason to believe that the governmeat have dreided upin strong meaveres being used for the tranquilization of that country; and also that the marquis of Anglesey will return to Dublin."
It does not appear from the speech that any mearares of direct Interposition, in the alfairs of Portugal, are contemplated.

London papert of the 14th and Paris of the 190h Fes.
Fron Great britain and Freland the mont intereating lintellirence is that which relates to the people of Ireland, in whose Givor there has been a pudden and strong mantfestation in the house of commons of Eiugland. In that body on the llith, the ehaseelior of the exchequer having moyed thee aduption of the answer to the king'* speech, Mr. Lalor, and other Cattolic members protested againat a declaration volunteered in a preceding estaing, that they were preventen ly thear catis from Irgislatiog on affars of the clutreli. Mr. O'Comerell derlared that he liad an equal right with any cuther member to legislate on chiurch affira, and, if it were not no, he might ns welt be at once ex. pelled from the house. The reading of the addreses to the king was interrupted by a motinn from Mr. Cubhett, proposine a suhstitate. The pubstutute was Inst 23 to 323 , On the 12 th , the address was presented at Windsor, the huuee having adjourned nntil $40^{\circ}$ elock.

On the retarn of the epeaker, ministers, nod twenty members, who had proceeded to Windsor with the addreas, the appaker communicated the ting's answer in substance as fotiows: thank the commons for their loyal and respectinl address, aod for the assurance which they give the of thror tlispowition to aid my efforts for the prewervation Inviolate of the union betwern Ireland and England, and for the represwion of violewer; in phort, the hon*e may be assured that I shall contunue my rfforta for the remoral of atl just groninds of complaiut throughnitt iny kingdom." The anawer was received with great applanen.
The London papers are almont exclusively oceupled with the discuseion In parhament on the king's speech. Mr. Cobtert has been very loquacious, and has not failed to attempt strength. ening his arguinents by facts and assertions relative to this country, and han made some egregious errirs; for lustance, he declared that Washington signed the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. O'Connell dennminnted the king"a apeech a "brutal and a bloody speech." The dehatea are of the most plquant kind, Ir indeed a broader and blunter word would not be more expressive.

In the thuse of lords lant night, Iord King, is moving for ant necount of the suma paid nut of the livings held by ecclesiasti. end corporations to the clergy, took oceasion to deal out wome very hard blows to the digmity uf the church. After specifying a aumber of cases in which, notwithstanding tie enormous increase in the value of the then, the allowancea to the officiatinz uninisters by the deans and chapters [the friars and monks of Protestautism], were not more now than they were two hundred years ago-bis lord-hip contended that this was a mosst scandalous abuse, and ougth to have buen remedied long agat. Bat wexperience bas proved [said his lordshin] that from ihe ceformation down to the present time, the protectors of the churet! had slown themselves more dinposend to protert the many abusea of the church, than that a reformation whouid take place; and they had used all their influence and power, and the firvt estate of the realin holding seats in that house, to prevent reform. It was their duty to nee that there were no abnses, and if there were-and they had not the mrans to correct them -they ought to apply to parliament. The king's speech reenmineaded an equitable distribition of the revenues. He lioped that this equalization wonld take place; he hoped that pluralinives would be done away with; and the winined in additinn, in order that ecclesiastical permonn tnight not weglect their duties, that they might be confined to their splritual fanctions."

LIVE OAK.

Report of the rectetary of the nary upon liee oak.
Fivery tlung which goes to throw light upon our permanent national resources, must at ail times engage the auteation of our inteiligent citizens. For sone tome past, we have intended to present to our readers a synopeis of the extremely valuable report communicated to the house of representatives by the secretary of the navy relative to live oak-that unrivalled material which forms the baejs of our naval strength-but bave hitherto been prevented by the pressure of other matters growing out of the proceedings of congress.
This report, drawn up in compliance with a call from the bonse, contains a mass of important iuformation as to the construction of vesuels of war, which required a profound kuowlectge of the subject as wefl as great pains to conccutrate and present in a form so striking and available.
The eommencemeat of this report eurbodies all the informstion which has been obtained as to the exteut of the supply of live oak both upon prablic and private lands. The amount of this supply is stated by the secretary to be about $8,000,000$ enbic feet at a inedium calculatiou of 50 feet per tree. The elements of this computation are given in the appendix in a tabular form.
One of the objects of the call was to obtan the views of the secretary upon the best mode of securing the live onk timber growiog upon public laads from hring plundered. The remedy proposed by him is both simple and effeetual. He recommends that provision be made by law that all masters of vessels having live oak on board on private aceount, before they are admitted to clearance at the eustom hounes, shall prove that the timber was taken from private lands. This plain expedieut etrikes us to be worth more in effecting the object, than thousands upon thousands of dollarz espended in "preventive service," and has been adopted by congreas in the act for the gradual inuprovement of the navy.
Preliminary to the netulement of the question of the adequate supply of this material for the futnre waats of the navy, the seeretary has presented a succinct view of the past consumption the amount now in depnt at the varioun yaris-on the stocksaftoat, ke. which of itvelf tiorme the nowt eativfactory hifotory of Ule rise and progress of the naval power of the United states that we have before seen. All who feel an interest in this subeet will find the leading facts reintive to the construction of those ships, whose career of giory has shed so much lustre upon the fame of our gallant aeamen, stated in a condensed but clear

As recourse will undoubtedly be had to the report itself, the extent of which excludes it from our columans, by all those who are inelined to examine this subject of auphly, we must content ouracives wuh hasuly glancing at mome of its resulta, and recosameadiag the report as a docunceat of great merit, which throws strong light upon this subjeet, herretotore regarded as extremely obscure and dillieult of satusactory explanation.
The whole amnunt of live oak timber eusployed in the consuructuon of publie veasels since 1797 , is stated at 974,363 cubic foel. Of thas quantity, the vessels now in commisaion contain 165,400 feet; vessels in ordinary, $322,6.33$ feet; ships on the stocks, 35,000 feet; leaving a deficit of 13t, 250 feet, which is thus accounted for: 8,000 feet were sold by order of congress in 1801; 68 ,ys feet were captured by the enenty during the late war; 44,500 feet were burned at the savy yard in this city in 1814; 3,775 feethave beea tost by shipwreek; and 8,000 feet by natural deras:
The ntock of live oak now in depol at the several yarda, purchased for building ghips under the acts for the gradual inproveseent of the navy, is 431,845 eubic feet. Thu aggregate purchases of live oak, under the annual appropriations for repairs, have amounted to 168,000 eubic feet.
The quaututy of live oak unber required for the frame of a ship of the line, is estimated at : $H, v 00$ eubre feet; for that of a figate of the first elass, 23,000 feet; for that of a frigate of the second elass, 18,000 feet; for that of a sloop, 8,000 feet; and for chat of a schooner at 1,800 feet.
Of the amount of live oak timber estimated as growing upon public and private lande, one-fourth is entimated as statable for ships of the line; one-fourth for frigates, and one-hatf for sloops ad schooners.
For the ordinary repairn of the live oak frames of vessela in commission, less than one per eant. of timber originally employed is required-for replacing extraordinary losses by fire, whipwreek and great decay, 5 per cent. is estimated-so that 6 per ceut. of the live oak tiuber of whieh the frames of our vessela are eonstructed is necessary to keep our naval force antire. This will require annually 1,700 cuble feet fir ordinary repairs, and 8,500 feet to replace extraordinary lonses upon the force in enmasission. To cover the repairs which may be required to trep up all our veasels both in ordinary aud in enmmission, it is estumated that about 27,000 feet per annum will be sufficient. The annual purchases under the appropriations for the gradual tinprovement of the navy for the last ten years have been 33,000 foed, which is to to exelusively applied to building new vessels. The present system will, therefore, require about 60,000 eubie feet per year, which may be furniahed at a medium calculation by about 1,200 trees per annum.
There have been already rewerved from sale 67,417 acres of live oak umber lanals. The seeretary recomminds a further reservation of 100,000 aeres, which would aecure an ample sup. ply for the demands of the naval nervice, both for repairing old and bailding new vessels upon the present syatem, forever.
The ealculations upon this subject are elaborate, and apparestly conclusive. No American citizen can gu through this document wythout feeting the higheat gratification at the survey of our naval revourcen, which it so ably developes.

TREASURY INATRUCTIONS.
chacolar to collectora, waval ofrickan and arrvevore
Treasury department, comptroller's office, March 7, 1883. Sta-You will receive, herewith, for your govermment, the following acts pasked at the last session of congress, viz:

1. "An ant to explain an act eatitled 'an act to reduce the duties on coffe, tea and cocoa,' phessed the 20th May, one thousand eight huadred and thirty."
2. "Anact to explan and amend the 18th section of 'an act to alter and amend the several acts itupusing duties on importa,? apprisved the 14th July, $18 \% 3$. ."
3. "An act establishing a port iff entry and dellvery at the vitlage of Fall liver, in Massachusetts, and discontinuing the office at Itightun."
4. "An act to explain and amend the act to alier and amend the several acts tuaponing duties on injorits, paseed the 14th July, 1852, so far as relates to hardware and ecriain other unomalactares of copper and brcas, and other materials."
5. "An aet to modify the act of the 14th July, I8N2, and all other acte tuaposing duties on impoits."
The thard section of act No. 2 cuntains the foltowing provisions, viz:
"1 (a sum equal to the amount of duties levied by the paid act of the 1tih July, sliall not have been cullected, and the loond or bonds given shall amount to mure than the dittes imposed by said art, the secretary of the treasury shall direet that a debenture erraticate of certificates, the form of which whall be prescribed by hum, for such excess of duty, shall bo inened to the perions placing the same in the eustody of the enstoms, payathe oat of the bond or bonds given for dutics on the same. Tise eollectors to give the debtors credit on the bonds for the difference between the high and low duties, and to cancel the bonds on payment of the balance."
To carry theme different provisinns into effect, you are, when the importer deposites the good, to eredit his bonds with the diffrence betwren the high and low dities, and if any excess shall then appear to lave beefl paid, sueh excese is to be refunded to him at the treasury; but ir, upon giving much eredit, the full amoant of duties according to the existing laws will not have been paid, the bonds are to be cancelled only on the payment of the balance thus remaining to be paid.
But in cave of goods being depontted by a permon other than the importer thereof, and a sum equal to the nmount of duties Ievied by the said act of the 14th July, shall not liave been collected, aud the bond or buinds given slaall amount to more than the duties, imposed by said uct, instead nf giving a credit on the duty bonds of the importer, for the difference between the bigh and low duties, a debenture certifieate is to be issued to the person depositing such goods for such difference, the form of which, marked A, approved by the secretary of the treasury, is harewith transinitted.
From this form you will perceive that the debentures will be payable only la case the duty bonds on which they may be predicated, shall be paid.
The same principle is to govern in the case of goods heretiofore liable to duty, but which, under the act of the 14th July, 1872, will be free.
If sach goods be depoaited by the importer, any duties which may have been paid thereon, are to be refiunded to hiun at the tremaury, and the bonds for the balanee of the duties (if any) are to be eancelled; and if sueb gooda be deposited by a person other than the importer, and no dutiex thereon have been paid, he is to receive debentire certificates for the whole, payable at the same times respectively at which the bonds given for the duties will becoune payable: but if a part of the duties were paid, then such part is to be refunded to the person who may have deposited the goods, and debenture certificates for the balanee of the duties are to be granted to him, payable as before mentioned.
The 3 d section of act No. 2, aleo contains a proviston according to which goods deposited and remaining is the eustom houpe stores until the lat of April next, will be entitled to the benefit of the 18 th meetion of the act of 14 th July, 1832 , and if any higher duty shall have been paid thereon thans would bave been levied under the last mentioned act, such excess is to be refunded out of any money In the treasary not otherwise appropriated, to the person who may bave placed the same In the eustody of the eustoms.
The applications for a return of such excess of duties, as well as for other duties to be refunded, are, of course, tn be made to the treasirry, and to substantiate the elainus, a certificate of the custom house officers is tu be produced, agreeably to the enelosed form, marked $\mathbf{B}$.
When goods which have been or which shall be deposited for the benefit of the 18th saction of the act of the 14th July, 1833, by persons other than the original importers thereof as authorised by the accompanying act No. 2; the Identity is to be established by eatisfactory evidence of the transfer or transfers for your government, in relation to which the seceretary of the treasury directs that the regulations prescribed by law, when goods are exported for the benefit of drawhack hy persons other than the original importera thereof, be observed.
Information having been received from sources entitled to entire confidence, that impositions have been practised, and wili contimue to be practised, on the revenue, by invoicing and entering the artieles knowa by the names of "summer cloth," and "brochellas," under the name of "worated stuff goods," when, aceording to the materials of which they are both composed, (say worsted or combed wool and cotton) they are not entitled to that elassification, but are liable to the uroollens dufy: it becomet neceasary that measures be adopted at the ruston houses, in the examination and Intpection of such goods, to devect and prevent impositions of tha kind in future.
In eompliance with instructions from the secretary of the treanury, you are requeated to rufund the discriminating dutiea of tonnage which have bean levicd by $y$ ou on Mexican vessels since the 5 th April, 1832, the date of the president's proclamation, directing the treaty between the United 8tates of America and the United Mexican States, to be fulnilled.
It is deemed proper to take this oceasion to eommunicate to you the following decisions of this office, viz:
6. That in estimating the value of wool unmanufactured, at the place of exportation-to the actual enst, if the same shall have been actually purchased, of the actual value, if the same hall have been procured otherwise than by purchase, at the time and place, when and where purchaved, of otherwise procured, or th the appraised value, if appraised, are to be added all charget, except insurance, and the wright is to be regulated with referebce to the pound wright as known and established in the United States. If it slath be proved to your satisfaction, that there is any differenee betwean the pound weighl in the United Atates and that of the fireigh country of exportation, anch difference is to be taken into view th thit computation of the vaine of the wool. If tha value of unamanufactured woof, estimated in the manner thun promeritied, shall exceed eight eents per pound, it will be liahle to duty, and viee versa, if it does not excerd that sum per pound. An actund weighlug at the time of arrival, is convidered necesary in all cares, in order to ascertain whether the wool witl or will not be liable to duty.
7. That an article called "fanry coral," in thin uneven pieces, aboit a quarter of an inch in length, with a hole midway between the two pnis, is not considered ne eoming under the denomination of "beade," In contemplation of law, and if not ensitied to the general exemption from duty of "corat," is entitied to ench exemption as an article not eanmerated In any law, and heretofore liable as anch, io an ad valorem duty of 15 per eent. The ciormmstance of such roral being strung, is not eonaidered as placing it upon a different footing.
8. That coral bouds are liable to an ad valorem duty of 15 per cent. as "all other beads, unt otherwise enumernted."
9. That window bitsde, made of spht futtans, are liable to an ad valorem duty of $\mathbf{1 5}[25]$ per cent. as manufactures of wood. 5. That all nuticles emposed entirely af sidk and linen, are entuted to an entry as "manufoctures of silk, or of wheh sidk, shall de a component part."
10. That all iron chains, which frmm the form and thlek ness of the links, are suitable for, and are generally used for cables, whether of Jarge of amall vessels, are to be aubjected to the apecific duty of 3 centu per pound.
1 7. That goat's and comel's hair camiets, are eutuled to an entry at 15 per cent. being considered as roming under the general elassification of "cashmere or thiset," in coutradistinction to the clasaification of "merino shavis unade of wool, and atl other manufactures of wool, or of which wool shall be a componemt part."
11. That shawls, the body composed of silk and trorated, with the figures on the border formed with carded unol, are considered to be entitled to he placed under the clarsification of "ahavis and other manufactures of silk and trorsted at an ad valorem duty of 10 per cent.
12. That ahawls of worsted or combed trool and cottons, are liable to the roollen's duty.
13. That the articles called brown rollg, or heedens, dowias, playilias, ereas and bretagnes, are entitied to an entry at an ad valorem duty of 15 per eent."
14. That the following articles are liable to an ad valorem duty of 25 per cent. viz: black limens, Ruskla sheetings, linen diaperi and damaske, damank table cinths aml napkins, linen aheeting, linen drillings for pantaloons, linen lawns, called long lawne, linen threads, trish linen shirtinge and estonillos.
15. That sail needles, sack and yarn needles, darning needles, heat packing needles, sloc miker'o. glover'm and saddler's nctiong and tambouriug needles, and all similar needles, are cmibraced y the general exemption of "needles." Bodkin" not lucluded.
16. That so much of the act of 20 th April, 1818, as requires wines and distilled apinta to be depmated in the pablic stores, to be entitled to drawhack, is considered to be still in forer; bat that the terms of credit thercin allowed are virtually repenied by the Sth section of the aet of the 11/h July, IK子2, entitled "an aet to alter and amend the several arts imposing duties on imports," the provisions in this respect, in the last mentioned nct, being no repugnant tat those in the fonmri, that both cannot etand well together, and have a concurrint efficacy.
It may be proper to obmerse, however, that this deciaion in applicable only to the importations of wines and dixtilled epirite. which have been made situce the 3 d Instant, and which may hereafter be aude.
It is understood that large importations were made of the ar ticles known by the name of platns, herspys aud Keudal cottons and deposited in the custou house stores fir the benefit of the reduction of duties which was to have taken effiret after the id day of the preselut moath, as authorlsed by the net of the 14th July, 18:2, already referred on; and that ordera for a large quanuty of waid goodn have been siven upon the faith that after the 3d Instant they wonld be admulied to entry at an ad valorem duty of 5 per cent. but that under the act eutilded "an act to mo-imports," which, so far as relatem to thenc partientar kind of goods, having taken effect on the 2 d of the month, and raived the duty thercon to 50 per cent. the imparters will be compelled to advance duties, (say the shffrreuce loetween the higher and the lower rates), for whieh, upon every principle or justice and gond faith, they concrive, congreas will pasa n law to have refunded to them, and that such advance call he preventent only In ease the trenary department can extend the tiue for the payment of the duties on the gonds in qnestion.
It is regretted that such will be the operation of the two acte mentioned; but it is not compertent for the treasury, in any case, to extend the time of payment beyond that, at which, according 0 law dutien qu prods become dire and payable.
With a virw, however, to ficilitate any application which may be made to the next congreas for rellef, it would be advisable to keep a particular account of these goods, the namm of the importers, the datea of payment uf the dutles, and the difference etween the hypher and lower amount of dulies.
It will naturally suggest itself to yont, that yon are not to include in such account any goods whicll you are not perfcelly sattefed are of that description and fabrics as to have entitled them to an entry at five per cellt. in case the act, in relation to them, of IA33, had not repealed that of 1832 .
such plains, kerseys and Kimilal cottons as were imported prior to the 2d instabt, will be liable to the jayment of the rates of duties in force at the tinve of importation; but if such rates he greater than the rates fixed by the act of 2 d instant, and the plains, kerxeys and Kendal cotious be deposited in the custom house stores as prescribed by law, they will be putitied to the benefit of the 18th section of the Aet of 14th Julv, IRT?.

Respectfully,
J. ANDERSGN, comptraller.

Treamory deparlment, comptroller's office, Mareh $21,1833$. 8ta-The conflicting proviaions in the 2lst and 24th articles of the mentid section of the tariff aet of 14 th July, 1833 , the former subjecting "all manufactures of hemp or flex, except yarn and cordnge, tarred and untarred, tickienburgs, oznaburga and burlaps, not otherwise apecified," to an ad valorem duty of 25 per cent, and the latter authorising the admission to entry of "bleached and unbleached limens," at an ad valorem of 15 per cent. have rendered the meantigg of the act zomewhat ohscure, and given riee to differchitopinions as to the eorrect coustruction of it.
The subject, however, having recently been brought to the eonsideration of the secretary of the treasury, he has decided that the provimions in the gint article are in be construed ia sach manuer as that the other provisions of the act nusy be effictual, and therefore tot to eunhrace "bleoched and undeached linens."
All articies therufole, which in the knowu coininercial sense, and in the usage of trade, have acquired the disthet appellation of liuens, blearhed or unbleached, are to be admitted at a duty of 15 per eent. Irish linenw are believed to be of this character, and are to be charged with duty accordingly.
The secretary of the tryanury bas also decided that the last proviso in the 1st section of the act of $2 d$ instant, entitled "an act to explain and amend the eighteentli section of 'an act to alter and amend the several acts imposing duties on itmports, apprived the 14th Juls, 1832 ," is to be consilered as having reference to the time of importation, aud not to the amount of dutie: -consrquenty, perds on which the duties do not amount to 8.50 are to br cousidered to be entitled to the henefit of the 18 th section of the suritf act of 14 th Jniy, 1632 , provident three years frons the date of their impoitation have not elapsed, and the other conditions, ontilling them to drawhack, be complied with. 1 embrare the occasion to state, that palm learet used in the manufacture of palon leaf hats, &re. copper ore, and fishing lines, made of Manillat araes, are considered to be free of daty:-that shawls of silk and thibet are to pay duty an "manufacturea of silk, or of whiph silk is a eomponent part"-苗d that bodkine componsed wholly or chiefly of pilver, are to pay $12 /$ per cent. but it made of iron, steel, brass, ke. or of which eititer of these metals is a eomponent material, they are to pay 25 per cent.

SOUTH CAROLINA CONVENTION.

This eonveation adjourned on Monday, the isth inst. We have prepared a detalled sotice of the proceedings, speeches, ke. buit must be postponed for the sext Reastik. The annesed are the chief papers and act which must be recorded:
The following was transmitted to the convention on the firat dey of its sitting-

Arecutire department, Columbia, Mareh 11, 1833. To Janes Handilon, jr. exp. prevident of the convention of the people of South Carelina.
sis-i herewith tranamit you a letter whieh I have received froun the hon. Benjauin Watkins Leigh, commissioner from the wate of Virziaia, which, together with the correspondence in relation to Mr. Leigh's mission, and the resolutions of Virginia, of which he is the bearer, you are requested to lay before the ansembly over which you preside. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT Y. HAYNE.
Columbia, March 11.
Sik-Having at our first interview, preeented to you the resolations of the general amsembiy of Virginia of the 96th January lact, on the subject of federal relations, I have now to requevt your excellency to lay these renolutiona before the convention of the people of Bouth Carotina, whicb, at my instance, has been re-aseembled for the purpose of considering them.
The general assembly of Virginia has expressed in its own language, ita sentiments concerning the unhappy controversy between the state of $\mathbf{8}$. Carolina and the federal government, and its motives, its viewn and ohject, in making this intercession. In these respects, therefore, the comanimsioner it has thnught proper to dupute to 8 . Carolina, ean have nothing to add, and nothing even to explain. The duty presented to him in aimple and precise. He in instrueted to communicate the preamble and resolutions to the proper anthorities of this atate, and "to give to them such direction as in his judgment may be best calculated to promote the objects which the legisiature of Virginia has in view:" and this part of bis duty be has already, by the prompt and cordial compiiance of those authorities, had the happiness to accomplish, to the entire satisfaction (ns he has reason to believe) of the tegisiature of Virginia. And he is further instructed and "authorised to express to the public authoritues and people of this our sister state, the sincere good will of the legielature and people of Virginia towards their sister state, and their ansions golicitude that the kind and reapectful repreEatations they have addresped to her, may lead to an accomnodation of the differences between this state and the genersl pvernment."
Virginia is animated with an ardent and devoted attachment the union of the states, and to the rights of the several states, that compose the nnion: aud if similarity of situation and of inbesta naturally indwee ber to sympathse, with peculiar sensibity, in whatever affects the prosperity and happiness of South Corolina and the other snuthern states, she knows bow to reensetle thls sevtiment with ture affoction and duty towards each and every other atate, severally, and towards the United States. shr is most solicitous to maintain and preserve our present institesions, which, though they partake of imperfections, from which no human invitutions can ever be exempt, and notwith otanfing some Instances of inal-administration or crror to which all gevernments are liable, are yet, as she confidently believer, the lappiest frame of polity that is now or ever bas bean enjoyed by af y people-to inaintain and preserve the whole, and erery part of these institutions, in full vigor and purty; to uphold the uniof and the states; to maintain the federal government in all ita jus powers, sdatinistered according to the pure principles of the constitution, without the least departure from the limitations preserbed by the compact, fairly undersinod, and the atate go. vernasents in all their riehta and anthority, as absolutely neeceseary to the good zovernment and happlness of their reapeetive citizens Consolidation and disunion are alike ahhorrent from her affections and her judgment, the one involving, at the least a forfettere of the manifold advantaget and biessinge so long and on generally folt and acknowledged to have been derived from the unios; and the other having an apparent, perhaps inevitahie tendency to military despotism. And she fis apprethensive-for reasona too obvious to need particular menition-that in case any differences between the federal goveroment and the stntes, shall ever be brought to the arbitrament of force, the result, lit it be what it may, must effect such a change in our existing intititions sa cannot but be evil, since it would be a change from those forms of government which we have experienecd to be gnod, and under which we have certaibly beea, in the main, free, prosperous, connected and happy. Therefore, in the preoent enntroveray between the federal government and the state of Bonth Carolina, slie depreeates any resort to force by either, and is sanguine in the hope, that, with proper moderation and forbearance on both sides, this controveray may be adjusted, (as all our controversies hitherto have been) by the influence of truth, reason and justice.
Virginia remembering the hiatory of South Camina, ber services in war and peace, and her contributions of virtue and Intelligence to the common counclis of the union, and knowing well the genernity, the magnanimity, and the loyslty of her eliaracter, entertalued the moet perfect confidence that theae sentiments so cherished by berself, would find a reaponee in the heart and understanding of every citizen of thls state. And that conffencw induced her Intercession on the prespat occasion. Ghe has ant preaumed to dictate, or aven to advise. Slie has addres sed ber entracty th the congress of the United sitates, to redrese the grievance of which South Carolina complains. Aud she han spoken to Bouth Carolina also, as one soveresn state, nas one atate of this union, onght to rperik to annther. She han earnestly, affectionately, and respectrully, requested and entreated South Carolina, " $\omega$ rescind or suspend ber late ordinance, and to awnit the resuit of a combined and strenuous effort of the friende of union and peace, to effect an adjustment and conciliation of ali publie differences now unhappily exixting." she well boped, that this state "woold liaten willingly and reupectfully to her voice;" for she knew and felt that 8outh Carolina could not descend from the dignity, and would nowine compromit the rights of her sovereignty, by yieldiug to the intercession of a sister state.
1f, therefore, no other considerations enuld have been prosented to the convention of the peopie of South Carolina, if no mther motives for compliance couid have been suggented than the intercession of Virginia, offered in the temper and manner it haw been, and the intereat we all have in the union, the conimon nttachment we foel for our tried republican institutions, the averuion from civil diseord and commotion, and the wise and Just dread of change of which mn sagacity can fresee the con-eeqnences- It might bave heeu boped and expected, that the convention would rescind, or at least suspend for a tinuc, the late ordinance.
But, in truth, the convention comen now to a consideration of this subject, under a state of circumstances, not anticipated by Virginia when she interposed ber good officen to promote a peaceahle adjustment of the controverny between this state and the federal government. There lias been made that "combined and strennous effort of the friends of peace and uninn, to affect an alljustment and ennciliation" of this controveray, the resule of which South Carolina was rrquested and expected to await -and that effort, it in hopped, wall prove successful. The recent act of congress, "to modify the act of the 14th July, 1832, and all other aeta imposing duties on importe," In such a modification of the tarif laws as (I truat) will leave litile room for hesitation on the part of the convention of the peopie of South Carolina, as to the wisdom and propriety of rescieding ite ordtnance.
Forbearing, therefore, thenter at large into the many and forcibie couniderations of justice and policy, which, independently of this measure of congresa, sight, 1 humbly conceive, have sufficed to induce the convention to suspend, if not to reseind the ordinance, I shall rest in the hope, that the wisdora of the convention will adapt, at once, the courre which the dignity and patriotiem of South Carolina, her attachnient to the union, so constantly expreased, and manifested by her deeda, her duty to herweif and towards her sister states, and (i hope I may add without preaumption) her respect for the Intercession of Virgl nia, shall dictate to be proper; and that that course wili lead to a renewal of perfect harmony.

Rensibip as I am, how tittle any effort of mine ham or conld have enntributed to the resuit I now anticipaie, I shall be well content with the honor of having been the bearer of the resolutions of Virgiuia, and of a favorable answer to them-happy in being the humbest instruinelt of pheh a work.
I have the honor to be, with profound respect, your most obadient serv's,
B. W. LEIGH.

To Ais excellency Robert Y. Hayne, governor of Soulh Carolina.
[From Mr. Leigh to the governor of Virginia.], Columbin, March 12, 1833.
Sir-The convention of the people of South Carolina met yesterday, in pursuance of the proclamation of the president of that body. As it had been reassembled at my inatance, for the purpose of considering tive resolutions of the general assembly of Cirginia, on the subject of the controversy between that state and the federal govermment, I addressed a letter to goo vernor Haync, requesting him to commithicate those resolutions to the convenition, and indicating, In gen ral trins, the reamons that induced this interceserion on the part of Virgisia, the riett in which ber interposition was to be regarded, and the grounds on which a compliance with her requemt, that the ordinanee nf the convention, passed at its former apssion, should be rescinded or suspended, was wished and expected. The actual state of thinga, produced by the recent nteanurea of. congresa, redered it unnecessary, in my Judgment, to exhihit, at large, the various conaideration of Justice and policy, which, without regard to those mpasures, might have sufficed to recommend the course proposed by Virginia, to the gnod sense and patriotismil of the convention; and enabled me to avoid nany topics of pecutiar delicacy, which a reguiar discussion of the subjeet wonld liave involved. The goveruor trankmitted my letter to the convuntion, together with the former correspondence between us, (which has already been conimunicated to ynu), and the resolutions of the general assembly of Vireinia. I heruwith enclose you a copy of my letter to him, nnd of his letter to the president of the convention, ( $\mathrm{N} \circ \mathrm{ow} .1$ anil 2).
The whole suhject was forthwith referred in a enmmittee of twenty-nne members. It was expected, thmt the committee would make a report, in part at least, this morning; and I delay. ed this letter, In the hope of being ahte to give you the substance of the repmett hut on the meeting of the convention, the chairman informed the house, that the enmmintee proposed to prenent thrre several views of the subject. 1et. In reforpnce to the recent act of congress modifying the tariff; 2 d . To the mediation of Virginia, and 3d. To the other act of enngresm, cnlled the coercion law; and that a report upon one of theee topict night be expected to morrow. I have no doubt, that the convention will rescind its ordinance. I have the honor to be with dis highess respect, wir, your most ohedient servait, B. W. LEIGll.

Tb Ais exeellency, JoAn Floyd, gorernor of Virginia.
The several reports, renolutions and ordinances inserted below, were nll atopted by very large majorities. Particuiars bereafter.

Report of the commiltec on the metiation of Virginia.
The committee to whom was referred the remolutions of the general assembly of Virgioia, nnd the communientioa of Mr. Leigh to the governor of the state of South Carolina, beg leave to

TRPORT:
That altiongh eircumstances have supervened since the inattution of this commission on the part of the highly respected contuonweath from which it proceeds, which have enabled this convention to necomplish the object which her assembly so ansiously and patrintically had in view, we are neverthelens sensible of the friendly dispositions of hrr good oftices at a moment when B. Caroina, denonucril lyy the expecutive of the federal governuneut, and threntened with an extreanty of its vengeance, stood absolutely alone in the ernitert she was waging for the rights of the states nid the constitutumal tiberties of the country.
To this interference and these friendly illapositions, &. C. denires to respond to a sister sovercign, and independent commonswenlth, in $n$ tone of candor, confidence and affection. Apprecinting thus sensibly, both the mimives and objects which influenced the general asembly of Virginia, to despatch, at a moment so interesting, her comminsioner to this state, whose mianion, even if the recent modification of the tariff had not been adopted, would have cinnllenged her high respect and profound consudv:ration, she cannet peomin the occasisin thus offered to pass without making $n$ frw decinrations which she regards as due to herself and the puthic tiberty of the country.
In the first place, 8. C. desires to stand acquitted, and believes os a calen and diapansionate reflection by her co-statea, she muat stand acquitted of the chnrge of tinving acted with mny undue preciprtation in the enntroversy hititerto pending with the federal government. Yor ten yenra, she petitioned, protested, nnd remonstrated against that eyotem of unjust and unconstitutionni legialation which had equally received the repromation of Virginin befive slie reeorted to her veto to forbid its enforcement within her limits. In exereising this facuity of her sovereignty, she helieved she rested on those doctrines which in 1798 and 1799 thad conferred on Virginia and ber distinguished statermen, a renown oo unfiading. She bow refers to this aub. Ject in no invidieus spirit of controversy, bat when Virginia nsserted in those meanonnile remolutions of her general assemhiy, "that she viewed the powers of the federal government as re*ulting from the compact to which the stateg are partiva as imited by tive plain sewre and intention of the instrument constitut ing that eumpaet, as no forther valid timn they nre anthorised liy the grants enumerated in that compact, and that in ense of a deliberate, palpable nod dangernus exercise of other powers, unt granted by the said compact, the states who are parien there. to have the riglt, and are in duty bound tointerpose for arresting the progress of the evil, nid for maintaining within their respertive firnits the authoritien, rights, and inberties nppertain"ug to them," we conceived she hins done nothing nore or tens than annomince the remedy which $\mathbb{B}$. C. has resorted to, thrnugh her ptate interpoxition. If is moreover asperted in the report explannterry of those repolutions, that this right is a constitu. tional, nnol not a revolutionnry right, and by the whole context of the powerful argunaent embraced in that report, the right it. self stands forth an meparate and independent of the ordinary remedies of procnring n endress for the ordinary nbuace of the foderative government.
When therefore the general aspembly of Virginia, in the recent resolutions, horne by her cemmissioner, which your committee are now consinering, declares "that whe does not regard the resolutions of $179 d_{\text {and }} 99$ as sanctioninz the proceeding of 2. C. ns indiented in the ordianace of her convention," with afl the proper defirence 8 . C. must nevertheless adhere with on honerq and nbilling confidence to her own conctruction. It is within the Providence of God thm great truths shoutd be in. dependent of the imman agents thnt promulgate them. Once annourreet, they become the subjects and property of resson, to all men and in nll time to come. Nor will $\mathbb{S}$. C. feel less ennfidence in the conservative character of her remedy, whiph she believer to be in perfert harmony with in tree expmation of the foctrines of the resolutions of 1798 , by the recem teatimony afforded of its efficary in a pacific accounmodation of the late controversy with the federnl government, although that government has attemuted to destray the anthority nad effirienry of this remiody, by the contemporary passage of an act perpetrating $n$ worse and mare aggravated outrage on the constitisluon which lias again dentanded the interponition of this convention

Report on the force bill.

The committee to whom was referred the act of the cogress of the United Btates, entitied "an act furtier to provide fir the coliection of duties on imports," beg icnve to

REPORT:
That they have, so fir as time would allow, consideed the act with such nttention, as the importance of the mintter contained in it would seem to require. At the present moment, when a question, which has long divided and perpleaced the country, has been adjusted, on terms calculated to quet agitation and restore harmony, it would hnve been $n$ matur of peculiar gratification to be able to indulge, without restaint the feelings which sueh adjustment was calcuinted to exdte. But your committee regret tn say, that nt the moment of returning peace, the mont serious and nlarming cause of disastisfaction has been afforded by the act under consideration. Jour commitiee do most aoleminly betieve that the principles srught to be established ty the act, nre ealculnted, when carried into practice, to destroy our constitutional frame of governmont, to subvert the public liberty, and to bring about the nttor ruin and debasement of the southern states of this confederacy.
The general purpose of the whole act, thongh net expressed In the terins of it, is perfectly well known to have heen tn counteract and render inefficacious nn act of this state, adopted in her eovereign capacity, for the protection of her rewerved rights. Belicvinh, as we momt fully do, that the power attropted to be. exercised by the ntate, is among the reserved powern of the states, aml that it inay be exercised ponsintently with the constutution of the United States, on opinion formind by the pood people of this state, upan the fullest and most carefini consideratiun, nid expresmed throngh their delegates in convention, yonr conmmittee minat, on thmt ground alone, liave been convincef thint the purpose of counteracting that act, and the meana by whelh it is songht in be counteracted, nee unauthorised by the ronstitation. We think that this will hernme more apparent by wttending to the lending provisions of the art of congress.

The art gives to the prearient of the V'nited $S_{\text {tatere, fir } n \text { inmit- }}$ ed time, an almost unlimited power of contuol over the commerce of the whole U . States; though certainly the power was ninly contemplated to be exercised against that ol suuth Carolina.

It exempts property in the hands of the officer of the revenue, alleged to be detained for enforeing the payment of the duties, from liability to the process of the state courts

It exempts a class of persons residing within the state-othcers of the United States, and persons employed by them or acting under their direction, or any other person professing to act in execution of the revenue lawn-from all remponsihitity to the state lawn or state tribunale, from nay crime or wrong, wheu it is alleged that the act was slone in execution of the reveuue laws, or under color thereor.
It gives to the same clans of persons the right to seek redrens for any alteged injury whatever, either to person or property, however forcign to the proper subjects of the jurisdietion, in the courts of the C'nited States; provided the injury be received in consequence of any act dons in execution of the revenue laws.
It directly supposes all the courts of the state to be inferior and Fubordinate to those of the United Statew, and provides for rendering them so, by directing to them the writ of certiorari superserding their jurimbletion.

It affects to limit and controul the jurisdiction of the courts of the state; providing for the removal of causes from theur cogaizance; declaring their judgments void, nud providing for the discharge of persons contined under their procews.
It tyrannically provides for rendering persous liable to puninhmeat for acts done by them in execution of the laws of the state and the process of ith courts, to which they are bound to yield ohedience, and which they are compelted, under the highest anctions, to enfurce.
It not only provides for the punishment of persons thus acting hy the eivil tribunaik, but authorises the employment of military force, uniter color of executing the laws of the United States, to resint the execution of the laws of the state; superseding with the quick execution of the sword, the slower process of courts.
The aet authorises the confinement of persons in unusual places; which ean only mean on bourd shipw; in which persons Isom the most remote parts of the state: may be confined.
The committee believe that all thme positiona are distinctis anstanaed by the act in question. Ily the constitution of the U. Stales, thes power to regulate comurree, is given to congress. It is an inportant portimu of the legislative power, and as legislative power, is tncappatife of delegation. Congress has however, in cffeet, ulelegated to the president, the power to abolish, at his diseretion, any port of the United States, or iuterrupt or destroy its comnterce. This may ensily be effected, under the authority to remove the cuntom house to any port or harlor whin the eullection dixtrict, hy fixing it at inconventent or inaccessibie places. To say nothing of the unusual and treinen. douss character of this power, whieh New York or Philadelpha might perlape apprriend, if there were any expectation of its tring exercised with respect to them, and the enormous abuse to which it is liable, does the coastitution contemplate or an thorise, the delegation of this diseretion to an Individual? If it were exerelsed, it would be a plain violation of that part of the constitution which directs that in reguiations of commerce, no preferemee shall be given to the ports of one state ovvr thme of another. The same ineqoality is oecasloned by dirreting the payment of casti duties. It In vain to say that this bas been rendered necepsary by the act of the state, and without it, the collection of the revenue would be itapracticable. Whatever latutude nay be allowed in the splection of means necespary and proper to earry into elifect the granted powers of congreas, we coneve no one has yet Imagined, that a plain provision of the constitution may be violated, as a means of carrying into effect a power granted by another provipion. Although we may concede the power of congress for sufficient cause and in good faith, to abolish one port of entry and eatablizh another, yet we of course cannot concede that it may delegate this power, or that the soversign act of the state, for the vindicalion of her reserved rights, contitutes sutficient cause, or that this act has been done in good faith.

The provisions of the net, thnt all property In the hands of any officer or otber perwon, detained uniter any revenue taw, shall be subject only to the orders and decrees of the courts of the $\mathbf{U}$. States, plainly enacts linat it whall not be subject to any process, onder or decree, of the courts of the state. We have heretofore been aceurtoined to regard our wuperlor courts as having jurivdiction over all persons and all property within the limits of the state. Thas juriadietion is of course superwedeal, whonever any other court of euncurrent jurisdiction has possession or enstonly of any cause or any property. But that a ministerint, executive officer, or that pmperty in his lands, should be exempted from the jurisulietion and authority of state conrta, we believe to be unprecenlented in our legralation, anme withont any shadow of constitutional authority. One of the most extraor. thuary and exceptionable provisions of the art, appears to be that antherising the removat, previnus in trial, of suits or prosecutiona from the mate courts, uponaffidavit made, and a cert firate of the opiusin of nome connsellor or attorncy to the same eifiert, that the suit ur prosecution was for or ont account of any act dotue undor the revenue laws of the I'thited states, or unler celur therrof, or for or on arcount of any right, authority or titie. eet npor elaimed by any officer or other person, under any sueh law of the f'nited Stater. If there lee any violation of the law of the state, If there be a wrong lone to person or property with-

In the limits of the state, have not the courts of the state juris diction of that matter? By what anthority doen the congress of the U'nited States lmat that jurisdiction? What shadow of constithtomal provision is there to sauctiou this mont flagrant usurpation? Truc such a viohation of the law of the state usay somefinces be justified as being done in execution of a constututional law of the United stater; but this is a matter of delonce, and to be tried an every othu: defence is to be tried, and can lave no Affert in ousting the Juriadiction or in gaving to the courts of the I/nited states original jurirdiction of otirtices against the state taws. So any prerson is authorised to bring sult in the courtate of the Voited states tor any muly to perwon or property, for or on account of any art done m execution of the revenue tawn. The constitution gives to the conirts of the Vntted states jurisdiction of all cases in law and equity arising under the connutution and laws of the Chited states. An assauk on the persun or trespanse to phoperty ba viohation of the laws of the ptate. Cis it make a thtierence that a violation of the state law was provoked by an act done unter cilot of esechaing the law uf the United statews The protection of persous and prrperty has heretofore teen supfosed the province ol the states. In assuming to itselt this new function, the federal government indieates most cleariy its teadency to engross all power and controul ali state autherity.
It is plan, likewive, from the various provisibus of the act, that such suits are lintended to be allowed against personn acting la execution of the process of the state courts. Judgments of those courts are dectared to be void, and persons and pioperty exeupted from their jurisdiction.

It in not only our law, but part of the law of the civilized world, that the judgment of a court of competent jurisdicuon Is valid unth it be reversed by a competent authority. The judgmeut of a superior court of general jurisdiction, can never be void for want of jurisdietion. When there are courts of concurrent juriadiction, that which obtaias poesession of the cause is entutled to retain it; lts process niust be respected, and all other juriodiction is excluted. It is true that the judgments of conrts of limited jurisdiction, (and zuch are the conrts of the United States, and so they themselves have deternined), aro void, if the jurisdiction be transcended. This distinction would sectin to determine whether sovereignty is to be attributed to the state or to the federal authority. Ititherto, it las never occurred to any one to doubt that an olficer, acting in execution of the process of a court of general jurisdrction, ind all persons acting under lisis direction, ire exriupted from all responsibility for that net. He in bount, under the higheat sanctoon, to exeote that process; and shall he be punished for performing his duty?
If this aet were suhmitted to, the entire administration of the criminul justice of the state onglt be intarrupted, and th is not coo inuch to *ay, that the ntate goverminents would be reindered infuracticable. The worst cribunal-one stained with the guit of niurder-upon makiug an affidavit, which no such criminn vould hesitate to make, and procuring a certificate, which any criminal migit eawily procure, would be able to elude the eriminal justice of the state. His cause must be remuved to the federa court; and when upon bis trial it shall appear that his act was not done lu esecution of the law of the United States, your commitice do uot perceive what other consequence can fotiow than that he must be acquittrd and go with impunity.
Having taken this view of the provisions of the act in question, the conamittee would pubmit to the solemn consideration and determination of this eonvention, whether they do not effect an entire cliange in the character of our constitution, aud will not, when carried into practice, abolish every vestige of iberty, and render this an absolate, oonsolidated government, without timitation of powern. It has been truly sail if these things may be done, the most solemn acts of the highest authorities of the etate may be regarded as the mathertised proceedhngs of individuate; the courts of justice may be shut up; the legislature dispersed, as a lawless mob, and we, ourselves, representing, as we vainly believe, the sovereignty of the state, called to answer for what we have said and done on this floor, at the bar of a citcuit court of the United Statcs. Is this an exag. gerated picture? Let us examine it a little more closely. if these provisions may be made to enforee the execution of the revenue laws of the United Btates, they may he made to enforce any other act which congress shall think proper to pass. No matter how oppressive, how clearly unconatututional, there is no power in the constituted authorities of the state to resist it If one class of cases may be removed from the jurisdiction of the state courts, any other class, subject to the diseretion of congreas, may be likewise removed. If the process of the courts be void, and the officer cxecuting it, and thomesacting under his direction, responsible clvilly or punishable criminally, the judge Who directed the proces nunst be answerable in like manner. He was equally without autbority, and having cominanded the act, is a partaker of the puit. The legislature who commanded the act ot the judge, anll the convention of the perple, in obedience to whose mandate every thing was done, must have the same participation. If the sheriff and his porve, obstructiug the expcution of the revenue laws, may constitute that unlawful combuation and asvemblage, on being notifien of which the president is anhiorised to use the miinary forep of the United Etates to disperse them, then the courts, the legislature or the conventimn, in ohedience to whose authority atone the sheriff acts, and who are the efficisnt canses of the ohstruction, are awpemblages of nimilar character, and may be dispersed hy military force. The whole purpose of the act is to confound the acts of the con-mituted authorities of the atate, hnwever molemth and well ennsidered, with the lawkens and Irrigolar acts of Individuali or mobs. The certais effect of it must be, to restran the statea from the exerciec of any other authority than such an congreser, or the secuonal majorty represented itt congress, shall think fit to permitt thein to exercine, and to insure the enfrrerment of every law which tiat majorily may thmik proper to ruact. It luvalvea the crueliy and absurdity of making the community, and the individuala of the communty, punisliable for their acts in obedience to the laws of their governmient; an obrdieace from Which tiey cannot exempt themselvew unlew they absolve themeelves from their aliegrance by self banishment.
That the object of anmy of the politicians win supported this bill-the politucians of that mujarity in whose hande all power wili be-is to extablish a consolidated guvernment, is now hardIy or at all dirguived. The citmera of a governuent partly cottsolidated, pauy federative, ns now scarcely contended for. The same clasa of politicimus have al ways liad in view the same ubject. It was aitempted ta be effected in the ennvention which framed the constituilon of the United States. The attempt was there follod. Atter the formation of the governuasint, those who affected consolidation, axwined tien term "federal," and denied that the opulions held by them, led to that rewnlt. The poscesaion of pulwer, however, developed their vlews, nud the hrst marked indication of their disposition to engrons the powers of the states and ureddte with their Internal concerns, was afforded hy the alien and sedition laws. This nttempt was so strougly rebuked by public opinion whels led to the change of the adminintrauon in teu0, that the hopes of enusohdation weemed abandoned forever. They r-mained domant, unthl revived by the agitations apringing out of onr late protecting system. It was perceived that nothing leds stroug than a consolidated goverinment could sustain that systen ot ininuity. Gradually we hnve been cold that the ptates have parted with a portion of their sovereignty; then, that they wore nrver moverelgn; until at lengith availing themelves of the excitemient of a prarticulnr crisis, and passion far power, and the influence of an individual, the art before us tas been passed, awerping away every vertige of atate avereignty and reserved iights, or causing them to be held at the mercy of the majority, compnred to which the alien and sedition laws sink into meayures liarmiless and insignificant.
And what in it to the sonthern statem, to be subjected to a cousolidated goveroment? 'Tlicse staton canstitute a minority and are likely to do so forever. They differ in Institutinns and modee of indu-try, from the staten of the majority, alld have different and in sone degrem inconupatible interents. It la to be governed, not with reference to their own interests or according to their own habiss and ferlings, but with refirence to the intep. ests and according to the prejudices of their rulers, the majority. It has been truly a aid thnt the protecting wystem constilutes but a small part of our enntroversy with the frdiral governisient. Unleas we can obtain the recognition of anme eftertual constitutional check on the usirpation of power, which can only be derived from the snvereignty of the rtates, athel their right to in. terpose for the prearrvatoni of their reserverl powers, we shall experience oppressinn more rusel and revoltug than tins.
While there remains within the states nuy spirit of liberty, prompting them to repel frderal usurpation*, nue of the most obvious means in break that spirit and reince the state to aub jection, will be that whish lise heen altenupted by the art before ke. It will be to create or to su-tain by the patrouage of government or other means, a party within the state, devotenl to federal power, exempted from responpibility to the state authoritios, and having power to haraze and degrade the atate authontice hy means of the tribninals of the United States. Thus will be created a governuent within a government, with all the consequences which experience informa ins nte likely to arlse from that state of thingo, and such as dill arise from the independent eeclexiastical Jurisdictions established within the governments of Europe. The fedoral governmenta will interfore with every department of the state governmipnts; it will influence elecions; it will raise up and pal down parties, as they slanll be more pervile to its will. Pretext for interforence will never be wanting. Already has it been maid that ours is nn longer a repuhlican government, because the slate in vindicating lis sovernienty has refused to enirust with any portion of its authority, thoue who denv or refuse to recognise that sotereiguty. Other classes nf Individuala might be found wihin the state whom it inight suit the majority to muppose diaffanchiard in depogation of true republican principles, and to mequire their luterference and protection. This interference will lwe practised at first with modetation, and with some apparent respect fir the rizhts of the state. Gradually, na the power of the eovernment shall be eatablatied. and the sonthern states become wenketied and lesa eapable nf pesistance, the flow of moderation will be thrown nff. Thins the peace of thnse statms will be embliroiled; their promperity Interrupted, their charneter degrnded, until in the nalural progress nf things, your committee think it not too rirang to way, that they will be more miseralule; more utterly enslaved; more thoroughly debased, than any provinces Hiat have ever been rendered subjeet by the sword.
In alloding to the oath which the state has herelofore thought proper to exact of its eitizens, and th one momewhat slmilar, Which the committee propose to recommend, they think proper to disclaim, as they do most solemniy disclaim, on behalf of themselves and the convention. thint this or inny other mensure which the ennventinn has adopited, has been adopted upon mere party views; to secure paity ancendaney, or gratify party resent.
ment. They appeal to God, that their only object has been to vindicate their ughts and libertics, and the combion liberties of the whole south. This olject they have pursued in singleneas of purpore; thongh exposed to much oblofuy-threatened with mach dnnger, asd dwcountenanced hy those from whom they had a right to expect support. Tisy lave nover songht to endauger thim union; but to perpetnate it by rendering it compatithe with, and a seculity for liberty.
The Grmanss of the state seems, at length, in some degree, to have triumphed. But let it be recollected that the mosnent of trimmpin is commonly one of slanger. Let it be kept in mind, that this la not a contest ended, but a contest not more than beginn, and unt to lee determined till zitis act shall cease in disgrace the statute trook. Let this contert be carrled on firmily, steadily, without pasmion and withnut faltering. If the vigilance of the state should relax, if it should cease to raise up barriers nyninvt the head of nsurpation, which threatens in overwhelm no-the torrent will hreak loose, and ewrep our liberties along with it. Lect every man consider this his uwn pecultar business. If litherty be saved, every thing is saved; If liberty be lost, every thing is lost.
As the provisions of the act have reference only to certain act: of the people and Irgisinture of this state, whicb have been suspended by the Inte modifications of the tariff, it could not have bcen contetuplated that it should have any Imurediate operation. And your committee doubted whether, reganding it as merely $n$ menace, they should recommend any actinn upon it, or ouly that the sentinents of the ennvention shouid be expressed in regard to the pristiples it contnins. But most of its provipions are mode permanent, and may be put ill practice on some future occarion. The committre cannot doubt that it expresses the true principles of many of those who voted for it, and who will neek occaston to reduce them to practice. As a precedent it is most dangerons. The vote on the very act, *haws how litule is to be expected from a majority. It is Incumbent on Sonth Catolina, nusupported as she in, to take care that no federal authority unauhorised by our federal compact, shall be exureised within the Imits of the state, until a returning semec of justice, and constitutional obligation in the majority, slinil nffird hope of a government conteut to confine its action to its proper nhjects. For the furpose of providing that the act shall never have operation of effect within the limits of the state, the commitee beg feave to reporl the following ordixaxce.
We the people of the reate of Nouth Carolinn, in convention aprembled, do decinre and ordain that the act of the congress of the C'ulied States, entitied "an act further to provide for the collection nf duties en imports," apprnved the 2d day of Mareb, IRB3, is unauthorised by the constitution of the U. Stater, subversive of that eonstitution, and destrictive of pubiic liberty, nnd that the same is and shall he deemed mull and void within the limits of tils state: and it shill be the duty of the legislatare, at Fuch time as they may deem expedirnt, to adopt such measures and pass suchacts ns may be necessary to prevent the enforcement thereof, and to inflict proper penalties on any person who slabll do any act in execation or enforecnent of the same within the limits of this state.

We further ordain, that no person whn shall be hereafter elected or appolinted, or who has lieretofore been elecied but has not yet takra the oaths of otice required at the time of his election or appointment th any office civil or military within this sinte, (membery of the legislatinre alone excepied) shall enter on the execution of such office or be in any respect eompetent to diachnrge the sluties thereof, ontil the shall have taken in addithun to the oath of offre now required, at the wame time and in the same minnner that auch oathis are required to be taken, the following onth of allogiance. "f declare inymelf a ci"izen of the free and woverrign state of Eouth Carolina; I declare that my allegiance in due to the said state; and hereby renounce and aigure all other alligiance incompatible therewith; and I will be trueand faithful in the said state, so Iong as I continue a citizen therenf; so help me fond."

And it is further ordnined thnt if any officer heretofore elected or hereafter to be electrd, shall refise or neglect to take the aforestud oath, witlin the time that other naths of office are required by iaw to he taken, such office shali be eonsidered vacant; and the governor inf the state shnll procced (except In the instance of juiges of the state) to fill streh vacnncy hy appointIng ann offierr, to serve until another officer shalf be elected and duly qualified.

SPEECH OF MR. CLAY,
In the senate of the United Staten, February $\mathbf{2 5 , 1 8 3 3}$, in vindication of hial bill, entitled "an act to modify the aet of the 14th July, 1832, and all other acts imposing duties on inports.' The bill to unodify the tariff being under considerationMr. Clay rose, in reply to Mr. W'ebster, and said: Being anxious, Mr. President, that this bill should pass, and pass this day, I will abridge as mueh as I can the observations which I an called upon to make. I have long, with pleasure and pride, eooperated in the publie service with the genatof from Massachusetts; and I have found Inm faithful, enlightenrd, and patriotic. I bave not a particle of doubt as to the pure and elevated nouves which actuate hin. Under these curcumstances, it gives me deep and iasting regret to find myself cotnpelled to differ from him as to a measure involving viual interestr, aod perhapa the safety of the anion. On the uther hand, I derive great consolation from finding myself, on this occasion, in the midst of friends with whom I have long acted, in peare and in war, and especially with the honorable senator fion Maine, [Mr. Holnes] with whom I liad the happiness to unite in a memorable instance. It was in this very ehanber, that senator presiding in the committee of the senate, nad I in tire comnittee of twenlyfour of the house of repreacntatives, on a Sabbath day, that the ternus were adjusted, by which the eompromise was etfected of the Missouri question. Then the dark clonds that houg nver our beloved country were dispersed; and now the thunders from othera not less threatening, and whish have been louger secumulating, will, I hope, roll over us harinless and without injury.

The eanator from Massachnsetts objects to the bill under consideration on various grouuds. He argurg that it imposes unjustifialile reatraints on the power of future legislation; that it abaadons the protective polvey; and that the details of the bill are practically defective. Ile does not object to the gradual, but very inconsiderahie, reduction of dutues which is made pror tn 182. To that lie eould not odiject; because it is a speries of prospective provision, as he admuts, in conforinily with numerous precedents on our statute bsok. He does not nbject so much to the stats of the pmposed law prior to 18:12, during a period of nine years; but, throwing himself forward to the termination of that period, be pontends that congrean will tien tind itself under ineonvenient shacklew, imposed by our indiscretion. I the firat plaee, I wonld remark, that the bill eontains no cddigatory pledgen; it could make trone; none are attempted. The power over the snbiject is in the constitution; putt there by those who formed it, and lialle to be taken out only by an aumendaient of the insirnment. The next congress, and every ancceeding congress, will undoubtedly have tie poner to repeal the law whenever they may thluk proper. Whether they will exercive it or nm , will depoud upon a sound diecretion, applied to the state of the whole country, and estimating fairly the ennequ+ncee of the repeal, both upon the grneral hariaony and the common interests. Then, the bill is finnnded in a splrit of eompro toise. Now, in all eompromiaer there tunt be mutual conewa. sions. The friends of free trade insist that dnties phould be taid in reference th revenup alune. The friends of American industry say that another, if not paramonnit, object in iaying them, shouid be to dimini-h the consumption of forcign, and inserea*e that of domestic products. On this point the parnes divide, and, between these ivo opposite opinions, a reconciliation in th be effected, If it ean be accourplished. The buil assumpes, as a basis, arequate protection for nilie years, and less beyond that term. The frieods of pentection suy to their oppenents, we are willing to take a lease of nine years, with thic lang chapter of accidents beyond that period, including the chance of war, tie restoration of coneord, and along with it a convictiun, commion to ail, of the ntility of protection; aud, in ennaderation of it, If, in 1892, nome of theae contingeacion shail have been renlised, we are willing to submit, as Jong as congress may tbink proper, in a maximant rate of 20 per cent. with the power of discrubinating below it, eash dutirs, home valuations, and a liberal liat of free articles, for the benefit of the unanufarturing intereet. To these enndition, the apponenta of proturtion are ready to accede. The mensure is what it professen to be, a compromise; but it umposen and could hapose no restriction upon thie will or power of a futmre congreas. Doubtiens great respect will be pald, as it ought to be paid, to the serious condision of the country that has prompted the passage of this bill. Any future congress that might disturb thas adjustment would aft muder a high reaponsi biliy, but it would be entircly within its competeacy to repeal, if it thought proper, the whole bill.
It is far from the object of thase whon support this bill, to abandon or surrcader the poliey of protecting Auseripan induntry. its protection or encouragemant may be aecomplished in varinus ways. Ist. By bounties, as fur as they are withn the coustitutonal power of pongress to offer thein. Wd. By prohibitions, intally excluding the foreign inval artifle. 34. By high duties, without regard to the agaregate abount of revenue which they produce. 4th. By discrininating datiex, so adjusted as to limit the revenue to the econouncal wants of government. And Sthiy. By the admissinn of the raw maternal, and articles essenual to manufactures, free of duty. To which may beradded cash dutiex, home valuations, and the regulation of nnetinns. A perfert nystem of protection would comprehend mont, if not afl these modes of afficrding it. There might be, at this time, a prohibition of eertain artirles, (ardent sprits and poarse cottons, for example), to public advantage. If there were not Inveterate prejudices and eontheting opinions prevailing, (and what etatesman ean totaliy disregard impedinents of that character?') such a compound ayatem might be extablished.
Now, Mr. President, before the assertion In made that the bill aurrenders the proteetive policy, gentemen shouid understand perfectly what it does not, as well an what it does, propose. It impairs no power of eongress over the whole subject; it cuntains no promise or pledze whatever, exprens or implied, as to lounties, prolubitions, or auctions; it does not touch the power of congress in regard to them, and eongress is perfectly free to exercise that power at any tuar; it expresaly recognises dineriminating duties within a preserbed limit; it provides for eash duties and hoine valuations; and it seenres a frue hat, embracing numerous artieles, some of high importanee to the manufacturing arts. Of all the modes of protection whirh I bave enumerated, it affeets ordy the third; that is to kay, the inoposition of bigh duties, producing a revenue beyond the wants of govertiment. The senator from Massachuneltw contends that the policy of protection wa, mettled in 1816, and that it has ever since been inamained. Sir, it was settled long before 1816. It is coeval with the present constitution, and It will continue, under some of its varions aspects, during the existence of the government. No nation can exist, no nation, perhapm, ever exiated, wutbout prusectson, in some form, and to wome extent, being applied to its own indurtiy. The direct nad neewnary conseyuence of abandoning the protectinn of his own industry, would be to subject it to the restrietions and prohihitions of foreign powers; and no nation, for any length of time, ean endare an alien legislatinn, in which it has nn will. The diweonsents which prevail, and the safety of the republie, may require the modifiention inf a upecine mode of protection, but it must be preserved in mome other more acceptable shape.
Ail that was settled in 1816, in 1824, and in 1828, was, that proteetion should he nfforded ky hizh dutier, without regard to the amount of the reverue which they might yield. During that whole period, we land a publie debt which absorhed all the surplasen beyond the ordinary wants of gavernment. Betweon 1816 and 1224 , the revenae was linble to the great fluctuations, vibrating betweett the extremes of about nineteen and thirtysix millious of dollars. If there were more raveune, more deb was paid; if leme, a minaifer gmount was reinabursed. Sueh was momesimes the deficiency of the revenne, that is became neersary, to the ondinary expenaes of govencment, to Ifeneh upon Ufe teu millions annually spt apart, as a siuking fund, to extinguish the pulnic debt. If the pnblie telte remain-d undimelaarged or we had any other proper and practical mode of apprropriatong the surplus revenue, the form of protertion, by high datios, might be eontinued without public detriment. It is the payinen of the puidie debt. then, and the arrest of internal improveinent hy the exercise of the veto, that unsettie that specifie form of pritection. Nobody supposmon, of pmposes, that we simuld continue to levy, by means of high dulies, a large annnal surplus, of which no practipal use can be made, for the rake of the inet dental protegtion which they afford. Tlie areretary of the treasury castinates that surplins on the existing sente of datios, and with the other somrees of revenue, at six militions anmually. An annoal arcumulation, at that rate, would, in a few years, bring into the treatilry the whole eurrency of the country, to lie there inactuve and dormant.
This view of the condition of the country has Impressed every public man with the necessing of some modification of the prineiplet of proteetinn, so far as it dependa npon high duties. The aenator from Masnachasetts ferls it; and hence, in the resolntions which the snbmitied, he propomen to reduce the duties, so as to linit the anount of the revenge to the wants of the government With him, revenue is the prineipal, protertion the sutordinate object. If protecuon eannot be enjoved after surh a reduction of dutips as he thinks ought to be made, it is not to be extended. In says rpecific dutien, ind the power of diwerimlnation, are prenerved by his resolutiona. So thry may be under the uperation of the bill. The only difference between the two arhemes is, that the bili, in the maximum which it provades, nugents a rertain limit; whilst his resolotions lay down none. Relow that maxinum, the prineiple of alincrinnination and apecitic dutios may be npplied. The senator from Renneylvania, [Mr. Dallas] who, equally with the senator from Masenchuaetts. if opposed to this hill, would have ngreed to the biil if it had fived thirts instead of twenly per centim; and he would have diapensed with hoone valuation, and come down to the revenue standard in five or six yearn. Nuw, Mr. President, I prefer, nnd 1 chink the manufacturing interest will prefer, nine yevars of adequate protection, hotae valuations, and twenty per cent. to the plau of the seuntor troun Peunsylvania.

Mr. President, I wnit to be perfectly understood as to the motives which have prompted me to olier this measure. I repeat whnt I said on the lutroduction of It, thnt they are, first, to preserve the unnnufacturing interest, ind, secondly, to quiet the couatry. I bulreve the American system to be in the greateat damger; nnd I believe it can be placed on n better and enfer foundation nt this messon, than at the next. I heard, with surpmse, my friend trom Massachumett say thnt hothing liad occurred my friend trom Massachumette say thnt hothing liad occurred withn the last six months to increane lts hazard. I entreat him to review that opinion. Is it correct? Is the issue of numerous elections, including that of the highest othecr of the govermment, nothing? Is the explicit recommendation of that officer, in his messige nt the opening of the session, sustained, as he is, by n recent triumpinnt elecuon, nothing. Is lis declaration in his piocinmation, that the burdens of tie south ought ro be relieved, nothing? Is the intronluction of a bill Into the house of representatives during this session, sanctioned by the head of the trcauary and the adnainistration, prostrating the greater part of the manafinctures of the country, nothlog? Are the iacreasing discontente nothing? Is the tendency of recent events to unite the whole south, nothing? Whit hnve we not witnessed in this chamber? Friends of the administrntion bursting all the ties which scemed indissolubly to tinite them to ita chief, and, with few exceptions south of the Potomnc, opposing, and velicmently opposing, in favorite measure of that administration, which three short moutha apo they contributed to establish! Let in not deceive ourselves. Now is the time to adjust the question in n manser satisfactory to both parties. Put it off until the mext sesaion, aod the aiteraatlve mny, and probably then would be a speedy nind ruinous reduction of the tarifi, or $n$ civil war with the entire south.

It is well known that the mnjority of the dominnnt party is adverse to the tariff. There are many honorable exceptioss, the seuntor from New Jersey, [Mr. Dickeraon,] anong them. Hut for the exertions of the other party, the trifif would have been long since sacrificed. Now let us look nt the composition of the two branches of congress nt the next session. In this body we lose three friends of the protective policy, wathout being sure of gaining one. Here, judging from present appenrances, we suali, at the next ression, be in the miuority. In the house it is notorious that there is $n$ considerable accesseion to the nutimber of the dominant party. Ilow, then, I ask, is the system to be suetained against numbers, agninst the whole weight of the administ ration, against the united south, and aganst the increased pending danger of civll war? There is, indeed, one cuntingency that inight nave it, but that is too uncertain to rely upon. A certain ciass of northern politicisas, professing friendship to the taritf, have been chnrged with being secretly inimient to it, for political parposes. They may change their ground, and come out open and undisguised supportcrs of the system. They may cven find in the ineasure which 1 have brought forward, $n$ motive for thelr conversion. Sir, I shall rejoice In it, frons whatever casse it may proceed. And If they can give grenter strength and durability to the system, and at the same time quiet the discontents of its opponents, I shail rejoice still more. T'hey ohall not fiad me disposed to nbandon it, because it has drawn shall not fiad me disposed to nband

No, Mr. President, it in not destruction but preservation of the systein nt whích we aim. If dangers now assait it, we have not created them. I have sustained it upon the strongest and cleareat convictions of its expediency. They nre entirely unattered. Had othern, who nvow nttachment to it, wupported it with equil zeal and straightforwnrduess, it would be now free from embarrassment; but with them it has been n secondary interest. I utter no complalnts-I make no reproaches. I wish only to defend myself now, as heretofore, agaiost unjust assanits. I linte been represented as the father of this system, and I am charged with an unnatural nbondonment of my own offspring. I hnve never arrogated to myself nay such intimate relation to it. I have, indeed, cherished it with pyrental fondness, nnd my affection is undiminished. But in whit condition do I find this child? It is in the hands of the Philistines, who would surangle it. I fly to its rescuc, to snateh it from their custody, and to piace it on a bed of security nnd repose fir nine years, where it ainy grow and strengthen, and become acceptable to the whole people. I behold a torch about being applled to a favorite edifice, and I would save it, if possible, before it is wropt in flames, or nt least preserve the precioua farbiture which it eontaims. I wish to wee the tarif sepnrated from the politics of the country, that business men may go to work in secnrity, with mone prospert of stability in our laws, and withont every thing being staked on the issue of elections as it were on the hazards of the die.

And the other leading object which has prompted the Introduction of this measurc, the tranquilizing of the conntry, is no less imporinnt. All wine human legistation mast consult in some dregree the pasmlonn, and prcjurlices, and feclisge, as well as the interents of the people. It would be vain and foolish to procerd at nll timee, and under all circumetances, upon the notion of abenlute certainty In any system, or infalibility in nny dogan, and to push these out withont regard to any consequencps. Wuh us, who entertain the opinion that courerems is conetititionally inveated with power to protect dotncstic industry, it in in question of mere expediency as to the form, the degree and the time thnt the protection shall be afforded. In weighing all the considerntions which abould control and reguinte the exercise of that power, we ought not to ovelook what is due to those who honesily entertnin opspoaite opinious to large masaes of the community, nnd to deep, long cluerished and growing prejudices. Perceiving, ourselvee, no constitutionnl impediment, we have less dificulty in accommodnting ourselvee to the sense of the people of the United States upou this interesting subject. I to believe that a majority of them is in favor of this policy; but I am induced to believe this almost againgt evidence. Two states in New England, which had been in favor of the sgatem, have recently come out against it. Other states of the north aind the cast have shown in rewarkable indifference to its prescrvntion. If, indeed, they have wished to preserve it, they have nevertheless plsced the powers of goverotnent in hands which orduary information must hnve assured them were rather a bazardous depositony. With us in the west, although we are not wathout sonne direct, and considerable indirect, interest in the wystern, we have supported it more upon national thnn sectioual grounde:

Menntime, the opposition of a Inrge and respectable section of the union, stimulnted by politreal nuccess, has increased, and is Incrcasing. Discontents are sultiplylng and assuning sew nnd dangerous aspecta. Tivy have been cherished by the course and hopes inmpired during this admiuistration, which, at the very moment that it threatens and recommends the sue of the power of the whole union, prociaims aloud the injustuce of the power of the whole union, prociaims aloud the injustuce of the system which it would enforce. These discontents are not ysutan which it would enforce. These discontenta are not cation; they nre not confined to oae state; they nre coextensive with the entire south, nnd extend even to northern states. It has been intimnted by the senntor from Massachusetts, that, if we legisinte at this mesion on the tariff, we would seem to legislate under the influence of a panic. I belicve, Mr. Prenddent, I nm not inore sensible to dnager of any kind thnn my fellow men nre generally. It, perbnps, requiree as much moral courage to legisinte under the impatation of a panic, as to refrain from it, lest euch nn Imputation should be made. But he who reqards the present question as being limited to gouth Conrolina alone, takes $n$ view of it much too contracted. Thare is a sympaihy of feeling and interest throughout the whole sonth. Other wouthern sintes may differ from that as to the remedy to be naw used, but all agree, (grent as in my humble judgment is their error), in the submtnntial justice of the cnuse. Can there be n doubt that those who think in common will pooner or later net in concert? Fiventa are on the wing, ind hatening this co-operation. Since the commencement of this wession, the most powerful southern member of the union has thken $n$ measure which cannot fail to lead to important consequencea. She has deputed one of her most distinguished citizeus to requent in suspension of measures of resistance. No nttentive observer can doubt that the snapension will be made. Well, kir, suppose it takes piace, nuil comgreas should fail nt the nest mosion to afford the redrens which will we wolicited, what conrse would every principle of honor, and every consideration of the intureste of Virginia, ns she undrratands them, exact from her? Woulal she not make cammon cause with gouth Carulina; and, if ale did, would not the entire south eventualiy become partire to the content' 'The rest of the uninn might put sluwn the south, and reduce it to eubmission; but, to say nothing of the uncertainty nnd haznrds of all war, is that a desirable state of things? Onght it not to be nvoided if it can be honorabiy provented? Inm not one of those who think that we must rely exclusively upon moral power, and never resort to playwical force. I knuw too well the frastives and follies of man, in his collective an well as individunl chnracter, to reject, In afl possible coses, the cmployment of force; but I do think, that, when resorted to, ewpecially nnvong the members of a confederacy, it should manifestly appear to be the only remaining nppeal.

But suppose the present congress terminates withont any adjustment of the tariff, let us see in what condition ite friends will find themselves at the next session. 8 . Carolina will have poatponed the esecution of the law pasacd to enrry into effect her ordinance until the end of that scssion. All will be quiet in the south for the present. The president, in lis opening tneseage, will unge that justice, as he terms it, be done to the south, nnd that the burdens imposed upon it by the tariff be removed. The whole weight of the aulministration, the united south, and manjorities of the doninant party in both branches of congress, will be found in active co operation. Will the gentleman from Massachusctts tell me how we nre ta save the tariff against this united nnd irresistible force? They will accuse un of indifference th the preservation of the unlon, and of being willing to expose the country to the dangers of civil war. The fact of South Cnrolina postponing her ordinance, at the instance of Virginin, nnd once more appealing to the juwtice of congress, will be pressed with great euphasis and etlicet. It doees nppear to me impossibie that we can prevent a most injuriots modification of the tanff at the next session; and that this is the favorable moment for an equitable arrangement of it. I have been snhjected to animadversion for the ndiniswion of the firet, that at the next ecssion, our opponeats will be stronger, nnd the friends of the American system weaker than they are in this congrews. But is it not sn? And is it not the duty of every mon who nepires to be nstatosman to look at naked facta as they reaily nre? Must he suppress them? ${ }^{\text {? }}$. Ought he like chil-dran, to throw the counterpane over his eyeer, and persuade timeer that be to secure trom dapager Are not our opponentu as well informed as we are about their own atrength?

If we adjourn, withont aoy permanent settlement of the tariff, in what painful sumpense and tertible uncertainty shall we not leave the manafacturers and business men of the country? All eyes will be turned, with trembling and fear, to the next eesion. Operations will be circumscribed, and new enterprises checked, or if otherwise, ruis and bankruptcy may be the coosequence. I believe, sir, thu measure, wheh offers a reasouabie gearanty for permanency and stabilty, will be bailed by pracueal men with pleasure. The political monufacturers may be against it, but it will command the approbation of a large majorty of the business manfufacturen of the country.

But the objections of the honorable aenator from Massachuwett are principally directed to the perlod heyond 1812 . Ihuring the interamednate time, there in every reason to bope aod belveve that the bill secures adequate protection. All my information 1841, were perananent, or if the bilf were even silent beyond that period, it woult command the cordial and unanimous concurrence of the friends of the policy. What then divides, what alarms us? It is what may possibly be the state of thingw is the year one thousand eight hutidred and forty-two, or subsequently? Now, sir, even if that shonld be as bad as the momt vivid imagination or the most eloquent tongue could depict it, If we have Iutermediate safety and security, it does not seecm to Ene wise to rush upon eertain and present eviss, because of those which, adusitting their possibitity, are very remote and contithgent. What! Shall we not extinguish the dame which is bursting through the roof that covers us, becanse, at some future and distant day, we may be again threatuned with conflagrastun?

I do not admit that tus lall abandons, or faile hy its provisions, to secure reamonable protpetion beyond 16$2. I cannot know, I preteod not to know, what will then be the actual conknow, I preteod not to know, what will then be the actual condition of this conntry, and of the nannfacturing arts, and their relative conslition to the rest of the world. I would as noon confide in the forecast of the honorable senator from Massachurets, as in that of any other man in this senate, or in this country; but he, nor any one elee, can tell what that condition Wull then be. The degree of protectueo which will be reguired for domestic Industry beyond 1842 , depends upon the reduction of wages, the accumalation of capital, the improvement in skill, the protection of machinery, and the cheapenlng of the price, at hame, of exsential article», such as fuel, iroo, ke. I do sot think that the honorable senator can throw himself brward to 1842 , and tell us what, in all these particulars, will be the state of this country, and its relative state to other colinuries. We koow that, in all human probainiity, our nunbers will be increased by an addition of one-thrd, at leart to their preaent amount, and that may moterially reduce wager. We have reason to believe that our capital will be augunenteil, our skill improved; and we know that great progreas bas been skill improved; and we know that great progress bas been made, aod is malking, in machinery. "'liere is at ennstant tendency to decrease in the price of iron and coal. Tlie opening of new mines, and new channels of comminsicition, inust continue to lower it. The shccessful introataction of the process of eoaking would have great effect. The price of these artieles, one of the mont opulent and intelligent manufactaring bouses is this country assures me, is a primcipal cause of the present necessity of protection to the cotion interest; and that Gouse is strongly inclined to think that 20 per cent. with the sher advantages secured In this bill, may do beyond 1812.Then, sir, what effect may not coovaleinna and revolutions in Barope, If any should arise, produce? I am far from desiriag them, that our country may profit by their occurrenee. Her greatacas and elory reat, I hope, opon a more solid and more gemerous basis. But we cannot sliut our eyes to the fact, that oor greateat inanufacturing, as well ha commercial, competitor tundergning a momentous political experiment, the issue of which is far froon heing alnolutely certain. Who can raise the veil of the snecceding mue yrars, and show whst, at their termination, will be the degree of competation which Great Britain can exercise towards us in the manufacturing arts?

Eappose, in the progress of eralual descent towards the reveme standard, for which this bill provides, it should, some years hemee, hecome evident that further protection, beyond IRfy, than that which it contemplates, tnay be necessary, can it be doubted that, in some form or other, it will be applied? Chr minfortase has been, and yet la, that the publie mind has been conatantly kept in a state of feverinh escitetneat in respect in thla pyotem of policy. Conventions, eiections, congress, the public press, have been fur years all hctiag upon the tariff, and the tarm acting upon them all. Prejudices have been excited, pasof era kindled, and mutual Irritations carricd to the lughert pitch of exasperation, Inmomnuch that good feelings have been almost extingulehed, and the voice of reawon and experience siicneed, tmong the members of the conficderacy. L.et us scpurate the tarif fom the agitating politice of the country, place it upon a table and firm foundation, and aliow our coterpriving countrymen to demonstrate to the whals nnion, by their wh! fil and whe. cessfal lahors, the inapprreiable value of the arts. If they can bave, wbat they have never yot enjoyrd, some yearm of repose and tranquility, they wall make, pilenty, inore converts to the policy, than would be made during a long period of anxious strugste and boisterous comtention. Above all, I count upnot the sood effeets reeuliting from a restoration of the harmony of this divided people, upon their good senee and their love of justiee. Who can doubt, that when paswions have subsided, and reason has resurned leer cmpire, that there will be a dispositon throughout the whole ution- to runder ample justice to all ita parts? Wha will believe that any seetion of thin great confederacy would look with indifference to the prostration of the intercents of another section, by distant and selfish foreign nations, regardless alike of the welfare of us all? No, sir; I have no feara beyond 1842. The people of the United States are brethren, made to love and respect each other. Momentary causes may seen to allenate them, but, like family differences, they wifl terminath in a cioser and more affectionate unioo than ever. terminath iti a cioser and more affectionate unioo than ever.

That such a syptem will be alopted, if it should be necessary for the period of time subsequent to 1842, I will not doubt. But, In the scheme which I orignally proposed, I did not rely exclunively, great as my rehance is, upon the operation of fraternal feelings, the return of reamon, aod a sense of justice. The scheme contaised ao appeal to tife interests of the south. According to it, unmanufictured cotton was to be a free artiele after 1842. Geatlemen from that quarter have again and again aswerted that they were indifferent to the duty of three ceals peef pound on cotton, and that they feared no foreign competition. I have thought otherwise; but I was willing, by way of experinient, to take them at their word; not that i' was opposed to the protection of cotton, but believing that a few cargoes of foreiga cotton introduced Into our aortivern porth, free of duty, would hasten onr southern friends to coane bere and ask that protection for their great staple, whichis wanted in other sections for their Interests. That featnre in the scheme was stricken out in the selcct eommittee, but not by the consent of my friend from Delaware, [Mr. Clayton] or mymelf. Stıll, after 1842, the south may want proteetion for angar, for tobacen, for Virginia coal, periaps for cotton and othes articles, whilnt other quarters may need it for wool, woollens, Iron ond cotton fabrice; aad theee mutua! wants, if they should exist, will lead, I hope, to some amicable adjuatment of a tariff for that distant period, eatisfactory to all. The theory of protection supposen, too, that, after a certain time, the protected arts will have acquired puch strength and perfection as will enable them subecquently, unaided, to stand up against foreign cobspetition. If, as I have no doubt, this should prove to be correct, it will, on the arrival of 1842 , encourage all parts of the union to consent to the continuance of longer protection to the few articles which may then require it.
The bill before ws strongly recommends itself by lts equity and impartiality. It favort no one intereat, and no one state, by an unjust saerifice of others. It deala equaliy by all. Its basis is the act of July last. That aet was passed after eareful and thorough investigation, and long deliberation, continued through several montlas. Although it may not have been perfect in ite adjustment of the proger nieasure of protection to each article which was supposed to merit it, it is not likely that, even with the same length of time before us, we could maka one more perfect. Assuming the Justneas of that sct, the bill preserves the respective propositions for which the act provides, and sulpects them ail to the rame equal but moderate reduction, spread over the long space of nine years. The semator from Manshchusetts contenda that a great part of the value of all protection is given up by dippensing with eppecifie duties and the prinelpie of discrimination. But much the most valuable articles of our domestic mannfactures (cotton and woollens, for cxample) have never enjoyed the advantage of specific duties. Tbey bave always been liable to ad valorem doties, with a very iimited appllcation of the minimum principle. The bill doce not, however, even after 1842, surreuder cither mode of laying duties. Discriminations are expressly recognised below the maximutn, and specific duties may also be imposed, provided they do not. exceed it.
The honorable senator also contends that the bill in imporfect, and that the execution of it will be Impracticable. Ife asks; how is the excess above 20 per cent. to be nscertained on coarse and printed cottons, liable to minimums of 30 and 35 cents, and subjert to a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem; and how is it to be natimated in the case of sperific dutien? Rir, it is very probable that the bill is not perfect, but I do not believe that there is ary thing impracticable in lis execution. Mnch will, however, depend upon the head of the treasury department. In the instance of the corton minitnums, the atatute having, by way of exception to the general ad valorem rule, declared, in certain eases, how the value shall be estimated, that statutory value onght to govern; and consequently the 20 per cent. ahould be exclasively deducted from the 25 per eent. belug the rste of duties to which cottons generally are liable; and the biennial tenths should be whtracted from the excess of five per cent. With regard inspecifie duties, it will, perhaps, be competent in the aecretary of the treasury, In the exceation of the lave, for the aake of certainthe ircaaury, in the execution of the law, for the aske of certainty, adopt anme average value founded npon importations of a previous ycar. But if the valae of each carm, and every part of it, is to bes ascertaineil, it would the no more than wlat now it the operation ig the case of woollens, silks, cottuns above 30 and 25 cents, bnil a varicty of other articles; and consequendy there would be no impracticahitity in the law.
To all defects, however, real or imaginary, which may he mupposed will arise in the execution of the principies of the bill, 1 oppose one conclusive, and, 1 hope, satufactory answer. Congrese witl be it session one whote munth bethre the commencefurther legislaumin shalt be disesvered, there will be more tume then than we have now to supply thens. Let us, on this oceaвин oi comproanse, purate the capaple of our fatler, who, under the influcnce on tine sune sprint, in the adoption of the constintion of the Vinited statez, determined to ratily it, and go for amendiuents aft rwardn.
To the argument uf the senator from Mansachusett, that this intetest, and that und the other cannut lne mistained under the prot-ction beyond 1842, I repuat the nuswer that nu noe pan now telt what may then twe necensars. Regarded as a pledge, it done not bind congress for ever to adthere to the ppecifie rate of duty emmaned in the toil. The most, in that view, that it exarts, is to make a farr exproment. If, aller son-h experincol, it slamid the demanstrated that, under such an arfangeurnt of the tanff, the uterevts of targe portions such no arfangeurnt uf tiwe tarnf, the therests of large portions gress witi bec compe to nt to apply mone renucdy that will tec effectund; and I hope nod believe that, in euch a contiugency, anme will be deviued that may ureserve the harmony and perpetuate the blessiugs of the numon.
It has beew alledged that there will bo an angmentation, in. stead of a diminution of revenue, under the operation of this hilli. If feel quite confudent of the revirssp; butt it is whticient tu say that buth cuntingencies are carefally piovided for in the bill, witimut affecting the protected nrticles.
The genthman frum Mareachusette di-llkes the measure, Inecause it comuanta the concurrence of tinse who thave lueen hitherto opqosed, in regard to the tariff; and is approved by the the gentieman from south Carolina [Mr. Cothosin] as wril ns by myealf. Wiy, wor, the zenticman hax tudn us that he is unt opposed to any compromize. Will he be pleased to any how any comproini-e can be effectod, whthout a concurrasice letween those who hial beeveprevion-ly dovided, and takilg some mediun between the two extrmes? The wider the divi-inn nuay have heen, sos much the befter for the econpromise, which ought to be judged of hy ite nature and by its telms, and unt woles. ly by those whon happon tol vote for it. It is an adjustment to whel buth the grat interests in this ponntry way accede without either being thatonured. The trimmph of neither is emmplete. Fiulh, for the wake of peace, hawmony, and union, makes some concessions. The south has contemied tive every vratige of protection slonidy toe cradieated from the rtatite book, mid the revenue standard forthwith adoptect. In asaucoting to this bill, it waives that protensinll-yichds to reawmable protectou for nive yeare; and consents, in ponsiderathen of the maxiluinm of twenty per cent. to be sutsequently apphed, tu discriminations below it, eash duties, home vaiuations, and a long list of free arsicles. The north null west have contended for the practical ap plication of the priaciple of protection, requlated by no other limit than the necessary wants of the country. If they accede to this adjnetment, they agrec, in monsiderntion of the stabitity and certalnty which thine years' duration of a favorite system of policy affords, and of the other advantages which hove been cuumerated, to come down in I8-t2 in a limit not exceeding twenty per cent. Both partiex, animated by a desire to nvert the evils which might flow from carrying ont into alt their consequences the cherished systom of elther, have met upon pommon ground, made mutual and friendly concessions, and I trust, and sineerely believe, that nether will have hereafter ocensinn to regret, as neither can justly reptoach the other with what may be now done.
This, or some other measure of concitintion, is now more than ever necessary, since the massage, through the nenate, of the enforcing bill. "To that bill, if I had bern present, on the final vote, I minnuld have given my nssiont, nithoukh with grrat rehictance. I belleve this government not only possesaed of the constitntional power, but to be bound, by every connideration, to maintan the authorliy of the faws. I would not speak in its behalf. I thonglit it most proper in ino to leave to the frimuds of the administration and to uthere, who might feel theminelves particularly calted upon, to defend and nustaill a stiong theasure of the administration. With respect to the reries of acts to which the execulive has reanoted, in relation to our mouthern dosturbance, this is not a fit occavion to enter upuna full considuranon of them; but I will briefly say, that, nlthongt the proclomation is a paper of uncommon abithy and eloquence, duing great credit, tas a compostion, ta him who prepared $H_{\text {, }}$ and to thn who signed it, I tbink it contains some ulta doctrinew, which no party in this country had ventured to aserf. With thene mre mixed upmany sutund principles and Jnat siew of our poltical aystems. If it in to be judged by ita effects upon thowe tel whoni it was mors imnediately addressed, it must be adnutted to have bren ill-timed and unfortunate. Insteud of allaying the excitement wbich prevaitrd, it lucreased the cxamprrition in the infected ristrict, and nfforded new and onnecr wary enuaer of discontent and diskntinfaction in the south generally. The message, sulbequintly transmitted to congrews, communioating the proceedings of Sonth Carclina, and calting for countervanimg emartments, was characterined wih thore pruin un e mind unaleration. And, if this unhappy conteat bs to cominanc, I ancerrly thope that the future conduct of the admiuhtration may lir goverued by wise and cautious counsela, and a purental torbearance. Bnt whon the highest urgree of aniunsuly exists; when buth parties, how ever unequal, have arrayed thrusilven for the colthict, who con tell when, by the indiserethon of kntonitinates, of nhbel unforacen rauses, the blondy itrugate may connuence? In the midst of magazines, who known whew the tatal spark may protuce a territile explowion? And the hattle obee brgun, where is the Itholt? What tatitude will circumseriter ite rage? Who is to command our nrmirs? When and where, and how, is the whr to ecase? In what condition will the peace leave the Anerican System, the Americna union, and, what is ublur than all, Aucrican titwrity? I cannot profest the have in confiderice, which I bave not, in thie admini-tuationn; but if 1 had ull cumbilonce in $1 t$, I should atill wi=l to panse, and, If poowithle, ly any honorable adjostimont, to prevrnt awfol enn-sequ-ncex, the exthen of whels nu human wisdom panf firesee. It appents to me then, Mr. President, that we ought not to content uurerlven with passing the eufurcing bitl only. Noth that and the bill of pasce serm to une to be required tor the grod of onr country. The first will eatisfy all who love order and law, and slisapponve tite inadinititble doctrine of nullificution. The la-t will soothe thone who love peaee and concord, harmony and uniun. One dimnou-tratex the power nud the diapoestion to vindiele the authority and suprrmacy of the laws of the union; the other offers thint whleth, if it be necepted in the fraternal spint in which it is th ndered, will supersede the necessity of the cuidnyment of all force.
There nre some who say let the tarif go down; let our mansfacturen be prosirated, if nuch be the pleasure, at another sesscion, inf those to whose hands the goverubient of this country is cobituded; let bankruptey and roin be apread over the fand; and Iet ressiance to the taws, mit ail hazarif, be wubdued. Sirr, they take councri from their passions. They antucipate a terrible resclion from the downfafl of the tnriff, which would ultimately re-wntabliah it upon a firmer bisis than ever. But it is these very agitntions, these mutual irritutions between brethren of the satue family, it is the individual distress and general ruin that wouid uscessmily foliow the overthrow of the tariff, that ought, if possthle, to be prevented. Resides, are we certain of the reaction? Have we uot been disappminted in it as to other meazFures heretufare? But sulpose, after a long and embistered atrugzle, it should come, ill what relative condition would is find the parts af this confederacy? In what state our runed manufacturen? When they should be laid low, who, amidst the fragurnts uf the general wreck, scattered over the face of the land, would have courage to engage in fresli enterprises, under a new piedge of the vinfated filth of the governtoent? If we adjourn, then, withont passing thits bill, baving entrusted the executive with vant powers to maintain the laws, shonld he be able by the next session to put duwn all oppowituon to them, will he not, as a necessary consequence of succens, bave more power than ever to put down the tariff also? Has he not mid that the anth is oppocmsed, and its burdens onght to be relieved? And with he not feel binurlif bound, after he shall have triumphed, if triumph he may in a civil war, to appease the discoutents or the south ly a modification of the tariff, in conforming with its wishes and deinands. REMARKS OF MR. DAVIS, OF MASS.
On the amenduent proposed by Mr. Lelcher to the bill for altering and wodifying the tarift. Delivered in the bouse of representatives, Yeb. 25 , 1833 .
Mr. Spealer: I am greaty surprised at the sulden movement made in this house. One short bour ago, we were collecting our papers, and putting on our tutride garinente to go home, when the gentleman from Keniucky rose, and proposed tu end this trill to a comanittee of the whole on the ptate of the union, with instructions to strike it all out, and insert, ly way of aurrendanemt, an eutire new hall, firined nipon entirely different priaciples; yes, to iusert, I believe. the bill which tien senate now have under consideration. This motion was carried-the businens has passed through the bands of the connmittee-is now in the busse, aud there is a cry of question, questinn, around me, upin the engrosenient of the bill. Whon that was not a party to this arrangement, could one bour ago have eredated this We have, I believer, bren laboriously engaged for eight weeks upon this topic, discusping and amending the bill which has been before the house. Such obstacles and difficulties bave been met at every move, that, I lolieve, very bute hope thas of late been entertained of the passage of any bilt. But a gleam of light bas suddenly burst opat un-those that groped in the dark seem suddenty to nee their course-those that hatted, doubted, hesitated, are in a voment vade firmand even some of thnse that have made ant isntuediate abandonment of the protective system a sine gua non of their approbatuon of any legislation, seem almont to favor this measure. I am obliged to acknowledge that gentlemen have sprung the proponiton upon us at a noment when I did not expect it. And an the measure is one of great interest to the people of the United States, I must, even at this inte hour, when I know the bouse is bith hungry and impatient, and when I perceive, diatinetly, it is their plyasure to vote rather than debate, beg thelr indutyence for a fow minutes, while I state some of the reasons which impowe on me the duty of opporing the passage of this act. [Crics from different parts of the house, "go on, go on, we will bear.")
Mr. Speaker, I do not approve of hasty legivlation under any eircumstancen, but it is especially to be deprecated in matters of great importanes. That this ta a meavure of great lanportance, affecting, more or lens, the entire population of the I/nited Statea, will not be denied, and ought, therefore, to be matured with care, and well understood by every gentleman who votes apon it. And yet, eir, a copy has, for the first time, been laid upon our tables, since I rose to addren you-and this is the Irst opportunity wh have had even to read it. I hope others feel well prepared to act in thin precipatate manner; lut I am obliged to arknowledge I do not; for I bold even the beat of intentions wilf nut, in legislation, escuse the errnes of haste.
I ann aware that thin measure assumes an imposing attitede. It is ealted a bill of compronise-a measure in harmony-of eonciliathon-a mensure to heal disafficetion-and to *ave the mion. Sir, I am aware of the inporing effret of these bind intle- bren love to be thought generons; mathe, magnanimoubut they ouzht to le equalty anxious to aequrre the seputation of betug jast. While they are ansman to compose diticulaices in one ditection, I entreat them nat to oppress and wrong the people in auother. In their efforta to save the union, I hope their zeal will not go so far as th ereate stronger and better linunded dimeontents, than these they compose. Preace makers, indatord, nuen who allay excitements and tranquilive public frelinz, xtumid above all vonsalerations, study to do it hy means not offionsive to the contending parties, by means which whif not infliet in derper wound than the one which is healed. Nir what is alrmanded by thowe that threaten the integrly of the union? All abaıj"пинent of the American Nystem; a formal rethenelation of the right to protert Anserican induntry. This ie the language of the nullitication eonvrntion; they declare they rrgard the abandomment of the principle, as vastly more Impurtant than any nother matter; they look to that and not to an aloatement of duties without It; and the gentemnil from South Casolina, (Mr. Daris), with his uswal flanknewn, told us this morming it was not a yuretion of dullare and cents; the money they regarded not, but they roquired a change of policy. They demand the prond of flesh, with the unsilding olstiuscy of Sloytuek, and they require thin tomee tu apply the kmifo nearest to the trart-and slonll it be cut away? Is it pationtic? Is It litruano - ing pablic feeling? iv it saving the union tu drain ous the hife blond? 'What is this bill? I will nut say it gowes at onee th shef extremition, but it suems to me to contain a principle Which works min unqualified abandoument of the grotective poliey, unlers elangen greator than we.have a right to luok for alatil take place in nur condinon.

It propuares to demernd, by a reduction once in two years of IWn tenthis of the rxerse of dilics, over and above twenty per crit. for turarly eizht years. It slow proposes to divide the residue of anch excess into two equal parts, and to remove the whole in two years, wn that all slitson min all umperts, will be run down to a levil of 20 per cent. ad valofem, in betwern nitue and ten years. Tlie firet part of the deacent may betermed gradual; bot in the lant twin yeart, thee sthidess are, I frar, decidedly too leng to be met liv nug preparntion tor thent. Our course, then it down lull darine tha tine, wraning out the Anarican Syg. t cm , and when we allive at the foot, we pass ont from under the protretion of that parculal beur-factor, and place nurselves under the guardian*lip of the Carolina yyntem-I say from the Armernan to the Carolina ny*tell, breause dutios which arm now brlow 20 porp cent. are to lee raised to that anount, and alt from afticles, with the exception of all unimportant list of dye ktuifx, aff to le subjected to duties. Duties are, therefore, at the end of ous dechivitous conrve, to fall on all inmorted merclaandive at an equal rate of twenty per cent. Tlisis is the Carolina ayxum.
What will the the effect of thim bill? The pmection will be diministied from year to year. This will check the operanons of eapatal-it will I tear stup invextinents, if it does not erusb that enterprining, valoable class of young men who have entered upon huminess, relsiug upon their induriry and eapacity to carry them forward. Tlies are in debt, and I fear timill crealitora may fall upon Guem. Husiness then will bef loronght to a stand at ray rate, and of bankruptcies ensue, will be diminished. This is precisely what vene interosted In manufacturing are selfish enongh to desire, for they have money-wages will be ehraper, if a portion of the milla cerase to run, and nn mew ones are erceteil, and the capitalists will by this means, in the end, gain more hy a diminntion in the competion in buriness, and the reduction in wager, than they will lose by the reduetiom in duties. Hm, sir, this is a policy founded in such naked self=hnew-it in built ip mo manifesily at the expense of thone who have small capital, and of the laborers-it is mo hostile to the first priscliples of protection which invite the free investment of capital from all quarters-stiat gnods may be made cheap by the comapetition, and the publie be thus benefutedthat no friend of American Iabor can give it his apprubation on that ground. It may answer for a lime the purposes of a few if it operates as they anticipate; but shoulit this prove so, it will be an unanswernble argument with the public for ulisapproving of it, for the eanaen whirh will make the measure valuable to some, will make it injurims to the public.

Again, sir, I can vote for no bill which abandons protection. Ithink this does. It adopts the Carolina systess for equalizing duties, by briaging them all to 20 per cent. It abandons the exercise of all right to discriminate, and In that, give me-leave to say, abnudons conatnon acnse, for the symtem of equalization lias never to nay knowledge, untl now, found an advocate among finaneiers or political ecenomists. It is, howerer, a very eunningly devined plan, and worthy of its origin, (Gallatin in the free trude report), for it contains a swert poison that will destroy the lamt remnant of protection. Who ever heard of so absurd a system an ounslizing duties? What. Impose the same duties on arilent spirita as upon tea and coffee? But why do the free traders desire an equalization? Why do they tisist that the aluty on hat, on shoes and boots, on leather, on scythes, hoes and azes, shall be reduced to 20 per cent.? Why do they at the same time insist that there shall be a duty of 90 per cent. on tea and coffee, pepper, spices, fruits, and a thousand other things which we do not, and never sliali produce, and which are now free of duty? It is to level all protectinn with the dust. They start with the proposition that the public debt is paid, that we have too much revenue, and it must be reduced. We have always contended, not that the revenue shall not be reduced, for we afo not the advocates of an accumblating surplus, but that it shail be seduced by letting goods in free, or by diminishing the amount of duty when the whole caunot be spared, and that this principle shall be applied to merebandise not produced In this country, that our fabor may have the benefit of the revenue as a protection. Whate we contend that the revenue shall be levied in this manuer, the free traders insist that unthing aliall be free-and that the duty on all shail be alike. The revenue, say they, is too abuadant, and muxt be reduced. The bill before us, as reported by the committee of ways and means, is for that purpose. What a bappy mode of reducing the revenue, to diminish the ducy on hats, shoes, boots, leather, ases, &c. from 30 per cent. and more, to 20 per cent. whicn the articles are so chtirely produced there, under the present protection, that none are imported, and no revenue is realised. Is nnt the direct and obvious effect of nuch a reduction, an experiment, to see if the foreign articles cannot be introduced and the reventue incrensed insteal of dimigished? It is a still more singular mode of reducing revenue to restore the duties on articles which are free. Sir, the farmers, the mechanics, the manufacturens cannot be blind to sueh an insidioun scheme. They will not fail to diecover that the reductions of duty on a vaut variety of articies producell wholly in this couatry are made nnder a false pretence of redncing the revenne; and that the reatoration of duties to free articles is alno made under the delusive pretence of making tases more equal. It will nint escape ther ohservaLou that this erafly plan of reducing revenue is apparently devised firt the purpose of overstocking the arcasury, and creating a surpius from year to year, so as to call for further and fortier reductione, till you come, as the politiciaus of $outh Carolina declare you strall, to twelve and a hall' per cent. Is it not plain that an equalization gives the least protection which the industry can prossibly have, unless you make the dutics on articlea which we do not produer, hizher than you rate them on such as we do produce? When you lave arrived at twenty per cent. if there is a surplus, you have, I believe, the right to diseriminate below that; but of what vaine is such a right? 'Twenty per cent. ad valorem npon the foreign cost-what is that? Go per cent. ad valorem apon the foreign cost-Wiat is that Go to the officers of the cuvtonithose in New Ynrk, who withess the daily frauds and impositions of importers. Gin to the head of that establishment wha it is said declared opeuly in this city, it was a rail road for legalised smuggling, and imquire what a twenty per cent. ad valorem duty, or any other all valorem ilaty is? And if they tell you the truth, it will be, that it is whatever the importer chonses to have it.
This bill, aftre we have made our descent facilis descensue Averni, carriea us into the free trade system, which may be nummed up under thrce lieads.

1. All specifie duties are abolished, and all dutics are in be ad valorem; all free traders, and eapecially the Yorkshire men and Lancashire men of Figiand, have always earnestiy contended for this. For what reason, it is ditficuit to imagine, un less it is because frands are perpetrated with greater facility.
2. All dutles are to be equal, and to be assessed upon all imports, except a fow articles of litte importance, and consequently the discriminating principle is abandoued.
3. The gradual reduction wlich is professediy made to rednce revenae, is applied to all articles; as well those on which no revenue is raieed, as those which produce revenne; thus tending by every reduction to bring the Aincrican producer into greater peril at every step. If thia be not a total, unqualified abandonment of the protective policy, unless 20 per cent. is protective, then I know not what is an abandonment. The bill, it is true, provinles that after we come to the 20 per cent. ad valorem, the duty is to be assessed on the valuation in the home market. About the meaning of this, however, there ls alrealy a dispute. The south say it nieans the price of the goods by the duties and charges; that ts, it means the foreign eost; and a distiuguished gentletaan declared in debate distinctly, that he supported the hill upon that exposition of its meaning. If this be a true incerpretation, the provision is worth nothing. That valuatinn is to be regulated by law, according to the terms of the bill, and what that regulation will prove to be, no one can foresee.
Sir, I regret that discontent and aigns of violence have manifested themselves in this country; but I aot not disposed to meet It with a faint heart, or to faiter for a moment in support of the union and constutution. I would face there disturbere of the public tranquilitay on their own ground, and accede to the geaeral proposition that the revenue shail be reduced to the demands of the gavernment; but the amnunt of expenditnre shall be fixed by eongrest, and not by snuth Comina; and the revenue should be raiaed in with a inanier as on give the mont efficient protection to Amwriman labor. For one, sir, while I would do South Carolina juatice, ample juetlee, 1 wonld nit destroy the union by nttempting to gnve it. I wonlat not tring the power of congress and the constitutum into contempa, by establishing a procedent, that a litile kum of uneany, diseontented poliucians can, by threatening to dinnolve the union, make the government itself bow down, humble itself in the dust, abandon its policy, and promise in future to give no offence. If theme are the terms on which the union cxists, if this government holds and exercises its powers upon such conungencies as these, I was about tosay, the sooner the union is at an end the better; for the rude breati of treasin will dissolve it at any moment. But, sir, whether Bouth Carolisa is well or ill pleased, whether she declares herself is our out of the union, Iam nos prepared on any compromise, th give up the protecuve policy; and I do contend, that an equalization of duties as low, or lower than 20 per cent. protection, are incompatible. Yes, whes you surrender the right to discriminate, you surrender all.
Thin is a bilt to tranquilise feeling-to harmonise jarring opi-nions-it is oil poured into inflamed wounds-it is to definitively settle the matters of complaint. What assurance have we of that' Have those who threaten the union accepted it? Has any one risen here in his place and aunounced lise satisfaction and hls determination to abide by it' Not a word has been uttered, nor any sign or assurance of matiafaction given. Suppose they sitould vote for the bill, what then? They voted for the bill of July last, and that was a bill passed expressly to save the union; but did they not flout at it' Did they not apurn it with contempt? And did not south Carolina, in derixion of that compromise, nuilify the law? This is a practical illustration of the exercise of a phianthropic spirit of condezcension to save the unions. Your folify and your imbecility was treated as a jest it has already been said that this law will be no more binding than any other; and may be aitered and modified at plensure by any anbsequent legialature. In what sense, then, is it a eompromise? Does not a compromise imply an adjustment on terms of agreement' Bapposc, then, that Eouth Carolina shonld abide by the couspromise while she supposes it beneficial to the tariff states, and injurious to her; and when that period shall etoee, the friends of protection shall then propose to re-establish the system. What honorable man, who votes for this bill, could sustain such a mieasure? Wonld not Sonth Carolina say, you have no right to change this law-It was founded on compronuise-you have had the bencfit of your side of the bargain, and mow I demand mine. Who could answer such a declaration? If, under such circumstances yon were to proceed to abolish the law, would not south Carolina have much more just cause of complaint and disaffection than she now has?
It has been said, we ought to legislate now, because the next congress will be hostile to the tariff. I am aware that such a sentiment has been industrinusly circulated, and we have been exhorted to escape from the hands of that body as from a lron. But, sir, who knows the sentiments of that body on this question? Dn you, or does any one, possess any information which justififs $\lim$ in asserting that it is more nafriendly than this house? There is, in my opinion, little known ahout this matter. But suppose the members shall prove as fcrocions towards the tariff as those who profess to knnw their opinions represent, will the passage of this bill stop their action? Can you tie their liands? Gıve what pledges you please, make what bargaina you may, and that body will act its pleasure about respecting them. If you fall short of their wishes in warring upon the tariff, they will not stay their hand; hut all attempte to limit their power by abiding conipromises, will be considered by them as a stimnlua in act upon the subjeet, that they may manifest their disapprotion. It seems to me, therefore, that if the next congress is to be feared, we are pursuing the right course to rouse their jealonsy and exert them to action.
Mr. Speaker, I rose to express my views on thls very important question, I regret to say, without the slightest preparation, as it is drawn before us at a very mexpected mnment. But, as yome things in this bill are at variance with the prineiples of publie policy which I have uniformly maintained, I could not suffer it to pass into a law, without stating such objections as have hastily oecurred to me.
Let me, however, befare siting down, be understood on one point. I do $n m t$ object to a reasonable adjustment of the controversies which exisi. I have said repeatedly on this floor, that i would go for a gradual reduction on protected articles; bat it must be very gradual, so that no violence shalt be done to business; for all ieduction is necessarily full of hazard. My objections to thin bifl are not so much againat the first seven years; for 1 would take the conseqnences of that experiment, if the provisions beyond that were not of that fatal character which will at oner stop all enterprike. Bit I do object to a compromine which destines the eart for the altar. No vietim, $\ln$ my judgment, is required-none is necemary; and yet you propose to bind us, fand and foot, to pour out our hood upon the aftar, and sacrifice us as a burnt offering, to appease the unnatural and unfounded iliscontent of the wobth-a disenutent, I fear, and uning deeper root than the tariff, and will continue when that is forgotten. I am far from meaning to use the language of menace, when I say, such a comprotnise cannot endure; nor can any adjustment endure which disregards the interests, and eports with the rights of a large portion of the people of the United States. It has bcen said, that we shall never reach the lowest point of reduction, before the country will become satisfied of the fosly of the experimbnt, and will restore the protective policy; and it seems to tne a large number in this body act under the influence of that npinion. But I cannot vnte down my principles, on the ground that some one may come after me who will vote them up.
Mr. Speaker, I have done my Juty, in an imperfect manner, I confess; but I perceive it is in vain to discuss the matter, and I will detain the house no longer.

07 -Much matter prepared for the present sheet has been post-posed-because of the wish, so far as it was practical, to give fall siews of several iunportant subjacts presented in this aumber. We incur the want of variety, in an earnest subserviency to usefulness--bellevisig that the last will "wear the best."

0 -Having given, as we believe, all the leading reports, peanmutions and ordinaneca adopted at the late meeting of the South Caroling eonvention, we now insert what may be considered a journal of the proceedings of that body, with brief sketches of several of the speeches delivered-some of whtch have since been filied ip, and are published at length; but whether we shall give them in extenso, reunains a subjeet for future conslderation. At present, we cannot-without laylug aside other inatters of more important interest. We are mainly indebied to the Charleeton "Mereury" for this journal-but ecrain parts are derived from the "Courier" and "Gazette." We hava desired to state every thing with striet impartiality, and expended considerable tater to eollect and arrange the proceedings.

10 -We present what may be deemed a pretty full aceount of the present state of feeling in the gorerament and people of Great Britain, in relation to negro slavery, in the West Indies. It is a matter of no anall importance to the people of the IInited states-a litile more so, we think, than the tariff. There is every prospect of a speedy, and, as we think, a rash emancipnturn of the slaves. The effectsare in the "womb of time." We apprehend a season of horrons. But "revolutions never go back-wards"-"reform" will have it "perfect work;" and the people of Bingland relieve themselves of the two millions of pounds steriting whech they annually pay, in extra dutiex, even on British East Judia sugars, for the "protection" of slavers in the West Indies.
The present dety on sugar imported into Grent Britain and Ireland is as follown-
If the product of any tritish possesmion in America $£ 170$ cwt. If the product of any British possession in the East

If the product of any other place $3 \quad 30$ 4
Thus 10s. per ewt. or two cents and an cighth per lb. are paid by British consumers that slave labor'in the British Went Indies may toe "protocted" against British capital and free labor in the the East Indien, in addition to the extra cost of freights, &ce.
We are informed that the West India interest in London has beeorae so odious to the people at large, as almost to conatituta a cante without the pale of respectable society.

Q7-A long and interesting account is inserted coneerning the Irish suppreasion bill, reported in the British bouse of lordsbeing a liberal synopsis of the bill Itself, with the specches of earl Grey, the duke of Wellington, and othere, in that honseand sketrhes of a debate in the house of commons, on the same subject, And also a letter from Mr. D. O'Connell, Sc. All which are for present use, and may become important for future reference-because of events which seem about to happen.

C-The following paragraphs concerning tha mails were omitted lant week-but we still think they ought to be inseried "by way of memorandnm." Great allowaneex, surely, should be made for the hate wretched atate of the roadr, and the execssive weight of the malls-though believing that many of the delays have happened through imperfect arrangements or a wantof proper exertions: but we are sufficring by the blunders or earelensaess, of criminal conduct, of mome of the deputy fonstinasters even in our own neighborloonl, as it were, for which we cannot frame any sort of excuse. Take the two following eases, by which we bave just lost two valmable suhscribera, and, as they personally stated, because of the uncertainty of the mails.
One, a resudent at or near Allpan's, Maryland-said, though bere were two maile a week to that oftice, he was often two or three weeks without recelving a fteotsten; and that, wines last fall, about one half of the numbers issued never reachad him.
The other, at Morgantown, Virginia, was supplied as irregularly as the gentleman at Allstan's-but was more fortuante in ultinately receiving abont two thirds of his papers!
To both, two or three Reoisters sotnetimes came by a single mail.
If any ehange has been made in the packing of this paper, it is for its better security; yet the "titue has been" when it was carried, for fifcen years, to persons realdent 4 or 500 milea from . Baltimure, with the loss of not more than a single number in all that time-as several bave informed us when usking for a misting paper.
Innumerable complaints are made about the failure of the mails. Indecd, the concerns of the poat office department are wretchedly managed -ase every thinking man feared they would be, when party pollties were auffered to have influence over the appointment of deputy poxtmasters, and in the selection of mailcontractors. We asked that these might be spared from the "reforms" promosed, three or four years ago-that capahility and fidelity slsould be cheriyhed, in this interesting and delicate and important beanch of the public service. The delay of the maila is not the only grievance; the safety of them has been muck impaired; and we would hope that future reforms in the department may be strictly confined to permons who ignorantly or diahonestIy violate thrir duties, or are, otherwise, incapable of performing thein as they ought.*
The bulletin of the "New York Gazette" bas been ornamented with an engraving of a enail, baving its head and body nearly ont of the shell, and the mosto, "not in."" The "New Orieans Bulletin" bas headed its frequent paragraphs on the state of the inails, with the figure of a mud turtle; and the North Carolina "leople's Press," with the etligy of a cote, and the inseription, " $n$ milc an hour." The "Cleveland Advertiser" represents the business of the post office department by the figure of a mad-bull -loping that the bull may "be taken by the horns." The "New York Journal of Commerce" has bad many evidences of the velocity of the mails, and advertives whole matls as "atrayed or stelen." "The "Itandard" happity noticea the arrival of the Washingtion papers in four days. Such complaints are geseral. The following, however, is the best practical comment that we have seen on this grievance:

From the Journal of Commerce, Marci 23.
No small surprise was experienced here yesterday, in consequence of an order from the secretary of the treasury, directing that the payment of certain debentures on woollens, ke. should be suspended, and the documente In the cases transmitted to Washington. Many a man may thank the tordy mails for allowing hion to pocket his money before the mail was openel. It is said that the amownt of debentures has been oo very great, that a litfle time is devirahle to recruit finances.
News from Washington has been several times recelved at Charleston, via New York; and we are sometimes indebted to New York papers for news from Cliarieston.
"Dorothy" writes to the editors of the "National Intelligenear," and, among other things, maysmerchendise on walch the dulies have been dimintshed, has increaseil in price! This littie stubborn fact, in practice-is humbly reconmended to the consideration of the book-making and speechmaking "philosophers," Let them assign reasons why goods have alcays decreased in price as "protection" was augmented -and advanced in price as "protection" was withdrawn. Thert in something very odd in all this-in the theory of the "free traders"-lhough casily reconciled by practical men who know the effects of searcity and supply, and of a highly excited competition or tie want of one-or even of an apprehension that such competition may be, or will be, flattnaed. The Britivh manufacturers of political economy, and British manufacturere of wool, cotton and iron,* notwithstanding both manuflacture "ron aipoatation," act npon principles as mueh opposed aa the poler-though with a comanon object, which is to make money in their dealings with "outlandrsh" foreigners. We may inore clearly see how these thingw are "worked" soon af ter the monopoiy of the Finglinh Fiast Indla compang has ceased; and what shall then be seen, will pa ricit. But guem Dens, 2.. "Nous vernome!" There will be a "crisis" - though not of Mr. Ritchic's manufacture.

CO-Tar supplement to vol. 43. We are hastening the publiention of this very valuatile collection of papers and speechesa synopsis of which was given in the Reoister of the 16th uth. page 37. As it will "make" a great deai more matter than was originally caiculated, because of the debate on Mr. Calhoun't resuitutions, &c. (which ineludes the able reply of Mr. C. to the great sprech of Mr. Websier on the "enforciug bili," and the rejoinder of the latter, with the rpeecher of other gentlemes on the geheral subject), the cost of the supplement will be much entanced, and we regret the small number of coples which are printing-believing that they will fall short of the public demand: for, theugh our object was not to make money on this collection, we, surely, did not intend to lose any-with no small amouot of editorial laloor in the bargain. It appears probable that, after all present orders and demands for this supplement are nupplied, there may remain from 400 to 500 surplus coples; nud if any of these shall be on hand, unordered, after the ist of next month, (May), the price of thein will be one doilar and an half, instead of one dollar, only, an originally proposed. Gentlemen, therefore, who are destrous of securing a copy, will do well to send in their orders immediately; in all couveuient cases, enclosing payment. When five coples are ordered, the powtage will be paid by the editor, a good 5 dollar note being transinit-ted-but, in other cases, orders must be forwarded free of expense to this office; and in return, the supplemeut will soon be carefully packed, and sent by the mails.

I'he occaslon is hure apt to observe, that some biockheads, recently appointed postmasters, have undertaken to call the Revistix a "paniphlet," and charge postage accordingly. That question was sctlied by the posunaster generat, Gideon Granger, in 1812. $\dagger$ The law no unore prescribey the form of a newspaper than it establishes the color of a man's eyes, or the length of onc's nuwe; and, as the Rewnetea contalus more nems than any weekIy newspaper pubitished in the United states, the loweat rate of postage can only be legally charged upon it.

Wingat. Among the articles Imported by the ship Ajax, at New York froun Liverpool, are $3, e 20$ bunheh of wheat.
00 -Tiils wheat paid 15 yer ceot duty at New York-had it been sent fron New York to Liverpool, it would have been liable to a duty of about 75 per cent. ad walorem. And thiu in "rree trade?

Uxitad States' anys stock. We are happy to state, that lavt week was a sad one, in Wall street, New York! The black-leg dealers had contracted for the delivery of a large number of ahares in the stoek of the bank of the United states, at the small mivance of two or three dollars above par-but the shares steadily and firmly advanced to 110 a 111 dollars, though worthy gentlemen had manufactured all aorts of caluninies, and resorted to many honest contrivances, to prevent it-and they are said to have sustalned an aggregate hoss of three hundred swindlings in consequenee of having obtained, through of the per-[^10]fection of knavery at Washiagton, a erpy of the prosideal's inewage before it was dehvercd to congress. We shali revert to thas subject. It seems probable that a scene of corruption is about to be exposed which han no precedent ha this country, and not many even in Enrope. T'be whole concern is one of althy prostitution. We hope that these fellows have been eaught in the meshes of their own net, or failen late the pit which they bad "digged deep" for others.

A naw contixext. The London Litterary Gazette of the 23d Feb. gives it out to be believed as a fact, that a whater has fallen in with a new continent in the Antaretic ses, in about the latttude of $6 i^{i}$ degrees south, and in the Iongitude of the Cape of Gond Hope; but that the discoverers have endeavored to coneeal it, till they can bring off some cargoes of oil and seal skins. -"Brother Jonathan" long conceated the lan! which be diseovered in the longitude of Cape Horn-and "Father Bull" may be disposed to follow hir lead. It is some few years ago-bat a "Yankee" master of a ship, inviting tien to Join him for the voyage, said that he would coniluct them to a place where "seale were as tame as kittens;" and that he knew of such a place, there ie now no manner of doubt.
"Tux Eivaxcipator" is the title of a paper which has just appeared in the city of New lork. From the totiees of it, in other papers, it seems that it is for the centire and immediate emancipation of all slavea, even by the physical force of the enslaved. We are as sincerely opposed to slavery as sny one-not only because unjust in itself, but on account of ita perpetual interference with the rights of free labon-yet eamot have any part or lot in proceedings of such awful tenuleney, if sucecssful; and if unsuccessful, (as they must be, in general), can have no other effeet than to render the condition of the ensaved much worse, than it is. We doubt whether immediate emanelpation, and prompt extermination, would not practically mean the same thing, in the Uisited States.

The Proaidxiwt having received an invitation from some of bis friends in flartford, (Con.) to visit that sectuon of country, made the fullowing reply:

Washington, Narch 7th, 1839.
Gentlemen-1 avail myseif of the first opportanity afforded me since the adjuurnment of eongress, to acknowledge the recefpt of your flattering letter of the 5 th, of February last, trasesmitting, in bebalf of the citizens of Hartiord, Connecticat, the resolution they had adopted on the previous eighth of Jaswary.
To know that my character and the course of my admintitration are viewed with meotimenta of kindness and approbation, so cordiai and unquatificd as thone which are manifested in your eommunication, and by a portion of my frliow citizens to Whon I am personally a stranger, is a pleasure which more than repays the privations and cares that have made them familiar with my naine.
Could any thing add to the desire I have long indulged to visit New Ehglatid, and exauine the republican inssitutrons which her sons have raised up with so much pnblic apirit and sncress, it wuuld be the satisfaction I should expect to derive fram a personai intercourse with the citizenn themselves. I am at present unable to say when I can embrace an opportunity to gratify this dexire; but I trunt it may be in my power in the course of the present or the next year.
I am, gentlemen, with sehtuments of great respeet and regard, your obedient mervant.

Claims expme the treaty with Demmahk. We understand that the cotmmissionery appointed to carry into effect the convention with Dennaark, and to dirtribute the fund provided to indesnifly the claims of American merchants for spotiations upon their commerce, have closed the commision, and made their final report to the state department.
The time limited by the treaty, and the act of congross, for the adjustment of these claims, and distribution of the nundr, win expire on the 4th of April, after which time the clamants will be ethitited to receive their reapective proportions of the finad, at the treasury department, of which due notice wili be given. The rrturn from the bosid is in such firm is to prevent any delay in the payment of the cisime at the tieasury.
We learn, alm, that the whole amount of claims prewented and acted upon by the board, was between three and four millions of dollara. The ammunt ailowed is $82,151,425$-and the amount to be distributed is $$ 670,56478-100$, so that the ctaimants wili receive thirty-onw and one-eighth per cent. upon the snms allowed to them reapectively. [Messers. Appleton, Hidges and Nelsou declined in re-election. Mc. Gray has been seleeted as the auceessor of the former].

The elections were held last Monday. Mensra. Adans and Everett were usopposed, and, of course, re elected. At Hoston only 3671 votes were taken-Mr. Giray received 1651 , $\mathbb{C} .6$. Greene 841, T. Ly yman, jr. 819, G. Odione 333 . Mesars. Gicene and Lyinan were supported by two Interests in the Jackson party; Mr. Odione by the ant-masans. Mr. Gray was 189 short of a majority of the whole, and there must be another eiection.

Vreatmia. Col. Neurton, of Norfolk, "the father of the bouse," has groblistied a neat address to the voters of the "first congresHesual district," and retired from a nomination for re-clectoo. He was a fathful anll honest representative of the peopleMiles King, csy. has been nonumated in the place of cul. NewLon, as a Irend of the bant of the United stater, and the tariti, as arranged at the last session-and anti. Van Buren.
Mr. Stecesion, "penker of the last house of repressntatives, is agria a candidate-but is ardentiy opposed, by the liriends of Mr. John Kotertson. The "Rliehmond Whig" calls Mr. $. a "federalist," and rallies the "democrats," saying-"Can ye support a champion of the dasmable proclatuation? Can ye support one who has surrendered the 'ettadel' of stale rights to the enemy -the right of secession? Call ye suppurt an ad. wacate of the force bill?"
And speaks of Mr. Robertson as "a natural hater of aristocrats, and would-be arintocrat--the man of all our citizens, whor, the the stupticity of his life and tastes, and in the undeviating republicanism of his walk and eosiversation, most pestables cato of Utica. No fiatterer, be-no worshipper of power-no conformer to whatever in uppersuont-no interested chaugeling, whose opisions ever take the hue from the president's patace-but a uian lie is, who bolds now preciscly the aame creed which he embraced at the outsel of life-a man whome opinions no one is ever at a loss to thd out-a man, we verily believe, who, if the whole world besides were to surreader hiberty, would live and die a republican."
Adding - "Mr. Stevenson Is an applicant for the embassy to London, and if the king of Er.gland sends an aubausaulor here, is is confidently believed by Mr. Stevenson's frietrds, that he will be sent minister to Great Britau."
There are four eotupetitors in the Winchenter district, for songreas. Mr. Mercer has no present opposition ill Loadon. Mr. Talliaferro, formerly of the lususe of representatives, is again a camdidale, frum slafforid district.

There is inucli feeling in Virginia abont nullificution and antiaullification; and the principles of the president's proclamation, generally sustaiued by the legislature, are about to be tested by "the voice of the people"-except that this question is mixed up with a preference for or hesility to Mr. Gan Buren, who la now rTzarded by some as the "Black ETosk," to be kissed or kieked. Hence the grent questions niont "state rights" may not be elearly settled at theceusuing election; but it seems manifest, that a very strong paity is bring organized in severe opposition to the present administration of the general gevernment-with Which it is moet probable that the body of the opponents of preaident Jackson and Mr. Van Burea, at the late electoral plection, will ultumately hecome united, and that Virginaa, again, may be cast upon an "alternative" - as in letz.

Since the preceding was in type, the elections in Virginia bave commenced, and we have returns from several of the counties-bat insufficient, in any contested case, to shew us probable reaules. The votes, however, shali be carefully stated.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT-BURNT.
The treaury building of the Thited States have bren, for the econd time, in less than 33 yenrn, totally destroyed by fire-with a large part of the records and papers contalned therein. We prosent several aceounts of the late condagration.

From the National Inteltigencer of April 1.
Wn are sorty to have to annousce that the publie buliding enat of the president's square, oceupled as the treasuiy department, wes consumed by firs, yeaterdny morning, between two o'elock and sunriec. The fire was first discovered in the roont adjoining that of the chief clerk of the deparument, usinally known among the clerke and other officers by the anme of Mr. $\mathbf{y}$. Laub's roon. It is not known whether thic fire origunted in the floor or the ceiling of the room, the whole being in a blaze before any onc approaclied it; but no doubt appears to be entertained that the fire was nccideatal. The whole mom was on fre befure the alarm was given; and until the alarn was given, even the watch walking the pavement in front of thn branch bnnk (nenr the spot) perceived nothing of the fire, (the building of the state department interposing). Every exertion was made, as the people gathered to the spot, finding that it would be in vain to nttempt saving the building, to rescue the books and papers of the several offices. A great deal was saved, by the clerks and other citizens, considering the circumstances. It it hoped, indeed, that few books of papers of much consequence are destroyed.
All the books nnd papers on the gronnd floor are belicved to have heen waved (in great disorder of course) nad all those in the third slory were deatroyed. Or the books nnd papers in the apartmente of the second atory, mueh the greater part were saved.
The offiees on the first floor, the books of which are saved, werc those of the register of the treasury, the treasurer, and the first auditor. On the second floor, nearly all the booky of the first comptroller, whose office occupied the greater number of the rooms were saved, and a part of those belonging to the office of the secretary of the treasury, in whose inimediate apartments the fire was first discovered.
Of the offiees connected with the treasury departmeat, several of the most exteasive, are kept in other buildings than that destroyed, and are of course entirely safe, viz: those of the seeond comptroller, mecond, third, fourth and fith auditory, and the olicitor of the treasury.
The paperis destrnyed were many of them obsolete, and almost all of a date prior to 1820. The niost unpertant papers destroyed were perthap the correspondence of the hnad of the treasary departmeat, which was kept in the room whereis the fire origh nated.
When the fire wan first discovered, it was the dend boor of the night, and the whole popnlation of the clity was so deep buried in sleep, that a comparatively small number arrived early on the ground. Very soon nfler the first ery of fire was uttered, at hnif past two o'elock, the keeper of the orphan asylum bell enught nad repeated the alarm; whence it happened that the persons first at the fire, next to the lmmediate neighbors, were roused by that bell, and had half in mile to rub before they arrived at it. To snve the buiding, however, when once on fire, would, under any circumstauces, have been imposeible, so inflamminble wns its sirueture, as well as its conteats.
No onc can look at the smokimc ruins, without a mensation of astonishment at the faianty nnd utter improvidence with which books ind papers of such vast consequence lave been so long trusted to nny other timn in fire proof building. The few seattering vaulted rooms in ilim building entiry ly escaped the flames; and had the whole building heen similnily constructed, the fire could not have oceurred; or If, through extrenre carelopsness, it had oceurred, would bave been confined to the room in which it originnted.
Where was the watchman of the bullding? is a natural question. He was, we henr, sick nt home; nid the youth substituted for hine was so sonnd asleep, lisat he was perbaps only snved from being barnt nlive by thoss who broke open the doors and ronsed him. Had he been ever so widc awake, however, unless he had happened to inppect the particular room where the fire beguo, the alarm from outside might bave been his firss motiec.
Wn were glad to observe that ereditable excrions were made by the proper officers yesterday to collect and secure the meattered books and papers; so that by 2 o'elock in the day they were safely housed.

From the Globe of the same dafte.

We regret to nnnousce the total destruction, by fire, of the treasury building; hut we are happy to ndd, that, as far as ean now be ascertaincd, all the public aceounts and vouchere relating to the receipt and disturyement of the public monies have been saved.
It is understood that the fire was discovered nt about half past $20^{\prime}$ 'clock on Bunday morning, by a person aceidentally passing. The flame was first scen iasiling from the windows of the room on the upper fion adjoining the centre projection, on the north front. The alnrm was immediately given: and, by great exertions on the part of the secretary and other public officers, as well as on the part of the citizens generally, who seemed to take an equal intereat in the minter, the fisost important part of the pulilic papers were preserved. The public records nnd documents, being the chief olgects of solicitude, the principal and earlieat efforts were inade for their preservation.
The mnuncr in which the fire originnted has not been aseertained. The neceasary measures liave, however, been taken wobtain informntion on the subject, and, ns soon as the result is known, it will be comnunnicated to our readers. It appeare that the messenger, whose turn it was to wateh, was absent, from sickness; nod that the person who usunilly sleeps in the building, was not aware of the fire untal be was awakened from the outeide.

Frov the Nationad Inteltigencer of April 3.

The ofticers charged with that duty have taken two or three of the tenensents opposite to Mre. Btrother's hotel, on Pemnsyivania avenne, for the temporary accominodation of the public offices lately burnt out of the treasnry bunding. The cluefin and elerks are busy in arranging into some sort of order the rescued papers. It will take a tedions thane to put them in proper ooder. The purging offices, huwever, thave already zot to work, a! well they mught, seeiug that the bire took place the very day before quarter-day.

From the Alexandria Gazette.

We underatand that an examination into the cause of the destruction of the treasury building in Washington, is now in progress by order of the president. It is rumored that the pubfic archives have sustalned a heavy, and, in some cases, an irreparable loss, in the destruction of many comanercial papers of great value, which can never be restored-of many documents connected with the deposites of pubtic money, and of the claime of the Cnited States on debiors of unaccounting ageats. But rumor is prone to exaggerate, and we trust that it will be found so in the present lustance.

We copy the fullowing from the "National Intelligencer" of be Sth April, because that it is characteristic of the valued offcef to whom it relates.
"who willa may conquer."
Last aight duriag the conflagration of the treasury department, I ohserved that indefatigable mau, Mr. Clarke, clerk of the house of represcntativer, in the midst of the crowd, passing from one place to another among the persons engaged in rescuing the papers and documents from the flames. Some one asked him what he was afler. I want, said he, very coolly, to get my aecount of the contingent expenses of the house, wbich iffied on the $\mathbf{2 2 d}$, in the office of the first auditor. The gentleman langhed, and said be tuight as well look for a meedie in a haystack. Mr. Clarke answered, "I'II try." In an hour or so, I aaw him bold up to the attorney general a bundle of papers, and say, "sit, here they are-my vouchern for more than one buadred thonsand dollars of governinent money expended. I will sleep sound to marrow night."
This is 50 much hke bim in his own office, where be does not admit of the excuse that a paper can't be found, that thought I would state the fact, as worth publishing.

PENNSYLVANIA VETO,
Cozerner Wolf: objertions to the bill entitted "an act to inorrporate the F'armers' and Manufacturers' bank of Delaware cownty.
To the senate and honse of representatives of the commonwealth of Pennayivania.
Gevtienen:- I have examined and uaturely considered bill No. 2f, entilled, "an act to incorporate the Farsaers' and Manufacturers' bank of Delaware county," and sincere as my deaire ir to concur with the general amenibly in alt thetr acts and measures not prohibited by the enustitution, nor essentiaity inconsistent with the public interests, or which exhibit quewtions of expediency oniy, 1 am neverthclesa constrained to withhold my assent from the bill in question, under a firm convletion, that if no immediate benefit alall result to the commanity in whelt we IVe from my non concurreuce, I shall, at least, have the satisfaction to know, that I have done my endeavor to save that community from, what I confcientiously belleve to be, an alarming and minch to be dreatied evil now manlfesting itself, in an excited but morbid spirt for banking and its concomitant specmation, generally ending, as expenence has herctofore taught us, in a state of depresenion, distress and ruin. I have therefore directed the secretary of the cominonwealth to return the bill to the houne of representatives in which it originated, with the following reanous for nuy dusent.

Niraf-The bank of Delaware county, establlyhed at Chester, in that county, by the act of 1814 , whit a eapital of two hundred thousand dollars, of which the sum of seventy-seven thousand five hundred and ten doilars only, has been called for and paid in by the stockholders, is believed to be entirely adequate to the wants and neceasities of the people; and to furnish all necessary accommodations facilitating and giving a healthful and vigorous impulse to the prosecution of the various branehea of industiy in progress within the county. One hundred and twenty-two thousand four hundred and ninety dollars of the eapital stock of that bank, a wum consiflerably greater than the whole amaunt of the capital of the bank proposed to be created by the bill under conwideration, has never been required to be pald over by the stocktiolden. The very fact, therefore, that so anall an amount of the capital of the existing bank has been called for by the directors, furnishes strong, if not conclusive evidence, that a greater amount of banklog capital has not hitherto been consldered necessary for the accoumodntion of the people of Deiaware county, and that an additional bank is not needed, and would answer no uneful purpose for mere publie accommodation; expeclatly as the bank of Delaware county, by calling in the residue of its caputal, may increase its discount and extend its business beyond ite present operations, to an extent far exceeding that which the bank contemplated by the bili in question, would, from lts limited capital, be enabled to do.
Second-If the bank proposed to be established by the bill under consideration had atood alone, and entircly unconnceted with the general press for the incorporation of slmilar lustitu. tlons, from various parts of the ntate; manifeat as it in that it cannot be required for any uneful purpose, the panasge of the bilt might, perhaps, have been tolerated upou the ground of comprtition, or mone other plausible pretext; but we cannot shut our eyee against the alarming fact, that this bitt is but one of a batch of billa numbering, it is believed, not less thati twen-ty-three, providing for the incorporation of a like mumber of canks, reported to the legialature in the conrse of the present messinn; by which it ia proposed to add to the existing banking eapital within the conmonwealth, the further sum of six mit lions niuc hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars.
It must be nhvious to the plalnest capacity, what a state of things such an addition to the number of batike and the banking eapital already in operation within the commonwealith, muat aecessarity produce. It does not appear that there is any want of banking capital at present in the state of Penusylvania, (except, perhaps, in some of our atate manufacturing communities), to discount all the good paper that is offered, of to afford any and every accommodation that prudenee would justify, or our citizens couid reasonably require; most, if not all of the banka now in operation in this commonwealth, It is believed, are condncted upon eorrect principles, and bused upon solid founda tions ns to capitais, and it is believed to be a fact, that many of them would gladly extend their discounts, prosided a safo business offered.
Under sucb circumstances, should the propored number of banks, or any conslderable portion of them, be added to thone alrcady in existence, the inevitable consequence must be, that the new institutions must either remain altogether inoperative, of they must Invite business; which latter would be most likely, as they would not be willing to remain passive spectatore of the operations of their more prorperous and successful nelghbors. speculation, in all its deatrnctive varictics, would thus be encouraged; a fictitious, unsound value would be given to proper$t^{\prime}$; excessive issucs of banking paper would inundate the country; a brief but forced nhow of prosperity wnuld be produced, ending, as all such ephemeral excitnments, founded upon speculation based upon borrowed capital incvitably must end, in sperdy depresston, bankruptey and ruin.
Third-The curreney of the commonwealth ls , in the present statc of bur banking lastitutions, considered by alt as being entirely sound, uniting in the lunguage of the comaittee on banky, "all the requinites of a perfect circulatiag mediuns:" in that condition If feel desirous it whould remain, sad would therefore refrain from doing any act by which its healtbful condition might the endangered, or Its character for solldity and mounduess in any measure taruished or impuaired. An increase of banks in nifuations where the busiuess of the community is not of a character to require it, would lead to such resulta; and as the rage for such increase scems to be gaining strength in overy part of the atate, it seems to the in order to preserve the utate from a roturn to a perind of ruin and distress, such as it has recently escaped from, it is best that the evil should be met and resisted in its inception, and the country saved from the disasters which a temporining or yielding policy would be atore to entaiti upon it. These are my own views of this luiportant subject, hastliy thrown together. Should the general assembily differ from me in opinion, and believe me to be in error, it is in the power of a constitationai majority to ast the matter right.
I have also examined and considered the bilt entitted "an act to incorporate the Merchants' and Manufacturers' bank of Pittsburgh;"' and brlieviag that the city of Pituburgh does require an extension of its bankiug capital, to atfind the tacilities and aide mecessary tn a vigorous and prospwrons prosecution of the varioun and extensive eonnucreial and manulacturing enterprises In which its ciuzen* are engaged, I have approved and argued the same, and directert the secrotary of the commonweaith to retirn it to the house in whin it orighated.

Harrisburg, March 29, 1833.
After the reception of the preceding mearage, the honse of representatives toak up the bill-and Mr. Anderson of Delaware, [the apeaker] was asked to explain, and leave lwing granted, he kald that he preaumed that the governor predieated his firat objection on the report of the auditor general. Nince that report had been made, the prosent bank had thrown inin the tinarket $$ 100,000$ of its capital, and every dollar of the stoek had been taken. In the seccund objection in the meseage, he Bund that an exception was miade in favor of banks "in mawtefachuring comumsuilies." The bank now in question was located in a manufacturing community, and he beineved that if he had furnished the goveruor with the facts which he submisted to the bouse, when the bill was under consideration, showing the amount of manufacturing In Delaware county, be would have signed the bill.

The president rerainded col. Warren that Mr. Leigh was ajmply demominated In the resolations of the Virginia lepislatare, commissinner, ke. Col. W, was indifferent what Virginia called Mr. Leigh, if slic did not kniow how to christen her ambasualor, he thougit 太outh Carolina did. This produeed a turnt of langhter at the expense of the raember, but not intimidated, the colonel spid that $outh Carolina was a free, sovereign and independent power, which recognised no authority on earth paramnunt to ber sovereign will, and if the nation of Virginia was eonteat to style berwelf, after the foolish and old faslinned minnber, a plain commonWealth, she ought to be corrected by the sovercignty of south Carolina, in convention assembled. Not a few spectators thouzit the colonel was joking, but he insisted that he was a iegular nullifier, and was determined to go the whole, and owed no allegiance to any authority, exeept the sovercignty of the state. The motion in amend, however, uot being seconded, the resolutions of gen. Mamilton were unanimously adopted, and a commituee appiointed to introduce Mr. Leigh.
Mr. l.eigh was accordingly introduced, and after bowing to the clrait, and to the different sides of the thouse, took his seat at the centre table.
Mareh 14. The ordinance reported yesterday-see Reatstra, page 57, was taken up and considered-and Mr. Miller. (of the ennate of the United Btatew), explained the new tarif law, and gave his rearons why he had supported it. He thought that the "gouth Camplina doetrines" were recornised-hut raid that the convention was $n \mathrm{nt}$ committed by that act, being "elearly free to exercine itn sovprcign will." He was followed by Mr. Rarnwell; ( $p$ f the houve of representatives of the United states.) Among other thinge he alaid, he thonglit Bouth Carolina had no eause for triumph, and he was glad that Clay's bill was not reand had not got all that the gtate set ont for, bat be would sup. and had not gnt ail that the atate set ont for, bat be would supwan now, whether we should secede, and lave a cieit soar, or take the compromise. He should, therefore, vote for the phanmage of the ordinance, which lie ronsidered not at all derngatory to the dignity nor to the honor of the state."

Mr. R. Barnwelt Smith rose, evidently under great excitement. Ife maid that it had been but th very short time since he had seen the report acenmpanying the ardinanee; that he had had seen the remort necnmpanying the nrdinanee; that he had not examined It, but wiat he liad seen of it, be totally dirsented from it. Ile was sure that the constituente whom be mepresunted, nrver would eonsent th the sentiments of that ieport. ile knew them too well, and was procceding to animadivers very sevprely on the report generally; when Mr. Witson asked if the report was then theforr the conventoun.

The chatir. The ordinance ts betore the convention. The report contaits the reasons whel are snlonntited by the comasiltee, for the adoption of the ordinance; and the chair deems the gentleman in order, and will permit a latitnde of debate, when, in stating his rossons in visting for the ordhnance, twe shall attenipt to shew wheremin he ditlery from the reasons of the committre.
Mr. Swith procceded. He maid, hm was willing to vote for the ordinanee, but not on the groumin stated in the report. He called the attention of the convention to those words in the report, exprexkive of the ardent nttachment of the penple of thin mate towards the aniou. As for hinself, lie was not for such an union, and he was likewise certain, that those who sent him there, wre the same in sentiment. He said, that he would rather see the whole state, frnm the Table Boek to Fort Moultree, a military cainp, than for the state of South Carolina to continue a meuber of tive onion, such no It is now and had been for ten yearn. The orlinance of November had required more than was granted by Mr. Clay's bill, and he was for the whole requisition. Ile was unwilling to recede one step; and would requisition. Ite was unwilling to recede one atep; and would
now, on the grounds contalised in the report. If did not view that bill as a eninpromise, bccause it did not go far enough and alihough he should vote for the ordinanee, yet he wan unwilling that the report should he given to the warld, as containing the canses which induced Nonth Carolina to repenl her ordinance. He rung several changes on the wornh "ardently attachicd to the union," attempted to shew wherein South Carolina hat gained nothing by the compact; and said that, *o far as himsilf and constitucuts were concerned, the report was untrue. Ile continued, that firr auth a thing na that report to be presented to the onnvention by the commitice, as the high groanda on which the state was then to act, he, for one, never would consont to It . Ile was unwilling to degrade the state by it ardoption, and when it came before the convention, he ahould move for its reconmittal in the comanittce. Ile raid that he had been with the state, in all her movements in this great controversy, and if she repealed the isdinance of November, lse wrolld like io sef other reasons aswigned. He conelndell by repes tin'that be did not consider Mr. Cloy's bill as any thing like a triumph, as Noune gentleunet had termed it; in faet he seouted the idea of therc being any canse of gratulation or triumph, and be would never so record it by him vote.
Mr. C. J. Colrock said, he mee to explain; being chairman of the committep, he wouid nay, that the report, was snbanitted after due deliboration on the part of the committer, and lie was not himself ready to acquiesce In the whole of it. The phraseoIogy might not muit mome gentlemen, hut thrn, when the report, was before the convention, to obviate the objections of iss oppo sers, it was free to be discussed, and could be reconnmitted with instructiona th amend.
Mr. WHoon moved to amend the phrareology nf the ordinance, and ater mome remarks from Mr. Stephen D. Miller, withdrew his motion; when the president was about to put the quertion on the pararge nf the ordinance, Mr. James Hamillon, jr. attempted to rise, but gave the finor to col. Sannel Warren, from $\mathrm{St}_{\mathrm{t}}$ James Santee, a revolutionary officer.
Col. Warren, leaning against the tahle and anpported on his erutches, said, lie underwiond the gentleman from sc. Bartholempws', (Mr. R. B. Smith), to ask when he was up. "where wha the wan in the convention, who could place his hand upon his heart, and way that he was attached to this union."

Mr. Sinith-ardently attached.
Col. Wiarren-I don't care what word you place there. I for one, can place my hand apon my heart, (saiting the action to the word), and can say that $I$ am ardently attached to this union-I fought for it, and bled for it, (and he looked unconseinusily downwarits to the remnant of his dismembered limb), and will do it again, whesever my services are requirod.
This whole scene was one of deep and touching interest.
Mr. Hamilton shid, that he wan gratified, in the exprespions which had juwt fallen from his vencrable friend. He himeelf was arriently attached to the unlon, and regretted exceedingly, on entering the hall, to hear such remarks an liad proceeded from the gentieman, who had denounced the uninn, accompanied by the declaration, that the matters set forth in the report were fatse and untrue. The party with which tie had acted, which had loen abused and vilified, from one end of the country to the otier, whiell had been driven to the wall, and which now was trimmphant, whose vietory was rne of prineiple, not of dollans and cents, to be thum spoken of in conspquence of a report, so polemanly nubmitted to a convention; and by one too, who had fouglit witit them, to the lant ditch, who liad been among the foremost in the caure, was keenly felt by him, and was the: unkindest eut of all. I ask the gentleman, wherein are they untrike?
Mr. Sinith-They are untrue, an far ap 1 am enneerned, and my ennstituents; and I have already stated in what manner they are untrue.
Mr. Homitton statnd, that he wns detained from the convention at the hour of mreting, In ennequapince of the business asaiened him, as a member of the eommittre, and was therefore deprived of leaming the gnalificauon aumehed to the gentleman's denunctation; and insixted on explanation, for he had the honot of aerving with distingaishied gentlemen ou that committee, and they were ineapalle of putting forth as true, any sentimenti in the report, which would cause a degradation to the state, and drmanded again, "weherein are they untruel"

Mr. Smith replied, that he had alreally stated, that they were untrue as regarded himeelf and bis constituents, and that if the gencleunan was not in the house, it was not his fault. What he bad to say, he would say again, so that every one might hear him. He bad not been consulted in the matter; if he had been, that report would not have been submitted with his eonsent. He had gone with the party all lengths. There were men who had quariled at the onset, while he had ever been firm; and he phould, at alt times, on every occasion, and in every manner, freely give his views, on all and every subject, connected with the rights of the state, which canse before him

Mr. Hamilton remarked that he deeply and sincerely regretted the course of the gentleman. That there was no member of the party, whose zeal ia the cause was more prominent than that of the gentieman, and that tis opinion, he had ever valued, and for himsuif, he had ever entertained the highest personal rogard; yet, he had yet to learn, wherein the genileman's remarks, an on the report, coold be correct, and trumted that on the discuswion of the report, it might be so amearled as still to retain the casses, which were only an inducement to the ordinance.

At this rtage of the birsiness the convention took a recess till 4 o'clock-when having rensembled-

Mr. Philips, from Alf Saints, ohserved that he did not think the state commitiod on the vote of the deiegation in congress on Mr. Clay's bill, fur he viewed that as a bill for protection. IIe continued to state, that the bill was noe of discrimination, and rengnised by its prowivions every principle whirh the other tariff acts of congress had recognined, and proceredent to say, that he shonld votefor the ordinance of the convention, not that he he shotidd vote for the ordinance of the convention, not that he considered Mr. ©'p bill as one of trimph, but berause of the conumisulon of Virginia. That appeal would influence binn. He conctuded by moving to strike out the preamble to the ordinance.
Mr. Wrilson replicd at length, taking a view of the manufacturiag interests of the United States, shewing the situation of the country at various times, ndverting to the situation of Simuth Cisolina in prosperity, and since the passage of the severai acte of congress in relation to revenue and domestic indurtry, down to the ordinance of nullification. Hn spoke of Mr. Chay's bill as a triumph on principle, enntended that as it was such, the state stood on high ground, and therefore opposed the tnotion to strike out
Mr. Hamilton followed, arguing that there was a boon galned. Had it not been aaid, and openly avowed, that not one jor wondd be grazted to south Carolina while her ordinance to nulfify remaned on ber atatute book; and yet we see an abandon. ment of the prisciple from the very quarter where least was espected. He was proud to vay it, that the Ajax nf the American System had come furward with a bill conceding the point demanded by the mate; (and no he conceived Mr. Clas's bilt), and he pronounced it a glorions and trimmphant victory, and he should oppose, by his vote, the motion of the gentleman from Ali Balnts.
The mustion for striking nut was put by the chair, and lowt by a large majority. The quention tion recurred on the pasaage of the ordinance, when Mr. Philipe again rose, and contended that the majority should not thruat she bill of Mr. Clay down the throats of the minority and; for his part, he should vote for the ordinance, in compliment to the miediation of Virginia.

The question was then called for hy luany viriccs, and the chair being about to put it, Mr. Whiffield, of Pendirton, took the floor. The reporter, from the noive and convermation near hims did not dintinctly anderstand hlm, yet, understond Mr. Whiffield wo elainn the bill of Mr. Clay as a trimmph of principle, and that he shouid vote for the passage of tire nrdinance.

The question was again called for, when Mr. John L. Witson moved that the yeas and nays be taken. Seven membera and more rone for this purpose, nnd Mr. C. J. Colcock addrensed the eonvention in a rew words. Mr. C. suid, that for more than thirty years past he had tween engaged in uctive public life, and he upplored gentlemen to panse, in a matter of much deep and lasting import. He earneatly entreated thein, as tine had been solieited, to grant that time. It was unnccemeary to hirry the ordinance throagh ita passage, and it was all important that the Whole businens should be well deliberated upon, as the tranaactions of the convention would in a great measure fix the deatiny of the state. The party with which he acted had hera chargel on a similiar oceasion with acting in laste; he might be charged now with being too slow; but of that he wad unininifui. Appealing to the wisdom of that body, he ahould move that forther time be granted, and that the further consideration of the omfinance be suspended antil so-morrow, amil that it be tade the order of the day, which was agreed in without a count.

A motion being now made for adjournment, the convention adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow.
The very excited manner in which Mr. Smith dellvered his sentimenta, and the eall from Mr. Hamilton, as to the falaity of the repert, meemed, at one moment, to threaton the harmony of the convention; bnt the mild deportment of Mr. Hamilton threw upon the spark an extingulsher, and the dehnte pmeerded without any fisther reference to the suliject of Mr. Kmi/h's remark.

Mares is. Mr. Harper, ehairman of the sub committer of wenty-one, presented a report, with as accompanying ordinance, on the late act of eomgrest for the collection of the revenue, known an Mr. Withins' bill. The report is a very einborata document, taking an extensive view of the bill, argues at iength on the injustice thereof, its tendency to despotiam, its extreme and unlinited power in the person of me individual; the total inpolicy of it" provisiuns in a republican government, the destructive influence which it is calculated th wield; and concludea by recomniending the ordinanee to nuilin' it in the state of Nouth Carolina. The ordmance enbraces new provisions, it reference oo an alditional onth, to be administered to enjoin the allegiance of every citizen, previous to the aceeptance of any office of honor, profit, or trunt. Ordered to be printed and made the order of the day for to-morrow.
Mr. Jumer Hannitton, jp. from the sub-committee of twentyons, submitted a report, in reference to the mediation of the Irgislature of Virginia, accompanied by eeveral resolutions, expreasive of the high rvgard of this state towaris her sister en pressive of the high rugard of this state towarila her sister conamonweatth, of the gratitude with which the miediation was received; $n f$ the acceptance thereof, and of the distinguished eonsideration in which the convention of the atate, held the principles as promulzated in the Virginia remolutions. Ordered to be priated and made the apecial order uf the day for to morrow.
A resolution was also introdyced, by the same gentleman, highly complimentary to Mr. Leigh, the comminsisner from VisEinta; and alson resolutions expreasing the menoe of the ennsention, in relation to any futare nasumed power by the general covernment, had declaring, that if the faith, as pledged in Mr. Clay's bill, should not be fairly acted upon; that whoulst there be any odious diserimination in the tariff poliey; that, in such case, the state shuuld be fres to re. enact, as in the wisdom of a convention, she might deem proper: and Mr. R. H. Smith, ns eonnected with the land, sulmitted a rosolintion for the coniminnanee of the military ineasures nitopted, ns preparatory for defence; Which were se verally ordered to be printed, and made the order of the day far to-morrow.
The ordinance to repeal the ordinance of November last, being the order of the day, was takell up for eunvideration; when Mr. Miller went inte all explanation of what was ternied a home valuation. Iie spoke triefly, anil concluilent that there waz nut, in this tern, the dangers nor ditficulties which senue construcin thas tern, the dangers tions fial placed uponit.
The hon. Robert Harnieell foliowed menator Miller. His reasnos, he sald, were not precisely those of his lion. colleagne, who had preceded lim. althoush they led him to the same coneluvion. ife was weil aware that this hill, thin compromise, which they had brought home, whas not reerived as matter of trimmph; that it was reecived even most reluctanily. Sie refoleed that it was so rceeived. It apoke well fur the apirit and sense of the state. It pleased him well that they should wo merive ft. Yet, that it was received as is should be, he eould not for an instant double.
The state had arrested, In fulf career, the tyranny that bore her down. The right was refused and denounced. Averse to civil broil, she thrn pronnahceif that, if lier enustitutional effort at refirese, instead of justice and reparntion, was answered hy military violence, she wonld withdraw from this lengue. In thli ohe ouly claimed to exert the ereat fundampntal right of thas confederacy, and of all other free states. it was nirnied her, with threats th overwhelin ber with the rntire nilitary force of the nation. The federal bayonetn were turned upon her. Yet for what was it that she had ever mude herself a member of this government? Whs it not that, nuder the mutnai protection of a league of twenty-four states, she might find, at once, exemp. tion from foreign injury and domestic discord? tion from foreign injury and domestic discord? And liere thie very union was to be mute the pretence for inflieting nion har these very mischiefs, with horrors made dnublv frightfil, by the very alliance itaelf. It was to avoid such rivil broal, such strifo with the confoleracy itself, that whe had prepared to live alone. That lavi refuctant resotirce of peace aud biberty, whe utterly refused her. She was toid that she shouid be externinated if whe attempted it.

Yet did this gigantic array of syranny quali her apirit for a siugle moment? Did it shake her parpome, or tame ber lato a coward qniet? No! fierce as was the issue thaw offered her, she wonld have met it, rather than desert ber liberty or duninish her honot.
While this was her attitude, the present eompommien was preaented lier. Your choice was to be made loctwern the evills of sacession and this bill. The state had, could linve, none of that mock-hravery, that mock-liernic liravery, Iet me rall it, that coulth rast all prucience outt of the question. She had resioted the tarif nystem ns tyrannicai, oppreselve, rninnus. This hill is mone of those. The main, substantial ubject of resintance is attained; the real grievance le removed. It can no longer be said that congress will not yield us redress. We have oblained it.

If, howaver, you cannot accept this eompromine, the quewtion is yet open to the convention. You can stili chone between this bill and seceasion. Your representatives have given no pleige that iakes awny your liberty of choice. Let the voice of the state be given for secessxion, If it mav. None ean zalnany her decinion. An for me, I shall ohey. iknow too whll where my great duty ta to be paid, to hesimate, forr a single moment, in devoting mymelf in the sustaining with all that I can do, the great finat judgment of the state.

Art, then, fenrlessly, upon yonr nwa responsihility. from which no partiai acerptance of ours could have derognted. I am bound, however, to deciare to you, that the queation will now bie of eivil war, not the tariff, nor mecession.

While, therefore, I nssert, that the bill is not the utinos that we lade a right to demand, I cannot but regard it as accomplishling bur great objects. It embodies the eapital provision, that govermaseut shafl incasure its revenue by the standard of econoouical expeuses unly. This one great pinciple is distinctly implied in the bill.
Ao, too, of its Sth section, in which a system of ad valorem duties is provided fur. That system takno 20 per ceul. for ita masimum rate. Can any one regard 20 per cent, as a protective rate? Look at the old duties, rauging, on the captal artucles of import, from one to two hundred per cent.
It is evident that the elass of manufacturers that can live under this bill, will be few and hitle formudable. It can never again give us those strong and wide cumbinations which wubjugated the government italif-which made themselves the goverument. Henceforth, iwntead of overnhadowing liat government, they will lie reducord to receive its care, ouly as every other Interest in the country receives it.

I do not, lowever, exloort the state to rely upon any acts of the general govermment. Slte lias beent buterly taught to give no such reliauce. It ix on her alone that I rely-on her courage, her vigtlance, her prodenee, lier prucuplex. I connt on her nulIfification, which will rally the unted pouth, the very instant that any breach of the comprounise now formeil, is attempted.
Mr. Turnbull addresmed the couveution in a short speech, in which he justified both the preamble and ordinance.

Mr. Phillipe (of All saints) replled.
Judge Richardion followed, drelaring himself In favor of the ordinamee, but averse to the preamble. IIe objected to the reaonns that it uriges, as not the true ones. Congress has made no reduction. Nor did he think this modification would bring down the income of the government to a mure revetue poimt. This was but the scond step towards a repeal. The first had been made in 1832. Ile regardetl this as but the luceptian of the overthrow of the American syatem. It was no noore than a overthrow of the American syatem.
proof of the elange of pulaic opiniou.

Mr. Phillips, from Alt Snints, made some remarke, but could not be heard; when Mr. Mc Duffie rose, and said, he had not Intended to offer any remarks on the subject; he felt himself bound to reply somewhat to the gentiman from-Bpartanhurg, (Mr. J. S. Richurndeon). Ile undersitood him to have said, that there was no reduetion in the bill, and that tie words of the proamble were not correct. Ile explained wherein the bill of Mr. Clay was advantageous. T'hat it was an abandoument of the principle of protectiou; that it on reduced the taritf as that certain gonds, linens, worsted ntuffs, &c. would be reduced muell in price; that the bill, even admitting It did not arrive at itw completion of the specified reduction until 1842, yet, that as, on certain articles which would be rendered duty free in a short time, and which were monch consumed among ourmelves, it was therefore preforable to $n$ bill which did not embrace "these proTisions so carly as the ensuing fall, yet might arrive at a reduction, contemplated in Mr. Clay's bill, rven in the space of three yeare. Ha ndverted to the luconsistency of the prowident's courme, previous to aud since his re election. Snid that be had deecived the manufacturers, by the circulara which were ivsucd from the treavury, in relation to the tariti of IET2, whish stated that the wants of the government were not met by that act; and then, as soon an he was certain of success, he was revolutionized in his sentiments, and, in lis incsatage to congress, Fecommended a reduction of the tariff laws. Ife said that even now, that he did not convider the south as safis. Ile adverted to $n$, certain species of industry owned and used at the south, and said, that, however one principle scempil to be wilenced for the presellt, yet another was in agitation for the future. He advised the south to atand up for herself; to be prepared for all and every event, for she nuikht rely upon it, she would have to No it. He glaneed at the bill of Mr. Wilkins, eommented on its principles, and said that Romie, only, whon ber liberties were endangered, clothed one of her eitizens with dietatorial power rix monthas but that the American people lad crented a military dictator for but that the American pople lad crented a military dictator for twelve. He eoncludell by warning his fillow chizens to he prepared for the shock, for it would certainly come, tuless they were true to themaplyes.
Mareh 16. Mr. Wison from the committee to engroas the ordinance, phased yeaterday, reported it as ready for ratification. This ordinance repeala the ordinance of Novernher lact, and all acts of the Iegislature, passed in pursuance thureof, the militia law, alone, excepted. He atoo nioved that it the sighed, as was the ordinaace of nullification, hy the inembers who voted for It , as well as the presidest and rlerk, which motion ilid not prevail: and Mr. S. D. Mitter then moved that it only have attachied to it the signataree of the propident and clerk; which was agreed to. On motion, the hon. Mr. Leedis, a member of congress, from Alabama, was invited to take a seat on the thoor of the conventlon.
The ordinanee reported by Mr. Harper, to nnilify the late act of eongress, (known as Mr. Wilkins' bill) and declaring the oath of allegiance to the state, was taken up for cousideration, being the apecial order of the Ilay, Mr. J. I. F'ition moved that the y pan and nave be taknon, and it bring ordered,
Mr. R. W. Aurworelf rose, atul profacing his mation with anme very liheral retnarke, moved that the sections of the orilinaurer, having relation to the oath of allogianee, two stricken out: when Mr. Johnton moved that the words "or appointed"'be intenduced We the 19th line, after the word "electent," so that the sectiou would be rundreed, "elected or appointedi" which being agreed to, the question recurred on the motion to atrike out the threa last sections of the ordinance. The elair was almout to put the question, when Mr. J. B. O'Neale rose, and gave his opimiona on the inexpediency and ill teudeney of the creation of a new oath. Ite denied the ripht of the convention in the matter; contended that the oath, us grescribed by the constitution of the state, covered nil the ground required by the niw one; that a Hew enaetment on the subject would not be calculated to heal the divisions of the atate, which were now sufficiently wide. Ite said lue stood on lus natuve Carolina, and he should speak the weutuments of a freeman, aud he ardently trusted, that he sbould be able to convince gentlemell of the total inexpediesey of thia be able to convince gentlemell of the total incxpedieney of thia provinion of the ordinance. He then proceeded to defae what wha the allegiance of a cilizen. He showed that the oath required by Virginia and Massaelusetts, demanded no more of their citizens than does the present oath of this state of lier citizens. Ile stated that the puthic mind was not prepared; that on this subject tuere was much difference of opinton, even among the majority of the state, and he asked gentleusen tu pause. What did they intend to do? Wire they willing to add to the exciteruent? Airealy were families arrayed agaiust fannilies, father against son, brother against brother, and even the flame had been carried to the temple of God-would such an enactment serve to extinguish the fire? Would it make the opposers of it any the better citizeus? He thought not. He adverted to the enforeement bill. For one, said Mr. O'Neale, I wish it had never pasacd; but under present circumstances, be thought it would not be acted upon; it was a dead letter on the statute would not be acted upon; if was a dead letter on the atatute considered it unwise and impolitie-he thought one clause unconstitutional, and the whole aa granting powers which might hereafter be abused. He coneluded by a touching appeal to the convention, urging gentlemen to pause, ere they were too late, and refer the enactanent to the legislature, where, in his view, by the provisions of the constitution, it properly belonged.
Mr. Harper followed, in a ;peech of eonsiderable length. He expatiated largely on the rights of the sovereiguty of a atate; argued that in tumes like these, it was necessary and expedient, that the state should know on whom she could depend. He said he had no doubt of the power of the convention to passs the ordinance, embracing the declaration of allegiance, which it coutatued; he urged the absolute necessity of such a declaration, and said that lie did not wish to leave this oath to the legislature, for it would be leaving it to chaner. fle adverted to the meeting of the union convention in this place, as evidencing, in a measure, the spirit of the opposing party in the state; and said that the government of the state lad heen very moderate tu their course, and instanced their toterating the meeting of the union convention. He spoke of Mr. H'iuins' bill an abomiuable, and calculated to subvert the liberties of this country. He thonght the sonth yet itt uuch danger-the spirit of enuancipation wha abroad, and the should not be astonislied, if, in another yrar, a revolntion like that of 1800 whould take place.
Mr. Turniull took the floor, and rendered to the remarks of judet $O^{\prime}$ Neate, a hagh compliment. Spole of bis warmeth of personal fripudship to that gentleman-of the distinguislied estimation in which he was lield by hilt, and very many others; of the pleasure which it gave hinn to hear Mr. O'Nenle deliver the spntiments which he fad just given, on the bill of Mr. Withins. He then advorted in an argument, lowg, but interesting, on the topies which had occupied public attention for ten years past. He urged very strongly the adoption of the ordinance, in alt ita provisions, and concluded in a very strung appeal to the majority, not to enffer the monicnt to pass, but to act up to the expectations of the prople.
Mr. Phillpr, of Chesterfield, replied to Mr. Turnbult, and is ennsequence of some renaarks whieh came from Mr. T. relative to the union convention, said that he would not yield his love for Carolina to that gentlewan. He never expected to hear the attachment of the union party to the state questioned, and least of all from that quarter. He thought at least that the gentleman should have spared the feelings of this epponents on that oceasion, and eonsidered the time rather firr conciliation, than an extension of the breach. Ite was surprised that such sentimenta ahould have escaped one, to whom the could triumphantly cxelaing, ef tu Hrute! Ile would throw the charge of enenity and disloyalty to the state into the teeth of the genthmen, and would tell them that there were men in that convention, who woulif nut sutfer in comparimon with the proudeat son of Carolina in this. Ile a-ked if the opininns of seventeen thousand of lis fellow eltizens were not entitied to respenteen thousand of he told on that floor, that unless the party with which he had the honor to act, ditl conse forward, and bend to the opioions of the majority, that they were to be deprived of their rights and privilcges. [ifrere Mr. Harper rose and explained.] Mr. Philips procreded on the iuexpediency of the oath, and observed that for one, he nerer would take it. The union party were devotedly atisched to the state-they sought to proserve the state hy preure ring the uninn-that union alone could preserve the rights of Itr: states, and diannion alone could force consolidation on the broken spetion. If threre was in his lheart a aingle bope, or Waih, or fecling. Inconsistent with the honor and the welfare of Sonith Carolina, he wonhl trar it from his bosom. Ife heard it said that the dominant party had shown great moderation and forthearancy, in suffering the late union emivention to ametinble Bere, "nosing the legixlatire," ns the geutleman [Mr. Harpery] had said. Was be to be told, at this day; that gentlemen of equa]

Virtue and ebaracter as those composing this body, representing 17,000 freemen, met to express the:if opиisus upon the acts of the legistatare, only by suifferance? Was the to hear credit elaimed for forbearance towards an assembly of so unuch respectabslity, and representing so many freemen, because they were permitted to assemble and dectare their sentunents upan an act of the sthte government. But it wat said that this convention ought to adopt the eath because it had the power, aud recomunending ite adoption to the Irgoslature was leaving It to chasce. It was for this very reason it should be left to the legislature. The people had never had this question before them, and this convention did not reprevent the people on that subject. Wontt not the members of the legislature also represent the people? This was the chance, theu, to which this measure would be lef, to the chance that every republican would cheerfolly subbit itto the chance which was the basis of all republiean institutions the will of the people. The chance was that the penple inight will otherwise, and this they were not to be allowed to do. He urged the pledget that the convention had given, not to interfere with the constitution of the state-and sand this would be such ta interference. He desired peace and recouciliation-but for no purpose of ndvancement, for he was from a district wbere the unton party had the ascendancy, awd would maintain it. But he desired once more to be able to take his old friends by the hand, whenout feeling that there was something in the bosom of each not as it used to be. He concluded by collitending that the convention had mo authority from the people of thus state, to interfere with the constitution, as that power was not deleated to thein, nor were gentlemen sent here to assume it.
At the cinae of the remarks, Mr. Samsel Wurren moved an adjournment to Monday, at 10 o'clock. This motion was foilowed by a inotion for a recess of two hours, which latter motion prevailed, and the convention adjourned to half past 5 .
Aner the recess, the conventions met, and after being called to orler, Mr. Wilson moved that the ordinance and motion to strike at, be laid on the table, which was carried alinost nuanimonaly. The repolt of the comnittee on the Virginia commissioner, and the reapiutions submitted therewith, were, on motion, taken up and read by the president; who said, that unless mine gentleman should request otherwiae, be should put the quevtion on them together. Mr. Perry, froul Gireenville, rown and muved that they be considered separately; on winch, the president put the queation on the adoption of the report, which was carried, with osly a fuw noes in opposition. The resolutions were then pased unanimously, and the word "unatimously" ordered to be inserted in them.
Mr. Hamillon's resolution, and Mr. Sonith's, an an acenmpasiment, were then put for adoption, were carried, and the convention adjourned to Mouday at 10 o'elock.

Monday, March 18. The convention resumed the consideration of the ondinance on the enforcement bill.

Afer mome remarks by judges Colcock and O' Weate; Mr. PerTV, of Greenville, waid,- Eivery one must wish to see healed, differences that had so divided the state. He had himself exborted his friende at honse to endeavor, now that the cansca of these dissensions were removed, to forget and forgivc. He had filt gratifled at the literal spirit in whirlh the gentlemen from NL. Peter's and st. Helena'm (general Hamilton and Mr. BarnWrell) had spoken. His friend too on tus lef, (Mr. Phillips, of Cheraw, had alon spoken in a manuer that mist have tonched the heart of every one who heard him. If that oath [Mfr. Purry eomanned to say] could the stricken mut of the ordinance, lifs people would be satisfied, wnald be willing to bury in oblivion all that has paseed.- But if on the contrary, it was adopted, the highent trritation must ensue. Itc apoke afterwards of Wil kias' bill, which he eaid would be, beyond doubt, repealed. The present enlightened and patriotic chlef magistrate of the nation could never be wo very a tyrant as to enforce it, fsecing that it was he who had it passed, It docs seent wonderfally im. probable, that he has nny notion of putting it in force. $o, too, ren. Blair, col. Drayton and Mr. Mitchelf can clearly have nn "dea of wishing the bill enforcerl, althougb they all voted fir it.] "But," [continued Mr. Perry,]"'if he should attempt it, I will then, as I have always said, resist tyranny, como from what marter it may."
Col. John L. Wilson surceeded, and among other things sand-You are told that it will make oaths too common. Where were these scruples, when oatha of a very different sort were aken so liberally throughout the state, by the vury party that now stieks at a common oath of fidelity to the state.
But is there any gentleman here, who will rise in his place, and nay that he will not take this onth? There is none such; and, if there were, it would be precisely for him that sucin an oath would be indispensable.
He adverted to the notorious state of thinge, even at thin mament extsting in various parts of the country, in Cheoter, where a volunteer regiment was formed on Friday fast, to figtt against the sate. Mr. Hilson liaving concluded, the convention took a recess till 4 o'cluck.
The orduance nullifying the "force bill" was then passed132 to 19.
The report aceompanying the ordinance on the force bin, was then taken up and passed by a general vute.

Gen. Haunilton moved an adjournment, the business of the convention being finished. Lpon this the rev. Mr. Ray took hil place by the president's side, and performed the fialal religiona duties.
It was then moved and earried that the convention go into comnittee of the whole: Mr. Turnbull was placed in the chair. The veuerable col. Warreu thes moved a vote of thanks to the presidellt, for the dignty, despatch and imprartiahty, with which his duties had been performed. The resolution was unanimously adopted, and the commituee rose and reported.
The president returned thanks for the honot done him, in one of those spirited and appropriate specehes at which he is al-

The convention then adjourned sine die; or rather, diasolved itsrlf; being so pronounced by the president.

AbPITIONAL TTEME ANP SCEAPS.
The Charieston Mercury of the 2lst March, given the following account of the last moments of the convention at Columbin. "On the vote of thanks b-ing given to governor Hayne, as premident, he liriefly and eloquently returned thanks, enjoining upon the memhers to go hone with a dispowition to concitiatebut with an inflexilite resolution to maintain the pribeiples of the state, rempubering that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty-that we have recently gained an ailvantage, but not a victory-that the bill of biood proves that the Moloch of federal utuppation is not appeased-and that they ought to have it indelibly impressed apon their minds that the great battle is juat begun.
"When the motion was mnde that the convention be finally dissoived, it was opposed by Mr. Phillips, of Georgetown, on the ground that the action of the couvention may: very athortly be weeded mo account in the threatened npphication of the force hill to Georgia-and that thetefore it should adjourn aubject to the call of the president and committee. Gen. Hautiton replied that the convrntion had carried out the purpose for which they had been organized, and ooght now to resign the very large powern which the people had confided to them,-and very warmily and eloquently ppoke of the co-operation which we would give to Georgia in resisting tyranny. But in this the aetion of the convention would not be necessary. Our citizess would not wait for it. We would show our gratitnde for the generons sympathy of our thoroigh friends in Georgia-and we would convince those in Gicorgia who "abhor" nniltification that when they make une of this abhorreut remedy for their own saivation, we will prove, by rushing to thear standard, that our attacinuent to the principle wan not affected. This is not even a sketch of his remarky, which were unpremeditated, eloqueat and happy. The convention then disolved liter and happy. The convention then diswolved Itself by a unanimous vote, and the scenc closed with prayer by a member, the
fev. Mr. Kay."

The Charleston Courier announces the dissoiution of the convention in the following terms:
"The state convention, after nuliifying the enforcing bill, and referring the matter of the oath of aliegiance to the legistature, put a period to its existence on Monday last. We are traly rejosed at thes death of the many headed monster-it emancipates us from the tiraldom of an irreaponsible despotism, and rpstores ns to freedom, and places us onee more under the safo dominion of the constitution and laws."

The Charieaton City Gazette of March 21, says-The convention adjourned on Monday last, and srveral of the membere arrived in town yeaterday. Thus ende, we fervently hope forever, the fudge and flummery-the vapor and fury and nonsense of this extranodinary era of political confnsion. ## House of londr, Frh. 15.

Farl Grey arnae minidat the most profound silence. His lordship requested the clerk to read that phort of his majesty's sperech relating to the disturhances existing in Irolnad. This liaving been done, the mothe call, evidently much affected, painted inglowing colons the lawless ontrages that existed in Ireland, not the painful necessity his majewty's governusent was under in suhaniting strong mensitres for represping them. We nre told that the separation of Ireland is to be effreted thy agitation, and that the volunteers nre be the ngents for bringing about this end. It is aatd that no matter what remedinl ineasures are adopted-no matter what abuses are removed-yna may abolish parimh cess-you may reform the church-you many rimove the grievances of the grand jary system-but no matter what you do for the peace nnd happiness of Ireland, nothing will satisfy the voluntecrs, but the repenl of the legisiative unioa. But what was the nature of that society of voluntere? It was modelled upon the volunteer society of $1 \% 82$. It was to consint of district asmociations, *ubordinate to $n$ committee sitting in Dublin. It was to undertake the pacification of Ireland, to put down thmuls-to supersede the aecersity of the police, to hold meetingn simultancounly with the seasions nnd assizes, (hear), - to determiae quarrels-and to put in instrument of pacifiention into the hasds of the liberator. It was not to be inn armed association until the law should allow it. The aceredited agent of the lenrned gentleman-arnt under the name of a parificatar to organize the subordinate socictire-declared, it in public mecting in the connty of Clare, that if it should be necessary, as it had been in the year 1798, to supply the volunwers with pikes, Daniel OConnell would wend the men inf Clare into his own wood at Iough O'Connell, to cut pike handies (hear, hear, hear). Hit it was the duty of the governiment to take care that there shouid be no pikey-amithat associasons so organized, and for such ohjecte, slould be put dywn (bear, hear). Wan it to lee womdered at that, whilst such assoctatious were in progrens, while such declarations were ad dreseed to thein, there should be a general resistance to the law, that the payment of uthes shouid be suspended-that the eollecturs of uthes, amil even of rent, slomila be assaulted, if usot murdered? Although these cutrages dod not prevail over all Ireland, they pervaded a considerable partion of the country; and it was in the nature of such dinnrders to thereave and extend thenselves, if they were not timely and vigoronsly put down (hear). The whole of Leinster was in this state; and in Muaster, the counties of Cork and Tipperary, were similarly aituated; as was also the province of Ulster, to a great extent, eapecially In the county of Louth; and their lordships had heard from a noble lord behind him what was the condition of many parts of Connaught. Their lordships would see that the assoctation of volunteers were connected with thene outrages, from the fact that they increased as it was spread, and that they had the same objects which it avowedly rought. It was true that the founders of that society diselained the use of all but peareaBe and legal reeans; but it was evident, from the violence of the language that they employed in the work of excitenent and agication, that they avalled themselves of this profension of pactieation hor their own protection, whilnt tims whil knew that it would ant setve to curb the ignorant penple whom they inflamed, nor to protect them from the consequence of their violence. The noble lort then quoted fronithe public papers, and from the correspondence of the 1 rish governinent, numerous instances of the persecution of witnesses and jurora in casem of prosecution connected with the outrages of the illegal associations, and contended for the necessity of immediately eniplaying mome means of puting an ead to this systent of inturnidation. The noble earl statrd many cases to show the gross vislation of the laws, and that, from the state of snciety, the laws at present in force eould not be executed. Witnexses dared nnt give their evidence, nor juries find n verdict of gutity. The prosent state af Iretand was, in fact, so disturbed, iroperty and life so un proteeted, that he thought their lordilipe would not hesitate to adopt the measures be was about to propose. It dut mit appear that these outrages were eonfined to any class of men. (ioovernment had beea unwilling to introduce a measure of the deseription: they now felt it their duty, however, to lay th before their lordships All the powers at present possexsed by the executive had beea found ineffectual to preserve order and enforce the due administration of the laws in Ireland. This bill whicl me was about to bring in liad for ite object in the first place to supprese all dangerous and illegal associations. To sulppress, if possible, all attenipts at outrage and violence. The bill would contain various provisinns of acta passed at different periods by both the English and Irish parliaunents, particularly that pasaed in the gith of George the Fourth, commonnly ealied the proclamation aet, which had for its object the suppression of al ifecal orectings. That aģt aleo prohitited any one being out withoat giving a sufficient excuse, between sunset and sunrise. His majesty's governmeut as he before informed their lordshipe, were very reluctant, and it was with much pain that they felt ealled upon to ask for extraordinary powers for the executive of Ireland. The first chactment of the present impasure was to prohibit all meetings in petition parliamest, of in diseuss publre grievances and public arts, innless ten days notice whe previousty given. (Hear, hear, hear). The insurrection act authorised all offences against its provision to be tried at the sessions, before the magistrates, who had the powrr to sentence offendern to transporiation. Now, in the present wtate of Ireland, his najesty 'bininizters did not think fit that this power should any longer be exercised by the magistrates. (H)rut, hear). The trial of all offencess against this act it was proposed should, to a certain extent he subject to martial law. (L,ond eries of "hear, hear)." The coarta, however, woulli be to coostructed, that he did not fcar that the powera woull be unfairly exereised; the act wroud pontain sceurity against unfairness; at the same time he hoped thry wonld be effectual in enforeing obedience to the laws. It wonld be imperative that in all these courts a sergeant at law or king's connwel shouid preside as judge advocate and they would otherwise be so constructed as no fear of any abinae of power could he anticipated. All persons frund abroad between wutaet and sunrise, all athornt from their homes withourcatse, and those who had arms in their bouses, would be subject to this aet. Ail persons distrihnting seditions papere, any attempts to injure the perwon or property of jurora, prosecutors, or witnesses, should also come within the provisions of this act. The noble lord referred to another prnvision in the former apt, protecting the officers of courts martinif froin futire prosecntions. This was emsential for their protection, and would be embraced in the present bill, though the nfifiers would nevertheless be subject to have their conduct examined by a proper court martial. He trusted there nepasures would be found effectual to suppress the existing outrages in Ircland; and he shoeld he happy when the ilme arrivel that the proposed measures of severity might with safoty be repealed. If a writ of habeas eorpna should be issund for any peraon arrested under the provisions of this act, tishould be a sufficieat return tn the writ that the person was arrested under the authority $n f$ the act. He thought these measures would be sufficient. They were severe powen, but the necessity of the case seemed to require them, and by which necenoity abute thry cuuld be Justithed. The question for their lordiships was, whetiser of not a case had been made out for such a suspension of the ordmary laws an all legitimate grverituents have bevn at times eompelled to resget to, fur the safrety of the state, aull on the principle salus populi suprema lex. The next measure whieh his majesty's ministers thought it necessary to introdice, but separately fiman the present bill, was an act tor changing the venue in the casea of all trials where any "pecies of intiandation had bren used to Influence jurors or witnewes. (Ilear, hear, henr). Apologizing for so long detaining their lordalsipa and thanking them for patient liearing, the noble lord coucluded by moving for leave to bring in the bill.
loord Longford, in alluding to the agitation that had been devaribed to exist-said it had first of ath been fuvited by a noble marquis, who requested a correspondent to "ngitate-agitateagitate.'

The dukc of Wellington maid, the question was, did ministers meant to do-were they intent on doing-their duty towarda the country in bringing forward this measure? If they were, then it was aseless to go back to former proceedings. The duty of the bouxe was to meet the state of ilings in Irefand at the present moment. (Hear), In his opinion, that state of thing rendered the ptoposed measure imperatively necespary. ( Ilear). If the recail of the preselt lord lieutenant, or any other measure of that kind, could rendey such a proceeding as that now contemplated unuecrssary, he would imuediately alay, "adopt that course." (Ilvar, hear). But, as it appeared to him, lookIng fainly at the question, the present inchasure was absolutely Heceasary. (Hear, hear). He cared not from what patire the present atate of things iu Ireiand arose. It was sufficient for him that It existed; and ueping that governan cut grounded their cali for this mieasure on that state of thinge, he sliould, without looking to one side or to the other-he should, without advering to what had passed heretofore, give them bis support on this ocearion. (Ihrar, hear). He conrblered the meanure to he essentially neces;ary; and on that ground alone be should support it. (Hear, bear). He was ceriaiuly sorry that such a measnre had not been brought forward fommerly, but he was extremely glal that it was now Introduced. (IIras, hear.) He had looked at the bill, and he thought that it rcyured smue anieniments. It was his intention, is the comnittee, to inove that courts martial shonld be apponnted nn the prineiple recognized in the mutiny bill. There were also some partswf the bill which did not, in lis opinion, give sufficient powers for the purpose of putting down the particular evils that aflicied Ireland. Ile would not, however, on the present occasion divenew thore polita. He hoped the eominittee on the bill wnuld wit on the carliest possithle day, and he whould then declave bis opihion more In detail.
Lord U'sbridze replied in the Earl nf Trongford, with reference to the words "agitute, agitate, agitate."
The Earl of Eldon shorily supported the measure, nbserving that nnthing but the prowent extraordinary circuinstances could warrant it. It should only continue, however, as long as the evil existed.
Farl Greysaid that it was only a mpasure of necexsity, and was nnt intellded to enntinue longer than till the end nf-the next session. Ile hoped to be able to move for its repeal before then.

Lord Browgham atid that he fully conenrred in the measure. The crown was an u*urper instead of a governor, if it clainned alleglance withont granting protrction. Ilal a less extensive measure been adopted, eanntitutional principles would liave heen violated, and the nbjeet would not liave been attainetl. He had the mont nubounded confidenee in the meanire, and in the liands of those who would execute it. Ite almo approved of it because it was areomplished by measures of relid:.
l,ord Ellenborough knpported the measure, although he wiwhed for doenmentary evillence of its neressity.
loord Cloncurry looked on it with areat anxiety and alarm.
The marquis of Landsdorne supportod the measure.
Afer a few more ohsorvations the bill was read a foct time, and the house adjourned.
Monday, F'els. $88 .-L$ Lord Grey moved the second reading of the hill.

The earl of Wicklow approvel of the measures proposed, but regtetted they han nat been brousht forward lofore.
The earl of Longford conilemined the continurnce of the marquis of Anglesey in the governument of Irviland.
lond Roden supported the hill, in the gronnd that such corrcive measures were now berome necepsary.
The marquis of Clamricarde defended the eonduct of the marquis of Anglewev.
Tlie dnke nf Wellington ennsidered the present mpasure to be essentially necesary; but sugereted some amendinent that night be proposed in the committee.
Fiarl Grry replied, and thanked the nolse duke for his suggesJon*.

The bill was then read a accond time, nem. con.
[00-Previons to the final passage $n f$ the bill, it undierwent some impogtant alterations, with the consent of earl dircy-one of these allows enuncel to prisoners before courts martial, which had not formerly been permitted: the accured was obliged, previously in the pusage of this law, in nuthmit his questions in al eases to the presiding officer, in writing.]

The ( Iriah) smppression sill. In the house of lords, Peb. 29.Earl Grey moved the order of the day for the third reading of the above bill.
Lord Teynaam said he showld strongly protest against this bill, as a gross Infriggensent of the constutution of England and Ireiand. The umoin, the inviolate umon of England aud Iteland, was worthy the strenuous mupport of every rightly thinking man. It was Hiat uniou which eoustituted the great strength and torce of the empire, and which placed this eountry in the proud situation in which it had long stood, as one of the first, ir not the very first power in Europe. Could this bill, be would ask, have the effeet of consolidating that union? Would it not, on the contrary, give rise to a spirit of resistance in every pari of Ireland? It was a measure which he deeply deplored, and he beileved that ministent (as honest minlaters, he admitted, as ver this country saw), in bringing furward such a bill, were acting under sotne delusiou or anotiver; God only knew what! He hoped, from the enlightened and litieral feelings of the day, that prosecutions before courts martial would not be carried into effect. Formeriy, when such a measure as this was contemplated, a report and evidence were laid before the house, In order to justufy the proceeding; but nothing of the kind was done in Uris instance. Huuble individual as he was In that house, the would raiae lais voice against such a measure; because it appeared to him to be opposed to the eonstitution or the country, and contrary to the interests of the British empire. He therefore, could not let it pass without deelaring his sentimeuts.
The earl of Wentinoreland sald it was not his Intention to offer remark which the present occasion would not justify. Afer the able exposition of this subject by the noble earl (Grey) lie Unought that no man who gave due consideration to those illecal meetings and dreadful outrages which had heen described, could question the necessity of this measure. After the statement made to the honee by the noble earl, in which he explained the grounds on which lie rested his ineasure, it did sppear to hin that mo man could fairly question its justice, or the neceseity which called for it. He could almost wish that it had paseed without any observation or alteration. Both the loyal people ia this country and in Ireland, and even the deituded and mialed peasantry themseiver, who were at present the victims of the machinations of artual aicn, ought to give thanks to the noble earf, for the 6 im and decided manner ia which this subjeet had been brought forward, and he hoped the noble earl would not be displeased, if he veatnred to add his Itudividual thanks to those of the country. He would atso venture to add the tadividual thanks of all his [lord Westmoreland's] noble enlicagues, with whom the had acted so long duriug the reign of the late king, George III, when they also had been connpelled reluctantly to eall for additional powers.
He thanked the noble eart in the names of a noble marquis, of a noble earl, (we believe Bathurat), of viscount Sidruouth, and of the duke of Portland, who, in times the circumatancee of which were similar to the presert, stood forward to reqaire (pewers snch as were now sought for by his majesty's ministers. Whatever obloquy might formerly have been cast on those who demanded additional powerf, they only required them out of regard for the laws of order and for the preservation of their country, under the particular circumatances in which the empire was placed. He thought that thanks were duc to ministers for adopting such a course; and putting aside all other considerations, for having, when they found themselves thus circummanced, brought forward a measure which, in his opinion, was a right and proper one. By thus proceeding they had justified thim and his neble colleagues, for having on former occasions pursued the same line of conduch. Whatever were the eharges that might be advanced against noble lords opposite, that was not the time for them. The question now was whether they abould not all join in eadeavoring to restore Irpland to alleciance to hie majesty. Upon these grounds, differing as he did upon many points from the noble lord opposite, he sliould vote for the bill.

The bill was then read a third time and passed, and ordered to be carried to the commons.

hoene of comsomi.

Lord atthorp moved that the suppresaion bill should be read a Grst time on the 27th Feh.
Mr. H. Graftan said, that without wishing to enter into the debate, he would enter his protest against the bill.
Mr. Henne wished so know when the hoase might expect the remedial measure which the governmest had promised. He hoped that the hrase would not pass the present bill until the others were passed, or at least until they were satisfied that they would pass, lest they should render themselves liable to be clarged with pasaing only the coercive meanure. The experience of last year, was not to be lost upon him. The governmeint then told the house that remedial measurce slionld he passed with the coercive mensure. The latter was passed, but the house never saw the others. [Ilear.]
Lord Althorp said that a bill which he intended as a remedial meanure, namely, that for getting rid of the collection of tithes under the former system, was passed during the tast session. If rentemen chose to put a different interpretation on what ministers said, from that which they intended them to bear, it was not their fault. The report of the tithe committee, if it the remedial measure which the government intended to propose upon that occaslon. With rempect to the remedial measure at present in contemplation, he had statod a day or two ago, that he hoped to be able to introdnce the bull for church reform by the end of nest weck, and the bill for ancinding the grand jury syatem by the muddle of the week. It was for the house so deride whetuer they had suthicient confidence in mimisters to belheve that they were in earucst, when they said they would carry through the remedial measures. [llear, hear.]
Mr. O'Connell said, the nembern of that house nught be disposed to place the fulient contidence ith the intention of ministers, and to believe that they had she power of cairyiug titir remedial measures through that house, but ministers would not insinuate that they could controf another assembly. [llear.] Coald it be said, that in another place any measure advantageous to Ircland was certain of passing? Any thug disadvantageous to her, was, he knew, sure th pass, any measure springing from malignant hatred of that country ["hear" and murmuta.] No more on that point. He understood from the noble lord a few nights since, that lie expected to have been able to introduce tife grand jury bill during the w cek.
Lord Aluhorp. I said next week.
Mr. O'Connell said he understeod the noble Iord differently, but no anatter: he roae in the present orcanion prancipally for the purpose of apologising to his consthuents for permituig one vote respecting this derpouc bill to pass without discussing it; but as the noble lord had connplied with the cuggentinn of many persons opposed to the measure, hy poatponing the first reading till Wednesday, he would abstain from entering into any debate rexpecting it, contenting himself with giving notice that he would move a call of the loune for Wedneaday, and would repeat the call whenever he thought lie perceived any relasation of its effects as long as the bill was bofore the house. Once more he nust ajologise to his constituents for allowing the bill to be mentioned in the house without raising this volee agains t. The phrase "the madnens of slavery" was cheered once in that house. Ife felt the madness of slavery coming over him Hen. Ife would proceed no farther.
Mr. Stanley said that the honoralile and learned member had made one observatuon by which he appeared necessarily to connect two measures which bad no connexion with each other. Undoubtediy ministers liad declared-and if some parLes had given then more confidence for their good intentions, and would wait with a fittle more patience to see whe ther they would perform their gromises, instead of excitung violeat oppoation before they knew what the conduct of governmemt was likely to be, it might have tended more us the peace of Ireland; undoubtedly ministers lial beld forth an expectation that it was then their intention, actug on the principles which they lad always professed, and the would venture to say, on whieb they had aiready acted, to direct their attention to the remedy of the real and acknowiedged grievances of Ireland. So ansions had they been to prove to the houserand the country that they were not putting forth mere professions, that they had taken the earliest possible opportunity after the opening of the session to declare the measures which it was their intention to propose to parliament. Those measures had been acknowledged by the reluctant consent of the honorable and learned member himself, which he now vainly attempted to retract, to be real and substantial measures of relief, and remedies for abuses. At the same time that ministers announced these measures they applied th parhainent for another meanure-which they luad late asked for and reluctantiy resorted to-when it was imperiousty called for, not for the maintenance of the present admiatatration, but for the maintenance of any administration, and whirh, he declared to God, he would not lave asked for, sitting on the benclies where lie dit, if he would uot have voted for situng on those opposed to him. [Cheers.]

If any administration, let it have been formed of what party It might, liad, in the present state of Ireland, proposed the measure which it was his painful duty to have recomruended, in office or out of office, he would equally have supported that measure, which he held to be thot of a coercive but of a protective nature. [Cheers.] But although it was right that the house and country sliould know what remedial measure it was proposed should accoinpany the restrictive but necessary measures, it was not necessary that two sets of measses should move pari passu, side by side throngh both bouses of parliament. The honorable and learned member paid that the povermment conld not carry those measurcs for the beneft of Ire land, tlorough the other loouse. Speaking in the name of the eabinet, he said that the government was pledged to carry thome meannres through. If they could not carry the remedial an well as the painful and coercive uieasures, they were no longer a government-they conld not eontinute to sit on those loenches. [Cheers.] He said that if they were anable to carry their measures throngh, they were not ouly unable to esercise, but unworthy of exereising the functions of a government; and he whould hold himself dixgraced by continuing to hodd the situatinu which he filled under fuch an administrationt. [C'heers.] Government therefore was piedgrd to this-that both the remedial and the coercive messure zhould pass.
They were bound by their character, they were bonnd by their situations-they were bound by their honor as gentlemen-ta carry then tbrough; and if they falled in dwing so, they could aot continue to hold tucir situations-they ronid not call upon the house to place ennfidence in them. [Cheers.] That was the line of policy which government meant to pursue; but he could not stop to inquire whether this areasure or that measare strould be passed tirut or iast,-it was sufficient to siate that if they could not carry every thing they proposed, they were no longer the guvernment of the country. The two sets of meaaures were independent of each other, but the rejection of either would equally establish this fact, that the administration did not posacss the confidence of the two houses of parliament, and therefore could not continue to conduct the affairs of the country. [Cheers.]

Mr. Balderin. The right honorable gentleman said that he would not continue to be a minister of the erown unlesa he could carry his coercive mueasures. Now, he (Dr. Baldwin) thought that he was not worthy to be a minister if he attempted to carry them. No minister was worthy of the contidence of parianrent, or the support of the crown, who shouid endeavor to deprive the Irish people of their righte and privileges. The eocreive measures would encounter from bim, and other Irish members representing popular eonstitucueies, the utmost possible opposition. He eharged the riglit honorable aecretary opealy in the face of the house and country, with having, in the remedial measures which were about to be introduced, "kept the word of promise to the ear" of Ireland, and broken it to lier bope. [llear.] The remediai measuses would be perfectly nugatory if accompanied with the cocrcive mpasures. He could assure ministers that these coercive masures would do more to dispolve the ties wiich bound Ireland to England than any thing else conid possibly do. The Irish people poasessed a spirit which would not bow down to tyranay. If the right honorable secretay wislied to main ain the union, let him treat the Insh people as lie would treat the people of Eingland. Before it was too late he called upon the goverimment to retrace their strph,

Mr. P. Howard, said that the right hon. eecretary had not gaid that he would not continue to be a minister of the crown untess be could carry the coercive measures, but uniess he could carry the remedial measure also. Gentlemen might attack government if they pleased, but at all events they shonld proceed upon correct premisea.

Mr. Sheil raid that in consequence of the declaration of the right honorable grntieman that he and his colienguca would not remain in office anless they carried their remedial measures, be begged to know what beeame of a portinn of the remedial measures which were introduced last sension, to which the govsrnment were repeatedly pleiged, and which pnesed through the house of commons-he meant the bill fir assimilating the mode of calling juries in England and Ireland! The noble lord paid, in the inost emphatic suanier, that the government was pledged to earfy that bill. Where was it now? Had the plodge given by the noble lurd been fulfilled? Why had tiat measure been relinquinhed? It was lef to a committee. Had that committee made any report? liad the government, in fhis instance, neted on the principle so eloquently laid duwn by the rigint honorable secretary?

Lord Athirop admitted that he had given the pledge to which the learned tuember referred, and he liad done on with perfeet sincerity, and with full eonfidence that it wouid be redeemed. [Hear.] Ile expected the measure would have been carried; but, at the same tune, he must farily acknowledge he did not consider, from the circumstances under which he failed in fatAlling the pledge that he was so far compromised as to render it impossible for bim to remain a member of the povernment. [Hear, hear.) He might be wrong in having rome to that conclusion, but he had arrived at it anter the best conoideration which he was able to give the subject, and he would now ad. mit that the pledige must be redeensed in the course of the preeent scssion. (Hear, hear.)
An honorable member said that if the remedial measure should pass, the coercive meanures would be unnecessary.
Mr. O'Connell deuled that he ever made him opposition depeadent on the success of what the right homorable secretary was pleased to call his remodial measures. The right honorable secretary quite mistook lim if lic supposed him to say that his opposition to the coercive measures would be in one degree mitigated by the success of the remedial ones. He did not expect becatse he had yielded to the impuise of a feeiling of gratitude towarda thow whotn he considered to be the enemies of bus country, to be taunted with the approhation he had bestowed nyon some of the measures of government, and to have hes evoduct in that reppeet flung hack at him in the way it had been hy the right honorable secretary.

Mr. Stanley said that be underatond the honorable and learned member to have expressed his doubts is to whetber the ministerx posseased the power of carrying their remedial mea. surea through the house of lords.
Mr. O' Connell ndsuitted that he had done m, but not as a ground fir opposing the coercive measures.
Mr. Finn entreated Engish members not in deceive themselvew with respect tn the feeling of the Irish people. No remedial mensure wouls be reeeived with gratitude in Ireland, if accompanied by coercive measures. The people of Ireland loved hberty tho much to accept any thing as a sutustitute firr it.

Mr. Fergus O'Comnell said that notwithstanding the right hon. centleman had, with licis usual indiscretion provoked discussjon, be would abitain from entering upon any debateable topiea, and wonld merely remind the hoiase of the words formerty used by the rught honorable paymanter of the forces, that "it wes inpossible for the whisper of a laction to prevail against wes inpossible for the whisper of

The bill was then ordered to be printed, and to be read a firat time on Wednesday next.

LETTER PROM B. o'CONNELL  Addressed to a gentleman in Lrubtim.

14, Absemarte atreet, London, Saturday.
I proposed to myself to send you for publication, on Monday, an address to the Irimh people, on the present truly awful crisian of public affairs, but I have been occupied with conferences ali day, with Irish and British members of the commons-and I derive much consolation from being able to leii you, that not only are the popular Irish members firm and usanimous, but that there are a greater number far than I couid possibly expect of the Aritish meinbers, determined to resist the atrocious tyranny with wheh eart Grey has the unheard-of audacity to dare to threaten Ireland. Talk of an uaion, indeed, between the countries, after presuming to attempt to outiaw the inhabitants of one great portion of the empire!

But the extreme despotism of the proposed measures has a tendeney to diagust every friend of liberty, and in Eingland we shall certainiy get support out of doort.
In the meantime, pray use my name to conjare the people, first, to be perfectly peaceable-no outbrenk-no violence; on the contrary, prove the absolate madness of doing the busincas of our encmies, ly any species of violation of the law. Secondiy, get the clergy, if possible, and the laity, unanimoualy to petition. Pelition-petition-petition against these measures. Let us have firm, respectful, strong petiuons from every part of Ireland.
"I.et there be no despair-the constitutional battle for Irioh liberty is not yet lost-neither shall it be, with the blearing of God. 1 repeat, let mo man despair; on the contrary, cail on the friends of frecdon to insist that their representatives shall do their duty.
"I have not time this day to write more, Let 'peace, order and constitutional exertion' be our motto.
"Believeme, &c.
DANIEL O'CONNELL."
Dublin, Felruary 20. Fiver since the announcement of the eontemplated coercive measures this metropolia has been in a state of unusual agination. Yeaterday a meeting of the trade of tailors, to petition for a repeal of the union, took place at the Arena. It was intended as the prelude to petitions from all other trades on this topic, hut now that course has been abandoned, in the uncertainty that hangs over the future fate of this xiagdom. Yesterday also a meeting of the voiunteers look place, but soon afterwards adjourned, the members doclaring that they conid not trust thetavelvea to speak of act upon sueis an cventful crinis without further deliberation. They met again to day. To mormw a great and general meeting of the citizens is summoned to take into consideration the impending mea*nrea, and concert measures to avert the danger. The members of the voluntesrs will be the principal actors, and it is underitoud that urgent remonstrances to parliament will be adopted, together with strong recomniendstions to the various constitiencies throughout the country to react on their representatives, and urge thèn to oppose the measures of lord Grey to the utnoat. Aif yeaterday and to-day a visilile increase is the demand for gold at the bank of Ireland in evident, but it amounts to nothing of consequence yet. The majority of the citizens, as well as the peasantry, wait for O'Conneil's advice, (or Indeed command), in casea of this nature, before they deeide on taking Fuch a step. Bet if he says, "go to the bank for goid," every one will run there from the very natural apprehension that his voice will influence the majority, and that those who hesitate may be too late.
London, February 24. We have received inteligence of a very important nature from Birmingham. The political uaion met on Tneaday, and resolved to call on all the constituenciea of England to urge their representatives to oppoec the Irish coercion bill. Mr. De Rosen Attwond said a new beld of agitation was opened to them on which he entered with a heavy heart; a grand public meeting was ixed for Monday next, and much excitemeat is felt on the subject.

BRITIBII WEST INDIEA.

These islands continue to be much agitated. Their vicinity, and other circumstances, gives us much interest in their affairs. A reformed partiament has met in England-and the seseion will hardiy pass without new enuees of excitement.

"We were assured yesterday, that the earl of Mulgrave's departure from this istand will take place in March next. If lord Milgrave repores on a bed of thornx, he lsas prepared it for himself; for mo governar ever arrived in Janamen, whose presence was more welcomed; and we regret the claungn of sentimput, as well as the cause of it. Lord Mulgrave riders a high horse; but he will anon find, if he has not already finndit out, that the inhahitants of Jananen will allow no individual, how ever light in rank, or transecendant his taleuts, to gallup rotgh-shod over them. Lord Mulgave has buade the attemplt and a little time will, shew hin how far lie ought to procecd on his reekless course."

07- From the London Guardian of Jam. 29.
The Wext India iuterest were thrown into considerable alarm yerterday hy a report that it was the intention of minlsturs to introduce a bill into the new parliament for the innaediate emanespation of the slaves in the West Indies. It was mated that the purport of the bill was to limit the existence if slavery in the colonics to three yeart, and that it was not the intention of the guverument to offer any compensation to the planters or proprietors.
In consequence of theme ruianrs, a depniatios of sentlemen connected with the Weat Itslies waited upon lind Brey, and had an aubinnce of the noble earl at the treasury geverday afternoun. They requested to be informed whether it was true that it was the intentios of the government in emancipate the lave pupulation? The answer, we understanal whe in the atiormatuve; and that a bill for that purpose would, on an early day, be submitted to the consideration of the arw parlianment. If was also intunated that three years would be the prod fined for the extinction of slavery-that the emancipation of the negries would the unconditional, and that tuo compenation, except under apecial cincumstances, would be allowed.
L'pont it being rejurescuted to the noble earl, the probable consequence which might easue the colonies in case those meamires were pematurely ansounced, bis loriship intimated that the governument werc prepared to meet the exigeucies, and thas an tupasing force, consisting of 15,000 auen would forthwith be sent to the Weat Indies.
The flobe of the same pevening declared that "the reported cinversation wint lord Girey was not entuted to the leant eredit." The T'unes of Wedneaday gave the fillowing, as contaning the subatance of the interesung conversation between the premier and the deputations:-
Noone expltehoput has been produced amment the West India Interest, by wtatctuents put forth of what is supposed to have occiirrid at an interview of motue iof the teading members of that body with lord (irey yesturday at the treasury.
Those plateonents are, however, generally incorrect and greaty exaggerated in those respecta whre Uney bave any fonndathon. In seply to a goestinn put th hiun by the deputation, what was really said by the munstrit, was to the elfot that the cathinet had under their comsideration a plan in wit at real the questiou of nugro emanctuation, in which the linterpsts of the proprieturs as well hs that of the slave was considered, but that with rezaid to the reports in rirculation on the subject, and which led, it appears, to the deputation, the should neither confirm nur contradiet them. Astu the nrder in connell of November, $\mathrm{I} \times 31$, nuw virtually in abeyance, having been modified in the crown colanies, and rejocted loy those pasewsing Ipgoslative ase semblies, the uduption of it, it is undentood, will nus be pressed upan tiem. It remanas, as yet, unsettled in the cahinct whether the reaewal shall take place of the commituees of the hourea of lords and conamona, nppointed last seeston to inquire into the laws and tosagrs of the several West India colenies in relation to the slave population. Lord Grey remarked that he did net see the uthity of them, but that the would coafer with his colleagues in the subject.

A =ubsequent nuaber of the Times says-
"We would "trongly recounnend to our correspondent to dismixw at unce from this mind the expectations which weems so strounty to possese it, that comprination will be awarded to the *lave owners. The slave owners lave certaisily, in strict law, a property in their slaves. The ownets of Gation, Ihunwich and (Ild sarum, had aloo a legal property in thrir boroughe, tent property lased on the violation of the claims of hamanity is no iture saicred than that foundeal on the violation of consututional principter. Public opinion blarted the clains of the boroughnongE:As brfore the annililating aweep of schedule A, and no mann dared ask an indeninity for the maney value of a flagrant instrament of wrong, The public vaice lias denonticed with equal eulphasin and indignation the aliagnatiog system of slavery; and onf opinion derintelly is, that neither the parfament nor the people of Elugland will liften to any arrangenent which adsite the claims of the dealires in limiman flewh, thougls a bona fode price may have been given for that tlesh.?
The following plan, to supersede slave labor, in part, is, aecording to Bell's Messenger, to be tried.

- Flleration in the sugar trade. A plan to alter the sugar trade, to change the colonial system patirely, and to reduce the demand for slave labor, hai been submitted to this majesty 's miniotenn, and to the leading houses in the Weat India trade; the queation is entertained by the ministry, and the planters are represented as being favorable to the new system.
It is proposed that ouly one process should take place in the West Indies, nainely, the bolling of the sugar cape, the proreeds in a fluid tate to be shipped to England, and to be manufarlured liere; the process of making inuscovaries, and of refined aHgar, and the distilintinn of rum, all to be performed in England. The person who lias rubmitell this plan to the minieters has taken ont a patent for making refined sugar from the paccharine usatter in the flud ptate by one process. The mintsters, who have taken thim plan tnto ennsideration, have alluded to difficulthes which wonld arise as to collecting the revpnue, about four willons annually; hut as all the produce would be sent to Eumope, as at present, the fixlug the duty is merely a inatuer of detail, not of iusurmountable difficulty or objection to the other part of the plan. An far as regards the reducing the demand for wlave labor, that part of the plan of conrse meets with the approbation of the misisters. The calculation that one-half the labor of the slaver woild be reduced is stated to be greatly under the mark. The portion of labor which wimld be saved in that pressing the host severely on the slave, being night work in the curing houres and in the distillation of rum, and as the plough has been lately introducpd into the fielli labor, the work of the slave would lie trivial. The manufacturing of the saccharine matuer
of the refining would be completely altered-the procerse of dia tilling rum nould also be enturely a new one. The refinery, a powerful body, are the only pernons who bave evineed a soriuus oppoaition to these new niearurva; they carry their objectuons to the extreme, as all their apparatus for refining, and their valuable extablishmenta muat be changed or readered worthless. The plan has produced a great sensution; the cbief objectmet appears to be the throwing the greater part of the trade unto few hatind; but unis evil would, of conrse, be of short duration. Large contracts are itt the mowan tiare entered into for the supply of the saccharine manter in the ride state, after the tirst builing of the cane. The tial of the new syotwin will cummence on an extensive sale.

Menorandum, commwnicated by rivcount Goderich to the West

 India body, F'ebruary 4, $1 \times $ 3$.1. His mnjesty's govermuent will be ready to communicate confidentially with the West India body before they subnicat to parliament any propositions upurn the aubject of the West India alfairs.
2. The government retain their original opinion upon the anb. fect nf a combinitice of the lomuse of lurds, of which the West fudia body now ner-k the renmwal. Tifey felt at the time confident thnt it would nccessarily be followed by the appointinent nf a comnitiee of the bonse of coummons, which, in all probabiIity, would aim at different ohjerts, and be candueted upon differnt princijules; and they apprehended that the reat of the Inguirtes would be $t o$ increase the vehemence of the controversy upron the snbject of slavery, to irritate rather than moderate the csrited feelings of the public, atid aggravate the acknowiedged difficulties of the whole question.
What has ocenrred since the clowe $n$ f the last session has not altered, but has, on the contrary, confirmed thewn views; and they wonbld earnestly prese upon the West Jidia body the expediency of not calling, upon the present occaston, for a renewal of the committee of the house of lords.

They admit, at the same time, that there prevailed, when the committee clomed their labors, an impression that their inquiries would be resumed in the preapnt sessinn, and that that inupression was countenanced by the language of the respective reports. Nor are they disposed to deny that they theaselves looked forward to that courm. Counslering, however, every thitg which has subwequently passed, and the actual state of the quastion, they feel that they wonld best conpult the interest of the Wewt Indies, by nut inviting the house af lorde to reappoint the committre. If, nevertheless, the West Jndia body should continue to think fis revival essential in their interests, his majpest's grovernment will not oppose much a proposition if brought forward from any nther quarter.

Feelng it, however, to be their duty in the present crisis of Went India affars, to act upmon Iheir own rusponwitaility, tivey deem is incatabent opon them to state, that the apmointment of such a combatite would not canse them tn absian from miaturing and pmpusing such measures as they mav, upon fill consideration, and after conmmameation with the W'eat India body, deem to be best calculated to bring this inuportant subject to a safe and satisfactory terualnatirna.

Your memorialists subtnit that, aw the committep in the houre of comnons was conceded to their opponents, and the evidence

F'or these reamons your meunorialinls do not see that evil in the reucwal of the committre of the house of conimons, (trusting if such resewal shall be inevitabte, to the justice of the king'a government for its impartual constitution), whieh should deter then from theor denand for the renewal of that in the lords, in which house they consider it indispensable to their interiotis, tiot otily that inquiries should be esiepied up to the other colonies at well an Jansaica, bth that the evidence upon path of Inrd Belmore, of sir James L.yon, and of the deputied grecially sent from the different colonivs fur the expreas purpose of giving evidence upon the case, should be taken.

"Do you happen to know whether the population of Hayti has increased within the last twenty years.' Of my own knowledge I cannot know that; neither are there any very correct returns; but I have every reason to believe that, since the last time the French retired from the island in I800, the poptulation bas trebled.

In the sitting of the 6th Feh., the topic of negro slavery was Introduced Into the British lonse of comminn.
"Mr. L. Bulwer having moved the order of the day for resuming the adjourned deloate on the address to his majesty, Mr. F. Buxton begged the indulgence of the house for a few moments, on a subject of the deepest inportance; he meant negro slavery. All referenoe to the subject had, unfortunstely, In his opinion, been omitted in the apeech from the throne. In consequence of that omission, he had thought it right to give a notice on the subject. At the same time, he was perfectly satisfied that it was much betier that the subject strould be in the bands of government than in the hande of an individual. Ail he asked of the nohle lord was, to pay if his misjesty's government would undertake in bring forward the subject in the couree of the present scssion; if $\mathbf{n o t}$, he (Mr. Hulwer), should feel it to be his duty in do so to the leest of his ability.
"Lord Altborp said, that hiv majesty's government had apmied, and were applying themseives to the consideration of this most tuportant subject, for the purpose of brimging forward a ineasure respecting it, aud that he cutertained the greatest hope and confidence that they would be able to bring forward a measure which should prove at onee safe and efficient."

The standing eommittee of the West Indis body nasembled on Thurnday, at the desire of the minisiry, to receive an official commutication. It was a treasury minute, hit much too long for inscrtion. The only points of gencral interest wnre the anmonuewnent that the public feeling was every day stronger in favor of an mariy aboltion of slavery-that all investigntion into the question tended to raise the opinion still stringer against the planter, -that the ministers would not move the renewal of the committee of invertigation of lant sessunn; nevertheless, if the Weat India interest hrougit forward the question of the reappointenent, ministers woutal uot oppose the mntion. The reply of the Wext fudia body was that thry invited inves. Ligation, and were ha insue with ministers as to puisec opinion: there was a decildel reaction In their favor. They requested another interview with ministers, to recolve a combinnication respecting the plans to be brenght forward by the ministers, and a request that the Wost India parket might be detained till they could conusunicate sonsething decisave on the quention, otherwine that a rebellios among the slaves might take places. The two latter have been aeceded to; so rests the question as present.

The sehooner Choice, eaptain 1bodd, arrived yeaterday from Montego Bay, (Jamaica), bearing adviers to the $2 d$ of March. They represent tise continuance of dascottent and alarin throughont the whole island. Neither slave nor mavier is at reat-the former anticipating the deatruction of hin propery, and the latter the restoration of his rights. No mildle path seems to have been devised for the safety and repose of either. The resulta that may follow the immediate emancipation of slaves in the Weat Indien, as now contemplated loy the Britinh ministry, may pertiaps afford us the lessons of windom, withouf the eost of experience.
A great drought has prevailed in the regioh of Montego Bay, and the Cornwall Chronicte says:
"We have qearcely had a drop of rain for the last three weeks. The shruba and treea aresulfiering most materially the pasturee are withered up by the fiety breezex, unrelieved by the night dew s, which are very scanty in this quarter of the conntry. The ground near the town ix quite baked and eracked by the sun, and all vegetation is at a stand. The month of March usually bringe rain, and there is an apparent change in the atmosphere at this moment. The prospeet of the sugar erop is most unpromistng."

According to a report of a select committoe of the bouse of Jords, recently published in Fonginnd, the eptimated value of the British possessions in the West Indics, including the ceded coBritish, possessins in about $\mathbf{f} 131,000,000$.

From the Battimore Gazette of Mareh 22.
The proposition which is to be brouitht before the reformed parliainent, for the emancipation of the siaven in the West Indies, wonld seem to indicain a rapid and triumphant advance of liberal princlples in Great Britain. The English have hitherto been much more devoted to the theory of political morality than the practice of it; and while the existence of slavery in our country has beea a standing reproach against us with their Writers, their own government has been In the constant exercise of the most galling oppression and tyranny, as well in their foreigu ponscasions as in Ireland. Their dominions are crowded with slaves of all eolors, in every degree of human debasement and misery. It is very possible that it may be their Intention, hereafter, to act up to the maxims which they have been wo long preaching to others: but even in this proposed emancipation it in questionable whether they will not be actuated by expediency rather than phiianthropy, and whether the credit of the measure will nm be claimed by the nation at large, while the whole burden of it is to be borne by a few.

The meavure will obviously be equivalemt wa surrender of the Islands to the hlacks, who, upon an average, constitute not less than 85 per cent. of the whole population. Jamaten, the largest and most important of the British Went Iudia tslands, has a pepes Intion of about 400,000 souls, of which not more than 40,000 are free white inimbitants: in some of the smaller islands there ta n still greater diaproportion in favor of the blacks. It has been the prevailing opanion for many years past that these islanda would, sooner or later, fall into the possession of the negroes: and the symptomas of relmillion among them, lately, have been on frequent, in consequence of the exertions of a certain clase of reformers, that the surrender, now, would probably anticipate the inevitable eourse of events only by a few years. So far as the nation and government of Great Britain are literested, this sacrifiee would be inuch greater in appearance than in reality: the islands are of little value to them except as affording maval stations, and the government of theto is a fraitful source of trouble and expense.
The most extraordinary feature in the contemplated meamure is the refusal of any comprnastion to the planters and propriecors of slaven. This has tue appearance of a bigh-handed violation of individual rights, and disregard of "vented interests," which would be better saited to a despotic government, than to one which is fast axsuning a republican eharacter. Fit, is the present state of puthlic opinion In Eingland, it will probsbly meet with litile oppowtion. The whole white population of the islands does not muehesceed a hundred thousand sonls-an theonsiderable fraction of their nation, which may be safely disregarded, more particularly ns the wealtiient and most distinguished armong them belong to the elass whose political induence is now very nearly anuibilated.

One of the secrets of the present desire in England to abolish slavery in the West Indies, nay, perhaps, be direcerned in the following articie. Mr. John Bull always keepa a close look-out on pounds, shillings and pence, involved in trade.
Fritiah trade to Brazil. The Liverpool Journal contains a notice of a pamphlet on the trade to Brasil, from which it appears that the people of that eountry give ndecided preference to British goods and British merchants. They admit all British manufactures on an ad ralorem duty of 15 per cent. while they impose on nearly all the manufactures of otber countries a duty of 24 per cent. The trade may, therefore, be considered as entirely in British hands. Previous to the importation of the Portuguese court, they indulged but little in finery or lusury; but fashion, sanctioned by royalty, soon inspired them with a love of dress, and a desire for articles of uulity. In 1820 the exports from Great Britain had reached the amount of $\{1,860,000$, and they had reached in $£ .3,000,000-50,000$ tons of Britieh ehipping linving entered Rio de Janeiro.
The writer complains, that in return for this preference, the importation of the most available produce of Brazil into British ports is prolibited, and that purliament compels the inhabltawts of that country to send their coffee and angar to the Ameaicana and DOTCu, in oveler that Brtioh mamufachurers may be paid for in bills on their neighbors!' A petition is befire partiament, praying for an alteratiou in the commercial regulations now existing between the two conntries. In the cmure of his antmadrersions, the writer inaken the tollowing reinarks:
"There is un douht whatever that the W. India colonies have been a sad burden to this eonintry, ind, what is not very consolatory, they are fickly to continue so. A vast eapital is inveated in these isfande, and unust not be too hastily interfcred with; but, at the mame time, the legislature is bound to encourage the trade with the states of South America, for they are decidedly our best eustomers, and, if properly managed, protnise to take from us, at no distant day, more manufactures than we now export to all the reat of the world besidiss. The Blacks and the planters are sufficiently burdensome, without permitting them to shat oust all conpetition, to curtail our rommerce, and bmit the employment of our shipping. The Hrazillians take from us now all the manufactures they are alle to, pay for; but, if we tonk their sugar and coffee in return, they would, of comree, be enabled to take fron us a much greater quantity. The Immedite effect of a more liberal poliey would be, it is estinnated, the additoons 1 em. ployment of from fifty to a hundred thousand tons of British shupping."

00 -The time seemed so properly fitted to give a sketch of the speech of Mr. McDuffe, In the South Carolina convention, that we have inserted it. There are points made in thiw speech which are of deep Interest th the volnutary, or Pree laboring elasses;and our reading of this sperch clearly shews the opinion of Mr. MeDuffe, that these have been reduced in a close, or much eloser, approximation to the condition of the involuntary, or slave laboring elasses, than heretofore. If thoae Interested in the latter deserve success for the steadiaess and fidelity with which they bave prorsued their purposen, what shall be said of the former, who, divided and huzzaing, have been "nailed down to the counter like base money?" They were tuld what would happen; and, as we apprehend, must reap the harvent which they sowed to the whirlwind! When they feet-they wilt believe; but belief may come ton late, If the anemy acta wisely. We would, however, that this feeling had enme upon them, at once-while strength remained to "correct the procedure," and that every one might surely know the real cause of reduced wages for tabor, and inereased prices of goods. But they are doomed to understand this secming paradox. They will know the meaning of the word competitios, and find out that cont to a consumer is exactly proportioned with his ability to obtainthat high prices and tow prices are only comparative terms-that the money-ealue of an article has no necessary counection with its real ralue; that diamnnds may be advantageously exchanged for an equal number of potatioes, and a quart of gold eoin be "judiciously" soid for a quatt of wholesome water.

Our kind neighbors in Canada have not only grossly abused us beennse of our protecting rystem, but rendered their best serviens to "nuilify" it by smuggling, and other fraudulent operations: but when the principle of that systetu comes home to themselven, they perfectly underatand it! So will South Carolind-when American cotton shail be tased 34, per Ib, in England, and East India cotton be admitted frce of duty; the supply if the latter being adequate to the whole demand, and its quality rendered equal, at least, to our Uplands-both which will probably be the ense, very soon after the expiration of the Fast India company's charter.

All the crops of Ireland are expended among the manufucturers and artizans of England, evilcntly precluding the people of Ireland from similor employment. 'Ithas whilst industry is fattened in Fingland by the nutrituus produce of Ireland, the people of that country grow tean for the want of it."
"Fres taade." A trial al law has just been decided In favor of the corporation of liverpool, plametiff, aguinst Bolton, Ogden & Ca. representing the Ancriean merchants of that elty. The action was to try the right of the city to "exaet certain duties and toils upon ali goods comiug from albroad, consigned th persons not freemen of the city." This decision will hake out of the pockets of the Amerisan merchants about 60,000 pounds a ywar-and this is equvalent in a bounty to that anount in favor uf Ititinh traders. The house of Bolton, Ogiden & Co. are said to pay at teast five thousand dollars a year to the corporation for their duties.
$00^{-T h e}$ American merchants at Liverpol pay an alien tax which amounta to nearly three hundred thousand dollars a year. If the drab-gaitered gentlessen and other English adorers of "frce trade" doing business in New York, were taxed at the same rate, that great city would not, perhaps, need any other revenue, much is said about the prodigal expenditures of the corporation? But, though such taxes are very right on Father Bull's side of the Atiantie, they are very wrong on Brother Jonathan's side: so nullification and secession would be treason, if practiced north of the Potomac-but are strietly eonstitutional, when entertained south of that river.

The cholera awfully prevailed at Ilavana, at the date of our latert acerounts from that city. From the 24th of Feb, when it first appeared, up th the 24th of March, it was helieved that fice thousand persons had died $-1,000$ whites and 4,000 blacks. On the day before the sailing of a schooner which has arrived at Daitimore, five hundred persons are shid to have died. It was feared that many premature interments had taken place. Reveral persons, on their way to the grave, were ronsed by the jolting of the dead carts, In which they had been pilaced!
One individual had loat 50 out of 200 shaves! All sorts of business were suspended, exeept in relation to the sick and the dmad. The captain generai liad ordered discharges of antillery to pmrify the atmosplicre. The salc of specifics for the cholera bad been prohibited.

Liaxisi. We have good accounts from the colony of free blacks, and unenns hnve cousiderably nceumulated to give energy to enugration and secure the comfort of worthy persons. who boek the laud of their ancesurs that they and their ehildren may liave rink In mociety, according to runl merit-without regard to the ecolor of their skins? The beginning of n grvat nation has, probably, commeaced-which, though it may not do much to relieve the United States of a species of porpuintion which is feared in soine parts of our country, and degraded in nill-still an opportunity is presented by which hollers ot slaves anay liberate them, without thowe dificultiew and dangers which nttend this proceseding in nil the soutberil states, ated also enabled to entertmin a hope that their condition will be tuproved. A want of cotitidence as to the Inticr, has prevented the emancipation of tens of thousands of indiviluals-and we think it is pretty clear, that emanclpation, in the slave-holding olates, without removal, is not productive of a general besebt to persons of cutor.

By the 16th annnal report of the eolonization society, it appears that the receipts of the society for the last year, linve been $ 12,29710 ; balance on hand from the last year, $611,09015$. 8 3,42019 were ruceived from England, and 05,180 paid by the mnnazers of the Maryland fund. As inetances of what is going on-the foilowing may be mentioned:

The rev. Itichard Bibb, of Kentucky, has Iiberated thirty two of his slaves-furnished them with clothing, besides 444 dollars in money, and nent them to Liberia.

A party of colored enigrantr lef Loniaville, Ky. on the 22d ult. for Laberta. It numbered one hundred and sis perwons, ninety-stx of whom were mannumitted in Kentaeky, four were from Fast Tennessee, and the others were free. Among the latter is an enturant from Brown county, Ohio, who goes out as a representative of three hundred persons in that county, who contemplate emigrating to Liberin, provided his report be envorable. The enugrnata lef Louisville in high spirite, having been liburally provided with money and provision by the people of Kentucty. They were to be conveyad to New Orleans free of espense, in the elegant steam boat Mediterranean, sccompanied by the secretary of the Kentucky colonization saciety. At New Orlenns the charge of the emigrants will be asoumed by Mr. Gavage, of Ohto, who will accompany them to J.lheria.

A Inte number of the "African Reponitory," which is pub lished at Washington, contains the proceedings of a meeting beld at Chesterfield, Derbyshire (Fingland), which was addressed by Ellintt Cresson, esq. of I'hiladelphia, in agent of the American eolonization society, in an able nod eimquent tmanner. In the course of his remarks he stated the particulars of the purchase of Cape Mesuradn, which if not wistly new, eannot fail of im parting interest, even at the present tive.
"An Americnn vessel, be said, trading on that coast was driven off by weather, with six Kroomen on board, whom they carried to Baltimore, where Flisha Tywon, an elder of the society of Friends, and general Harper, (a Catholic), each took three of them nader their protection. The Rev. Ebenezer Bargess, and rev. 8. J. Millw, (the agents of the maciety), tnok great interest in these expatriated Kroomen, and throwgh their representations, the late American president Monroe, was Induced to order a sloop of war to carry the Kmomen to thelr native land. A plentiful provision of elothing was given to them, and they ombarked for Africs, accompanied by these gentlemen. The eaptain of the vessel was anacquainted with the coast, but the Kroomen soon recognined $i t$, and it is easy to imagine their joyfui feelinge, when they found that they were carried back to their homen, toutead of that wlavery to wlaich so many of their coustrymen had been devoted. They saw fautliar objects from the vessel's deek-muddenty two of them were ohserved to be atruek with the nppearance of an old grey-beaded Alrican on the shore -they shouted with Joy -he plunged into the wnves, swatn to the vessel, and threw himself into their arum,-a pantomime of perfeet joy sueceeded-he was their fallier! They told bow kindiy they had been treated; they showed fitm the garmebts which generowity had given the th, and they said, in their language of unaffected simplicity, that the "white face" had given theill "too mueh gond." The news snon sprrad; their happy return was noised abont; the native chiefn, wruck with the erntrast between these and other white men, proffered their woil as the future bome of manumitted Africann; the purchase was manle, (after the peacefill manner of I'run with the American aborigines), and the colony uf Liberia, thus literally sprung on the ruial of slavery,"

Tut Susgernanmall. The navigation of this noble otream is much injured by vnrious dame, for the supply of the Pennsylvania enmaly, or to forev the river trade out of its natural direction. A late Harrisburg paper had the foilowing peragraph concrerning one of these dams:
"We learn that a portion of the Muney dam has been morn down, no by the ice and flood, but by the hande of the raftmen. Bix arks were sunk In pasaing the dnm on Finday and Saturday Inat, and on Monday a conipany of raftunnt demolished a sumicient portion of one end of the dam to adinit rafts and arka thrmugh with asfety. Thus white the Icgindature are appropriating millions to construct weles cannia along our navigable streams, the prople nre nuillifying their nets ly tearing down their work. We want no ptronger evidence of the truth of what we have always asserted, that the canals along ouf anvigable streams were not only asfless but opprevive."

Bxalh nani notey. Grorga has followed the lead of several other states and prohibited the circulation of lalls under five dollars. It has, for some years, been thus in Maryland, and we have experienced no sort of inconvenience, except becanse that five dolinrs, in epecis, are more than a pernon wishes to earry about him, oll account of their weight. Perhapa three dollar bille might be advantageously allowed.
Rail nasps, se. A rail road is to be construeted from Providence to Stonington, Conncetleut, in continuation of the raad from Roston. Thus will the difieult voyage round Point Judith be avoided, ind Boaton be rendered only about twelve hours distant from New York; and when the rall mad from Batimore to Washiagton shall be iniahed, the Journey from Bowion to the seat of the national governisut may be made in nbout or leed thatin thirty eontinunus bours, without fatigue: plenty of time being allowed for sleep in the steam boats, thrugh comfortable naps may be taken in the rail road coaches, if desired. We wish that there was power iu the general government to aspist in such works!and erpecinlly in those parts of the country where the local population and capitnl are insulficient to accomplish them. There Is a "consolidntion" in such improvements which the gratest sticklern for "state righta" ahould not ohject to: and besidee, in many nections, they are minch needed for public purposes. Perhape, had even the present works existed at the commencement of the late war, a much larger sum of money than the whole evst of them would have been saved, in charges for public traneportations and waste of time, as well as of goodsto say nothing about otiter advantages, yet more important.
The Chariepton rall mad is fintshed and avnilable for transportation nud travelling for a distance of seventy-two miles. A loconotive engine traversed the line last week, with the mail, several pmasengers and three or four tons of iron, in six hours, or at the average rate of twelve miles an hour.
with a continuous line of steain boats and rail mad carriages, the Journry hetween New York and Baltimore might now be accomplished in seventees houra. When locomotives shall be placed upon the New Jersey rail road, only abont fifeen hours will be required. In two or three yrars, it is probable that the distance between New York and Washington will be performed, by ordinary travelling, in seventeen hours.
Two new steam enginea from England, the Iieerpool and Pioneer, have been placed on the Petersburg rall road. The Intelligencer sayes-

As nn evidence of the power and epeed of these enginee, it is only necessary to state the fact, that on Monday morning inst, a party of gentlemen left town it half past nine onclock, in the coaches drawn by the "Pionkes," for the purpoee of attending Greenville court, and remained at the court home nhont two houra and a half, and returned to town by six a'clock in the evening-the whole distance being 82 malos. When the necessary delays at the several depote are taken into consideration this trip will, we think, justify the assertion that they cannot "ortrip win, we think, juinfy the ass

A Philadelphia paper says-The new engine built by the Went Point foundry aspociation, at New York, laas been placed on the Philadelphia, Germanıowi and Nonistown rail road, and after severe and repeased triala has been found completely in answer the expectations of the managers. Two engines are now in sucecsaful uperation on this roat, and their continual paksing aad re-passing each othor, with, their trains of cars, at great speed, atford a spectacle at once highly novel and interesting to our eitizens. We underetand the ruall is now in such excellent order, and the arraugements so well conductrd, as to insure punctuality and despatch to visiters and travellers.
An act has passed the legislaturn of Virginia to authorise the making of a rail road from Norfoth to the Roanoke. The eorporation of Norfolk has sulsscribed 869,000 -and three-fints of the whole capital being taken, a clanu is made on the state for the other two-fifths.

Ixprisonxeyt mon deat. The Iegisiature of Maryland, in Deember seswion, 1872 , prased a Jaw abolishing imprasonment for debt, if not exceeding thirty dollars-which was repeated at the last session, being thought rather to benefit dishonest persons, than prevent wrongs on worthy men. We have always believed, (having had much severe experience coneerntig the whole subject), that far ranre injury results to society from frourdutent debiors than hard-hearted erellitors. The general dispostion is tnore to encourage and sustain an hopest man struggling to pay bis debts-than tu oppress and imprison him; and suct is the interest of creditons, which all men are most apt to pursue.

gematorial pleasantry. Some Whahington correspondent of a northern paper relates the following anecdote.
"Mr. Clay is ofen sporuve and antusing. The other day, during the debate on the revenue colleetion bill, Mr. Wilkins, whote hair is grey, and whose permon is slender, said the was young and sont, and deemed nos the best time to selle the spirit of aullification. He did not wish to leave it to posterisy-and was willing to share his part of the danger.' soon after he attempted to read a part of the South Carolina ordinanee, but his eye-sight not being very gnod, he apologized for the oniswom. Mr. Clay, in a lew voice, hil heard all over the chamber, immediately taking off his apecturles, sald, with an arch look, "tate these, my young friend." The effeet was ludicrous. Eve 5 body laughve, and Mr. Wilking enjuyed the joke as well as the rest of us.")

Ma. Manovis, one of the senators from North Carolina, in hit speech on Mr. Clay's comprombe bill, said-"It becomes mot me to trace the motives of those who brougit forwanl this eeasure-but I have no doubt that they are, in an eminent degree, honorable. He felt demp gratitude to those who had come to our dellverence, in the hour of nur deepest gloom, when we the molights save the sparkles which zloamed from the stefl of the enemy. If if were tenfoid more ambitions than 1 ann, I would mot derive more oloay than he has who restoren peaee to an empire like this. To Dr. Samuel Akerly, New York.
My dear friend-I was on my third interesting virh to the ruins nf Palenque, on the 2lit of July, when I received yours of the 24th of March tast, so tbat I have not been able so answer it liefire.
It woutd the imposslble in a single tetter to give yon the details of the astouslong objects I have seen. I shall therefore only iuform you, that from sheptember, 1819, till the end of Oetoler, $\mathrm{IK} A \mathrm{~A}$ i have buen eonstantiy at work, and have eollected materinla for a work in two volumes. I intend to dedicate it to you, as it will eonsist ir letters addressed to yon, if you permiL Buring my tabors I have expended fat, 500 in travelling and investigations.
I have in my possession a description of ruins of whieh nether Don Antonio detkio, nor niny other person, has yet been abte to tlescribe; anil although the antiquary and dranghtanan Wahleck, whon I accompanied to Palenque, has written some notes, he will not lie able to accomplish any thing lierause be has had few opportunitiex and does not vistt the ruins.
1 have in my pousession a nuinber of idols, some of baked clay, some of stone, atid others of an unknown subatance, buf whiflt may be petrifaction, jasper, or n epreies of marble. I have one of massive gold, but unfortunately, only of the weight of four dollark.

I have a plan of Tolasen, whth finer tincrarien, which conduet to the mins, and a plan of the great palace, whelt is targer than that of the Tutlicrics in I'aris. I lave also mone drawings, and a manumpipt himtory of the ruins, which has been in ny pomegasion thirty years."

Powpett. Our repmet of the last meeting of the myal society of itteratire, notices a letive of great interest from sir W. Gelf, relative to recent intportatit ducoveriox at Pompeii. Cot. Bobiuson, it seems, in boring as the Freuch do fir Artesian welle, firut fell apon a spring resemblug the stiditz watrrx, which is miready much reaorted to, and hat performed many curcs. But a far more striking discovery ensund-no less than that of the Iong anticipated port of Ponnpeii, with ita vesspls overthrown upon their sides, and covered and prewerved by the eruptive volcantic matter, which has thins anclinred them for on many ages. About thiriy masts have been found. What a mipe of curiosity lies below, to gratily our thirit for knowledge of these remote tianes! Bertian income and taxation. A question for often asiked what portion of a tuan's ineome is tnkrn from him in taxes Now, the total incomil of the people of G . Britain may be eatimated on data which we have not romn to specin, at $£ 250,000,000$. That of Ireland we may assume at $£ 50,000,000$, making in the whole for the linited Kingitom $5: 300,000,000$. Of thin num more than one-sixth in drawn directl's by zovernment. But this is not the whole. The bocal taxes atnonint to a very large sum. The poor rates in Fingland exceed $\mathcal{\&}, 0,00,000$. Ohber local tazes and cantribations probally amount to $£ 10,000,000$ innre. Then, an wo have alreaty explained, the higher and richer classen are exempted in a groat ineasure from contritusting their proper shase of the national tasstion. When these different circumstanees are taken into view, it will hardly be dirputed that onethird part of revery man's income, in the middle and lower clamens of mocipty, is taken away by the tax collector. The latest latelligence from this ill-fated country is contalned In the following arucle.

Since the press in Germany is tuoder the severe control of Rassia, Austria and Pruspia, no Information from Poland can be obtained but with the greatest dimealty. I must add that the Russian government takes the greatest care that its cracl whase should not be known in foreigh countries. Ifind, bowever, the means of inforising ynu that the extablishment of the anint and its steath engine have been carried away to St. Petersburgh, that the prismus are still full, and the fate of the tmprisoned is mot as yet known. Every thing Indicates great poverty in the Russian fuasces. The increase of taxes, and the catiscations, without waiting for the sentence of the enurts, is poing on with greater vigor. Prince Czartoriski's magnificent country seat at Pulway has been announced in the Warsaw sewapaper as confocatcd, and otfered for sale; and In Volhynia and Podolia the confscations are alosost general, without paying the mortgages on those estates. The system of transplantation coutinute to carry away to Siberia and the Cancasus the peasants and the scuall gentry. The measure which provoked the whole population was the violation of the chureli of Chen stokow, beld in the greatest veneration. There was In that church a miracnlaus innage of the boly Virgin. For many centuries, kings, princes, the wealthy, and the poor, carried to that ehurch their offeringt in dumonds, gold, sllver and moat rich exvotes. It was rewperted diring the invasions of Turks and Tartars, but not by the Rnwwians. That rich treasure, smountiog to milhons, bas been robhed and carried away to st. Petersbargh. The aonihilation of the Ronusn Catholic clumebthe introduction of the Greek schismatic religion-the total eq tinction of the Polioh nation, is openly drelared and swom? The most provoking circunstance is the audacity with which the Rusaian government, in perpetrating these barbaroun cruelliew, deniew and contradicts them in foreign newapapers.

LETTER FROM GENERAL LAFAYETTE

TO THE INHABITANTS OF BMoota.
Tranalated from the Constitutional de Cundinamarea for the New York Duily Adrertiser. La Grange, July 29th, 1832.
Not knowing whether the firm expresolion of my graturude has ever reached you, I have thought the present time the most propitious occasion to address once more to the respected inhabtants of Bogota my lively and siocere tianks.

On the first anniversary of your revolution of 1830 , you were pleased to addrest me yuur kind felicitations. On this wecond anniversary I wish to repeat to you how taueh I feel hounred by your high evteem, and bow deeply I an affected by your kindnes.

On readiag again your valued letter, which 1 shall preserve through life as a treasure dear to my beart, I canmot but conspare your hopes then expressed with the present wtate of Fis rope. Be convinced, however, that our popalar wewk, so jurily celebrated by you, has already grwatly favored the emanneipmition of this part of the world, and that, in opite of ohstacles, both forepeen and unformenen, the priopfples and practice of true liber. ty will triamph In Europe, over the perniciotts infaences which are eserted to retard its progresu. Thus we also count, I conthdently aswure you, on the Independence of noble Poinnd, whate efforte you admire, and whose miefortune we have now to deplore.
Among the reaulte of our revolution, I have been particnlarly pleased with the relations extablished hetween France and the new atatess of the republican hemisphere. The symphithies of the French people for yon have their origin in the time when your patriotic mection of South America gave the first example of herove insurrretion. I hope that the mutual bouda whief ought to unite our two governmente, will daily become closer and stronger.
The wlebes felt by all generous minds on this side of the ocean, tn see your new republies rive to the highest gradw of liberty, necurity, and public and private prosperity, are not devoid of all persooal interrst; for at the present fime, when In pite of the long experience of alonve half a century In North Amrrica, malevolence and ari-tocratic and monarchial prejudices still throw a douht over tive shperiority of republican institutions, it is Important to the civilization of the world to prove that thowe iostitutions, far from being an occasinn for divtur banees and enmity, every where secure the peaceful enjoynueot of all the tighte of the nam and the cifizen.
General Santaodef, whowe friendihip I have liad the pleasure of cultivating here, and to whors yoit entrusted yowr letter, will please tranamit yon this my secand reply. His residence in the Inited states of the north mu*t have given him opportunity to $k n o w$ the affectiouate sentimente and fraternal asmpathy which Will ever be felt for ynu in that part of your benisiphere.
May the eltizen* of Bonota accept the tribute of my gratitude for favors which gratify me, and which I acknowledge with pride; while they accept my wishes for their general and pereonal happiness, together with my profound reupert.

LETTER FROM MR. CAREY.  From the U. S. Telegraph.

Dury Grekn, eeq,-Sir: A misconstruction of a passage in your paper srune days since, in which you comment on my late valedictory, induces me to request the favor of a place fir a few lines In repuly. It bas been supposed, from the passage in questim, that my withdrawal from the defence of the protertiog aystem, whieh you style "a bad cause," has arixen from n ehange of opinion. Thta is an Inference which my language did not whrrant, and which is entirely erroneous. Every fact that eomes to my knowiedge, coanneted with the snhject, serven, more and more, to envifin me in the soundness of the doctrinpa. Our national experience afforets the atrongest corrobmation of it.
In 1783 and 84 we tried free trade; that le, regulating our Impost accordiog to the wants of the government, and what was the ennmequence? Distress and demolation overapread the face of the land; paper money, Instalment and tender law were introduced, aceompanied by an Insarrection which endangered the union.
We tried the same experiment in 1816. With the exception of coarse cottons, to favor the south, and some lew other articles, the duties were ealeulated micrely for the purpose of revenue. What was the rexinit then? Nearly the same degree of distress and desulation as in the tormer cuse.
The first really protecuve tanitf ever enacied in thim conntry was in 182 M . What has been the result? A sprend of promesniy never exceeden, in the same space of tame, in any other cuuntry in the wurtd.
Holland tried free trade in IB16. What was the result? Ilear the langnage of one of her statesmen:
"It is the tariif of 1816 wheli has opened the door to the productons of foreign lidustry. Froin that period there has been a constant deficiency In our finances.
"1t is alsee 1816, that the ninth part of the nation is reduced either to mendictity, br to require asolistance.
it is since 1816, that manufactures and commeree lave declined with grant strides.
"It ts since 1816, that the inctallic medium of the nation luas been lavished to pay tribute to foreign indantry.
"This dixapionarance of the ppecie is nus-t permicionsly felt by the reduction of the price of honsrs, which, except in Itrus aels and the llague have fallen since Hiat period wore than one third.
"It ly aseertained, that the immense anmber af hrewerien and distillsries, which formerly cxisted in looth parts of the kisgdom, have undergone prodigtous dimitution."

Russia made the same fatal experimetit in 1818 , with the wane destructive reaults. Pray attend to the deciaration of the emperor Alexander in the proclatation frrturing the protecting syytem:
"In proportion as the prohibitory systern is extended and ren dered perfect in other countries, that sfobe which pwrwies the contrury syatem makes, from day $t 0$ day, surfifices more ertensice and moore considerable. It opens ils ports to all farcign produc-tione-and all ports are shut rgainst the articles it was in the babit of exporting. It offers a continual encourugement to the manufactures of olther countries; and its own manufacturces perish in the struggle which they are as yet unabte to muintain.
"It is with the meat lively feeliags of regret we acknowledge it is our uwn proper experience, which enablew us to trace the pictare. The tivins which it detalla, have betn realised in kussia and Poland since the concluston of the act 7-19 of Decew. ber, 1818. Agriculture without a market, industry vithout probection, languish and decline. Specte is exported, and the mont soldd commercial housce are shatken. The publie prusperity would soon feel the wound inflicted on private fortunts, it new regulatione did not promptly change the actual state at atiaurs."

1 have withdrawa from the areua is conseqnence of the utwer dentitution of eo-operation throughoilt the whole of layt year, on the part of those vitally intertatrd, and the trop-lissiness ut any in future. I am not easity discouraged; but it is ubvinus that it were worse than Quixutic for any individual, huwever gealons or ardent, to attempt, unaided, to stein the torretit that as aweeping away the system whech har dilfinsed such prowperily over the country. I am as much atheried tu the chume as I wa in Mareh, 1819, when I began; and, with proper support, woult advocate it gratuitously to the last hour of my life, notwith standing the varius revolting circunstances by whivh the ut vocacy has been constantly attended at alumet every mup of my progrevs.
That the aystem at present adopted will produce most injurious effects, I feel contident; but not the same extent as bit 1783, anill 1816. The extraordinary enterprise of our cllizens, their excellent naclumery, the wide extent of our Allantie loor der, the almost boundiess internal commmincation by our inmense rivern, our eanals and our rail roads, will avert a large portion of the evils whth befel us in the two former perionds, and ennble us to counpete with foreign rivals an inneth niore equad terms.

Kin.guton, Ith Fies, 1833.
Yon have heard of the splendid extatees and sumptucusk living of the Janalcans: of their planters who eould ve with the princes of the earth in their gorgenw palaees and rich equipument. Alas! those days are phit. 'Tlueur pasates are a burtben, and even their life is lield by a slensler tenure. 'I'liey know not but that their fond, wrived by a muncrius retintye, eonitains the deadly poison. How borrible tip fear the aswassin and the incendiary, in the monst familiar faces. Yet such is tlie epse, and one of the faireat Islands of this tiair earth inast lve abandoned to beings whose aituanion liam matle them little superion to the beasts, and whose course ls downward. You well kHow that I am no friend to slavery. Far be it from tase to advocate It. I give flacts.

Under exlsting clrcumatancep, I am well musared that the white inhabitants connot remain. Their costly wugar extates Will not pay the expense of wanagent'nt. C'redit la entirely extinct. Au estate of 200 nrgropg eould not liypothecase the essuing crop for $£ 200$. In fact, merclauts in Enfland dirret their factors to give no credit bottonien on cane tojs. Alortgageea relinquish immense stims rather Houn pay orifling annultirw on eatates. A hundied megroes were sold for sigisun. But highat ting liere and at bome, a change of time, eminpetition, and for aught I know, the natural ant nrcessary consequicnces of the syatem of slavery, have brought alnut this state nit thingw.

Certain it is that rral estate is emonsidered almost without value, a heavy Island drht is impending, tavation iniolernble, and lile iteelf esteedingly precarious. I learned the above in convershtion with twu gentlomen who liave been long in the bouse of assembly. 'I'lie inloabitants genvraily labor moder a keen senae of injury dome thom by the nomber country, and look to ours as the land of promlse. In eonsequence, many are maklng remittauces to our citles. Gotuc erntienien of cluaracter and fortune loave already removed, and many are prepariuz to follow. Thowe gentlemen infoumed mu that the ensigiation would be Immediate and larife. They ingulre with great parnestnems respecting the agriculture of the free stater, na nothing would induce them to live again in a slave counfry.

From the Charleston Mercury.

I have already (naym the eorrespondent of the Merenry) given you the purport of what Judge Richardson said, on the 15 th, apon Mr. Phill lpw's motion to strike ont the preamble of the ordinance. The following are his remarke, somewhat more in detail.

He aet out by maying, that he approved so entircly tise enact ing claume of the ordinusice, that he might even bave onitica his abjectimes to the preanible, If that question liad not been wet on fout by others.

He regretted that the eonvention enuld not content itself with the aet, about which alt sworned to agreez that it should have been thonght necessary to join to that act, reasons, upon which we were certain to differ.
If preambles were to be employed, they should, at leanf, perform the proper businews of a preamble. They whould wtrongly and ruccinctiy ant forth the great matives to the legislative aet; and, above all things, they should always found themselven as strictly as possible, upon perfertly corrist facts. They whould recite nothing that is not perfectly juet.
Yet your preainble contains, among the chlef facts that it al leges, two that are palpatly incorreet.
Its firnt atatement is this-"that rongreas has made such a re. duction and modification of the dutipe upon forelgn inuports," os bringe them down to a revenue standard.
I nsk mentlemen, is this mo? Are the duties reduced alrearly o a revenap standard? I believe if the act is ponsulted, It wilt be found, that wo redurtion happens till the 30th of December wext: that it is, even then, but a very partial reduetion: that, upon one Important artlele nf snihern consumptinn-low priced plaiss-the duties have been raised 45 per cent; in short, that this entirn "reduction and modilicatim," is future, and cantont therefore be njonken of, is the ternis that you enoploy.

Tic meronl statenienh, in the preauble, seribus to mee little better foundod. It in, that the duties are by the act, "brought doinn 80 a cerenue standard."

In this drelaration, I cannot, after the most careful and dispassioulate invortigasion tuat it was pmanthle for ine to give, by nuy muans coucur. If 1 in auy mort umbirstand the true merita uf that comprimive, they fall shoit of what the proauble attrilutes in theill. I cantuol, with the utitost etfort of my vinusa percivive that this modifeation reaches a revenue point. grant that it he a step towants u; the sreondereat step. For the redaction of lant gear was another, and the firmt.
I am far from thelering that rven your ultinate rate of 20 per cent. which yon are obly to reacil in l842), wall then lee low ennugh. I an willing, fowever, to necede to your present stepp, becnunc the late act lous trally done unith. Ireard it as the inception of the overthrow of the Anurrican Aystein. It is proof of that claugr, no which I lasd alway" relied-the chamge of public opinion. This is its irue fllect-no more.

Mif. MCDOFFIE'R REPLT.
Mr. MeDnffiesald, that it had not bes th his intention to speak upon this questlou. The rrimarks af the gextleman frum spattauburg compuelied bin to take the floot.
That gentleman objects th the preamhte as asmerting "that a reduction had been made," If the gentlemati had been good rinught to road that to which he abjected, he would have seen that it amertar thesueh thme. I'he words run thus, "W'hereas the congreas nftive United states by nu act recently luasmed, has muile sish a redsctions and moilification of the dutice ujon foremen imports, as amounts, substnatially, to as whimute reduction of the dutles to a revenite rtaindaril. ${ }^{13}$
Bnt, were it even an the genthenanil smppoced, what would be the cummon uaderstanding of the words? Would any man apgrehend them as conveyine what was not true? |heard that very gentleman, Inat sunimer, sponk in the very kBief form of the at of $180^{\circ}+2$, which had ceitathly not then gone into force. Ile then said, "that act had reduced the dasles to the eatent of letween six and twelve oullious, 1 "
Ilis firm objection therefore, becomes a mere verbal criticism - a technieal quiblite.

As to bis preond, let un see If the act does provide for an ultimate reduction of the dutises to a revenue athudard.
"'luat principle ia diwtinctly laid down in the bill; and it la joined th the furtier dvelartition, tivat no more revenue shall be ralsed, than la necessary to defray the ecomomical expenees of the goveriment. Tlife, with a wyrten mf ad valorem daties, aul a clans of free arthelep, nake the guneral primeiples of the bill.
Amone the articles made (ree, in December next, are the very important nnew of linens, Filke, and worsted enums; clansps of conmmoditiep excepdingly impoptant to us; and which will give ua, beyond all question, exchanges for onr particular productiuna, amonnilig to at least is millions of dollars per owwum. Linuns, most especially, are piricily in article of mouthern trade; and all theae winlal be paid for, by our productlons only.
If this reduction do not $\mathrm{g}_{\mathrm{o}}$ into imumediate effect is it bot as opeedy na any of which the gemilemen can thew tue an exam ple. Was an inatant reduction rver sern? Was such a thing ever clalmed? Could it be made, without ruin to the cummes cial interent.

If the gentleman will examine, I assure him that he will find the reduction on the protucted articles only, which is to hoppern in thecember next, betwren three and fove miltions; besides ton per cent- general, on the recelpt of ilusles of all such unprotected articles, as pay more than iweuty per cent.
&nrely then, all these advantagew inade tise bill nos entirely unfit to be comparesl with that of 1832 , which thie erenticmann and bila frionds magnified as "the bept of nill pmeplhle hills"-a a bill that it was a species of impiety not to fall down amd worbhip.

What is our present popition as to this qnestion, compared to onr former one? Four years kince, what waid your popular pre-eldent?- lise man who, from the boondleas ascendancy of pespular favor, wirlils the whesle force of yonr democracy? He said that a aytem, for the parpowes of protrection ainne, would bever In thls comontry be sbamioned- 'that this was neither to on expected nor desired."

W'lat said be, once again? "That no arrangement of the datles ennid ever be expeeted to inke place, which would not always lrave a laree surpilam revenue in the treasary."

- I ak the gentloman, where is now the man who wronld dure way this? There Is not such a one in congreww. Pven Mr. W'ebwirf, the boldent champlon of the sywtem, now sbrink from wurh an avowat, and cowerling before the wirength of our prinelpien, arlmits that only wifh reventie may be ralsed, as the econambleal ndministrasion of the government requires.

Ilow would he have been regarded fout yearm ago, who met inp even aclain to thi" prineiple? 太ir, be would bave beefl treated os a mere madman-a polisical Qulxote.
Hut "this," it weemp, "is hut the recond step." So sayy the honorable member, whose opinion I ean litile expect to slinke. My own, however, marle up in cloae view of all the facte, is ut cerly npposite: and I liere solemnly declare, in the presence of God, that the act of I832 would never brve been tetuched, except for the acta of this state. Sir, the fact was avowed to me by a union meraber of this atatenne of the most distinguished of his party, and high in the confidence of the prenideat.

But the gentleman refers all reduction to the agency of the executive. Has be forgutten when, only last suanuer, we were told with the uthont pomp of statemente uluost onder the great seal, "that the tariff was completely brought downt the wants of the government", Can he hot rameuber how these were heralded to us here, for purpores that I neeal not now menthon? Why sir, all the world kuows, that the tarnff of 1622 was a Jackeon tariff. Ijpon that tariff whs he voted tor-opon that tanff elected. Thank you, sir, that his lant measage wohld linve been sent, if his election had been then pending? Never! No, sir. That tand, ant yet put itt execusion, was lis, and as such, openly avowed as the final settlenent of the equestuon. Svery mak who refused to accept it was denounced. It was the text, the very bond of Jackronism, held up as such to the whole howt of the timid or the corrupt; and reverently kissed an the new covenast of faitb, by all whu aspired to be the frienda of the president.
Within a little three monthe, lo! he comes to us, with a mesage to recominend a reduction of the dumen!-ns dutura not yet pone into effeet-of duties, just now clamorously prochained to have been reduced to their lowest possible rate-of duties, to be content with which, had just now beent the very tewt of Jacksonism:

And what was the high motive that orged him 10 this? I apeak It with regret, for the president, and with shame, for the country: but I oaly speak what I ktrow, when I say that he did II, to crush the party that he hates, in this state. He did it, that he might be able to bold up these drclarations to theut aud say, "audacious rebels! luok what Andrew Jackson has satd! Trattors that you are! why did yon not wat?""

To this, it was iupossible for us to reply, unless humbly, in such sort as this: "How, may it please your majesty, was it possible for us to guess this? Was it easy to divinte that you,the Ajas of the tariff just adopted, were, in the next moment to turs its destroyer? What, but the mpirit of prophecy, or of ounniscience, could have forescen a course so devious.'

As for Clay's bill, I voted for it, with strong reluctance. I did got regard it as doing ennugh. On this question, wy peculiar views are well known to be different from thowe of the ehier part of the southern country. Had 1 consulted them alnue, 1 , abould have asid "accept only of uniform ad valorem duties", Idid not, however, think that my particular personal opinions should be forced upon the south; and I acquicsced in the undivided wishes of our friends.
It is true that what has been obtained must be regarded as in come sense, an achievemeut. It is, for the moment, a victory. But it is only such, if the people, how awakened, refuse to let it lull them into even an listant's secority. There is, in this general government, a proclivity to consolidation, that nothing except the most resolute watchfulnews can etay. The southern states are made, by their peculiar position and institutions, the centinels of the liberties of this confcderacy. Were I to die this pight, my last words should be, to bid them act, as if the day were at hand, when they inust defend their freedom.
strong as is the present cause of contest, and powerful as is the neceseity that compels us tomaintain this battle, a yet deepof eacase, bringing with it a stull more imperioun necessity of resiptance, hes beneath the present questinn. We were threatened with it, even at this sension, and in the very bidst of questions, that alrcady arked the whole wisdom and moderation of the country to appease them. They told us, openly, tiat we must pay for the vice in our institutions; that the free labor of the north must not-shall not be degraded to the same footing with the slave labor of the snuth.
If, then, I and disposed to aceept this comprnmise, it is with distinet annunciation to our people, that their zeal, their cous. rage, their vighlance, must not be abated; nor must they, for a aiagle instant, intermit their mulitary preparations. I tell them, that we have greater need to be prepared to llefend ournilves against theme people, than against a foreign enriny. I bave heard them, evkn in congress, talk openly of athaching us; and that, in a manner, with an exultation-that would render fiends Wheinselves as fit conferlerates firr us, as these inen.
Without such preparation, and withoot a atrong military spirit, mo people ever yef maintained its liberties. lisut all our peculiar circumstances-all our institutions-render a thorough syeten of defence aboolntely indiaponamble to our safrity, as well as freedon. Our militia should be as well trained as the armies of Napoleon.

It ie, besides, poselble that this accommodation-thls compro-miee-may not be respected. As that compromise should the our very utanot concerssian, we masi hold obsselven ready to take the thost decided steps, the instant that it is violated.
As for the force linll, it is clearly an attenipt to vest in the president ald authority wbatsoever. Gigantic as are the potvers that it gives lie will know full wall how to eke them out, with euplementary violence, if an occasion ever should arlse, that could, by chance, render a yet wider diserction necespary. Of his okilf and moderation, in ennstroing the law, we have no unapt example in bis notion of hanging the Ifartford conveution, monder the 24 section.

The powers buw ennferred upon him are far more than dictatorial. Rome, it must be remembered, never apphinted $n$ dictator except in the very last public aecessity, when the existence of the state was 山ireatened. Ilere it is done for mueh more than a gear, and upon a mere question of the revenue lewn.

Finally, to compare this bill with Mr. Verplanek's, whieh the prexinential party attompt to place aloove it, as far better for the *outh. This bit las the prineiple of equal duties. Mr. Verplanek's had noprobesple whatever. In this, the minimumas are utilly alohliatied: in that, a number of spectic duties were retained. In this, there is ho heavy horden on the great artieles of con-1mputh. In that, those very articlee are leaped with extras azant stuties.
A. to the reductinn under the present bill, it murt not he overInoke 11, that the largest annual diminutions are mide to fall precissly on those thangs which are thxed the mont.
The eorreppondent of the Merrury, adds-1 give you the general sulbstatiee of the alowv; and, I believe, with not a litte fidetty. As to its spfrit, howrver, and that nvewhelnung energy of utterancr; that intcuity of thought and paskion, wath whela the prolfs out his mrougert paxpager; I cannut, of conrae, give you the +hghthet image of that. I havenuly attempted hia ppeech, intrenl, hecause I knew that the pulific enrinnty demanded it, and because there was litto probability of his publishing if.

Yours, &c.

SOUTH CAROLINA-SCRAPB.

Before the Natchez lef Charleston, eapt. Tantzinger gave a pplendid entertainment on board his ship, to a very large company of talies and gentimen-the Intter of both political parties. On the departure of the Nateliez, the Courler, a union paper, hid lier "God speed," at wheh the Mereury took offence. The Conner thus rejonns:
The Mercury quotes our farewell apostmphe to the Natchez, and appenda to it the following doggrel lines, which are certainly entiled to all the prase that bald wit, inpontent spite, and unmeaning profanity, catt win for their common nffiphing:
"Gnd bleas the royal tronps, though treason menff;
God thean the if ןigtaila, thongh thry're now cot off!
Aad if at Washington old Nok should revel
An president elect, Giod bless the decil!"
The Mercury may well say that it does not "doast if the passage of Clar's bill as a triumph." Such ebullitlons of ill nasthre as the foregoing betoken any thing but the feeling of vietory. We confers ourselves at a loss how to appreciate that patriotism which finds cause of offence in our invocations of bleswings on the gallant ship which has for mometime reposed so gracefully on the waters of nor harbor, ditspensing its hospitahty to our citizens, without distinction of party, and proudty unfurling to the breeze the honored and glorious flag of "union and liberty,"

We find the frllowing article in the Charleatinn, (S. C.) Mercury, it is a precious piece of coxcombry and deserves to be ermbultacd, like the holy beetlea in risy pt:-
T'be Courier ank: whetirer the United Sjates flag formed any part of the decarations it the state right ball. It did not; and there wan reanon that it should not. The ball was given by those who had volunteered to thefend their state from invaders sent agaiost ber under that flag. Our harbor has nnt yet been evacuated by the president's forces, and the flag of the union is keen daily floating over our firts strengthened against Soulh Carolina. Ilesides the Uuited statos flag is Identified with the bill of blood, so long as that infamous bill remalis minepealed. When that is torn from the sthtate book, and all hoatile manifoptations agninst our state have ecased, and we call think of the union without thinking of tyranny, then, and not till then, ean the flag of the unton regain in the lmanas of Carolinians, the reverence and affection to once commanded.

The Camden, (S. C.) Journnl sayw: The nnllifiers of Gerraia appear to be rather more firsy than those of our stale. The merubers of the clnb at Macnu, on hearing that Mt. Foryyth had votrd for the reventie collection hill, assemibled and prepared aft rffigy of their senator, which they enypended by the neck and after amosing themwelves for at hour with grinulgg and making wry fares at it, they set il on fire:-But this was nnt sufficicnt-fenring they would not acquire "rennwn" enough should they stop here, they loaded a 24 pounder, and, nt the dintanee of eight paces, fired at the renator and completely de molished him-not "a vretige of the noble figure could be found," not even-a "grease spot!"

The Richmond Whid, which has alrongly enndemneal both the president"s proclamation and the "force bill," thas speaks of the new nuilifying nrdinance of Sonth Carolina:
"Coutrary to our liope, the force till has been nullified by the S. Caroilna convention-an injudie ious step we think, and almopt as sopererogatory as the act iterlf. When by the rrpeal of the ordinance at Navimber, the enfotcing act was deprived of pubfect matter whereupon to act-when no appeal had been taken to congress against it, and no opportunity offered firr the deliberate rellection of the country to pererlve its inntility, impoliey nod unconstitutionality, we must think that Snuth Carolina has acted with a precipitancy unworthy of ber oivn dignity, and extremely calculated to embarrass her friends and limpmir the success of their exertions for a legialative removal of the grievance. Do we not know that the principal difficulty in compromiaing the thrift was the apprehensuon that the act would be ascriled to intimidation? Do we not know that the argument which has atrayed, by its plasibility, almost the whole American people against her, was-"what-shall twenty-thrce states yled to the dictation nf one?", She han agaln, needlessly, exposed ber conduct to the same odium, her cause to the same prejudice, and her friends to Increased embarrassment. If bere, ber attitudo was sof forinidable a bar to the repeal of the tand, how much more so will it be now, whin the same urgeney does hot exist, wheu the sanse long conunuwd efforts have uot been used, aud when even those whut justify the principle of nullificathot, are compelled to condemin the every day and unnecessary uset"

GEURGIA AND THE FHEROKEES. From the U. S. Telegraph.
The National Gazette contaius a cotnuuntation on this subJeet, in which it is attempted to be plown that the Horody bill cannot be made applicabie to the cherokee case. For some reason or other, we eanmot concenve what, the fiazette conntenances the rame idea. We do not wisll to charge the Gazelte with an attempt at dreegution; but doea not the Gazette know what is well known hrre and elsewhere, that the sections referred to were introduced, we might alunnt may, expressly for the purpose of being applied to the Georgia case. It was soon knuwn that It was inteuded for theun to be so applied; and whatever doubts might have been entertained upou the subject, were noon reanoved by the Indian delegation. They indirectly refused to sell, although the goverunient made them an offer of two miltions and a lalt; aud would have gone to three mulhons. We are not sure but that three millinms were offered. Ifan the Gazetie never lieard that it was with ditheulty the president could be got to sign the bill? The truth is, the administratinn was outwitted. They discovered it, but not uutl it was too late. The president gave himself up, bound hand and foot, to his new frieude, and they had not the least coupassion for thim.
But what will Georgia do whes the mandate of the suprente enurt comea? Will she arknowledge her sins, repeut and obey? Will she luok to the white house for counsenance and forbearnaee? In vain! the proclamation stares her in the face. Will she look to her union aud procianation men-hyr advocates of the bloody bill, her Forsytha aind ther Waynes? It will be needless. They have sold her to the Philistuner, and shortly hope to receive the price of their treachery. Will she look to the union men of the adjoining states? Alas? thetr cry is submit! submit! the law of congress inust be executed!

From the Georgia Recorder.
In enaversation with one of our representatives, since his return from Washington, we learned that previous in the passage of the enforcing bilt, the Cherokee delegation, then at the seat of government, for the purpose of treating for their lands, showed every disposition tu make a treaty; so much so, indeed, that the seeretary of war considered that the banis of the tieaty had been settled to the satisfaction of the chief, and that it tequired but the formalities of the business to eomplete it. When lo, and behoid, so soon as the law for forcing the states wha passed, the secretary, to his astonishment, was first informed of their change of opinion, by the receptinn of a note from the chiefs, very politely inquiring at what ume it would be convenient for them to take leave of their great futher, the prevident. as they only waited that ceremony to returu to Cherokee.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITES.
hocge of mereaentatives, satuaday march 9.
The following resolution reported yesterlay by the cominittee of ways and means eouning up for consideration:
"Resolved, that the government deposites may, In the opinion of the house, be safely continued in the bank of the Uuited States."

Mr. Polk said he haped that gentlemen who believed the time of the house at this period of the sersion, to be necessarily valuable, would not press the consideration of this resolntion upon the house at this Juncture. Duning the suall remainder of the session, there were several measures of the highest publie Importance, which remained to be aeted on. For one, he was extremely anxious that the seswion aluould clowe by 12 o'elock 10 -llight, in order that a sitting upon the Babbath night be avoided. He would not proceed is expreasing his views until be should understand from gentiemen whether they inteaded to press the house to a vote on this resolution. (A remark was made by Mr. Ingeroll, which was tot heard distinctly by the reporter.) Mr. P. proceeded. As it had heen Indirated that the gentiemen intended to take a vote upon the reaolntion, he would ask wheether it was possible for the members of the house to express their oplinions on this subject with an adequate knowledge of the facte? The committee of ways and means had spent nearly the whole session in the examination of one or two paints connected with thits suljeet. The rauge of investigation had been of necropity tunch less extensive than the deep importance of the subject required-bant before any oplaion could be properiy expreseed, it was imporiant that the factudeveloped by the committee should be understood. There had been no opportunity for this-and there was no necessity for the expression of a premature opinton unless it was considered essential to whitewash the bank. If the friends of the bank deemed if indinpensably necessary in order to su*tain the bank to call for an expression of opinion, where the hosse had enjoyed no opportunity of examining the testimony and proof upon which atone a eorrect opinion could be formed, he proould be conupelled briefly to present one of two facts to the house. It had been one of the objects of the committee of house. It had been one of the objects of the committee of postponement of the redemption of the 3 per cent. stock by the bank. With the mass of other lmportant duties devolvIng upons the committee, as full an inverigation of the condihums of the bank as was desirable, could not be expected. The committer, therctore, had leen obliged to hunt thoir mquiries to this mubject of the 3 per ceuth-the other subjects of investugation were only theidental. epoll tins nam subject of iaquiry the whote connuitiee, majority as well as minority, were of opinion that the bank bad exceeded its legitimate authority, and had taken newasures which were in direet viola tion of its charter. He would read a slogle sentence from the report of the majority which conclussvels estabtished this posuthot. In the transactions upon this subject the majority of the committee expresuly say, in their rrport; that "the bankexceeded ita legitionate authority, and thal thes pruceeding had no sulficiunt warrant in the correspoudence of the secretary of the treasury." Coulal language be more explicit? It was then the unantmous opinion of the comitattee, upon this main topic of inquiry, that the bank had exceeded ita legitusate authority. and that its proreviling, relative to the 3 per ceuts, had no s $6 f$ ficient warrant in the correapondence of the secretary of the treasury. The bank of the Umted Nitates, it must be remenhered, had been mate the place of drposite fur the publie revenued, for the purpose of uecting the expeuditures of the govermmeut. With the public muney to its vaults, it was bouud to pay the denauds of the government. Ansong these demands upon the pubtic mouey in the bank, was that portion of the public debi, of whiels the redemption had bren ordered. Ilad the bank maniferted a willingness to pay out the public inoney Inits possession for this object? On estamianaint of the evidence, it would be found, that as eanly as Mareht, 1832, the prenident of the bank, without the knowledge of the government directors, had lustituted a correspondence with certain holdera of the phiblic debt, firr the purpose of procuring a postponement of its redeustion. These was at that time no cholera which conid be charged with giving occasion to the corresporndence. When pubic notice had treen given by the secretary of the treasury, of the redemption of the debt, the president of the bank Immediately came to Washington, and requested that the redemptimn might be gostponed. Aud what was the rrason then assigned hy the president of the bank, for this postponement? Why, that the measure would enable the bank to afford the merchants great ficilities for the transaction of tievir basiness under an extraordinary prowstre upun the money matket. What was the evidence npon this poin!? The proof distunctly shewed that there was no extrandanary pressure. The mouthly statements of the bank extablished that there was in fact a very considerable curtailunitt of the facohtues given to the merchants in the contmercial cities.

Mr. Wichtiffe rose to a questlon of order. The subject under consideration was a rssolutuon teclaring that the bank was a safe place of deposite for the public revenue. Ile subitutted whether it was in order to discuss upon this remolution the redemption of the 3 per cent. stock.

The chair (temporarily occupied in the absence of the spenker lay Mr. Tinylor) decided that the remarks of the gentlenan from Tennesmee [$1r. Polk) were in order.
Mr. Poll proceeded. The arntleman from Kentacky [Mr. Wickhife] appeared to be very sengitive upon this sublject. it was not long since that gentleuman in a toast given at the Jefferson dinner axpreased the most decided hostulaty to the bank.He would leave to that gentloman to esplain the reavons which had produced the sudden clingge of hos opinions, and from a violeut oppouent had converted him Into a nost zealous advocate of the bank. What was the object of explaining this matter of the 3 per cent. stork? Not to waste the time of the house Which was now mo precious, but to shew that the management of the trank relative to the 3 per ernts. distinctly proved that the bank was not able to pay the pubtic money deposited in ita vaults for the redpmption of the publie debt without obtaining a loan from abroad. The minonly uf the comanitee of wayx and means had not diaputed the ability of the bank to deveharge its debts in lis own convenient time-but had the bank promptiy paid the public money depovited in its vaults whesi called for? As early at October, 1831, the bank had anticipated that durus the course of 1 kind $^{2}$ it would not be allowed the undisturbed and permanent use of the public deposites. In the circular orders to the several branclies which were then lasnell the necessity was stated for collecting the means for refunding thoar deprastes from the loans which were then outstanding. Efiorts were made by the branches of the west to make collections, for that objeet; but those efforts entircly failed. The debts due upon loans maile by the western branches had not been curtailed. It was found impossible to curtail them. As the list of divenunts tind gone down, the list of domestie bills of exchange had gone up. The application before alluded to was made in March to Mr. Ludlow, $n^{r}$ New Virk, who represented ahout 1,700, rud of the public debt to poetpone its redemption. This expedient also failed. Then the president of the bank came to Washineton for the purpose of procuring the postpouement of the perind of redemption upon the gronnd that an extraordinasy pressure existed, and the public interest would be promoted by enabline the bank to use the public money in affordug facilitica to the merchants of the commercial rities. And what next? In July, the president of the bank and the exchange committee, without the knowledge of the liead of the treasury, or of the board of directors of the bank, instituied a seeret mission to England, for the purpose of negotiating in effect a loan of five millions of dollars, for which the bank was to pay interest. Tue propriety or object of this misnioo was not laid before the board of direetors, and no elue was afforded to the government. Mr. Cadwallader went to Kugtand upon this seeret mission. On the first of October the bank was advised of the arrangement made by Cadwallader, by which it was agreed in behalf of the bank, to purchase a part of the debt of the foreign holders, and to deGer the redemption of a part. Now, it wha well known toevery one who had taken the trouble to read the eharter of the bnnk, one who had taken the trouble to read the charter of the bank, that it was expressly prohibited from purehaning publie stuck. On the 150 th of October it was diseovered that C'atwaliader had exceeded his instructions. This disenvery by the lank took place immodiately after the circular letter of Baring, Brothers, * Co. of Londont, anononeing the arrangement, had been published in oge of the Now losk papert. Thle cireular gave the first information to the governmeat, of to any one th this country, as far as he was advocd, excepting the exchange commitiee of the bank, of the object of Ciadwallader's miesion. In the limited tuse which could now be spared for this direussinn, it was impossible to go through the partifulars of this spheme. It would be seen on exauthation of the transaction, that the bank bad directly ititerfered with the redemption of the publie debt, for the obvious reamon that it was huabige in refund the public deposites. Tbe fholera was ant the griound of the eof sespondr nee with Ludlow. It was nut the cholera whieli brought the president of the bank to Wa-hington, to reqnest the powtponctnent of the redemption of the debsingor was it the chotera which ted to the resolution of the exchange commitier of the hank to send Cadwatialer to Faghand. The true disorder was, the imponsibitity ito which the lank found itself to concentrate ita funds and diminish its doans. It had been stated in the report of the majority of the commuttee, that the cortificates of the gratest portion of the 3 per cents. lad leen surrendered It had heen waid that there was now ices than a million of this tebt notetanding. In point offact, it wauld seem from the correspondenee, that between one and two millions of the debts of which the certuficates had been surrendered, had been paid by the bank beconoing delitor to the fureign holder inatend of the government. The dirsetors appestosippose this hits not been the case, but the correspondence shows that the certifieates have been sent home under this arraugemeut. Afer this brief explanation of the conduet of the bank in relation to the public depmeits, he wonld ask, whether It was nereswary to sustain the eredit of the bank by adopting tinis resolution? is it supposed because a majority of the house were friendly to the institition, that it is neeesary fur them to dorlare the opinion expressed ith this resolution on fatit-and faith alone? Ile had no demire that the resnlutuon should be negatived. If he was compelled to wrete on the reaolution, hes should vote against it bos prifed to wite on the ruantution, hes should shte against it -bot hre was willing that culugress should infer the expresuion of its opioion until the facta upon which it must be founded are understood. Thin opinion eould make no dilfirence as to the duty of the gnvernment. Whenever the secretary of the treasury sliall drem the pablic deposites unsafe in the bank, it is made lits doty to withdraw them, and to iny his reasons before rongrese. The previous npiaion of the house-especially an opinion expressed without means of examinalion, neither taken from nor add to the responnithlity of the sereretary of the trensury. Pressed ae the comruitice of ways and means have hern with their various daties, they bad, at a late period, ealled for the corresponilenee of tho bunk in Eeptember, Oetober, and November, in order to averrisin, as far as miuht lor practieahle, hy that means, the condtion of the dobts due to the bank in the west. What hat been sern in this rorrespondenee? That wueh had bren the eondition of one of the western branchen, great alarm lud been felt as to fis power of going onl, and prompt assistance had been ncerssary to prevent its stopping payment.
Mr. Wickliffe iuquired what branch the gentleman referred to?
Mr. Polf. That at I,exington, Kentueky.
Mr. Wiekliffe said, any alifileulties in which that branch had been involved, had arlsen from its accommodationa to Jacksoo politicians.

Mr. Polk. Jneksnn politieians! The member from Kentueky can hest answer to his eonstituents what mort of Jaekson politieians have leen areommodated by the bank. Mirch had been sad in eertain quarters of the persecution of the bank, and of the matice of the adminktration towards thnt institution. The whole erime of the administration is the demanding the publie inoney from the bank for the parpose of paying the puhtie deht. As to the condition of the westers debt, ahout while so muci had been said, and whieh was represented to have lieen so mych rednced, it will be found that the principal reduction eonsists in what Mr. Cheves ealled race horae bills. The old detht in paid by drawius a new bill. payabie in a different piace. When that bill beconues due it is paid by another of a similne charaptre. The hour allotid to morning businese having expired,
Mr. I. Rates moved the orders of the day.
Mr. Ingersoll expressed a lappe that the debate would be permitted in proceed.

Mr. Bates, then withdrew the mation.
Mr. Polk rroumed. It was no fanlt of thie that the report of the committep liad come in at mo late a period. He felt it to be bis dnty ts onfer a very brief riposition of the reasons why he did not regard it as proper for the honse to express its opinion upon ths suhject without any opportunity for examinatuon. The facts collected by the committee would go forth, and every man could then form hin opinion. He would move to amend the resolution by striking out the while after the word "resolved," and inserting "that tife conunittee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject." Ile would not pursue the discussioo while so many important nubjects preesed upon the house on the last day of the session. Whatever might appear to be the condition of the bank at a vuperficial glance, n careful serutiny of its measures and its affairs would satisfy any impar tul mind that lts condition was not that which had been repre sented by its zeulous frieuds. Without dwelling upon the particulars, he would sem up his objections th the resolution in the present form by wtating that the bank liad uawarrantably interfeted with the arrangements of the government in reference to a grest national object. In this, both the majority and minority of the comuntter had agreed. The secres of this inter ference wrould never have been discioned but from the accidenta publication of the circular of the Barings addressed to the Enropean holders of the 3 per cents. The enrrespondence which had now for the.firat time been drawn from the bank was moot uatersal and importaot in the decision of the question, and wat until this time entirely unknown rither to the treasury department or to the house. He could have hoped that the friend of the bank would unt have preswed the resolution. Had it been properly in order, lie wonld liave adverted to the manner in which the bill relative to the sale of the bank stock had been treated-a ad all rejly to the arguments of thoee whon opposed it prevented by the previnus question. He ebjoyed the watisfaction of having endeavored to discharge bis duty to the country in relation to thir suliject. Should he live, he trusted to be able to contribute something furtier towards tise developement of the transaction of this institution. From what had already been diactosed, it appeared that the most inaportant basiness of the bank in rechatively tranasacted by the commitue of exchange appoiuted by the president of the bank, and under his momudiate chrectina. That this cotnanittee makes no report of its proceedings to the hoard of directors, and that none of the directorn appointed in behalf of the United statee are members of thim conlmittee. It appeared to him to be the most consumnate fully in go tirough the eeremony of appointing diree tors for the purpose of protecting the publie interest-while these ilireptors are excluded frotn all knowledge and participa tion of the more tmportont transactions of the bank. He would appeal to the liouse whetluer we ought to be satisfied with the management of an institution an deeply conoected for good or evil with the great intereste of the country in wbich those ap pointed to guard the public interest are totaily deprived of all means of knawiedge of ith feading measurea.
Musprs. Mc Duffie and Ingersoll rose simuluaneoosly. The former gentleman was named by the chair. Mr. McD. then remarked that he would give way to the metnber of the committee of way: and means.
Mr. Ingersoll, of Connecticut, said, the gentleman from Trnnessee, (Mr. Pott), who had Jast addresed the house, could not regret more than be did, the late peind at which this question is prewelled. But who were chargeable with the delay? Not, certainly, the bank, nor any of it= friends. No sooner was this subjectreferred, and the news of tithed reached Philadelphia, than Mr. Biddte adilressed a letter to the chairman of the comtaittee of ways and means, rebpectfully offering every facilly to the proposed investigation, and inviling the utmost latitude of seareh. There had been also constant and untiring efforts made to bring the repont forward earlier in the session, that it might recelve the aetion of the house before the adjournuent. The friends of the bank, lie repeated, were the lant who phould be held responsible for the tardy movementa now complained of.
Mr. Polk here rose and said, that he had asked but for the pontponement of a fingle day, to enable him to complete the minority report. That was reflased, but the chalrman having aceidently lef the majority report at his lodginge, the deiay he bad requested was obtained
Mr. Inzersoll resumed. It was not that tn which he alluded. An effort had been made a week agn to have the report madethe examination of witnesses was then closed, and our labors were about to be subinitted to the house, as he supposed, when, to his surprise, the gentifman fiom Teonessne asked for delay, to send in Philadelphin for further eorrespondence, which would necessarily require some time to have enpled, and but for this, we should have had the subject before us several days since, with ample opportunity for the fullest examination, and the freest delonte. Then, as th the withess summoned, they were nearly all trought before the cominittre on the motion of the gentleman from Tennowee. He tonk his own enurse-every body was pxamined whom he saw ft to send for, as was certainly sight and proper. He, (Mr. 1.) did not eomplain of this, but surely we nught not now to he rexponsible for this enurse, since, in consequeace of It , the report has been kept back to the heel of the srasion.

Mr. Polk said he had called fir the examination of nn ome, expepting the directors appoloted by the government, and gen. Cadwallader.
Mr. Ingersotl: Gentifmen had summoned whom they pleased: he, (Mr. I.) had called nut a olngle withesp. He was willing to irnst the ereritiny to the laanis of the opponents of the banklet them probe it to atit themsrlves. All he asked was, whet they wure doue, that they would permit the house to pass its opinion, anil send the whole to the penpir fur their ultimate decision. Yor himself, he must confeas, he was sick of sceing reports sent forth, unaccompansed by any opinion of eliber louse of eungrems upont them. The people have been ourfented with such papure-we have had majority reports, and minority reports, and what an hom. me'mber fron E. Carolina, (Mr. H. K. Dorim), he believed cailed unicorn reports, but they all brought un to no practical result, so long as thry were net acted on by the house. 'lluey filleal the fy mig toilos of the newspapers of the day, or cranmed the muiss th the shape of pulatic documents during the recess, whithout bein-biting nuy chass inf our cituzens much, exerpt the legous of speculators, monied and political, who sompeumes tuin then to a prositable mecount. It was time that these matters wure treated in a ditlirent way-that the representative of the prople shonld now act. Tliss repolution, be rejuiced to see, hat something tangible in it: it inviturn us to speak ont, and to say, tunder the snlembity of our oaths, whether the goveranient deponites onght in be pinntinued where they now are, and have lecen in wafety tor the last sr ventern yrarnor whellier they shall be carried with the market, to be bid for by the Iocal institutions. Will gentlomen how turn from this inguiry the moment we have remelied $n$, und tell un that it does pot belang to us-lhat it ought not th be actiled before we separate? Ilave we then beell rmphnyed all winter, in our cimmittee roon, to no purposes th, have we bran whikng, hay had might, merely ts rasse a smoke for politional effert, at the ead of the session, under whieb a new net of inajoriny and mi mority reports arv to be launehed upon the public-still leaving the equntun of the huture on these grave matters unrevealed? Has nut cungress been directly called ujkin, and Irow lugh autharity, uno, to express ant opinion? Ind nut the sectetary of the tron mury, in lis annual tinancial report, invite it; and was not the subject brought to our view in the esccutive messangr, at the opeuing of the sesolon? We have not nouzht lide this inquiry, but we cannot shun it, with credit to vurselven, since it has been pat to us.
What, then, is the condition of the hank of the United Stater, as a place of sate drposite, compared with the other banking hustutuons of the country? From the evidence now spread before the hotiee, be would asaert whin enfindence, that it was decidediy more sound than the state bankw, to wluch the funds must go, If thken from theif present piace of depmsito. Nhy, from an exhibit lately made of the affars of the bank of Enisland, it will be seen that the United states hank, in proportion to ite capital, is the strongent of the two, applying the sume tests to the comparative sultemb-nts of each. Let u* see how these different insiuntions appear by each othier's side. The bank of the United states has now about nine nullious of spe. sie, to a circulation of alout neventeen millions and uhatf. Al the hual banks in the untain, connbined, have luit between ten and eleven uminios of specte to a circulatuon of abaut wixay eight miltions. 'The bank of Kingland, liy ita latest returtio, hanl, speaking iu dollars, about twrnty-six inillons of specie to a circulation of about ninely millious. And yet, with facle like these staring us in the fare, it is gravely suggested that the depoaites would be in less danger of being aquindered if remuned to the local bankw, with their enculation erx thes beyond the specie in divif vaults: as $\mathrm{C}_{1}$ 刃Nr, to locral bankr, which left you sadalled with a certain "unavalable fund" of mearly a million and a hati; whell ynu used them as ptaces of deposite on a former occision. Tlse banks of the stite of New fork would probably come in for a larger aluare of the govermment depomites than those of any other states, for there the greatest portion of the revenue is collected; and let us see how they stand it apprars hy an official statement, recently published by sworn comasasioners, that they have but about $31,700,000 \mathrm{in}$ specie, to a circulation of about tweive millions: and it will further appear by the evidence reported, that at the tume when those bankw had but this inconsidecable ausuunt of ypecie on hand, they were indebted to the Cuteil states bank, more that two mil. fions of dollars, which might have becn called for at auy day, thus draining them of every specie dollar.

Will any man, can any nian, with these statements befire him, say that the safety of the public fundw rrquires thrir removal to the local banked' It was in vain to hhnk thin question by going into the extrancous unatter of the three per cent. arfangement, which liad been now nuarly brought to a close. Tiue secretary has put the question to in in frgaril to die anfrty of the bank us a place of deposite forr the puthice monry, and we are bound at all events to rexpoud to that. Dut if grathonen are determined to rake up the three pur cont. ntlisir, lie wan willing to meet them there afoo; fur be be lievenl that Iramaction, from begiouthe to end, to liave bren finir, proilent and lomanable, and intended much nuse to aid the morrantile comminity, eape

It hat been called a werri mus-ion, uaautborimed by the borard of directore, and particularly willout the knowiedge or amborily of the anveraunent dirrechors. Now, bir, it in an indoniable fact, that rarly in the mpruit of 1875 , in the month of March, at a regular meretiog of the logatl, at whid two of the guvertment direetuts, re-bloug in I'hiladelphia, werpe present, (the thord behoz arevilentally to the counory), the prescente. it the conurse af the year, mure than one hatr of which he stated belonged io forcigners, the withdrawal of whose fonds might posibly expose the coanmunity to great ancoavenience, unless some measure sliould be taken for deferring a part of the pay ments; alter which it was, hy the board
'Resolred, That the aubjects of the communication Just made by the prosideut, be referred to the combuittee on exchange, with authority to make, on belalf of the bank, whatever arrangements with the liolders of the three per cent. stack of the $U$. states may, in thrir opnalon, beat pronnte the convenience of the pubtic and the iuterests of the inatitution."
This resolution is recorded in the borks of the hank, it was paserd in the presence of two of the guvernment directors, and at the next meeting of the beard, was read over in their presence, and in the prosence of the third government directar who had then returued to the city. There was no seeresy is all this. The reeorl had been always open, as the books of the bank always were, to the inspection of every director, and every gavernumit spy who matith have a right to examine them. One of thr directora will the part of the government belonged to the very excbange conmintiee to whom the subject had been referred. He alluded to Nicholas Buddle, who had for several years, anill under differint odnumstrations till January last, been apppanted a director by the govertmient. And althought since this controversy has ariven in regard to renewing the charter, Mr. Buditle had been rant off by the admilimetralioth, yet be was an lomorable and an hoursl man, and no one on this foror would say to the contrary. This commine, thus otzanized, and thus fally cuipnowered as bas bren shown, by the board, to make all the arrang nurnts which they might Apr fit in regard to the payinent of the three ger centro. nent general Cadwullader to Engtand, as lie had been entrusted with a similar musum ander the prestdency of Mr. Cheves, and thriugh lis agrney a portion of the Europconth haldens of the three per rentw. have agreed to give bp their rertificates to the goverument, thus clraring the United sintoz from any further lialulity, and taking the houte of Baning & Co. of Londhan, in whowe hands tie bank lias ample funds, as necurity for lineir monev, wheh thry will recelve with interest in Octuber, 1kis. Dy tham arrangenurut the buennexe men of our country, who are drhtors to the bank, bave not been disturbed In their uinal acconinnodationes, twough their diecounts ment have bern materially curlailed, and the local banks pressed in their lurn too for balanerra, had these foreighers all been paid at the enunter of the laank, outhas nide of the Atantic-and the result to the government, (the ceruficates boing surrendered), is the pance ar if the epecie had beell shippod abroad in exchange for the stork certificates. No high is the eredit of this instutuhon in Furope, an appears by the, currespondence which had not been received at the tume the direetors appeared before the cominitee, and therefire in not in the evidence reported, that ome of tur- foreign holder have refuser tu take the money, and insi-ted on the bank's kec-ping it at an intereat of only three per rent. till next Octaber, under in previous offer. They bave, bowever, while doug this, surrenderell their certifiogies so at in exonerate the trearury from any liability to them. The bank luad the funds in Europe in the liands of Its agents, to pay them oif, and throuzh lis agent made a trader of the money, which the holders declined tuklig. Lest it he remembered too, that whet grnertal Cadwallader embarked, it was wholly uncertaia whether the condition uf the treasury would enable the secretary to pay off the debt advertised to be paid, withont obtaining money for this favorite purpose of the secretary, from this same much abised bank. Mr. I. said he wislied the houve to bark, and the conntry to know, that on the 18th of last July, the secretary addressed a letter to the presode int of the bank, stating that if the fiundz of the U'nited States Ahould happen to be ingdequate to the redumption of the three per cents. he tunst rely on the hank for the necesanary facilitios. Here is the letter of Mr. Mclane; that there phall be no mistake alout ft, you shal have its very language. It is dated, treasury department, 19th July, IN:N2, and reads thus:
"Sir, it was not until to day that I have been able to apcertain tie amount of the appropriations made at the last seasion of congress, and therefort I have not been able to decide before now upon the amount of the three per centa. to be redeemed on the first of Oetaiver. I Gind, as whe supposed when you were here, that we shall be alfe to pay off nhout two-thirds at that tume. A notice will accordingly be given in to-tnorrow"s paper, fior the payinent of that ammunt on the first of October, and the rwinaining one thitd on the first of January. This has been dowe with the understanding hat botireen w, that if it showld happen that the public monice are insuffient to cosnulete those peyments. the band will delay the presentistion of any certificates of nehich it muy have the coutrol andil the funds are sufficient to meet there, the interesf to be puid by the t'nited States during the interval.," Fes, iir, the treasury drpartoient was arranging with the bankg If the state of the public liunds should require it, to hold back the sork cerlificates, which the secretary had invited in by an officmal ndveriserturit, and whirh he was bound to pay whes prorented. Alt the was vrry right in the highoffter at the head of the treacurs; but it is a mighty offonee when the bank, through the agril, proposers an arranimement, loot more cxcemtionable certainly, with the original bulthers of the cenfifienter in Fumpe. We can make a flumsioh ahont paving off the nanonal debe, while the- acerviary of the trea-ury has at the manm time a privaty understabliniz with the bank, to "delay the presentation" of the ntock rerificates which it may happon to hold, even if "intrrent io to be pail by the U'mited Siates during the interval;" but if the bank proposen to allow interost to the Earopean stockroldcra, though theit certificairs should not be dslayed, but wutreadered up-that is a very differeut affair; it so shocks the sea-pibility of the secretary, nutwithstanding be penned the letter of 19 th July, that the sends the uatter to us, as a grave subject for inquiry, and tunts a doubt as to the safety ut has de poestes. Now, sar, the bank had prectsely the saure right to come to the arrangratent with the European stockioldera, even if it had beed agreed with Urem to "drlay the prescutation" of their cetutieater, an Mr. Necretary MeLane had to come to an understand ing with tho bank "to delay the prescutation" of any certiticates within its control, ou beling pand the taterest. The secretary in not the United sitates, nor the givernuusut-lie Is but a high and booorable publie servant, and the bank is a lumble one. When, therefore, gentemen ank what authority the bank had to do what it has done, let thent first tell us where and how does the mecoser of the bank, the secretary of the trea-ury, ubiain the power to do what he has done. It is true lie ind not have to fesont to the bank, as thinget thraed out, finf fiands to enable him to aneet his paymente; uar did at become neceswary for the bank va "delay the prementahon" of the cestificatex; but that dres not vary the right of either to enter into their respective arraugements. If the secretary's letter of 19 th Jaly, remgnizugg the undetatanding to "delay the prexentation" "i" the cerniticates whell the funds unght fall phort, has wurked nil lramm, writher Bas the arrangement of the bank agent worked any haras in regard to the thaye $\begin{gathered}\text { ner cphts.-for more of those ceruficates thave }\end{gathered}$ been actualty paid nif and sirrendered to the treasury, than would have been, had no movement beeru made about them. It inay be a hitte curinus to know how the secretary had met these payments witiout resorting to the bank fir aid. Mr. 1. said he had looked into this matter, and belterved the business han been done in this way. The secretary had takell uromiea that had heen apprupriated by eongress to stitier objecte, the unnatisfied approprations, so called, and applied them to tim payment of ttie public debt. The annual repart on the fimmeen had informaed us that there wree dne from the trasury almat tive and a half millrons of dollars for unsatixficd apprupriatiotes: nearly the whole of this atmunt had been taken by the secretary, and applted towards the extinguishment of the finaded deht. Besider thix, congress at the last sceston graittill pensions to the gallant remaaut of ont revolutionary worthica who lrad not received the be befil of former laws-thus prowiding for a dybt which, above all athers, should have been promptly disclunged, Inarmuch as it had been already long drlayed. There woutd be due to these men, according to the estimate of the seeretary of war, went to un early in the session, about four millions of dallars, including the arrearages. Thiw was over and ahove the five and a hatf mittions of nowatiantied appropriations before referred to. There has nut been force enought in the pebsion office to pass upon these claims as promplly as it was suppospd they would have been, and as he [Mr. I. ] thonght they ought on have been; and consequently but a minderate anouint had been disbursed on their account prior to the first of January. What was not paid to these venerable men, but would have been, hat there been force ennugh in the offices to examine and decide u pon their claims, had been also turned over to swell the payments of the funded debt. lie did wot may there had besen faut in this, but there was hardly a member of congress who bas not his drawer at this moment filled with letters Iram these mien, many of them decrepid, and bowed down by the froxts of eighty wintern, complaining that they have um yet been able to receive what congreex granted to tiem pight months ago, and besereching their ropresentatives to aid them in procurime the little pittance to comfort them ith this inclensent peason. Many of them have stood at the pension office, "like whivering hegrars ti a boltent doot," while we, in this gorgenns liall, are boa-tug of having paid of the dehts of the revolution. If these claims bad been matd within six months fromt the time congress had asthoriwnd them to be paid, it was evident that the secretary of the treatury could not have accomplished lisis payments of the pablic deht, even taking to his tid the tive and a half mitions of otber unsatisfied appropriations, unless he had reworted to a temporary loan, or had relied on the bauk to "delay the presenantion"" of the cerififcates, allowing intereat firf the accommodaunn. Mr. I. said fie should uot undertake to decide how far it was proper in a secretary of the treasury to take money whill hee been once appropriated, before the appropilation is satisfled, and apply it to a different object, even thoneh that ohjpet be the payment inf the public diht. It is a power which courgess does ant ordinarily exercises we do not grant compensation for a horee lowt in an Indian fight on the frontietn, without expressly providing that it is to the paid "out of any money in the treasury nof othernise appropriated." And can the head af a departurent dn what congreps cannot, or ddes not?
Mr. Polk whathed to understand, whether the arnifeman from Connecticut contended that the comunisoioneers of the sinking fond, had no authority to order the redemption of nuore than tro millions of the poblic debt in one year. He hal under-thand they wroe expressly anthorised in en to any extent beyond that sum Uiat the condition of the treasury could anthurise.

Mr. Fn gersoll-Tic staudug appropriation to the sinking fund is ten millions annutally, perlimpe this should the satixfird in pre ference to other appropriatione, but dusing the last year, abont seventeen millions have bepn applicid-aml this prevor uver the Len miltions cannat be npplied by the commissitner a, unless there is a surpina to that extent li-the trea-urv. But, doen the one object, and for whieh the treasnry is liabie-a surpluse Is money due to revolutionary penaioners, in suplus, which may money due to revolutionary pensionerw, nin suius, which may be taksp to sink the fumded debt? It was mut so understood by that distunguisbed statesman so olten alluded to, and never meninned but with the nuol protisund reppect, the lameuted Lowndes, who had for several years stoud at the head of the combintice of whys and tmeand. He was for alwaye retaining in hand at least two millions of dollars, not in the ragged trash of brisken baiks, but of suand money, aver and above the sums appropsiated for the service of the year. The policy of bis masterly mind is delinented in an aet which be penned and earrict through congress in 1617, for the redemption of the publice debt, an act which ought to stand as one of the anost enduring usmuments of hits fanse. You will see by it, what he meant by a surplus. The third sectunt provides, "That in addition to the sum of ten milionts of dollars, hereinbefore annualiy appripriated to the sinhing liund, there shall be appropriated inr the year $\mid 817$, the firither sum of nine bullions of dollars, to be pail nut of any munies non otherwise appropriated at anch time within the year, as the speretary of the treavery *hall deem mont condmeive th the public interert, to bey applied by the conomisstoners of the sinkillg fand, to the purchase of redrmption of the puhlie debt." The surpius here tranaferred to the ainking fund tur that year, is exprownly limited to "money not othervise approprinted."
'I'lie 4 th xection of the same act directs "Tirat, affer the year 1817, whenever there sball be at any tuie after tie adjourmment of conzress in any year, a muglas of mosey in the treasury above the sums appropriated for the mervice of such year, the pay nent of which to the commsesionsra of the sinktig fund will yet leavr in the treasury at the end of the year a balance equal In twis milhons uf dollars, then such sumplus shall low, and the same is Inereby appropriated to the siluking fund, to be paid at awch tume as the stituaton of the treasury will best permit, and shall be applied by the coumnissioners thereof to the purchase or redsuption of the pulhic debt."

It is true that thia thertion of Mr. Lowndes' act, reserving two milions in the treasury beyond the appropriations fire the cervies of the year, has been since, very unwteely, as he, (Mr. 1.] believed, repealed by a law whieh originated in the semate in 1830. That Inw, the act of 1830, althorises the secretary, whenuver the trensury shows an surpius of funde, "to cause such surplus to be placed it the dhapmal nf the commossionere of the winking finnd, and the same slinil lie applied by them to the reimbursemunt or purchase of the grincipal of the public debt at ruch times as the athtr of the treasury will beet adentt."

Yiu eall, therefirse, under this act, take the two millions which Mr, Lawndes' prudence would linve reserved, If the recretnry so wills it; but still you can take nothing that is not "nniplus;" and what in mrant hy surplus bas been already Whown hy the act of 181 it be mouey in the treasury above the suins appropriated.

Mr. Polk wished to know whether there was not on the lst of Ortoher three nillicns in the treasnry, and on the isf of Jmuary 700,000 dollars over and above all clanins of every description upon the trearury, and unavalahle funds.
Mr. Ingersoll-No-not of legitimate funds belonging to the Unitud Sthtre. On the ist of January the treasury was scraped in the bottom. There was on hand abont $\mathbf{8 0 0}, 000$ dollara of monies received from the Danish government fir spoliations on ouf commerce, which belonged to Aincrican merchants, for whom it had been recuvered: and within a few daya anerwards, the grenter part of that, as he had been informed, hall been expendont, leaving only a little over one humered thon and dollars beyund the amonint of warrants lasued; and the whole of that would have vanislied loug before, if the pensionera of the revolution had been trnerally attended to, and their claims allowed in say uothing of the five and a half milions of onsatisfied appropriations outstanding agalust the treasury at the close of the la*t year.
Mr. Boon now moved the orders of the day, which the bouse refuned.
Mr. Ingersoll then said, aner the grent indulgence he had received, he felt that he conid aot better repay the kindness of the house juat manifertiod by its vote, titan by deelining to take up more of its valuable tine on this the inst ilav of the sessiont though there were other topies on which, nuder other cireumstances, he woulll be drsirous of being heard. He preferred the hatuse shonld act, rather than listen to him; he would therefore, before he al down, move for the previous question, oll the reanlution, nnd as we lave had $a$ speech from each side, he boped the motion would be statainnd by common conseat, thint we may dreide this questich at ance, and pass on the other Imsiness which must be attended to belore the apsaion closes. He accorliugly moved the previnus question, but withdrew his motion for the prement, at the repmeat of Mr. Me Duffie, whon anid he was aware that this was not the proper proind tu go Int" $n$ discussion of thim sulbject, and had it an pleased the homarahle genthoman from Tranersee, (Mr. Polk) lie phould itave been content that the louse should bave given a wilent vose on the reseshation presented to it. Itr diffired from that fonorable genticunan an to the proparity of adopting it. He b-fieved that it way not moly right, but that, under the circumstaneps of the case, it was the solemin duty of the home teraxpress their opinion as to the proposition contained in the rewolaiinn. What: wrere they to be tuld that the diapnsition of the puhlie ruvenue of the equntry was a question for a sureretary of the treavury! That officer, had, indewd, a limited dierretion, enabling him to take the pultic dsposites out of any bank during the recens of congress, his act being zubject to the jnigment of the congress at its foliowing session. It was eongress, and not the secretary, that was to be the judge where the funds of the natuon aloould be placed.

Who had brougit this question before congress? Whas it the bank? No. It was the prestlent of tho Vouted states-1t was the secretary of the trensury: and they had presented the subject in a forto which made it the molemin duty of the hotse to prouounce its opituo on the grave and weighty matter submitted to it. But the gentleuran frona Tennessee had asked the honse very gravely, whether they were prepared to pronounce judginent against the admunisiration, and agzinst all who voted with him on this wubject!' Ah! Wan she adnumistration then on ths trial before that trouse and the countr)? so that if the bouse nhould declare that the natonal bank is a safe place of deposite for the funds of the goveroment, it was to be vlewed as a condensation of the president and the secretary? Mr. Mcb. knew of so prinesple on wheli such a concluston resied than this, that the greater the trath the greater the tibel. When the foouse dovelared that the babk was a safe place of deposite for those fuhds, it proke the truth. None dare to eay that it was not the truth, the whole truth, and nothug but the irnth. And had congress come to that pass, that they dare not tell the truth to the American perpple because the president and tis seerelary fund expressed a dilferent opuition, and that wittout the shadow of firundation? Mr. Meb, bat been utterly astomished that any departmeot of thas movernmest shonld have expressed so exteaterduary an opintom as that the natomat ntepontites were not safe in the bank ol the l'mited states. Ite sohmmily declared Hat through every perind of the inventigation which had takell place he had but one ophuion, which was, that in the whote eivilized world there did notexist a bank more perfectly connpetent to oreet all its engagement", and which better fulfilled alt the ends for which it hat loren creased. He would go further, and dectare it his opition that thre was no wuef bank in the world, and no nuch currency in csistence any where. No goverument tond roceived such facilises foom any bank what ever as the Arnesican governmeat had constantly received, and wasatill receiving from the bank of the 11 , staies. While the bank had funds in its possessesp to pay alt its trotes, meet its whule circulation, and all the other engagwnents of every kinh, and had unoreover 42 militons of donliars tor us etockliotdery that goverunaciot alould tell the people that thrir deporises were not sife there-and that coompens onust not liave the tirmones anit justice to declare to the comiray? It was most extruordinary? Were they tu mahe every question a party question? Mu*1 every man be exactly in she veim of the preadent and his secretary? Was the toouse to the lielit as makiun at attack spom the prossident becasse it told the trintis' n buth which the gentlemao from 'Tennessee would aot himiselideny? Did the gentleman bimself believe, on liis conscience, that the goverament deposites were nonsafe in the bank? Ite did not. There was not a man in the Jumed states eapalile of comprehending the subject, who coutd thold, or would avow such an opinion.
Mr. McD. said the would tell the house, in a few words, the reasoo why be wished this resithtion to pass. tie proswined that the president of the l'uited states had made this connmumicatioo to congress with a view of getting the opinism of cougrees on the questiou sulumitied to thenu. The question was now presented to the bouse ill lie shape if a resolution, and he should reghrd ita adoption as perfectly concluyive in a practical print of view. Ally adomaistration which, after the expression by congress of the upimon advanced in thits resollution, should withdraw the oational deposites fron the bank would deserve, an it would assuredty receive, the execration of the country. Mr. McD. hoped that no geutleman's opmion as to the constitationality or uoconstitutionality of the bank would prevent thim frem expressing his honest conviction as to the state of its af fairs.

Mr. McD. would not spenk what he thought about this proceeding. He would not say that it was persecutim; but he woutd say that the opinion expressed by the president of the Uolted States, and the secretary of the treasiry, was, under all the circumstances, the moat pernicious and the most unwarrantable ever put forth by public men. What, in fact, had raved the whole community from one universal wreek? Nothing but the fact that our commercial commanity possessed too mneh inteltigence to believe what had been told them by the administration. In any other cousotry such a dectaration would have produced a panic wheh, however unfounded, must have brought the bank to ruin. Thanks be to Giod, and to our commercial community, the thing had been hat a rew days' wonder, and had passed away; and such a declaration, if put forth now from the name source, would have no more influence in the commennity than if it proceeded from the most insignificant indivifual in the countty.

Mr. MeD. said he was anxions till the period should arrive when the public deposites should no longer lie snbjert to the controt of the government. Ife was anvions to avoid this epeculation of thuds in market, and the tocal hanks bidding for them. Then gentlemen would see a game worthy to be contemplated by a philosopher. A secretary of the treasury, with power to phace tue pultie finds wherever fie pleased, could conpotwer the government and the people, principmities and powers all, alt woild be miths beek, they could not resist him. But Gind forbid olsat these funde shonid be put in market as a means for politieat ganhilers to make tteir way to power.

If the depresites were to be taken ont of the bank of the United Etaten, where were they to gro' He presumed it required no miraculous inspiration to foretelf that they were to gointo the banks of New York. And if they did, how woutd the transactimn stand betore the eyes of posterity? To take the government deposited out of a bank posuessing morethan half of its whole circulation io specie, and pace them to banks whose xpecie capital did not amount to one-seventh of their cireulauon

He never contd give his assent to this, nor would he countenance any micasure which might be seized upon as giving a pretext to do so. After a grave question had been made by the president as to the sonndiress of the bank, If congress should pay nothing, that oflicer might csoclude, an he had once done in relerence to a certafn Indian treaty which he had submitted fir rathication. The senate not having acted upon it, he connidered litmetif at liberty to carry it inio executwon. He might say, "t told congrens that the Uoited states bank was an uniafe place for the public money: they said nothiog to the contrary: ailence gives consent: and thercfore trausfer the depostes without funtice ceremony."
Mr. Mcl). obsarved that he wished to any a few words to which he was prompted by a sacred sense of duty: they had reference to the presilient of the bank, Mr. Nicholas Biddle. He knew that gentleman well; and the conscientiously believed that threre did not live a more honest or a more fooworable man on the face of the earth. Noman in the Uoited Niates prasesse ed a mare thofongh knowledge of banking in all its operations. And never liad an linatitution thepn managed with more perfeet juguent of morv consummate abhity than thas had beeo by bin.
An io lie issue made up leetw een the secretary of the treasury and Mr. Bidste, Mr. Mell. had mothing to do with it. Bnt, on the mere question of finance lie would say, that if the secretary bad taken the alvice of Mr. Bidifle in reference to the F'rench clanms, lie woold thave saved the treaunty several thousands of dollark. The advice of the president of the bank had bees asked by the secretary an to the beyl mode of drawiog for the French indemuitics. The alvice had been proaptly given, viz: that the secretary's wisest coupse woald be to draw a bill at once, atul the bank would purchase it: as, if he postponed it, the rate of exehange would probably be bigfier. The seeretary had sejected the sudvice, aod postponed drawing until the anticipated rive in exclange had taken place; and theo had been mich disappointed and diaplrasell becanie he could not get the same turing from the hank as land toven offered him before.
Mr. Mell, kaill that he did not know for what purpose a diacuswion on the subject of the three per cents, had treen brought forward. Ity would only say that the gentieman from Tennes. see had seemed to dwell, with cmphasis, "1pon an eqoivocal olirase in the repont of the majority of the commitice of ways and means, and hat labored t" shew that the corumittee had deetared ihat the bank had "exceeded ita powerx." He would gove to the trouse an cxplamation of the facts which had led to that expression. 'The agent of the hank had made a contraet with the tholdopa of eoverminent secuifies abroad which the bank had not authorised tun to make. The directors liad disavowed the contract. If a dianvowal of a contract was to be ennstrued inte a tranecending of the powers of the bank, the gentleman was welcome to make the most of it. The greater part of this atock, fowever, was now pand off-lithte more than a mition monained. The gentlenala had rain that more thao a million of Ifltars lad lieen oltalued on condition that the baok would become responsible in=tead of the government; and thes the gentl-man seemed to consider as a geing in debt, on the part of the lank. But did not the gentleman know that the bank tueld, in the hands of the Baiings, thee ovilions to meet this They had more mooey than was sufficient to pay it all, and all the three per cents. antstanding, beside.
Mr. McD, concluded by anking what the house was prepared to do with the resolution which was before it' All it called upon the house to aay was that the deposites were safe in the bank. If any man doubted this, let him say so.
The previous qoestion was then called, and the rosolution adopted by yeas and nays, as foltows:

CO-We have thought it best to defer the insertion of the re pert of the minority of the committee on anannfactures of the bouse of representatives (Messrs. Adame and Condict), until we cas conveniently give it entire, by the aid of some extra pageswhich cansot be done until we shall have conapleted the supplement to the tast volume and sent out ite title page and table of contents. We are hurrying these as fast an possible; but sueh a mars of solid matter is not easily prepared for the press.
O-The present sheet has a greater vaniety of articles than useal-some of them are as follows: the official report coacernlof the conflagration of the treasury bulliting-a eircular from the pontmaster general on abuses of the franking privilege-a long account of a graul military celcbration at Charleston, S. C. with the speeches of gov. Hayme and gen. Hamilton-the speech of Mr. Tyler, at a publie dinner given to him In Gloucester county, Virginia-the emperor of Ching's prayer fur rain-a letter from Mr. Calhoun, on being Invited to a public dinner at Edge-field-law case concerning naturalization happening In South Carolina-message of the governor of Massachuscts coneerning a certatu set of incorporation-present state of Mexico, (official) -Fareign news, with the proclamation of king Otho, of Greece-Freach "free trade," &c. Ke.

67- It will be seen hy referring to Mr. Calhow's letter, and the speeches of gov. Hayme and general Ifamilton, that an exercise of the "right of aulification" by the state of South Carolina, having caumed the recent adjustrnent of the tariff-is hereafter to be held as the "rightiul remedy," in either of the twen-ty-four states, for the redress of any real or Imaginary evil arising out of the laws of the United States, or the decisions of the snpreme court, &e.-for each state being "sovereign" cannot be mistaken in its judgment on constitutional questions, nor re. strained from earrying out ite ordinanees! It is true-the "force bill," or "bloody bill," stands forth in protest agalast this oweeping doctrine; but ita feeblenesw was eslablished in a repeal of the tarif act of 1R32 previous to a repeal of the ordinanee of Eouth Carolina; and, though nullification has not ween formally acknowiedged in eongrees ae the "rightful remedy," it eertainly has been respected as an efficient one; and, if its practice in sustainable, the union is now diseolved-it has no more principle of adhesion in it than may be fownd in a shovel-full of saud. As heretofore observed-no eonsilleration has yet presented ltself to our misd, whieh, whether in reference to the principle, or the expediency of the measure, would have indueed us to accept the late arrangement of the tarifi.

Eitreve xavernsg. By the th elause of the 8th seetion of the constitation of the United states, congress has power "4o entallish a wniform rule of naturalization;" and get thto such shetrdity has "nullification" led soune in Eouth Carolina, that Judge Bag, at Charieston, found prower in the state authorities so amend the acts of enngress on thin nutject? ## FRENCH "FREE TRADE."

M. Thyers, the trade minioter in France, has delivered the followiag important observations to the ebamber of agriculture, comaneree and manufactures. After a few retanarku upon the inaportance of protecting the trade of France, he proceeds as bllows:
"It is with this view, gentlemen, that the government has eall ed yos together. You wilt represent the three greateat interente of the state: agriculture, which extracts from the earth the raw matevial asd means of sustentation; manufacture, which transGorms the products of the soil, and imparts to them all the perlection which they are capable of reeeiving from the hand of saa; commerce, which erchanges the produats, and disperses them throughout the gtobe. These three grand divisions of buaan labor are all equally nohle, useful, and worthy of solicitude and protection. Unhappily they appear sonvetinnes to have opposte interesta; occaponally, muanufacturing industry, which oed protection, seems contrary in its views to coumnerce, which bas aeed of liberty. It is In reconetling them that the whole art of government consists. Placed betw the m the facturing artiran of Lyons, who demands a vent for his products, and the skilfui artisan of Lille, who seeks a protection for his; between the agriculturist of liordeaux, who wishes the seas of the north to be open to his wines, and the proprietor of the Bois de Champagne, who invokes a protection for his iron, the government entertains a predilection for neither; it cheriwhes as equal affection for all; it seeks in what manser the general prosperity, whinh is the sole object of its vigilanee, general duty of its institution,-can be deduced from the balance of these conalicting interests. It in forym, gentlemen, to sid and enlightes it in the endeavor is aeenmplish this task which is perhaps more difficalt now than it las been at any former perind.
"The worid has now entered into a naw eareer. All nations Wish to approximate, to enjoy a mutnal naderstanding with each other, and to interchange their weaith. Beforts are making to convert by degrees absolute prolithitions into tariffs, and high tanifs into moderate tariffs. Prance will not be the last to follow this example; but, in entering upon a new and more fiberal ayntem, the nbject of which is the progressiva enfranchise. ament of industry, the government la bound to deciare that it means to porver it with pridence and caution. A government bunded upon institutions like ours should have no prejudices: and I think I may afirm that ours has none. Bue if if has no prejodices, neither is it actuated by any blind spirit of dystem; t reeognizes but one authority-experience. It wishes neither to stop nor to galiop on: it wishes to walk. There is one fact aeknowied ped by avery mind disciplined by study and reflec-tion-namely, that in no age or conntry ean an instance be eited in which any considerable and substantial good has been effected haptity.
"The povernment whl not, therefore, forget that if manufacturess require litherty they also require pmecetion. There it no arample of a powerfud and wrealdy mantofnefvering industry that has mot orizinofed under a protecting tarif. The Emglith nary, midel seems to save been born only in the ocean, in vilich nature afe prowed it, grew up, hovever, under the bold and restrictive act of Croenvela.
"With the exception of systematic and aboolute minds, mankind are almost agreed upon these questions; no one desirea either unlimited liberty for manufactures or an exelualve abso. lute protertion. The object in view is a wise mensnre of proteetion and liberty, by graduating the tariff, according to age, - circounstances, and to the state of interests.

The goverament has three itaportant questions to propound to you:-
"It will conalaft you respecting, probabiy, the greateat of our agricultural and manufacturing miterests-ithe conditions undef Wheh the introduction of foreugn weol should be allowed. You wilf weigh the intereats of our agriculture, which require the vivifying presence of flocks, and those of our beantifulma nmiaeture of woolien cloth, lengs the thot in Earope, and which requires that the raw material should not be dearly' bought. It to nuperfluous, of cource, to tell you that the government projects no meavure this yeur; it is merely desirous of obtaining yonr advice and direction in one of the gravest and must frequently agitated questions.
"The second question has in view the ennsuiting you respeching the best means of oltaining a good collection of facta. In this respect we are sadjy behibdiand. Ath true seience, every arund legislative resolution, ought to be based upon a know. ledge of facts, and yet every day our uncertainty respeeting them check us in our legialative discussions. We have only been able to reach aone certainty with respect to the facts stown in the custorn house registers. The smugging toade, which takea away a part of the productr, conceats from us likewise a knowledge of some of the facts. It is regarding this first of the elemants of economical ecicnee that we have to consult you.
"The government will laquire of you, in the inst place, whether it is expedient to direct, this year, an exposition of our manafacturen. You, gentlemen, who have recently lef our manufheturing towns, will be able to acquaint us with their wistrea and convenieners.
"These thrce questions are intended as an indication-they are not a litnit. You will be free to propose to un whatever your knowledge and patrionirm may sugrent as useful. The goveruusent will listen with serious attention to your wishes and your advice."

The editor of a Londou paper, on publishing the preceding any-
It wifl thus appear that the Freneh intend to adhere to the yesrmictive syaterm, and certainly not to admit, (at least thia year), our iron, our cotton twist, or any of our manufactures, at a reduced duty; but, on the eohtrary, the prohibitory pystem, (notwithstanding the prophecics of Mr. P. Thomanon), will be continued by Louis Philippe and hls theral depulies in spit of the relaxations of nur own enmmercial code and the site enuragement we have held ont to a frea trade. What will the political economista and free traders say to this?

CO-British "relaxations" and "encouragementa?" In what has Britain relaxed, except it regard to articles in which she rears no competition? Are not even bread-stuffs and meats, and the chief products of the forest and of the sen, as if proAilited by her? Dnes whe not impose a duly of seven centa the *quare yard even on calicoes' She makes a great fuss about her "relayation" as to silks-their importation was prohisitied until 5th July, 1826, and they yet pay a ducy of thirty per cent. on her own valuations of them. She is also boastfus about her "free trado" in gloves. These were prohimied uutil July, 1836bat they pay a duty of from eight to fourteen cents per pair-all women's gloves or mits being subject to the latter duty. What else? We should be thankfui If some who talk so much about British "free trade" would descend from their heroieks into simple statements of faets.

CHINESE PRAYER FOR RAIN  From the Neu York Obeerver.

On the 314 s of May last, an officsal papert wan parbiehed by the emperor of China, lnumention the want of rain. Hin had previonsly ditected sacrincea to be made to the gode, and "devontly moocked his bead on the egronnd;" but withont effeet "IIfa acorching anxirty had contintued night nnd dny, tud hotap nfter lnour, the lookrd earnestly for raing bat sone bad fallen." He "had turised his thoughts in upon birneelif, and bia covernnees," but load found nothing amass. "His own conduct," he Eavs rather prondly, "ought to have induced a sweet harmony between the rain-lophring clouds ahove, and the parched enrth below, bat tivis had not been the effcet;" and, therefore, in this official paper, the emperer directs ${ }^{\prime \prime} \mathrm{a}$ mitigntion of punishment for convicted permons in thn province of Pekin, (nxcept in the cane of great crimes)," and orders that "aecured persons should be brought in a speedy nad finir trial;" that "smprisoned witnesses should be at once confrontid with the opposite parties, or he set at litherty on bail;" nnd that "nnll small offences be ims medintnily dompoeed of and the parties ltberated." "Thnes, (he adde), wn may hope for timnly, meninl and fructifylng showers. Let the crimisal beard immediately obey thewe commnnde. Reeppet this."
This last contrivance was as ineffetual as nill that had preeeded it. The drought wan severe; nnd enntinued atift fint many weeks. The emperor, kings and princen "fasted asd prayed once in seven lays, before altars dedticated to the gods of hearen, the gods of the carth, of the year, of the land, of the grain, and finally, to imperial henven iteelf, and aleo to imperial ewrh, with nll the maints." His majesty, moreover, sent a ming ts Taw Bhns, "the grent mountain," in Shangtung provisce, with Tibetian incense matches, to pray for rain in the emperer ${ }^{2}$ stead. Bet nil was of no nvall, and at isst on the 25th of Joly, the emperor offered up the follinwing

Renariks of the New York Observer.

This is a most singalar production. It is one, ton, of great value. It is worth more than seores of quartos and folices of the vain speculations which have been published conceraing Cilina. Even allowing that much of the cokaring has been given to it for effert mervily, (which we are slow to admit), witl it exhibits at exalted personage io a mont interrating mad affecting point of view. It is withal a very errous document: as is crinducte au to the anti chambera of tise "eelestial court," nud there shaws us the "umister of heaven," acorched with grief, poring over his atrocious oins, and with iremilting ansiety, reconnting the errorn of hin perbicic and private life; our syapathy to excited, and we, instiactively, re echo his Innentation, Woo hoo! On, alas!
It exhibite weakneas and darknesk peculiar to the buman mind, wille nubleased by the revealed word and by the spirit of the oaly liviag and trae God. It sliows, also, very distinctiy, it We mistake net, the synptons of an oppresard and deeliting empire. We prodict nothing. We should rejoice to see "the ereat pure dynasty"' long atinnl strung, flouristing in all the glory, peare, tranquillity, and prisperity whivh it now proudly and tabety arrogates. The welfiare of the Chincse empire is the dearest object to our hearta on earth. Tht our own minds, in accordance we believe with the minds of millions, forelonde an nppresching claange. W'e cannot deny the evidence of our senses; and we will not, knowingly, pobceal tite truth. Couseo are operating on this nation-wnuld they did not exist-wheh anast produre tromendous efferts. The stute groane; and atrea. dy convalsions begin to befelt. And oht, sheruld the hands of government be once broken asuuder, and this immense mase of popalation-an ocean of human beliyss - he thrown into confusion, the scene would be nwful. We gladty tarn from the comcesplation of such a picture.
Tive emperop's ansietiew, occasloned by the long enntinuaner of the droustht, are now t-rnimated. By a paper in the Guzerte, dated nt Peking, Jaly Gih, it is atated -that after the emperip had fanted, and offered the prayer, piven above, beforc the altar dedicated to heaven-at about 8 o'clock on the same evening. thouder, tightioias, and rain wore intermingled; the rain falling in aweet and copinas showers. The next day, a repurt came in from the shunterntio inngistrate, that two inches had fallin: and an surcessive days, near the imperial donaain, a quantity fell equal to four inehes. For this manifestation of hravenily compaspion, the emprror, in an orter publifiod, expresses hidevoat devotion and Intense gratitule; and the $2 d$ of Auguxt is mppointed as a day of thankwiving. Slx kinga are directed to enpair to the attar dedieated (1) ts howven, (2) to earth, (3) to the gods of the land and grain, (4) in the ende of hesaven, (5) to the gods of narth, and (6) to the gods of the revolving year.
The precise idea which his imperial niajemty atiection to the words "imperial heaven," we will mot whay here to determine. It is manaffest, however, that kueh a varimy of objects of adoration cannet be meceptable to HIM who hat declared "Thous shatk tare mofter gods before me." Jebovah is not a man that he phould lie;-he will not give his glory to another. The conduct of tive enpperor in praying, fartung, and self exantination, ought to reprove the ehristian. But we shaif do exceediagly twongy, If we attempt to excuse sueh ahominable idolatry, and to throw the mansle of charity over that whirh Gind abhore.
It is a very remarkable circumastanee, connected with the drought, that none of the priests of Tant and Rudha were ordered to pray an thay nemalty hnve been heretnfise on similar oceacions. This single fact shows in how low estimation they are held by the emperor.

VETO IN MABSACHUNETTS.  OVEBMOA's MKssack

To the honorable senati.
A bill entilied "an act tu incorporate the proprietore of the second Baptust meeting house in Lowell," was yesterdiny Inid before me, for my approvnl, which feeliug my melf constrained to withhoid, I now retars the same, with my objectinns theretu, to the senate, wberc it appears th lave orgianted, for revision, pursuant to the proviswons of the constitutum.
The firm seetion of the bill proposes to constitute certain persons, by name with their awoctale and sucerssars itatos a cof poratiou by the name of the peoprietors of the recond Baptist meeting house in Lowell, with power to acquire and manage real ond perponal catate, not creceding in value twenty thoweand dol lars. In the second neetion, it ta provided, that the corporation may divide their estate tato nhares, ns their bye laws shall direet, and may make on such shares assessments not excerding one hundred dollans, on each share, and anthorises a sale of the shares of selinquent proprictors, wio shall aegleet or refuse to pay their assespungnta. Tive number of sharea is no otherwise reatricted, than by the aggregate nmount of fuude, which then cor poration is peruiltied to puasess. There is no where to be found in the bill, any limitation of the usea to whith this property is to be applied, or any iadieation of the description of eatate which the corporation may bold. Indeed, otherwive than by the uane given to the corporation, and which mether defines, nor cau control ite powers, there it notling to derignate its lukended character, of distinguish it from a mouied, manufarturing, or other busisess lastitution. Taken in all its pruvisiona, it is, in effect, setther more nor lesw, thas a broad and bold authority to certain persons to "acquire and manage," with the ficilities of an act of incorporation, priperty to the armount of twenty thousand dollare raised by assesoment, divided and held in shares, and to be dispored of, at pleasure. In stating this porition, it can hardiy be necossary to remark, that the tinle of the boll, whirh aeems to luaply that the persons proposed to be iucorporated are proprietois of a memting house, is ao part of the euacturent, nor need it be reprated, that the anme by which a eorworation is created has litile to ds in regulating its operations. If it was desizned to constitute a eorparate body for religious purposes, the bill departs frinn the techaical and detinite phraveology, by which that design of the legisisture ia usinally mani fested. The reference which is had in the bill to the pow prs and requirements contained in an art poucerning corporations, ap plows only to those pawers which rwspert the organization of such bodies, and ase made cinammon to corporations of every demerlption, where zpecial nud different pruvisiona are not preseribed.
Holding, therefore, as I do, that if the bill should pass into a taw, the corporation theroby created, would be competent tsa acquire, hold, and manage entate, real and personal, to the extent of iweuty themsand dollars, wholly uwreatrained in ita uses, hy the statute, and believing that in grante of this deseription, it unist be the intention of tive Iegislature to direct the appliention of the futuds, I reppertfully sulvit these eonsiderations, as objections buht to the expediency and propriety of the fortu of the prevent enactment.
A particular tuatter, certainly of thim minor inportance, might hardly seew to warrant me, in clainning for it an muelt of your attention. But I canant forterar in avail myself of the opportu. bity whieh the objection to this bill creates, to express also my apprehensions of futare exhbarrastament from the farllity and frequenry with whirh corporate pow ers are granted. The effect is to destroy individuality of interest, and to accumulate masors of property in agzregate hodies; to etonvert substantina fiecholds into nern securities for transferable paper, of by liseking up property from private disposal in the funde of another clase of corporatiuns, to induer to a reliance for the aceomplishment of ordinary parposes spon public provisions, rather than the results of perwnual industry and exertion. Whenever larte capital and foumbined mesus are required to effimet great ohjects, whether of Cusinesp or moral improvenent, they may most effectually be weured under acts of incorporation. To such parposen, and to a wide range of intereath, thepe legal facilition, doubtlesa, may be judiciously, if they are mot of necessity acenrded. But they must be limitrd in their application, by aome rules of public policy. And 1 hasibly san earuently appral to the consideratron of the Iegisfature, at leant, as some guant againet abbaces of the authorliy conferred, that in every act of incorporation whirh their wisdom may quaction, the objert of the grant, whateser it may be, shall he made maulifost, and the powers which are to be esercised, elther expresely or by distiuct referrnce, be cleast Iy atid precisely defined.

TIIF RURNING OF' 'IIF, TREASURY.

Note of the president, direding on incestigation in relation 10 the fire.
In eonserpence of the prillfe tove sustainy by the burning of the treasury buiding, and the destruetion of some valuable pa pert, the preside ut has Aernidil it proper, at the request of the recretary of the treasing, to direct an inquiry ts be made inalo the eaner of the shmastyr. He theevefire directe in thorough and careful invertigation to be unate on the following polata.

1. If what manher was the fire or a-inned?
2. If acciulnotel, how did if haplen!! Was it from any defect in the anginat ennsthe tion of the bulddinge- or was it occaxion-eugligeace, to whour can caller be rutrobuted:
3. Were proper exertions used to preserve the books, papers, and public property in the bulding, as well as to zave the buildlug Itself?

The attorncy generai is direeled to conduct the inquiry, and the other members of the eatinet to aid in it. The witneases to be examincd on oath, nud their depositions reduced to writing; and when the invertigation is closed, the testimony to be reported to the prexident, together with the opinions of the members of tha eabinet on the points nbove stated.
The president directs that the chief justice of the eircuit court for the District of Colsmbin be requested to presade at uie invertigation, and to assist in it. ANDIEW JICK$ON.

Report of the ineeatigntors.

Sta: We have made the inquirica directed by yout order of the 3tst of March Inat, in relation to the fire at the treasury building, on the morning of that day, and proceed to state tho manner in which the invertigation was conducted, and the result of the inquities.

We enmmenced the exnmination of witmesgen at the room of the seeretary of state, on the day of the fire at two o'elock int the evenlog, and continued to tahe textimony at the same place every day untl the evening of $aturday, the 6th instant. The poocerdinga were then unavohiably suspended unill Wednesday the 10 th instant, when some furtiser testimony was taken, and the inveatigation closcd. We have examfued altogether more than fity wituesses, and have eniled before ns every perenn from whom It was supposed that any Information could be obtalned on the subject.
Chief Justice Crancit prewided at the examinations, and gava in the inquiry his unremitting ationtion and valuable assistauce, You are aware the secretary of the navy left Waalington, in order th exceute some official dutiep, before the investigation was concluded.
It appears from the whole evidence, that the fire was first diaeovered nhout half patt two o'clock in the morning. The atiention of iwo or three persnns who reside in the neigliburhood and in view of the huldding, was attracted by the light frum the whindows; and nearly at the same time the volume of smoke occasinuerl by the fire was olecrved by otliers who happened to be in the ktreeta in different parts of the city.
Those who dizcovered the fire immediately gave the alarm, and hastened in the builiting; and when the first persons arrived on the ground, the gnard within the house was still asleep, and unconscions of the fire, and was awakened by the noise made at one of the doors to roune lim. There is mome diffierence of opininn among the witnesces as to the precise state of the fire at that monent. But taking the whole testinomy together, we think it in fully proved, that when the Grat perions arrived onk the ground, the roont in the apeniad atory on the north ande of the house, and immediately went in the projection in the centre of the building, appeared to be on fire in every patt-that then finmes and dense clouds of emoke were issuing from one of both of the windows of the room-and that three was then inn appearance of firn in either of the adjoithing roomy, nur in the garrel, nor roof. In a very few minuter, however, the fire was communicated to the adjoining rooms, and to the garret and the roof; and the garret being filled for the mopt part with old papers and paper caser, the flamea spread through it with great rapidity. The first engine arrived on the ground in twenty misuten after the fire was discnvered, and the roof over the room in whirh it originated was then hlazing, and very soon afterwarda began to fall in. Every esertion to cheek the ammes was imtnediately made with this eugine, and others which artived shortly after it. But it was soon evident that the wast of a suffrient supply of water in the neighborhood of the butlditag rendered it impossible to aave it, and the fire continued io advalace. Aud in abrut one hour from the lune it was first reen, the whole building, with the exception of the fire-proof portion of it, was cither consumied or on fire,
We have endeavoled in valn to trace the origing of the fire, and are unable in inupute it to any particuiar eause. Three of the switnerses who have been examinnd, passed near the building abnut half past one o'elock, ir a little later, on the morning of the fire, and at that time thire wha no light from any of the Windows, nor any thitg in or about the bouse to atiract attention or errate nlarm. The remaits of the buidding have been carefully examined by akilful workmen, and they can diseover no defect in lis eonstructiont which may be supposed to have oceasioned the disaster. On the night of the fire the usual prerautiona for security npprar to hava been taken. The regutar watelunan being sick and unable to attend, his glace was snpplied, under tha directum of the maperintendent, by a young man between ninetcen and iwenty yeara of age, who hag beet einployed constantly int about piehteen months pafl, as one of the lalorers it the buiding. And, necording in the arotinary practica of the guard, be examined about ten o'elock at night all the ronme, pxeept those in the fire-pronf part of the howse, and found the fires in the grates to be, as he supposed, eutirely rafc. The fuel used in the part of the louilding where the fire began, is antiracite cual; and in the room where it originated, the eoal had sunk lielow the upper har of the grate at the time of the examination by the guad: and the hlowir, reating on the axh-pan, whe placed as a fender lefore it, according to the neuat pincice. No frexh coal had been put onl the fire after iwetve or one o'clock on that day. The outer doore and the watows of the house were fastened in the ordinary manner in the inside, with the esception of a window in the fire-proof, which seems to inave been very neghigently sccured, If secured at all, on that night. But there is no communication between that room and the part of the building where the fire commenced; and if an evil disposed persou had entered nt that wudow, he could not have tade bis way into any ouber moin.

The regulations of the supertutendent made it the duty of the night guard to make the examination of the roons and fires abova mentioned; but lie was not required to keep nwnke all bight; aud, since the year le23, it has been the practice for only one of the watchmen to remain duriug the night in the building, and he has been permitued to sleep niter tell o'clock.
As soon as the fire was discovered, the proper exertions were innamediately made by the officers of the government and the ciuzens who assembled, to save the books and papers. And the most aetive and praiseworthy cfforts were ased for that purpose; and, in some instances, the zeal of those eagaged exposed them to much hazard. The secretary of the treasury was early on the ground, and by his direction the books and papers were placed, as they were brought out, under the care of proper guards-and on the same day, at an early hour in the evening they were deposited in a house that was iminediately engaged for the temporary oceupation of the treasury department.
We cannot, at this time, andertake to state with precision, what papers and buoks have been destroyed; since those which were saved have not yet heen perfectly artanged. The secreta. ry of the treasury has taken tacasures to obtuin a prospt and accurate report from the heads of the beaureaus on this subject. But we believe that very few papers have been lost that nre of mueh impottance th the government or ta individuals, and that the great mass of the most valuable books and papers have becn anved.

The depositions we lave taken aceompany this report-and also drawings of the treasury building, which will enable gou more seadtly to comprehend the testiminy if the withesses.
We have the honor to be, sir, very respectifully, your obedient servants, (Bigued) FDW. LIVINGSTON, secretary of wate. LOUIS Mcl.ANE, sec'ry of the treanury. LEW. CASs, secretary of inar. h. B. TANEY, aftorney zeneral. WM. T. BARRY, postmaster general.
To the prerident.
April 12, 1833.
Report from the secretary of the treasury to the president. Treasary department, April 12, 1839. Ste-The report which will be made th you nf the reanit of the laveatugation you lave been pleased to institute, at the request of the aecretary of the trensury, will present the informawon that has been obtained reapecung the cireunntances at tendmag the recent ennflagration of the treasury building. For your further satisfaction, however, it is thought proper to iay before you suef other fact connected with the subject, as are within the knowiedge of the officers of the department; and, as har as may now be practicable, to state the loss that has been tuetained in the records nad papens, and to offer such suggesLions as may tend to greater safety in future.
With a view to this subject, the principal officers who neeupied the building, viz: the frat comptroller, first anditor, treasurer aud rrgister, were severally called npon; and their reports are hera with transmitted.
From all that has hicherto transpired, it does not appear that the disaster in nuributable to any particular neglect or inattention on the part of those who had clarge of the building. It in shewa that past ten o'elock at night all the fires were in a safe condtion, aud that no lights of any kind had been used in that part of the building in which the fire originated. Though the person empinged to watch thnt night was aoleep when the fire was discovered, it appears that it whe not considered his dnty to be awake alf aight, and that, in fact, it has been the anthorted praetice, for maay years, for the watchmen in the baildiag to lie down to sleep nfter about ten or eleven o'clock: No *ntiafactory proof has been obtained of the caure of the disnster: and nothing need be here observed in nddition th the report aiready adverted to.
By referring to the diagrams which accompany thont report, the position of the apartenents occupird hy the several nflicere of the treasury may be seen. In the basement or cellar, threm rooms on the soush side were filled with boxps containiug abstrnets eonnected with settied posit office accounts, and were in charge of the regietur's offer; five other moons were appropriated to the storing of fuol, and the residne were empty. On the eround floor, three rooms on the north side. in the eastern section, were occupird by the treasurer's office; the three mons os the south side of that sprtion, with one room on each side of the south door, and one mom adjoining the trearnss's office on the north side, were necupied by the first andior's ollee; all the other rooms on the ground floor, and the adjoining fire proef roons, were ocenpied by the reciater's office. On the wincipal or wpper floor, the six ronms in the eastern section of the huidding were oceupied by the cnnptroller's offic-the reaidue of the rontins on that floor, nind the fire prof adjoining, were necupied by the secretary'soffice. In the attic, or antret, the middle raom on the sonth side, wan appropurinted to poppers and reeords belonging to the eecretary's nffice-the two adjowning reoms on the east, and ibose nf the comptroller's othert the south eastern corner to those of the treasurez's office; and all the residue to those of the register's office.
The fire was dsecovered in the second room west of the staircase, on the north stde of the house, on the princtpal floor-being the room immediatcly adjoining the projection in the centre of the building, as laid down in the diagram, and being one of the rooms beionging to the othice of the secretary, and occuphed by Mr. A. Laub, (who was also the superniendent of the bunting), Mr. Welr, nud Mr. T. Dickins. It was discovered between half past two and three o'elock. The great progress it had anade when discovered, and its rapid advanca alterwards, unth the total deetruction of the bulldang, are pet forth in the testumony accompanying the report, and nre bcaides to well known to the president as to need no further deseription.
The secretary, though not among the earhest, was neverthelesa early in arriving at the scene of the condagration. He woon saw from the progrese which the fire was making, nnd from the whole inadequate neams of checking or subduing it, that the entire building would probably be consumed His attention was, therefore, immediately, and aimost exelusively, directed to the preservation of the papers and records in the accounting ofticea and in the register's oftice. Many of the cletks and citizens assisted with grent zeat and activity, as well in getting those papers and records out of the buiding, as in preserving them afterwards. Under the direction of the seeretary, the several collection of papers, books, records, &e. that wera made, were placed in charge of the clerks, or weli knowa and trusty eltizena. By these united excriions all the important papers belonging to thove offices hava been saved. Those belonging to the treasmrer's office have also been preserved.
The flame, however, was mo son comununieated to the garret and roof, partieularly that part of the roof above the stinirs leadIng to the garret, an to remder highly dangerous, and indeed impracticable, any effort to save the papers and reeords belongias to any of the offices, which lind been placed in the garret, and consequeatly they were ath lost.
As soon as the papers, books and other reenrds were taken out of the accounting and register'z officee, the secretary's at tenting was turned to procuring suitable buitdings for the in medrate accommodation of the departmeat. After various inquiries and negotiations, he succeeded in obtaining, hefore noon nn Sunday, the five contignons buildinge on the south side of the Pennsyivania avenue nearest the eastern gate of the president'ش \&quare. Before twn o'cloek on the sanie day, all the papers and records that were exposed, were snfely removed to those buildings, and the fire proof appartimente of the treasnry, which remained undestroyed. On Monday and Tresday the attention $n f$ the officers wha chiefly devoted to the arrangetnen of the papers and record $\begin{gathered}\text { and, on Wednexday, the busness of }\end{gathered}$ the department, which had been partially resuned on Tuesday, was in full activity and transacted as usual.
Owing to the grent quantity of papern, books, and other records remnved froms the building, and the disorder into which they were thrown, some time must necessarity elapse before it can be exactly ascertained what has been lost and what sared. From the progress the tire had made before it was discovered, it was not possible to save ony part of thone in the room in which It originated, or in that of the chief elerk immednately adJoining it on the west. Those contained in the room on the south side, directly opposite to that in which it commenced, and to which it must hava eommnnicated eariy, were also destroycd. Those in the other rooms oceupied by the elerks of the secretary on the same floor were chijefly saved. Of those contained in the romm necupicd by Mr. Reld and Mr. Nesbis, ner east $n f$ that in which the fire origunated, by the timely efforts of the former genteman, and a few others who arrived early, a great portion were asved; and af those contaised in the room oceupied Ly Mr. F. Dickius and Mr. Rodman, owing the the frarleas exertinns of the former genteman, who, accompanied by n highly respectable citizen, entered the room by a ladder when the roof above was on fire, and continned till the doore of his own ronn were convnmed, and the celling of that immediately ad joining on the eaut had fatien in, none were lost. The tibrary and all the papere in the room oceupied by the secretary were saved by the cffort of a few individuals, amour wham were the chief clerk and Mr. T. Dickins, who entered it, by a ladder, through the semicircular window at the west end. All the finchiture in the rooms, oceupied by the secrelary's clerks was consumed, and of that in the secratary's romm, the greater part was broken in being thrown from the windows.
The prineipal loss suatained in the secretary's nlliee, was the correspoudetice; the while of which, with the exception of tbat relating to revolntionnry claims, and to applicatiows under the insolvent laws, and with the esception also of two record tranks containiug letters to banks, and two containing communications to congresp, was lont. Mrasures, however, nre already in pmgress to repince them an far as may be found practicable. In the mean time, it is hoped that mo serfous detrimeat will be experieneed in the transaction of the public business for want of them.
The reports from the first comptobller, first auditnr, treasnrer nnd regiater, which are berewith transmitted, exhibit the state if the papers and reeords of their reapective offices an far at can now be arcertained. In thowe offices were comtained all the papers and records whelt relate to acconnts, settled ant unsettled and of these it is haghly gratifying to find that the whale of the latice. and all the important portions of tief former have toren preserved.

122 NILES' REGISTER-APRIL 20, 1933 -PUBLIC DINNFR. TO MR. TYLER.

The secretary has reason to be satisfied with the conduet of all the peroons belonguig to bin office who worv- preseut on the oceasion. It is reppesented th him, that Mr. Anthony, Mr. Maginnis, Mr. Potter, Mr. Woll; Mr. A. Lanb, and Mr. Nesbit, and Mr. Mounta, were not awarn of the fire at the treamiry unth it was conshined, owing to the distancer of thetr reaklences. Tive. chief clerk, and Meswru. MeKean, Dungan. T. Drekins, Hudinas, Redd, nnd F. thickins were neuvely nnd usefully pogaged on reseuing and preserving the buiks, records, and iffectis as were alsa Mr. Lavejoy the inonamper, and Mr. Whliam J. Goddaed, the Laborer attached in the buiting, and Mr. Pettet the assistant aressenger, who, owing to the distance of his residence, was late $m$ arriving.

The secretary observed nther clerkn active nnd diligent on the oceasion, as well as many of bia fellow eitizens. But as he casbot recellect nill, and th natme somet only would seem invidioas, he candiats his notice in this place to those attaclived to his owa affice.

As the sitnation of the buildiags nnw oceupied by the department does not admit of being otherwise effectually protected, the seeretary of war, has, at the request of the secretary of the treasury, directed a military guard in be ptationed, nnd mentinela to walk round thein from aunant to sunrise. Means will alan be taken lor reanowing semie wooden fencea which adjoin the buiding, to prevent fire from being communicated hy them, and to prevent the sheiter they afford to evil diaposed pernons.

Our own experience has demonstralud, what indeed could not otherwise be doubted, that there to no proper security for the publie nrebives, consisting of so many and such insportant recorda, documents, and papery, exeept in fire-proof butbinga. The prewent offices are not of unte defcription. The buiding appropitiated to the state and war departmente nre partally fire-proof, though in a very slight degreen. The navy builhing is altogether insecuse, even mare so thinn the treasury buiding Wha,-ivasunueh as the later containcil sonce fire-poof depositories in which $n$ portion of the recorde were preserved. The seretary, therefore, does not deeat it propar in recornmend the repair of the luutding, if tie president should be of opision that he has nuthority to repair it. The secerctary, however, takes the liberty to suggest, that, at the ineeting of congress it be reeom. tneaded that in fire-proof thtilding the prected, of sufficient extent to accommodate all the public offices under the same roof, having regard as well to those already organizenl as those which the growth of the country will prohably memiler neeexary for enme gears of eomp. Such a pian whild have the ndsitional advantuge af removing the greal inconvenionce which is now constantly esperienced in the transaction of business, from the eqparation of the pitbie offiees.

Alt wheh is respectatify submitted.
LoETIN MClaANE, serretary of the treasury.
The president of the United Stutes.
The reports of the eomptroller, fint anditur, treasurer and register of the trenaury are added. They thouv an lizht on the ubjeet under inquiry, and the following pummary notice of their several watemmits will mubuserve all geseral purposes.
The first emmptraller, judge Andoreon, reports that ill the cor respondesce nn revenue queations, frum the enminewcement of the gavermment up to Fobluary 9 dith , $\mathrm{t} \boldsymbol{\mathrm { cha }}$, and innot other papers and books of value have been fimnd, and that "it has not yet beea discovered that any lanoks of documents of importance belonging to that office, or any ncenants received in it from the auditor's otfice, nre miseing."
The first auditur, $R$. Harrison, reporta that every thing in his office was removrd, -and that pone but papera of litile valoe are miasing and they are daily cuuning in. The office is perfectly re-organized.
The Ireaburer, Jolin Campirell, reporth, that all the articlea, records, papers, furniture, &c. In the lower roomis were removed some tume before the fire rearhed them. Those in the garret rooms were entirely dextrnyed. The lower monsin cintained all the papers that rriate in the traneactiona of the irmasurer's office since lat June, 1829, and the recorde of the treasurer's. quarteriy ncomintif for several years prior to tint time, and the reeords of paymente inth the irpasury by collectom and reeeivere of publie innmey since 1816. The rnow in the garret contained all the bookn and papera relating to the transactions of the athice prior to ist June, 1829, with these exceptions.' The papers are now all in ordep and arranged for ase.
The register of the treasury, T'. B.. Smith, esng. reporta, that here is satioflactory reampn for helieving thnt the econtente of all themonn that were oceupied firp the transaction of the busaese if this office, hnve bren azend. The losa will be comfined to the garret, and the ecllar, which were merely places of depowite for then papirs of the least value.
The lossos are ehiefly the vonchers of the Interanal revenue secnants, and throee of the war and navy departments priup in 1817, and the "ahutracts" of prat nfliee acenunta prion to lesze The rrenrils, day honks &e, heing preserved, little inconveniener is anticipated from the lneses.
All these reporta enncur in the necessity of erecting fire proof builitinge, and the regiater ndds a sugxestion for the or ganization of fire engine companies.

PUBLIC DINNER TO MR. TYLER.
A pubtic entertainment was given to Mr. T'ylef, one of the eenaturw of the United Btates from Virginin, in Gloucester county, Virginin, on the 201h wit. On being tonated, he pronounced an ardent, "state rights" nnd nati-proclamation speech-as follows:

The toast. Our guest John Tyler: The renewed condidence of his country is the bent eonumentary on his courap.
Mr. Tyler expressed his spmse of the honor implied in the nentionent juat cifered. Ile waid that so etring a manifertation of respect and confidence proceeding from any portion of the iellnw-citizens, cunld not fall in be lighlily appreciated-hut, the gentification is rreatly increaued by the faet that it proceede irom the eitizens of my adopted combty, annons whom If ex pect th finish my course on parth. Nn man could devise either a fairer Innd for his abode or more generoue inhabitante for his associates nnd friends. From the uoment that I arrived among yon, yon extended to me the hand of bospitality and tindnexs. Gon soon cansed me to forget that I was a stranger, and your condret upon thin occasion furnialips me the ansurnnce that am not only surfonaded by politieal, bat permonal friends. sliall use every effort on to aequit invelif of my jmblic futies at to merit a conturance of your matidenee, and so to tive anomg you as to dererve ymur respect and friendelip.
I cannot remume my seat, gentlomen, without tendering to you my enngratulations at the mearurn of prace and comeitimtinn adopted by congress at nlmost the lawt bour of its reernt ses sion. No patriot coutel have regarded the events of the lave four montha withont pain and appretienstinn. A deep glooen had sertied upon our affurs. I frankly eonforet that 1, who an not given to dexpair, wav at times almost ied to do wo. A ptate had inet the legisintion of congress by counter legislation on ber part. She had pronnmineed the lawa Inid thr the advantage of the northern eapitaliats unconstitntional and grievonsly oppressive. She had remonstrnted agninst them year after yewr; and her solenin protent was fited amongst the arehives of govefunent. If she liad stnpped with protests and retnonstrances, ahe wnuld but liave done what had been done by our own ptate and every southern state. Hint she went fartiore. She deelared thave laws null nud void by an ordinance aslopted by her people assembled in convention, and absolved nil within her limite from their nheprvance, and threw nver her citizems the proteetion of her judiciary. 'Thise excitedi inton netion the agents of the general zovermment. The legiolnture of a state had opposed the Iegialature of the United Niates, and the resolation seewsed th be formed to bring her to the fect of the federnl goveramemt, hy military force. The president had dremed it merespary to wane hid prociamation, in effict, drnonneing ber leaders an traitions, nad her people an dupes. He had raused the reastar nriay to be axsemited on ber knil, and mumerous pithice vesmele th swarm upon ber enaxt, nuil at a fator day made a requisition on eonarcesa for nill the noval and military force of the enantry, Nouth Carolina, on the enntrary, scomed to be reselved to mantain her poation. If a prorlanmion wise bswed at WnatsInetion, she repliced in it from Colombin; nut if the trmapes sounded there, her buglo hast was hrard it return breathing a tovte of hoid deflance. I comstilered the eourse purswed tow ards her hizhly impolitic. I thought I knew the southern man-that lie was tos be won nore by genilenems and enaciliation than by threat- of violenee-- that he might ber led, but could not be driven. I felt, ton, that he wan demanding but his righte, nad that however Impolitic or crnumrable Eonth Caroling mught have been in her course, yet that she demanded wothing but yusticesheer furtice. The line of my conduct as the representative of a ntate that had twice pronnoneesl, In srilemn form, the tariff lawn in be uneonstitutional, was, aeroeding in my coneeption, clearly marked ont. Tn the demand for swords and haynneta nnil cannon and musketa and armed men-th colleet na unjust nad unconstitutional tax, I had bit one reply-dn jantice-repent or moitify yout nbmoxiogs laven-yindd to the wishes of the whole anoth-do thint for Ronth Carnilina and the other sotuthern *tatren, which Fingland has refused to dofor Irriand-repeal vome tithe rystem. imposed not firr the bencfit of the parman, bat the minnufacturer. By a great nod noble net of retribution, met a proud example to the governments of the earth, and deminn*trate that temperance, forbearance nad japaice, are the aniniatern of free gnvernment. But thoee oowsiderations eepmed to have no effrct, and the gloon grew more and more dense. Our friends had hoped mach from the action of the house of repreentauves.

To one gentleman of that bouse, Mr. Verplanck of New York, the cuontry owes mith for the seal aud abslity with whieh be prexsed the bill from the conmittee of waye and means. Ile is no louger in congress and I regret it-left oul prohably because lie has dared upon some necasion to differ from bee party. Ifr had an able coadjutor in my friend Mr. Wide from fienrgia, but zeal, howevergreat, indusuy bowevet watiring, could do nothing, aid hope seemed alaomt to have ged. The raven ery of force-forre alune was hirard-force agninst our brethren, the desceudants of slinse gallatit men who bad stood by our fathers in many a well fought firld-force ggaiant those very men who had assisted in bearing aion the thag of the country on the ocean and on the land-force to wrewt atate and therehy in obliterate one of the stars of the confederaey, these things would have been accunplished. The war cry was in the hreeze, and an uajust, and unconatututional, and oppres. sire systeus was in be cemeuted and strengthened by the blood of freemen and the drstruction of a state. But, gentlemen, the darkest hour of the night is said to be that wbich precedes the dawn of day. The day did come, and we may tature ourselves that its light has seattered the clouda whielt mo angrily threatened us. Of the principal agent in the accomplishment of this work of peace, if shall say nothing. Thome who are disposed to interrupt the general rejoicing by discordant notes of censure sed condemanation for tive past, remilad me of old Hook whose eatile had been impressed tosupply the American army during the siege of York, and who, arnid the universal joy atiendant upon ohe surrender of Corawallis, was rrpresented by Mr. Henry as erging ent through the camp and along the highways-beef beer!
While, however, we have escaped, as we may fondiy liope, the danger of civil' war, I shonid but deceive you if $t$ did net express my deliberate conviction, that doetrincs bave been adTanced and maintained, dentined to briag nur institutions into extreme danger. The moment was doubtless estermed to be pmpitioun for their advancement. Nulification it was reen stood in bad odour with the public, and convolidation, profiting by the panic, erected boldty itserest, trusting to rivet itself npon the affections of the people, through the unpopularity of nulliseation. Time is not allowed me to do more than livite your attention to one of these doctrines, advanced from a high quarter and openly mainiained in dehate-that doctrine which claims for the federal government the exclusive allegisnce of the citizen-a doctrine which embracen pvery question lieretofore beld in dispute between the parties of this rountry, and if auccesafully maiatained overtirowing all that has ever been contended for by the great rupthbican party. Wee are hrouzht so the feet of our opponents, and nothing worth coniending for remains. If ubis doctrine Is in prevaii, as the settlod political doctrine, I ask any man to trll me where is to be found any state right remaining. A minte without eitizens but as mere quasi citizens, and tisey owing it no aliegiance! W'ly, gentlemen, can we be blind to the bold and reckless eharacter of this aseercions? Can we be Ignorant of iti neerssary results? Can any sovereignty exist in a state whose inhabitants owe it no alleGiance? Where is to be fomnd its moral or plysilcal power? When Hiberty is invaded, upmn whom shatl it calito defend it? Take any ease, however oppreq⿻i丨. Suppose that a majnotity of congress decrees emanclpation of your slaves-a majority of one people thrangh their legistature resist this infraction of their righes by legislation, or with swords in their hands, wlite the minority takes sidion with rongresy, that mafority would be held to be tratinre, while that minority would be applanded for bolding fast to their alteginice. Yoa who slomid raily to the banner of Virginia would be humed as rebels, and the liangman wauld be your executioner. You are claimed as the citizens of a cer tain undefined aml nudefinable community, called the Thited States, which are convturd into words of cabalistical Influence ander the present constitution, sltinngh when found in the old articies of confederation, poseraked of the same import and applicable to the same anbject, they are admitted to have no mean iag at all. No escape from tyraminy is lef as, for the act of resivtance la treason, and thr rffort in srcede of withdraw from a poltical association, whleh threatens to rivet upou us nad our praterity the chalne of despotism, is rebellinn to be put down by force of arms. What then remnias in the states of thls wnion of all their soverelgnty? I will $t \cdot l l$ you-the right to prtition, in supplicate, and on bended knees to ath for merey. The privilege of the slave under the lash of his task marter-lhis is all that remalns. No logical mind will deny but that those are the consequences of this pernicious doctrime. The equal to this wan never advanced in the highest and most palray days of federalivm.
The allen and scdition laws are universally held as odinns, and yet whot ware they In comparison with thin? Sonee four or five ritizene were limprisoned, lawlexaly and maconstitutionally imprismed, nnder a pervervion of a single chase in the consti-totion-but this fell du-trlae changes the whole insfrument-al ters its entire character, and turns to scorn the remplutions of thia state, adopted in 1598-9-threntras abanimte roneolidation and emptoys the whole naral and military force of the conntry to aceomplish It. Instead of a Red-ral governmeat formed out of 24 states and rrating on enmpart, ynv have a aingle nation-a central government, espreising unllmifed swiy, and mere provincial departments hofling their rights aut esercising their powern but at the pleasure of that central government. The same if our beloved and homured state, if not stricisen frove the masp, is perminted to remain to tell what Virginia oace wats, and in perfect mockery of her fofiner ling pretenotions.

This docirine of exclusive allegrasce is but the result of that other doctume which bas bepa contended for an strenuously by a certain party in this eountry from the day that the federal governuent was put in metuon, vix. That the eonsentution was not the result of compact anonig the states as separate conumbentien and indr| ${ }^{\text {m-ndent }}$ soverrignurs, but was the work of the people. If it was the work of the prople actiag as ore whole, then it was obvious that that whole, that entite anas was the sole sovereigu, and of enutne had exclusive utic to the allegiance of each and wery fadividual within the braad limils of the union. This theory of the consitution was met and overthrown-al hustory gave it a fat enatradiction. Its errors were too obvious to be iraposed upon a thanking commanaing. It rested principally on three or four words in the constitutiosi "we the people of the Unitrd States" as If these could mran aught else, than "we the peonle of the stated waited;" the great struggle and true inteni (rom the first was to re-edablish this clana of exclusive allegianee; for it was obvinans that the moment that conceseion was made, the context was at an cad, and this glorious federal antion created by the states for their asutual delebee and protection, would anaihilate ita tery cicators, and hohl them but as mere dependencies. The argument is now eomewhat varied, but is still lintrinsicaily the same-alieguance is now made to refer itself to protertion without regard to the head sping, the state, from which that protection bas flowed; and we are asked if the general govrrumwat does not lurniah us pratection. T'lue aliswer le plain and obvinus. It does furnish the a guarantee of protection agalust foreign nations-it secomphahes certain great objecta necessary for the prare and happiners of all-it provides for the common defence and general welfare of all the ntates, and while fultiling the trusts confided in It , addreases itwelf to our affectlons and prepares one ard all of us, if needa be, to pour out our lart drop of blood for the union Bist what then? Doen it follow that breatace an agracy bs created for wive and beneficent purposes, that the agent must be converted tato the master?' If the governaretit was epratrd by the states, in it not their erea. ture? and would any man be mo reckless of his reputation for ordluary sagaety, to say that altegiance was deve to any other than the soverelgo ereator. Earh state has its agenty to ereeute Its will, but whe ever dreamed, but the man whose idol was the diadem and the scepire, that those mgents were sovereizn, and that allegiance waw due them. Take the case of your juigenthey afford protection and secnrity to your persons and property. They epread over you the mild and mentgn tafinence of the law -If you are unlawfolly imprimoned they ant gou si fiberty by the writ of habeas corpus. Hut does this nate the jadge your move. reign and is yonr allegianee due to him. This rravoning applies from the president down to the humblert offirer in pyblic employment, embraces the army and the navy, all mothing more than the creatures of the Untted States-ereateal by them, nnd exisling but at their will and pleasure. A sovereigh may seleet Hie meaus of accomplishing its own wiep designs. If it is so fechle as to rum the baxard of beting ernuhed by moreign pnewics, It may unite with lis neighbors for parposes of men-mil defence. If it apprele-sds collinion with its neighlumers and hloody wart, it may after its own manner unite with thein. By eompact with them, appoint one agint or more-employ any mncline it may deem proper, whether sueh maehise be an organised govern ment, such as the federal government, or any other. It may confer greater or leas power on the azency wo ereated at th pleasure-but still lis soverelanty rmmams unimpaired, and the allegiance of ith citizens continues as before.
Are you prepared then to oppose those deatritetive thenriosto contead for the rights of the states mo inatter loy whom assall. ed? Are you attachiod to our federat syetenn, or will you quietly pertait doctrimes to attain the maxtery which will and must terminate in a mere majority and eonsolidated government' Will you still have the 24 stara, and 13 stripes in wave over yon, and under ils broad folds, brave the batte and the breeze, of will you agree for an lnstant that that giorious emblem of liberty shali be hivered in the dust, and a mew flaf wave forth having those etars olldito rated and these stripew effierd.
'T'e rerist oppression is the hatural right of man. Oppreseinn comes from governmont-it forgen thackles and fatens liem on the timis. I am mote Jealaus of a government posserering the purse and the sword, than I am of the governed. When I am told of the dangers of nulltication by a state, with a view to recomment coasolidation in my adoption, my answer is, "let gnvernment be Just, and nollification has no fond on whieh to exist." Injustice alone begets resistance-anil that is not allIn order to aronsen a whoie community in resistance, the sensn of oppression muat he great under which they Jabor. Virginia thrise declared tive tanff for jentection unconstitutional, wapqual and unjust, and yet she preforred puace to resialance. Slue Faw on thought she raw the substance of her penple daily taken to enrieli a favored elast and yet she dill not reaiot. Injustice na the part of envernment drove Bouth Carolina to reslstasce, and who can answer far lis consequencre even upon Virginia, if anmber year had passed without an adjustmpnt of the tariff question? I am not tha apologist of slouth Carolina-my opinion of hor conise hav lerep expressed eluewh-re, and retasins unchangeli; bnt there in to me no terma in a state vetn, when eonaparrd to the glonmy despotion of a goverument without ebeck or limitation on its powers, rpread over such a coutitry as tus.

The veto when exerted by the atuple man (the presideat) has met with our iondest applause. When by his sic volo, he arrested the Maysvilie road hill-when by a simitar veto he prostrated the bank of the United States, many found in thene proceedinge new reasons for continued support; but the veto by the people of a state, because it may chance, ia nur judgment, to have been rash, precipitate aad ill-judged, is to drive us into consolidation and uitumately Into monarchy, for unless these pernicious doctrines are arrested, such is on be the end of that sysiem which tas made us a happy and unted people for the last finy years, and has excited the wonder and adiniration of the world. My remalution is cisen-others may go afier new gods, and fail dowu and worship them, but for myself I will worship the God of my Guthers and live and die in their faith.

Mr. Tyler concluded by oflering the following erntiment:

CASE OF GEORGE GRANSTEIN. JUDOE BAT'S AFPORT.

Court of sentions and common pleat, Orfoler term, 1833.

Fixparte $\quad$ Guanatein.
On the 7 th Oetnber last, the petitioner presented his petition, Auring the nitting of the courr, in be admitted in the right of eiUisenahip; and the wame being taken Into ennuideration, he nppeared to be entitied to that priviliegre, aml was ordered to be sedinitied, on bis taking the usual oath of allegiance to the state of Eoutli Carnlion, and of कidelity to the Unitied Stater.
Upon the clerk' tendering the onth to the prutioner, his emunsel, Mr. King, obljected to his taking that part of the nath which related to lita allegiance to the state of Sonth Carolina, hent whs witting to take that part which related to the United gtates. Whereupnin I refiged to ndrait him ns n ritizen, onlese he took the usual and eustomary oath of attegiance to the state of Bouth Carolina, as well as that of Adelity to the United States.
The grounda upon which I refused to admit him, were briefly the following:
First-That Snuth Carolina was a sovereign and independent state, and had an unquestionable right to prescribe the termas and conditions upon which she would admit aliens to the rights and privileges of eitizenship, from the day she assumed ber sovereignty to the present time, by the lav nf nations, and the rights of all civilized states.
Secondly-Thet she had uniformly exercised this right and power, from the earliest period of her indrpendence, [evco before the independence of the United States was deelared]; for In the constitution of 1776, the furm of the oath is preacribed and directed.
And in the constitution of 19th March, 1778, the same form was Jaid down and directed, after the indepeudence of the United States was declared.
Also, in the act of Mareh, 1786, to confer the right of eitizenship, the oath is prescribed to be administered to aliens ou being admitted.

Thirdly-Because it was one of the higheat prerogatives of the state, and the longest in use. I could aot therefore permait it to be called in questioo; and dismissed the petition

Court af appeals, fiprit term, 1833. optNion.

The 4tb paragraph of the 8th section, art. 1. of the conatituIIon of the United States provides that congress shall have the power " fo establish an unfform rule of naturatization, and unifirm laws on thr subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States." In 1802, congress passed "an aet to establish an untform rule of naturalization, and th repeal the acts heretofore pnssed on that subject," which, amongat other conditions to the admission of an alien to the rights of citizenship, preseribes "that he shall at the time of his application tn be aduatied, declare on oath, before souse of the courte aforesaid, that be wit papport the constitution of the United Suates, and that he doth absolutely and entircly renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every forcign prince, potentate, state of ooverrignty whatever, and particularly by name, the prince, state or sovereignty wheren he was before n citizen or subject."-Ond laws of the Uwited States, by Story, $8: 0$.
The petitinner who had complird with all the other reqaisite of the act of congress, nffered at the time of his application to be admitted, in make the declaration on nath, required by it: but the presiding judge thought lie murt also take an oath of atleglance to the ptate. This he declined to do, and his application was on tbat account dismissed. The question now is, whether the presiding judge had a right to administer an additinnal oath to the petitioner.
In paswing upon this question, it may be useful to premise that we have nothing to do with the ennsequences of the oath required by the act of congress. We are only to declare what the law is, $n$ nt the obligntioo which the oath impnses. It is perhaps, due however to the occastion to say, that I entertain no doubt, that an alien when admitted to be a citizen, acquires att the rights, (ezcept that of being elected president), and ineurs all the nbligatinns of a native citizen.
He owes precinely the same altegiance, and must in the same manner discharge une duties consequent upon nativity and reresidence, to the ptate or the United States.
The power to establish an uniform rule of natoratization is in the expresa wards of the constitution of the Voited Etates, granted to congreas: and the act of cougress of 1802 , was pass: ed in pursuance of that power. The oath prescribed by it was the naly one which could be required to be takeo as a prerequisite to the admission of the petitioner, so far as the legistation of enngress affecte this question.
Is there any law of the state which required any other adilitional nath to be administercd? It is perfectly clear on examiaing our statate book, that there is none.
The orders referred to by the judge belnw, were the oaths of nftice premeribed hy the old constitutions, and not of citizenship. These were superveded lyy the oath of office of our new constitution. The act af 1744 (P. L. 2519, 340,) was repeated by the act of ITR6 (P. L. 412,) which is ma net not to naturallee, but to eonfer on aliens some of the righte of citizens; its provislins are pubstantially enactments zranting the rizhts aod privileges of citizenalip to aliens. The net of 1788 (P. L. 443) merely provides means whereby it might be ascertained, and a record preserved nf such aliens as han bcen naturalized before. the adopition of the federal constitution.

The art of 1799, (2nd Faupt 2:3) grants the rigbt and privileges of citizetuehip to nliens, upon taking and mhhecribing an onth or affirmation of "allegiance." The art of 1807 (acts 59 , 60) is In direet affirmation of the act of congress, as having established the only ruie of naturalizatuon rerognized of required thy this state. For the provision of the aet provides "that every alien previously to his or her being entitued to avall him or herneif of any of the benefts of this act, shall dechare Ais or ler in tention to become a ctrisen of the United Statet, agrceably to the tention to become a clisem of he United Statet,

From this review of the legisiation of the state, it is most masifest that there is no law of the state, which requires that an alien upon being admitted a citizen, should take an oath of allegiance to the state.
From the adoption of the federal constitation, Sonth Carolina tree to her principles of fidelity to it, has never attenpted to incorfere with the naturatizatiop of atieus,

The oath preacribed by the act of congress, is the onty one whiel any law requires to be taken by an alien on becoming a eftizen. The motion to reverse the decision of the judge below is therefore granted.

Fort Hith, March 27eh, 1833.
Gentlamex-I have been honozed by your uote of the 18th inst., invitiog me, in the behalf of my friends in the virinity of Bdgetield, to partake of a public dianer to be given at such uine mould suit my coaventence.
In declining to accept this testimony of the approval of my peblice conduct, in the trying scenes through which I have so lately pareed, I aun governed by the course, to whleh I bave adhered throughout the ardaons and noble struggle, whieh this state las matutained in the cause of liberty and the constitution for so many years, and not from any indifference to the honot intended, tor want of respect for those, who have teadered it, in a manner so kind, and with an approbation eo warm and flatsering, as to command my most profound gratitude.
Foreseeng from the commencement of this controversy, that the part, whreh a sense of duty compelled me to take, would, from the poation I oceupied, expose the state, as well as myself, to the fmputation of false and uoworthy motives, and thereby tend to weaken the sacred caupe, for which she contended, 1 deened it my daty, th order to obviate, at far aa practicable, such effeet, to dectine accepting all ruch testimoniats of the pablie approval of tny course, as thas been offered me. This originating In a sense of daty, bas been in striet accordance with iny foelings. Having no personal object in view, I have looked vingly to an bonest and laithfal discharge of what I believe to be any duty, regardiess of the effects on my fature prospects, or evea on the etanding I may have acquired by past services with a large portion of ny fellow eitizeny, with whom it has and stitl enntinues to be my misfortune to differ, in referenee to the pub. Iie interest, at this important crisis. The reason, which has heretofore governed my conduct, must still contione $\mathbf{u s}$ iofluence me. The strugite to preserve the liberty and constitution of the country, and to arrest the corrupt and dangerons teudeney of the governubent, so far from beiog over, is not more than fairly comusenced. In makiog this assertion, I Jos not intend to say, that we have not gained already an important aulvantage. Comancncing the contest, as the state did alone and under so many diaadvantagrs-against a system apparentiy so Immovably entabished and su*tained by so large a uajority, and so powerfol an interest; opposed and denounced both by the administra. tion and the apposition-on enme off not only without defeat, but with decided auccess, in indeed a triminpli. In spite of ali these diffculties, we have aptorid and succeasfully asserted our doetrinea, and proved hy actual experience, that the rejected and reviled right of nullification is not, as its opponents asserted, revolution or disunion, bat is that high, peaceable and em. cient remedy; that great ennservative princlpte of the system, which we claima it to be, and as it has proved, and that, too, after all the waunt rempedies had failed, and when Withnut it none other remalned, but secession, the lapt resort of an oppremsed stite, bat whith, like smme powerfal but dangerons medicine, ctinte, bat whith, hilke some powerfal but dangerons medicine, olls, than the remedy, and when the life of the patient with or without $t$, is almonet despaired of. Nor let any one supponec, that I bave prated the facte too strongly, in saying, that we have succesefilly asserted our doetrines. To these assertions must be atuributed, the recent adjustinent of the tariff, which, whatever otijectiona there may be to some of the details, there ean be no diviston of opinion on the point, that the prlociple five whieh the state enntended, that the duties ongtt to be iniposed for revenue, and that no more onght to be raised, than the pconomical went of the government may dermand, ts opeoly and rx. plieltly acknewledged by the envernment. Time, it in true, has been lionally allowed for the grndnal termionation of the system, in order to avoid the shock and Insess to individuals, whirh nenesaarlly follow all eudden tranations, even from an ermonenns to a eorreet prineiple of legistation; but, I feel, I hmzard litte in asoening, that the syntem will expire, at the sppointed time, never inore to be revivid. For this great rewnh, ynu owe littes to me, or any oftier Iodividuat. It is the work of thr state.the trath of the doetrines for swlicti she contended, and the firm asd herote zeal, with which she has been sustained by her smons, In noserting them; and by none miom so, than those of EAgefietd, a district, which has dintingutshed itself amnong tha fricoinat fir ite unton and promptitudo in this great enntest. It is, I tepeat, to the noble resolve of her sons, to prefer the constitation and liberty to life itself, to which, under Providence, we are to attribute this success of our righteous canse.
But, let us not deceive oarnelves, by supposing that the danger is past. We have but checked the disease. If one evil bas been remedied, another has sticceeded-the force act in the place of the protective system-a meanare, striking direetly at the fundamental prineipte of the constitation and detiberately pansed to place on the statate book, and thereby to give lega nanction to a theory of tha convtitution, utterly hostile to that elltertained by us, and, 1 may add, almopt the entire sosth. I rest not this assertion on Interence. What I state, wad openly avowed in debate, and among oiliers by its leading advocate, the distiogaished senator from Massachusetts, who conceded that if the theory be trur, that the constitation ta a conipact, formed by the people of the several states, as distinct arvercign communities, aud is binding between theur as such, then would the bill be, as we have asperted it to be, directly oppored to the fundamental principles of the constitution, and utterly subversive of that instrament; nad that the bill could be vindicated only on the opponite view, which he maintained, and on which he advocated its passage-the view, which regarted the people of these states, as forming one nation, and the government as possessing the exelusive right of interpreting, in the hast resort, its own powers; and thas practically sabatituting for the constitucion the will of the majority, with the right of assuming at discretion, whatever powers it might think proper, and to enforce their exercise, however oppreskive and unconstitational, at the point of the bayonet, or eves with the noose of a halter. Such now is our constitution as attempted to be eatablished by an existing law of the land; and sseh will be the constitution in faet, should this odions net not be resisted, till it be erased from the statute book. If it be not resisted-if by our acqaiencence, the principles, on which it rests, be practically established, then will there be an end to our coostitutional and limited government, and, with it, to liberty and the eonstitation. for to expect to preserve either, under such a government, would be one of the vainest thoughts, that ever entered Into the imagiastion of man.
The theory of our constitution, which is thus attempted to be establishied by law-a theory, which denies, that the constitution is a eqmpact, between the states, and which traces all ita powers to a majority of the American people, nf, in other words, which drinics the foderal character of the government, and asserts that it is a consolidated system, is of recent onsgin, avowed for the first tume, but three years since, and first officially prociaimed anll asseried, withill the last few imosthe. There was a party, it is said, in the conveation, whelh frumed the constitution, in favor of consolidation; but it is a fact perfectly pstahlished by the journals of its proceedinge, that they were defeated in that deaign; and from the dissolation of that body, tilt the time stated, all parties, the fideral, ns well as the repablican, professed, at least, to betieve, that ours was a federal system of governitent, to use the langnage of Fisher Aucs, one of the most zealoun and distinguished of the former party, "a republie of stater, arrayed in a federal union." The dangerona heresy, of which the odious force bill is the first fruit, after having been thus suppressed in the convention, was revived, under the belief that it was the certain and effectual means of fising on the country forever the anvquat, mojust and uneonstitational system which so long oppressed the staple states, and is now placed among the acts of the government for futare use; tike fetters forged and fitted to the limibs of the states, and huog up to be nsed, as oceasion may hereafter require. If it be permittod to remain there quietly, the thne witl eonse, when it will be certainly employed for the use iotended; and we may rest assured that an army of fity thousand hayoorts, encamped in the midst of the staple states, wonld not lialf so certaisily subject thems to the will of a lawless, uncliceked and unrestraised anajorlty, who would not fail to w.age a war under the eolor of legistation on their property and prosperity, more oppresaive and more degrading, than would be a tribute exacted by aetinal foree.
Bat as formidable, as would be this measure, if acquiesced in, It may be easily overthrown, if promptly and spiritedly opposets. which I may add, wonld do mure to reatore the conotisution and reform the movernmpnt, than any ohther conceivable event Ifonind iny bellef, as to the facility, whith which it may be overthrown, if properly opposed, os the character of the measure itself, its palpable unconstitotionality, in many particulars; its dangernos tendency; its novelty; the daring assumptions on one side and denial of faets on the other as neecsaary to sustain it; the absence of any direct and powerfil peemniary intercat, (as in the protective system), to support it; but above all, in the ilcep eonviction, whieh the weaker portion of the nuion mast shortly feel, If it does not atreasty, of a concert of sebtiment and action, not only to arreat the mearmres in question, but to guard against a recurrence of slmilar danger.
Another, and an Important advantagn, is this contast, will also reanit from the eluarncter of the measure. It will rfifertaal Iy separate the real, from the pretended friends of state rightsa class that has done the causen of constitutional litherify more injury, than the most open and bitter opponents. To advocate, or sapport the measure, is to be a consolidationist lit the strong est and innst otious sense, by whatever profession ncconipatsied, and of courne all who advocste and sapport it, will forfeit ali claing to be ranked ammon the friends of state rights.
Lonking th the effects, which must follow itn overthrow, we shall find nuch to animate us in the coptest. The potnt at issun

Is not, whether this or that particular poliey of the reneral governuent be right of wrong, but whentaer the general guverameut be a connolidated guverumuat, of uarestrected powers, or a federal seputaic of etates, with linated powers-an ivalue fir the first taue proseuted, and on the decistun of which depends the liberty midd the contritution of the rotutity; nod, I tasy sdd, Lie very cxistence of the soutiern states. Fellow cifizens-It is iniporpible for uns to enpress the astiefincIIon I lanve durived, frnm seelng the day the velumfeers of Charleston-all well armed-well disciplined-and in the language of our gloriotsennotto, "sprepared wrth strengeh and courage, "t Who is thure that can survay this proud scene, and not feel that the aure dufenec of frce statew is to be found in the coes-

Arrived fellow-eitizens in in most fateresting crisin in our political affairs, it may be well for as to taka a brief retrospectHut a few manths have passed nwny, sinee South Carolina was envimaed liv ditheulties, and bepel by dangers. Ifavious taken n aoble atand la defence of the rights and liberties of us all, inin aoble otand la defence of the rights and liberties of us all, instead of receiving sympathy and support from thope whoese intrresto nre identufed with her own, she was (with a few hoporshif esceptions) coildly abandoned to the teader anerciea of the fideral gnverbment,-backed by our army and navy heretofore silntainill by tha voice find supported by the treasury of the snuth, aud now for the first tune in nar hiviory used as no instrument uf despotisrb, and direeted to wheld their nrms sot ngainst the encmitus of their cotuntry abroud, but agataet the bosomn of their uwo brethren.

Threats of military and rivil vmurennce, were loud and deep. and to add still danker sloaden to the twedure-the lmpreswion had been ereaied, - 1 would fain hope without suflicirat foundation, that the first blow struek by the fideral nrm, was to be sirnal of n desolating civil war. In this couditinn of thagem-ininitely n desolating civil war. In this coudition of thayge-infinitely more appaling to the heart of the patriot, than the bloodiest fireiga war; and as well ealculated, I munt think, to try the suuls of ment an the darkest sceaes of the revolution, did south wan predicted that she "mumble berself in dust and ashes," ant it she yreld obedicace to the haughty mandate which eoramanded ber to "tear from ber archiven" her solemin deerees? on wo! Thanks be to God! the spirit of liberty was uot yet extunct in the bosonss of the sons ur daughters of Carolina. They bid not forgotites the lessons tauybt by a glorious ancestry, that liberty and Itfe, are inaeparable in the bowons of the brave and the free. A fow of the venerable relice of the revulution still lingered anongxt us, in whom the spirit of 96 not merely survivad, bui wasserea burning brigbter mad brigiter to the lant. Unaulidued by difticuluer, uapppalled by daugern,-the people of stouth Carnlua takiug counsel to thrir uwn hrave liearts, and eonmotung the intereats, nad the bonur of the state met the crisis hike freeuneny and Carolusa, inatead of crouchiug it the firotatonil of the oppressor, rose in lir r aative majesty, and like onr own eagle, "Loweriug in his prade of" tiligit," bid defiance to the ivrant's power. Winh a promptitude, unamimity and zeal, which If ever equalied, has sureiy never beril surpassed, the people of South Carulisa, the first trumipet call, Hew to her atandard and volusiarily stevoted their hives and firtwaes to her defencyo. There is sonnething in no honest, manly and uafaliering milhe. reace to princople, and a fearbens perfiormanee of duty, which comanands the rexpect of mankud, and all experience lias proved that the best way to avord dasger is to be prepared to meet i. Pelloww soldiers-you and your bravn counpatrots in arms, the volmiteere of Carolina, and I make this declaranin from a deep eonviction of ita truth, have saved the atule, and are enti Wed to the homars of a civie trimmphi.
If we have not been involved in all the horrors of civil warIf our atreete have not beend delugcal with blowd-our dwellings wrapt in flames, aud our helda d-chaslated, if instrad of mournung over the desolation and ruin which fullow in the train of invading armien, and are the bitter finit of civil ctrife, you nre onw permatted to rejoire with bouent exultation at the new and linproved condition of our affairs, and the checring prospect before as-we are indebted nuder beaven for all thas to the undaunted apirit of our people, to our tucenty thousand patriotic polunCeera, who bave held theinkelves in eonstant readiness to rrpel invaston, and were knowa to be prepared wlay down their livee in defence of the sacred suil of Carolina.
Whatever difference of opiuinn may exint as to the proelse character of the new taritf, preat indeed has been the golin-in estumabic the advantages purebased, ns we believe elluefly by your virtur, firmbess and putriotisn. Is it nothing frllow citizens, for a ciagle state tol thave stood up unaided and alone in defence of Acr rigits againat the collonsut power and patronage of the federal guvernineut? Nothing to have rouned the attention of the whole union, before it was toa late, to those grivat fundamextal truths, on the finul matalibahuent of which inhet depend the preservation of the comstutuinh hud the unwo! is it mothting to have arreeted the progress of the onsealled American Symbem, that vile scheme of inbliery ned phunder, hy whieh, under the colur of law, the proceeds ol yutrr labor and eapital are transferred to others, and to prevent it from becoming the set tled poliey of the couutry? In is nothing in have sbluasined a din. tuet iecogation of the principla-aye, and th liave il rrcorded in the statute book- that the daties shall be erempmally reducet to che rerenue standard, and thut no more money shall be ruised than may be necessary to the econonaifeal administration of the zarern-meat-thereby deatroying at one blow the grohisution, niniveuns, specific dutiee, nod other fratudulent deviees, constituting the very life blood of the proteetuve syrtem! Aid finally is it nothing that by the promised reduction of the duties, a fatal blow will be given to thone extravagant and unauthorisrd appropriationa of the public tanney by which one portuon of the people are robbed that others may be corrupted? It is timpozsiGhe for any oue not to see, that these are great and valuabte nchievenuente, and if there be any lyy whom they will be mure bighly enteetned fron denylug tu Carolitia any agency in produchig them, ik ir sn. We feel consrinus that we have dowe oar duty honently and fearlessly-we have stond by our country in the hour of her trint; we have adhered to Carolima through gemed report and evil report-and for the rext, we know that posterity will do un justuer. We have fought the ghod fight-find has given as the victory-we will nut quarrel about the dietritu! non of the loonore, and if nur cmontry is perminted to enjuy its frethe, let who will take the spoils.

I am now fellow cluzms about to perform a nowt grateful office. I am about to confur unon yom as the clifef niagistrate or this state the mort dirtinguished token of public apprnbation, wheh it ls in tny power to bentow. The atale has through the eourvention declard her snvertign will, that in the presont appert of our political affairs, the exiating organization of the volunteeras ahall be inaintalned, and I have ihis day isaned orders to that effect, which will be read at the heal of your rexpective companies. Conggress lass commuitted anotier bold, and daring usurpation on the righta of the states, by the passage of an art commonly ealied the force sill. White that act ehall remain unrepealed upon the statute book, and the principtes it embodies and sanetioned by thone who are entristull with the at dies and sanetioned by uone who are entristur whith the ant the rights of the utatex, bition being eon-tantly prapared to defend them "at any and every hazard." We truse that publecopunion will, ere long seal the fate of that bill, aind that it will perinh sunidat the universal exccrations of the people. But white the priaelples are abroad against whieh we are strugyling let me tell you, hat we tholla all our rights by wo other temure than that eterual vigiance" without which we are told hberty eanaos be saved.

THE vOLUNTEEB BaLL.
This magnificent pageant was given by subacription amongst the volualeera uf Cliarleston, in honor of the principles of state sorereiznty, for the support of whirh they had enlisted themselvea on the muster rolls of thetr beloved and oppreseed state, whose sacred soil tisey had armed themselves to dufend aganst the threatened violenee of a parrieidal tyrant. A late enturtaument having been goven by the party who oppose their state, to the oftiecrs of the fetieral governuent sent to enforce the tyrant's will against the autborises and citizens of Carolina; and the elegance of that entertainment lwing the sulject of mueis culogy auongat these patriotic geutlemen, it was determined by those who were true to their state, that sueh a fentival should be given as to prove thern no less supcrior in the fidelity of their allegiance, than in thefuste and aplendor of their festivities. The time fised upon was the evening of the 27th of Mareh, and the place selected was the eatensive area and spacious rooms of the citadel. As the ball was a military one in its character the locale and the martial decorations with which It was adorned, were in tasteful and appropriate keeping with the occasion. This immense editice being constructelf in a quadrangular form, encloses an open spare of abrout 160 fect by about $65^{5}$ feet, includug its extensive piazzas. Tlua enclosure was envered over at the top, with a eanopy of eanvas, and the ground floored over for the danee and promenaileAround the Interior of the area wrre erectell colossal pillars of the Doric order, supporting at the centre their floor of extensive eorridors and at their suminit the eves of the roof. The broad projection in front of the boilding, formed on each stde, and above the gate way, was brillantly ilimainated, as was each of the pillare around the interior, with varetgated lamps arranged ta fanciful and pieturesque forins. A large transparency of tive arms of the stotz was placed immediately nver the entrance, and presented a beatiful and dazzling appearanee to those who approarhed the building. "pon the transparency was inscribed in hrnad and conspicunus pharactens, the moito of "NCL LIFICATION THE RIGHTFUL REVEDY." At the hase of earh column surrounding the interior, to the number of twenty, a pyramid of caunon balis was constructed; on the capitats of rach the name of a state rights and valunteer district was Inseribed; and at the eentre of each column supporting the corridurs, was fixed a sum-rireular frieze of muskets enclosing and sustaning un each side of the reapective pillars a largc stanilard whose aunplet drapery was tastefully gathered and boand at the staff, and projected above in graceful folits. In corners of the npace enclosed, were placed eight beantiful picees of brass ordinanee, medallions bearing patriotic deviees and inseriptions, in honor of state rights principlen and diatinguisited stateamen, were suspended hetween the columns, and at intervals tliroughout the entire Inilding. These medallions were bound with wreathy of evergreen and fowers, which were also hang in beautiful festoons from the cornice of the roof and gal leries, under whieh benches were arranged for the aceninmodatinn of the iadies. In addition to the mumerous variegated lamps which were hung armand the piliars ind the ballustrades, chandeliers were suspeniled at equal distnnces above and below the floor of the galicries, and tofty pyramids of iamps erected in each eorner of the enelosure, wo that a flood of ligit was cast over the whole of this festive scene. Jirectly opposite to the entrance was erected a spacions orehestra, with Gothic arches, adorned at the base with piles of eannon balls and rows of musktts, and at the suminit with festnons of drapery and ever. greens. On each side of this archestra was planted a lofly palineto tree, whose graceful follage enncealed from view tho musicians of two excellemt bandf, and gave to the nwell of their harmonious gtrains the semblance of music issuing from the eberished boughs of our honored palmetto.

Belilind the nrehestra, in the spacions artlitery ronm, extending almoat the entire length of the edifice, were laid four tables of similar length, fir the abundant anpper provided for the company. On the serond fioor of the building, the extensive arnory was briliantly illuminated with ehandeliers and Innumerable candles inserted in the muzzles of the musketry, ansl adorned with wreaths and festonns of evergreen, Intertwined with the arms, winifl were arranged in various formas along the sides of this finmense saloon, prodneing a nusst hrilliant and dazziing effect bpon the eye of the spectator. The numerons apartments npening into the corridurs were lighted up and thrown open for the aceotumotation of the company as card rooms and wine romms for the gentiencu, ant neeasion,d sitting rooms for the iantien.
The eompans were received on entring by the managers, and tha ladies conducted to the seats prepared for them until the dancinz and promenading comnenced. The flonrs were decorated with various fignres, dividing off the spnees allotted to each coullon and quadrille. At the appointed bour (half pat 7) the company began to assemble, and in less than on hour the vast hall of the area was crowded to excess. At half port eight, the governor entered with his suite, announced hy a hoartinh of trumpets and a fight of rockets and shells from the open grounds on the exterior of the citadel. The promenading and daneing were then commenced, and continued in succession during the whole evening, with the occasional handing of refreshonents, untin half past tiree in the morning, when the compeny retired, much delighted with the amusement of the eveaing.
The coup d'cri presented by this brilliant scene was such as can searcrly be surpassed. The effect from the galleries was peculiarly beautiful, and appeared to call forth we special admiration of the ladles, who in walking round the eorridors foolied down upon the gay scene bencath, as one of fairy enchantment rather than of tright reality.
The vat concourse of splendidiy dreased indies and of gay cavaliers in their military enstnmes, winding through the mazve of the dance, presented the appearance of an eastern gatin, in the halls of some gorgeous palace, during the days of chivalry and mmanee.

The combined effect of the variona and magnifieent decorations, of the dazzling lustre of the tight, and the vast space over whieh the eye of the spectstor wandered, it gazing from one end to the other of this splendid and espacions satoon afforded a pretacle, such as we ventare to athrm, has never been seen In America.
The number of perions present amounted to nearly 3,000 , and no entertainment was ever conducted with greater propriety and order.
The foilowing is a list of anch of the motioes as we could procure from the various medallions and transparencies.

0 The speeclt of the venerable Lafayetle, in the French chamber of deputics, concerning the violation of the rites of bosputality, at hits bouse, at La Grange-has all the "fire of the flut" of the Imerican revolution. He ie, indeed, a wonderful znan-and seemingly preserved, as if by miracles, for a guide and pattera, a beacon or a light, "in theae our days."
no-Having, In the last number of the Reaistan, given the full and formal account of the grand military celebration and ball, in honor of nullitication, at Charleston, Bouth Carolina, includung all the flourishes of trumpets, and other aind instruments used on that augurt occasion-we now insert another aceverat of the affair, from the graphic pen of the editor of the "Portland Advertiser"-whose correspondence from Washing. ton was so enucb sought after, and exteasivety published, during the late sexvion of congress. We think that most of his "fits" are perfectily fair-and may be properiy presented hy way of offset to the pompous and awful statement which we have preaerved concerning the things that had happened because of the gathering of Ace Awalred volunteers, under brigadier generat Hamilton, "commanding the state troops at Cbarieston."

07-It will be seen by a brief notice of the decision of the cirenit court of the Enited States, for the district of Columbia, that Dr. Wattins has been discharged from his long, and eruel, confinement. Of thi measure of punishment awarded, because of offences committed by this unfortunate individual, few persons complained-even though many believed that such punishment was inflicted with a severity beyond the law; but the proceedings had againet him, subsequent to the explration of the imprisonment to which he was sentenced because of the criminal part of his sonduct, have excited a generous sympathy; for these proceellings were founded only upon a simple matter of febt-which, though it might have been incurred in erime, had been legally relieved of that part of its character in the pusish. ment imposed. We are of those who aever believed that Dr. Watkin's intended to make a perinanent appropriation of public money, illrgally, to his owa private use-but bis aets in this case cannot be further palliated or excused, nor has the penalty inflicted been found fault with. For years pant, however, he has been closely and austerely imprisoned, because of a mere plea of debt-whieh it was perfeetly known that he eould not pas; and we rejote in his release, that he may again mix in that society which be was so well fited to adorm-and, in a rigid performance of all the duties of hasband, father and citisen, lead all men to forgive, if all eannot forget, his momentary sheration from an honorable course.

We shall, probably, insert the opinion of the court at full length. It may become highly important to gentiemen of the bar, beeause of proceedingy yet to be had-for that Dr . Watkins will claim damages, because of an inprisonmeat pronounced illegal, mast needs be expected.

Interval improviments ant fcblit neats. We give place to a long and highly interesting report made to the house of rejresentatives of Pennsylvania, on the state of the finances-less beeanse of the information which it will afford to the people of that conimonwealth, than on account of the instruction which it conveys to every thinking eitizen of the United States. We are not prepared to say, for we do not believe, that every pablio work undertaken by Pennsy I rania -rond, canal and bridge, was wiscly commenced and at the most proper time. Some, perhaps, have been anthorised that votes might be obtained in favor of others, and eertsin, of questionable utility, may have received the legislative sanction, that particular improvements, of undouhted importance, ahould be vigorously pursued; and we are also inelined to think that a monnd economy would have directed the power of the state to the doing of fewer things at a time-by which it is probable that large sums expended for labor, or paid on aceount of interests, might have been avoinled; still the general prolicy anloptent and pursucd will cause prosperity to abount; and millions alisburbed, though not returning one per cent. to the treasury, may loave been very profitably invested. The fears of some as to accuntulations of a public debt, and the "glory" of others because that such debt lous been reduced in their day, may be equally disercet or equally absurd-equally becoming the statesman, or equally suited to the pratile of an infant. When a debt ineurred fairly represconts a value obtained, it cannot be regarded ws an ineumbiance, even o: at individual; but it is often wise in a state to ineur a debt whiels shall yield no return to the treasury of the state, for its own liguida-tion-because of advantages eonferred on the citizens of the state, whose nggregate of private wealdh is the beat possible evillence of public prosperity, and presents the surest means to satisfy tlemands on the trwasury, as they shall oceur-all kinds of prisate property being liable to publie requisitions. "Financial prosperity," as it is called, may juxt as well sliew national adversity as national success. The sage says, that "an armed perple, nnl anarmed magistracy, is one of the best guniantin's of liberte;" and so a low treasury and a weatelis jopulation, pany offer to the philanthropist the perfection of political wistom. It is no matier what may he the amount of the tlebt of a state, or how low the state of itn finsueses, provibled that the money obtainet has been eapended in rendering solid benefits to the prople of the state, because they ean return it-and it is their duty, as well as their interest, to return it eliecrfully, when needed. By ecrtain of the improvements mentioncol in the report bofore us, a "loarren mountain," which had been as valucless to Pennsylvania as theugh its location were on Teria del Fuego, las been made to produce a business worth six lumdred thousanil dollars a year; which, in one why or another, is not only substantially alded to the genemil wealth of the people of the state, bit spreads itself, and crucr bares, and giverenew spirit and life to other branches of business equally im-portant-the profits on all vehich, interlocked together, constitute the resources of the state; and debts incurred, becanse of such croations of vaiue, may lee redcemed, whenever it is thought that the prineipal, scattered among the people, is less beneficial to them than the payment of interest is burthensonse on the state: but until then, we regard it as both improvident and ugwise to puy of such debt, unless in conformity with engrgements that have been cntered into. The richest lands, covered with the most valuable timber, or most luxnrions harveste, may be contparatixely worthless, because of charges for transportation to market. Some years ago a gentleman of Illinols inforned as, that he had been compelled to grow and threshiventy bushels of wheat, and expend the labor of one man and two horses, two daym, in sending it to market, to obtain the five dollar hill which lie remitted on aeconnt of his subscription to the Refistre. And so it is that millions on millions of cubic feet of valualile time ber have been destroyed liy fire, as incumbering the ground-and millions of bushels of corm been suffered to waste on the fielils where it grew-bceause that timber and grain wotblf not liear the costs of transportation to market. If wheat, for example, being the staple product of a farmer- thet on which he relies to obtain money, eertain sums of which he nust have, in the present state of society), because thint some road or canal has been made, [or on account of a manufacturing village which has been Guilt and peopled], can be sent to market for 121 cents less per busbel, [after paying the tolls, \&c.] than thereto-fore-the farmer as much gains $12 \frac{1}{2}$ cents on every surplus bushel of wheat grown by him, as though its price were permanently advanced in that sum; wnl yet, such is the perversity of the human mind, or the gross amount of stupidity which prevails, that thousands would eomplain (in the case stated) if a fax of $6 \frac{1}{\text { conts wore assessell on }}$ a bushel of wheat so carvied to market, thongh the complainants were certainly benefitted in the same sum-for avarice will not acknow ledge, nor folly sec, that money price has relation to real value, only in the meuns afforded lor paying that price. A large part of the people who inluabit the "errust" of this earth, seem to be an ignorant of this principle as they are of persons and things in the interion-wo one having catcred into and returned from eapt. Symmes" "hole" to inform un of the state of affairs within. Foreigners often spank of high prices in our market, and they are excusable until they have hail time to measure them by wages received or profits otherwise carned. Irishmen, when just landed, are oftentimes frightened when the equivalent of three or four shillings sterling is demaniled for: bushel of potatoes, suchasthes might have obtained, at home, for less than one shilting. But beeanse that potatoes have often sold for one dollar bushel in our cities, equal to 5 : Irish, we have not heard of any general want of food-yet in lrviand, when their price did not excesed 20 cents, or 10 C . Irish, the hushel, hundreds of thousands of persons were its a state of actual starvation, and tens of thounands really died loceanse of the mere want of potatocs. If the prineiple here stated had been understood by the prople generally-iliere would never have been much ofpositisin to internal improvements or domestic mannfactureg-because of their intimate connexion with agriculture and cominerce. As examples, - bie cousumptimn of wheat (prodnced in the midhle, southern and western states), by the working people of the eastern staters, has been inereased ten fohil since the establishnent of mannfactorics in the latter; and their whole demanil for bread stuffs, no produced, is now probahly about equal to twice the average amonit of the whole foreign exportation, on that the eustern consumption fires the pirice of the entire quantuty of wheat or flour malle for sule-and, it may be reasonably sinpiosed, ailds at least one dollar a bartel, thereby causing an inculanen money price, or profit, to grain growers, in the lurge snm of ten or twelve millions of dollurs a ycar-for it is manifest that, were those iranufactories thestroved, Nuw Finglanl wonld be driven back to the former state of thing-when only the wealliy, as it were, consumed southern and western flour; because they only could pay for it; and the working elasmes, instead of being consumers of the bread stnffs of the sonth, wonld he driven Into the necessity of produring them-atill thas the wholesome interchanges of eommoditica which at present exist, and so powertully athl to the general wealth and happiness of the people of the United States, would ecase; anil, among other things, 150,000 tons of coasting vessels be thrown out of einployment, their crews being compelled to make their own breil. New Englanl now receives from other states, not less than the equivalent of two millions of barrels of flour a year Iher consumption, before the war, was harilly two hundred thousand. And so as to cotton; the states north of the Potomac, now using about 300,000 bales of cotton, of soolbs ench, create a larger demand for that staftic than is that of all the reat of the world, Hingland excefoed; anll it is well known that this home demand, for several years past, has fixed the price of cotton consinlerably highew than the first orders of Einglish merchants allowiel to be paid for the crops. With such facts before un, the advantages of the home market cannot be misumilerstoods and if it is so that the farmer reecives a tollar extra on every barrel of flour which he sells, becanse of the manufacture of cloth in New Eingland-he ean afford to pay three times more for eastern-made eloth than for that manufactured in Old England-becanse that he cannot pay for the latter with his four, if put down to the lowest possible rate at which it can be marle, instead of fundiug a asfe and steady market for it at the high price.

Puhlie tlebts are often compared with those of individuals, and are thonglit by some to have exactly the same character. This is a great mistake-and may be a fital error. Individuals die-states do not. The profits of individuals are in selfish accumulations of wealth; but the profits of states have no sort of relation to the amonnt of money which remains is the treasury. If an individual expends 1,000 dollars on aecount of any thing whieh yields him no interest-athe money is lost to him; but if a state makes some improvement which costs 1,000 ilollars, yet not expected to return one dollar for interest into the treasury, the investment may be highly profluctive, hecause of an increased value given to the property of individuals, suliject to tavation. The expemiliture of tion millions on the canalsol New Vork lias abled one hunded millions to the value of property of that state; and if those individuals who have been bemefittel were called upon to pay the whole expense of the canals, they woulil still be gainers in the sum of nisely millions of dollars. The canals, if the property of imlividuals, must produce an interent on the money invested, to rembrr them profitulle; but the state may do away with the tolls altogether, and pay out of its triasury even the eost of superintenderiec and repairs, and still make these canals profitable, in cansing' the existence of a greater amonnt of ansessable juroperty-the wealth of the people constifuting the wealth of the atate.
A publle delit may be either a national blesaing or a national enrse. Prejudiee or pasaim-prareexpositions in legislativenssemblies, or senseless haw lings at electioneering meetings, cannot change the prineiple of things. A priblic debt may be wisely incurred, or unwisely paid off: but never inwisely ineurred, if moducing corresponsling benefits to the peopule-or wisely paid off, if its amount, retained in the hands of the people or returned to them, is worth move than the sum of the interest which is payable on such delet. The rule, in this instaner, will as well apply to intividuals as to sutes. if a person is naking six per cent, on a capital which he load borrowed at three jer cent. his thriftimess would not be much almired shonld he pay off that eapital-undesired by the lemler of it, and without any nomal or legal ohiligation to do so; lut if his gains were less than three per cent. he would return the capital, of course, if he could. Aml vet, mit of a slicer vain gloty to pay off the national debt, we lave suen a proposition scrimisly entertained of selling the stock of the hank of the United States, which yithls six per cent. for the purpose of thying off an undemandable ulebt on which ouly three per cent. was chargeable. Ann many tukhe wike who WCZZAED THEREAT!

What is ealled the "nationm roarl" has cost the $\mathbf{U}$. States, let us say, threc millions of' thollars. 'This is lost to the trrasnry, at Washington; but the people of the United States gain not less than a million a year, on aecount of the reflued eost of trausportations berause of this roat. The money then, expented in makitg the road, though it sloes notrethro one slollar into the ireasury is worth thirty-three por cent. per annum to the people; und the saving thus maile to them is so muchatded to the amcuit of taxable property, or, at least, contributes, in its whole sum, to the general happiness.

There is another matter of no small consideration, when monry is bormow eal by the public for wholesome purposes: those who lend muke convenient and safe and pirofisable investment; and those who borrow east it into the cirenlation. An extra million thus thrown among the bnsiness-people of a state, is turnedl and turned and turneil, and perhaps does the work of twenty millions, if remaining in first hands. The working people pasa it round rapidlis, and it does good to somebody at every turn -the rapitalist gives it only a slow motion, anl the range of its bencfits is confined to a few. In demomstration of this it may be mentioned, that, during a purt of the time when the New York canals were being mane, the rich state of lennsylvania was in an atroply, for want of a eirculating medinm-but the westeris parts of New lork were full of bustle and besiness-and moncy. The difference between a slow ant rapint movement of money, should be well unilerstool by every one. There is an old and true saying, that "a thimble six pence is better than a slow shitling." As then, the borrowing of capital has a general teniener to mhue moncy "plenty"-tie refusal to borrow, or hasty returus of cupital borrowed, may make money "scarce," It may he as much a sount cconomy to borrow, as to repay. Ilail the Uinited States marle the Frie catal before the late war, ant renlered it toll free for ever, double its cost would have been saved in charges for transportations only $\rightarrow 0$ say nothing about the loss of life and amount of suffering chilurell ly our gallant army on the northern frontier, and the procrastination of hostilities in that quarter.

But now ant then a mania prevaits to par off a publio debt-and great eredit is given to persons who have just the same merit in the nalter as the enond boy is the of fice of the Rebistan, who often takes up a note at the bank; but the boy has not yet said, we believe, that he paid 500 or 1,000 dollars for the editor! If we hail eanght him in such an act of childishuess, we miglat liave tahen him on our knees, aml sail-

The aeging committee of Winst India planters and inerchants In London lave drawn up a documentary hatory of the origin mad progrows of slavery th the West ludtes, and subanitted a copy of the same to cach uember of the British parianumut. The anm of the whole naturis, that the slave trade was urged upon the colonies by the Britisil government; that various attempts wete made by the eulonics to cliceck the tappottasish of alavem, by legisiation, remonstrances, de. but that such attempts wera uniturnily restifid by the government if the mother country, mitil at lenght, in 1775, an order was isaued by the hing to the following effect:
"To our trusty and well beloved sir Basil Ketth, gnveruor of Jamaiea, and the territorits depending thercon in JamaraW'hereas, sutwithstanding the instrueno se which haver been repeatudly given by us and our ruyal predecessors to the governors for the lime being, of our island of Jamaica, forludding them to assent to or pass acts fior iniposing duties taphif nggioes tmported into that island, paymille by the importer, suchis arti bave-nevertheleas been from time to tome charted and pasaed duto lawa, in opens violation of said instuluctuons. Ah.d whercas, it has been represented unto an, that the duties inapused by the asid acte upon negro slaves smported, favn of late bern consi. derably augmented, to the jujary and oppresomon of the MJ:R .CHANTS of tha king donn, and tie motruction of its conamesee: it is therefore our exprena will and plraxure that yon do not, -upon any pretence whatever, and upon pain of heiug removed fom your government, give your ausett tot any uct of arts by which the duties and impositions upon slaven imputted intas the istand of Jamaien, as the said duture ntowd before the Ithth day of February, 1774, shall be in any reppect auguented of m. greased, or any alterationt made in the jroportson of sueit ducles, which by the provisions of such laws was made payabte by the innporters of ruch slaven.
"Giveu at pur crurt at $$ \mathrm{~L}$. James', the 28th February, 1775, in the 15 th year of our reugn."
The colonies, by the agent of Jamaica, remonstrated against the resolution of the govermment; bat the earl of Darthunth recplied, "we cannot allow the ewlonjerg to check ur dascourage in any degree a traffic so beueficial to the nation."

The same course preciscly was pursued ly the British go. verament towards the colonies which have siace leern erciod into indepememt states. It was a course fitl of injustier, and pregnant with the most disastrous con* mittee of Wext India planters and merchants, hriwiver, ouly dednce from it a aingle inferenee, viz: that if the lifitiall government now eontemplate the abolation of Flavery in the Wrest India coolonivs, the loss of jupurerty ocerasioned therefly, cunghit not to fall exclusively upon the culouinto, but to be sharchl equally by theas and the other poputation of the Brillsh empiore. They say-
The West Indiacoloniate do not propone to vindicate the ays. tem of slavery, but they consileer that, (to nae the worda of biril Atowell), "ifit be a sin, it is a sint in which the country lias had its full ahare of guit and ought to bear ita proportion of the redemption."

THie eofonists are thenseives rady to hear their share of any national sacrifice which may be requirel for the purpone of cautiously subetituting a helter mysten, if such shoubi be the the tional deternination; but they mean to show, by the accumpthnying paper, that Great Britain is locerefi' responsible for the dentandenent and actual existence of colouinal plavery: that ,with the view of extendiag the markit for her African trate whe paseed laws and saade grants of land expresely enjoining cultivation in the colonies by alave labor, and that thum, thromsti the instrumentality of her subjecta. all ragetly contending for participation in the traflic, she gradually prephted the Werst fudia colontes with slaves and received the salae of them in unamy; consegughty, that any meaxure of Iegislutive mierfirence teniling to impair or endanger she value of propesty sil açuired, muth either be accompaniad thy adevpmate comperaxation, or give a death blow th that coufidence in the watimul faith and eliasacter which has hitierto been the sole suppont of private property in thin country.

THE WIHTFFOKT'R OATH,  \section*{K1L.KENvy Asxtz:s.}

Dublin, Maych 16. On Wednerilay last, ten men wern tried and eonvieted of a midnight nttaek on the house of Martiu Kawanagh, of Johnstorin, oo fir beek ns the e3d November, IR31, and with assaulting him and adaninatering uniawful oaths. It apperaned on the triat, that Kavauagh load natece entered into the Whutelont contederary, been thed, converted, and ordrred ior Henry Ilightani, one ol the party who atlached Kavanagh, were prodaced an wituraes aganst the ten Whitefet, who were on ifu ir evinfere convieted of the minor offence withim the house, the if avibence convieted of the minor offence wibin the houne, and acquitted ot tue burglary, as Kavanagh had rased the latch to adant them.
On the croses examination of Ilighland, he adinitued that he had often been prreent when Whatefeet were sworn in, and atated that the followhy was the oathadministered-

1. I herrly swear to kecp counsel of all thas united basiness or 1sbandixim.
2. I hencby swear to suffrr the right arm to be cut from the Ief, and the feft fions the right, and the night th be malled to the mertiopplas of Aruagh gaol door, before ever I'll waylay or betay a brutwer, of go ou a greeus eloth to swear agnusi him.
3. I lureby swear never to have earnal pleasure with a brother's wite, sister, aunt, or Arst cousia, ouly by lawfut permisstum.
4. I herchy awear never to rob a man or keep company with a robber, unless an gat of work, where it cannot be helped.
5. I hereby swear to give tuoney to the repair of arms or of anmmuntion, when called upon by a brother, if I have it.
6. I hereby swear uever to have a shilling, and a brother to want propence, without giving it to hiu.
7. I hereby swear never to pity the moans or groans of dying children, but always wade kure-deep in Orange blood, and to heep मlown tand-jobbers and uthe-julberm.
8. I hereby swear never tusce a brother in danger of tramportation or the gallown, If I am able to make un money for him.
9. I liereby swear never to have two coals, two shirts, two pair uf stockuge, or any thang betonging to the body, but will give a brother one if he tequires it.
10. I Hr ruby swear uever ta sit in conapany and bear a brother spoken ill of. If 1 num not able to fight or resut, I will walk out and lell the next bruller I uset what was asid, who said st, and in what conajany.
11. I liestby swar to go 15 miles on frot, and 21 on borke. back, when called upou fy a hruther upon a lawtul occaxion, or untan ful, for fear it might be unlawtul before we could come lanek.
12. I hereby swenr to never give the secret to bistoop, priest, or minister, of thany other buly, only to a biar, and to never tell the man that urade tue a Whatefoot, and to keep up to the huight of st. Patrick.
T'lie declaration of the above caused an eatraordinary sensation in court; parts uf the onth have heretofore been ex hibited to the public indiguation, but this is the firt time that it has been expersed in a conft of justice iu the county of Kilkenny, as a characturiste uf the W'hatefoot $y$ ysem. Several of its clauses gre wull remembered as laving levth used as forms of swearing in the older Ribauluen or Fickiter, in the noith of Iretand, where the formir thange syoten provoked such a reacton. The fact of is laviug bern gralted on W'hitelinotiant, only proven how ertensive ary: the cansen w hich opelate in Irctand to expowe the perasantry to the truntation of joinme any yystem or any eatorpuse, luw ever mash and lawless and dangeroum, that holds out a hope of tedrese.

W'u call sparr only a short space for observations on poluts of moxt presring intectest conncried with the management of this tighty emplime; but a very few remarks may give our rrad. ers an ithes inf them. It is ptain, it the first phace, that the pars of the Eant India company"s charter which refers to trade inuwt be thornaghly re-modelted. The notion of a monoposly trade. wuch se that with China stilt is, cannot, in theze days, meet wish many defenders. The momoprlist is never an eernomieal tradmany defenders. The mimngrist is never an ernaomieal trad-
ef. He is lazy, difficult to be moved; and whev he does nove, it is very cumbrutaly. The large ships of tue matchant kings are mos move to be crucupared with a clean and smari i.Iverponf trader, than the lumberiag fistric of I, eadeudait steet, wath the Weil arrauged, econsoncal comating-houre of the enterprimina capatalise. A good free trader ts navightidal at mearly haff their charge; and upon a single vuyage to Calentia, gatos about $\%$ daya. Add to atl this due expenses of a eauton factory, together with the needlewsly estravaguti salailes jaid by the conspany to its servants, and we shall have no difficulty in accountfing for the higls price of tea in Great Britala compared with any other part in the knowa world. This single article of consumpcion bas bean said to eost npwarde of $£ 2,000,000$ annually, over and above its retail price, in consequence of the trade heitg po conducted, or rather bungled; and we are certainly fiched at least E I , 500,000 . But we sutfer far more than this actual deficit. Ifad our prices not been so extravagatit, wh ulght fave conducted the tea tracle of the whole weeturn world; and asuaredty our ship-nwusers would find it butter to awsiot us in au ondeavor to dewtroy this moninpoly, than to claunor in support of a pitifut timber trade with Canada! Refurm is deeply necenoary in the traile with Iladostan. Although nomalually free, it is mot su; nor will it evea be so whilst tha company fallowed to tracle. What we ustan ly free trade is thiss it is a trade whowe conditann nre regulated by free counputition amongst capitaliats aeting upou the conmoun principles of protit and toss; and it is clear that no such trade cautexist, when the market is ever IIkeIy to be jounced upon by one large capitatiol who eares nelther for proft nor low; whos often purchases for no other ulyject than to make a remitlanee of surplus revenit; and whose anting rervants are pald, not by a per centage on their protits, but in pioportion to their purchaves. We hold that the constant inter Serence of these monopoliats with the Iadian markets is almost the sole reason of the continaed inadequacy of the commereial Intereosrse of Hritain with Himdostanj fior inailequate, and miserably so, it stitl is, great though its progresw unter the frue trader, susee the last rene wal of the cluartef, has unquestiouably been, -aud it is the sureat proof of the pecuracy of what we assert, that up to this laour, the compang cansot show that it haw beef a gaimer, in circumstances where frivate capitalists would have realized uncomanon fartunes?-Bat we lave yet another matter to sellus with tlarse sovereigus of India; one of higher inportance that evea the foregoing; a matter still more interestang to the human race-the question as to the nature otl their goverament. 'I'he fact is unt to be didguised, -Itidia gromns ungoverament. matitary desputisth. Uur hold over the natives appears to be, that their fierce masters were hardvr than we, aud uppreesed them still mure releatlesely, -a strange security far eivilized and Christian Britain tu adopt as the shevet uncluor of her Indian domiaions! No check aizamst bad govermment; nu power to obusa justice upon the proingeial oppresstun; no opportunity of advancement, eithar conumcrcially ur uoorully, inve we yet granud to the prostrate Hisidood, The Moslents, indeed, plant ed s conqueror's foot apon their Hechs; but, like the Kuagans of old, and the Ruscians it susulern tiases, they dnspersed tham selves amougnt the conyuered, cook part in their concerns, and commanicated their own supericur civilization. Our merclanitkings tremble at the bare natae of civilization. Theer wise men have talked even of a probilbition of Clirimtianity. 'They only rouchsafe to India colleclurs of a worme than hertille tax, anf quarter upun "upotu of grerenery" hordes of avaricious alventurers, actuated but by twa unving princigter-tis determina fon to extract ansuey, and the alowre tur felurn luoue. 'The tiane for eorrection is at hand; and whall the destioties of sunth wastern Asia sremble in tur balance? whall we weigh ignoble fears, and corrupt desirep, against the fates of those enanutlens millions? Shalf we reffose tu Indaa a population of inda<trions colonists, who would accejut lur ad their hounc, and ander whom liberty and envilizitious wuuli assuredly grow? By such inell woulat the Hisioo be taken up on the une Jrand, and aceustomad to the

MONUMEN'T'TU ALEXANOERR.
The grand monusamot to the memory of thet late omperor of Rusesa, ofisred by Nicleulas, lis bruther, was ratsed ou $8 t$. Alecander Nefaky's day, Auguxt 30, O. S. 1832, in presence of the imperial fantily, notility, cituzens and straugers, including an isamunse multitude, in tha Jarge square in front of the hersinitage, or wister palace of the empernf. Thes shaf iv of red granite, the sawe sulnotance of which Hoanpey's ptlar is comsposed, and is represented to be larger than that celebrated shaf. The raising is thus described in the Howton Transcript, by a gentleman recently returned from Runsia:

The perleutal, which is spuare, is forty feet high; the whan is round, and in one piece; it is etshty five feet high and tweive feet diameiar at the top; it weighes Eix liundred tous. The colamn aupports a colossul lormnzestatue, repressenting an angel, holding a erose. The utatue, with its pedestal, inclading the eapital of the cobtimn, is thirty. five feet high, and the height of the monament frem the ground to the top of the statue is one lrusdred and sixty five feet. The stowe was broaght from Finland, (fronin the sanim quarry where the celebrated pultars of the Cnas. wand Church, pohswied like tuasthe, were procured), and trangported to st. Petersturgitis a stip buitt for the purpoee, towed by a steatiboat. The itselused plania on which the shan was rolled trons the river Neva to its present site, contaiued a forevt of wood, and cout in that country; where it fou cheap, a milition of rublew, or 1200,000 dollars. The colutan was raised and aafely placed on its pedestal, by means of sity capstans, manned by 2,500 veterans, who lad eerved with Alexander in his most giorious eampaigns. Each of thetm wore badges of fonor. The preparations for the suppandous undertaking were so complete that ant the sighteat accident occurred, and during the operation of raising the shan, nut a whisper or a word was heard throughout the vant multitude who witsiepsed it.

PERIODICAL PRESS OF FRANCE
From the New Hork simertican
We received from the Inst Havre parket from the "nowspsper correapoudence office" of Messrs. I. Hr essan and Kowrgoin at Paris, a large sheet, coutalaing the names and places of pablication of every newspaper and periodical puhliceatlon in Paris and the departnesutid-atid our surprise at their number, closety as we thought we had watched the epread of thesu veldiclez if intelligence in F'rauce, waw truly great. There are published is the departunents foro husdred and forty tirce papers-mome alaily, sone tri-w vekly, some semi-weekly, sonce weekly, and vonce monthly. Bourdeaux han fire daily newspagere and onue week1y. Contrast Liverpooi in Englani with this, wlich lise not a single daily paper. Lyons has four daily papery, fero tri-wedkly, and owe weekly. Rosen has four daily papmer, one weanj-wret ly ant one monthly. Huere has two dady, one weekly, and ona taontlily.

In Paris, thirfy-one daily papers are publidsed-of which twe are evening, taree midday, and the remainder nooraing publien-tions-deaving 183 periwdicals more, recurring at leas than two months interval, and soostly waekly of monthly to fll up the 3 mm of 217

Accurding to a circuiar dated the 15 th February, from the directors of the office of correxponitenee, whenca we received the stalement of the F'rench press, "imore than one hundred jourLuals or periodicals have been establishod within the pavt yrar, cliefly in provincial tuwns." With such activity anil impetus given to the public prean in France, what hope can there be of maintaining any doctines which Imply right or wuperiority in any one portion of mankind-whether kings, puests or noblev, tu ruie the rest?
We cineerfuily comply with the request of Measrs. Bresson and Aruargoln, to laseri the finlowing notice:
Meswris. Ilrewzon and Boirgoin, directurm of "the newopaper correypondence office," entablished in Paris three years ago, buve jnat published a new suatistical table prespating for the year i 833 , the authentic livt of all the papers and periodicals which are publisited In Yrance. Tlue utility of such a publication cannot be overrated.

PIRENCH CHISMER OP DEPUTIES.

From the Vew York , Anerican
On 11th March, tha report of the committee respecting $M$. Cahef, a suphty, wbo, in the interius of the session had been accuspit and convicted by defautt of having made a seditioun publication, and who now elalmed that this menteuce of ennviction should be anaulled-heiug under discussion, gen. J.afayetfe ouk becasioun to speak as follows, amidet profound sitence:
"sicveral of my colleagues, professioual men, having asked to be heard, I will uot go intt the discussion of the nutter before us. I will only say that what induces me specially to scond thu motion of M. Cubet, is, that he is ouf of the deputles warked out for the courts martial In the days foltowing the 6th June fast. Not that I consider it a positive aggravatian of that crime, of that viulation of the charter, that a depasy, tuore that any other citizen, was ti be made one of its victims; but perliaps this consideration may add soinething to the view of bie rase. Moreover, gentlemen, it would seem that we are treated with very finte cereanay. You perceive with what facility such of ouf ettleaguts an hold place are dismieved from office when they transrend the limitn of a silent vote. (Lauglter and mpprobation). I wight quste anotier exainple if it were not personal on mysulf and this furnosliow me the necasion of connglaining of what happrencd three days ago at my restdence of lak Grankw. (liear, forr). The complaint I make refers to the treatment recently rewarted in in the case of an illnariuua l'ote, M. Lelewel, I accuse no aniuloterial persounge; fior I belleve the measure was decided on in the klag's councii. If it were otherwlse, it would be of the minister of the interior that my complaint would be made. Genteinen, you will rencember that innfortinata deter-nination-unfortunate certainly in my view-which eaused the Fremeh government to descend to the level of other arbitrary gevernmeits, and of which the effeet bas been to place it on a footIng of couspansonship with despotic governinents, from which we hoped the revulution of July hat forever releaeed us. It would have been fine to be able to say to atbitrary governinente, "you can do such and such thingo; we hava event the right to demand that you whould, becausa you are despotes thut you caunot make any such demands of us, beeauwe the conmutution of nir cosntry would not perrait a compliance with them." (Fixpression of interest). Aceording to the Endish atien bill, tiecenfronting of the foreigner with three ministers is I believe requiaites ead when our late government called frankly for arbiurary powers, then too the signaiure of three ministera was required. Buch however, is not wur present lav regarding nheus. Well, gentiemen, the fureigners have reymired that we should send out of E'rance, or at least away fron! Paris, sonse Poles aceused of having signed an addrens to soanc ollier countries. Anong theun was one who was arither a political agent nor refugee, for be had been for many yeass in France, aud was even one of those who mont distiuganshed thetnselves in the days of tha barrieades in l'ans, (murunrs in the ccatre). But there was another Lecencel, who was a minister of the goverausut of which prince Czartonysic was president-a ruan who las a great Ilterary and seientufic reputntion in Poland, in Ruswia, in Germinny, and indeed In all Europe. It had been arranged, and I was thanknul to ninisters for it, that instead of going 60 leagues away frosn the capltal, he slinuld reamain at La Grange. The minister of the fatcriot thinks he bas coine to Pans. I assure him he is anistaken. However that be, M. Leleicel received ordera to retire to 'Tourn, I supposed that order bad not been yet sent, and upou that point rulter to tuy mon, how preetent, and one of our colleagues. But though he had received it, I must say M. Lelewel conmintted a great error in supposing that any influence remained to one of your collcagues, who declares that he is entitied to none, under the adusinwtratuin of a system which hu pronounces counter-revolutionary, nul tutu which lue bas entirely and opetuly withdrawn lamself. Ily tue turm "counterrevolutionary;' I mean counter revolutionary to the revolution of July, 1830. Thes, then in what passed-a detachtnent of gens d'armes, followed by asub prefect of the district, and the mayor of the commune, nppeared at La Grasge, to arrest M. Lelearel. They piaced tim in oue of uy carriages with a gen d'armes, and conveyct hin to Melus, anl tlience duubless to Tours. This is a suffeiently favage manner of proceediug towards so distinguishod a man as M. Lelswel. I advait that I could not help being warprised myself at such conduct, considering that for the tilteen years of the reatoratiun, duriug which, In this place and elsuwhere, 1 eviuced my open hostility to it, never, thongh then there inight liave been usore substantial grounds for it, liad I cause to comphain of such a atep; whether because there was yet nour recollection of ancieat relations, or that there was a real repugnames to a certain vuigatity of auch proceediugn-never has such a thing happened before to the dwelling of La Grange. According, bowever, to the system of concession which has been adopted, the time was, it seeans to me, weil cisosen, for it was a doulble tribute of condescension on the arrival in the capital of the Russian annbassador." (Very well, wery well.)
M. diotrgout, minister of the interior, after stating that he would propnae in a few days laws providiag fresti subsidies for the relief of politleal rufugees, and thus prove that the governmest did not neglect of abandon them, said-

As for M. Lelecel, I must say that the government, desiring that the Pohal refugces shouid be renunved from the enpital, the honorable genas), who appears to take some iutereat in $M$. Lelewel-

Gen, Lafayette. Great interest.
M. d'drgont. The honorable general anked that M. Lelenci should be permitted to reside at La Grange-but on tite condlthon that be would uot gh from thence. Nevertheiens, gentlemen, I know to a certainty that this man fias been several times in Paris. I will not say that I know it to a posilice certainty, bat to a moral certainty. (Laughter at the extremitics). $\mathcal{M}_{\text {. }}$ Lalentel hns, 1 repeat, several times luft La Grange.
M. Feo. Lafayette. Never. (Senwation.)
M. d'Argost. When a refugee thus abused the indulgence of the govrinment, they thought it right to send him farther nway. Cousequently I stated to the ltonorable general hiruself that the goverauent coald no longer tolerate the presence of M. l.elewal at La Crange. I know not by what mistake the rumed force suste itu way to La Grangr, for 1 remenober recommending to the prefect sut to have recourse to it.

Gentismen-there in nobhisy more homorable than the hopitality qranted to che Polish refugees-but it must he renuembered that thore are ameng then turbatent and restless fpirits, who Injure their own casse, an whil an the interfercnce in their be. half which the Frencis government has been always ready to wrge-(approlnation in the ceutre). We plould be wanting tu ene duty; gentromen, if we at this time sliould permit a Iaw, parsed by yourcefves, to be violatrd. (From the ccutre, very well-very well).

Gen. Lafaprlte, from his place. Since the minister dianvows the mode in which the prefect excrited his earder, 1 beg hime to write to "Ulat iuan"- to use the virabuingy whills she minimter more than once thought propor in empitiy-lur I shat aot think M. Lelecel a bexs illustrimat profun than the profect-and give luin a good drowing. (langhter and appurobationt).

TIE REPRESENTATIVRS CHAMBER.
A material slteration is now makisg in the hall of representatives. The foor is to be raised to a level with the logea, behind the speaker's ebair, and to deacend towards the present priseipral entrance; the speaker's ehair is to be placed near the main door, tins ehanging the position of the meaber, so as to front the galleries, the elevation of which will be reduced by adding to the height of the fivor; two doors are to be cut out of the wall surmunding the chamber, one on each side of the speaker's chair, and a new gallery is to be formed behind the columans of the ingen. The entrance into this gallery, which, we suppoee, will be IIght and airy, like that in the senate chamber, will be through the doors on the south side of the building. The liearIng, it is thought, will be greatly agristed by these changes; but the magnilicence of the room will, we apprelsend, be somewhat marred. By the arrangetment now in progrsess, the eapaeity of the hall wili be considerably Increased, and a much larger number of representatives can be accommodated. The room is in be heated by flues passing in various darections under the arched foor, from the furnaces in the first etory. We suspect, bowever, that the spenker will not like his location, as lue will be thrown ton much in the shade, and subjectied to great inenverenience from the want of aufieientlight. [ $W$. MR. CLAY ANH HIS COMPROMISE. From the Lymehburg Virginien.
some wecks ago, we pubtshed the proceediugs of a meeting held at New Glangow, thanking Mr. Clay for his succesalut efforts to adjuit the distracting quemtions which divided the country, and threatened to subvert our happy inatisutions. A comunttee having been appointed to forward these resoiutions to Mr. Clay, have diseliarged that duty; and we bave bwen furnished with the following correspondence:

New Gilasgour, Anhherit, Va. March 6, 1833.
$S_{\text {in-Heing aware }}$ that next in that soothing influeuce which the coasciousuess of having faithfully discharged our duty, the approbation of our fellow mes. biaga the mant gralif) ing consolation to our bosnan-a portion of the eitizens of thas conuty asseabled for the purpose of exprensing uncir afopmbation of your course, and of returning you their thank for yuur Inbors in eetling those questions which receutly seeused about to shake our inatitutions to the centre. And, in giving expreasion tu their Feeninga, they adopted the enciosed preamble and insolutions, and appotnted us a eomnaittee to transmit them to you. In the performance of this pleasiag dnty, pernit us to exprese our admiration of that patriotisin, wibicin could raise iteelf above the reproaches of friends, and the denunciations of themies, and takiag a general view of the relative interests of onf emnntry, could offer up long cherished opinions upon the altar of its country's good. The blindness of prejudice and the lavrieracy of party apirit may refuse to award to sueh patricultam that meed of praise which it may deserve-but wisen, in tive eourse of time, these shall have passed awny, posterity and the faithful chroticles of history will do juttice to its purity. With the mope that our eountry will long have the benefit of your talente, and that, ere Jong, you will be placed in a situation where they will have a more extensive operation, and with the hope that the sunshine of luapplucgs will ever ginw arround you, we are, oir, yours, very respectfully,

To hon. Henry Clay. WM. H. GARI.AND, TIIOS, R HROWN, WM. II. KNIGITT, ED. A. CABELOL.

Washingfon, 15th March, I823.
Erwtherex-I duly received your favnr in the 6 th inst. eommuncating resolutions which were atapted by a portion of the people of Anhervt, asnembled at New Glasgnow, in whieh they have been plrased to esprese their approbation of a measure, for the adjustment of tire tanif, whieh il lately submitted in the eenate of the United States. Whilat 1 fect thal your gratibeation, in comman with, I believe, a large majurity of the penple of the Uuited States, with the anicalle netllement of a threateniug questiun, and your partiality towards an luumble lusirument in the lands of Providruce, that had some ageney in bringing it about, lave induced you to empiny very strong and warn tanguage, I request your aceeptance, and that of tay tellow citizrnn whom yon represent, of my zrateful aeknowledgnients for the testimony which has been thus rendered. You rightly ktate, that nert to the conseion*ness of having faitbfully discharged our public duty, is the approbation of mur feliow men. And 1 mhall alwaya cherialh, with great satisfaction, that which you have been pleased in enmmmicate.

A erixix had arisen in our country which threatened the public safety and extensive interenta of our dousestic indusiry. I thought it possible to avert the inpending danger, from both, by a fair compromise. 'The bill to unodify the tariff is founded on the prisciple of mutual concession. It eonsulta the tuterests, feeling and opintosan of both pattien, withent affording to either Just calte of esultation over the uther. And I sincercly locope, that herwafer it may, by restoring a guod under*tandiug and friendly mentiments belween all parts of thim confederacy, lead to as adjuatment of the tariff, for a perinal beynond which it han bren partieularly provided for In the bill, that will be satisfactory to all.

I nffer you, gentlemen, cordial assurancea of my sinecre regard and cetcem, and of iny being your obeditnt servant, Meovr. W'm. It. Gurland, Thas. R. Broirn, W'm. H. Kwight and EX. .1. Cubell.

A meeting was alen, somue weeks aen, helf in Danville, at whith reeolutions warmly nןeproving of Mr. Clay'il compromise lull wrese adopted, and ordured to the tranemittred in him. The Iat Danvilie Erpoiter euntains the following correapondence on the sulyject:

Danville, Felruary osth, 1833.
To the hon. If. Cloy.
sis-At a large inpeting of the citizens of Danville, Pitsyl. vania counts, Virginin, in which men of every politieal party patielpatrd, the enclosed resolutimo wera adopted.

It was the pleasite of this inceting, to make me the organ of comanu niealing them to you.

I feel honored in having been made the fustrument of convey. ing to you, the sentuments of my tellow citizens npon this sub-jeet-and assure you, that it athinds one pleasure to discharge the duty inposed apon une, in thes particular.
Ife who has the magiathinity and patrotrem to sacrifice long ellurished poltical predilectiths, to preacrve the harmung, union and Integrity of these United sitates, shail ever have (a paliry offering, it is true) the humble tritute of my gratitude and admiration.
1 nim therefore, with considerations of lagh respert, your obedient vervabt,
W. I?. ChAPLAIN.

Tive foliowing reply was made by 31r. C'liny to a committee appointed by a recent neeetiog in banvillr, la. heid fur the purpose of "xiresping their sentuments in regand to the course upon the taritf questiou: the taritl' questhou:

Wenhinglon, 14/h Mareh, 1833.
81R-I duly received your finvor of the tith uit. transabitiong certain revoluticus adtupled by the cituzeus of Danvilip, Putaylvania couuty, Virginia, in whach they lave doue ine the honor to express their apioniation of my conduct, to respeet to a certain measure, brought forward lyy ue in the senate of the United States, to reconelie and tranquilize the country. Fuliy appreciating the generous motives whieh have jurompted thas expreasion of their feelings and nemtimenta, I receive it with lively and grateful schathlity. It appeared to me that the worst possible reiations were getting up hetwern the varitus parts of the eountry; that men in all sections of it were necuntoming thenselven to think and speak freely of a terrible event; that ultumate If nnt lumediate civil war was seriously to be appreliended; and there was great danger, if we escaped that ealansty, of the suddes overthrow of a system of policy wisich would have spread ruin far and near. It wan under these circumstances that I premented the ineasure to which yon tefer. Ilaviug been tianally adopted by large majorities of buth louses of esngrens, it wihcercly hope it may every where be received in the athicable spirit in which it was offered and paxsed. Or all the misfortunes that could befal our confederacy, there is nene equal to that of a separation of its partu; for in its train every other would fotlow. It is mometimes said that litherty is preferable to union, and so It is in the absutuct; but what posabibe guaranty is there for hberty without union? I pray that all our fellow citizens may be sensible of this undeniahle truth; and that, in social intereourse, and the public counesls, its influence may be forever fell.

Whit, my thanks for the ohiging manner in whieh you have communieated the resolutions of the people of Danville, and Whth amsuranees of high respect and exteets, I ain your obedient servant,

THE: DANGER OF' TEA DRINKING.

From the London New Monthly Magazine.
The South Carnhmans are famoun for their fervil cloquence: the tariff; cubbured with the heat of the climatr, is the rource of toin, made a ppeeh wheh was recrived with rapturnus applause. Anoong othr thongs he said, "he bad hioneelf inade an importation, Luving uade a shipment of nee to the Havana, and onlcred a retunin cargo of sugar. He would altew his importation to gu iuto the curtom huuse storew and wail evente. He wonld mut produre unnecernary evilisition; lut, if our hopen of a sath-factory auljustment of the question were disappointed he Anewe that his fellowe difisens wouth go eren to the death sith him for his sugar."-[ Ile was interruptrd by an unanimoun butrat of accord.) "(iu to the death for sugat:" In the beginuing of the revolution, the quarrel wutt England was about tea. The Bostonians writ even to the desth for tea! It is now a tax on sugar that is to produce a further pplit in tis great eontinent. It le enrious to thonk, that that great country sloould always be goug to logzerheado about a cip of tea. Tca must be a very conimastoble materiat. W'e have had some ill temper shown on the suljeet at lomue, and linve just it under a board of control. In the shape of clavery, th has k -pt this country, and its tea, in hot waterfor thirty years. Pope speaks of a fady who never took a dish of tea witiout a stratagen; and it seems she was in the night, for it appears a very langermist thug. Atnrrica lias finght and bled for it+ cup of tea first, and is now likely to do the same lor sugar to put juto it; while the ill blond that has been made liere, and the black blonil that has been spitt in the enlonies altoge lier prosis a cnp of tea to br a cup brinuning with suife and durusinn. Its effecte may be observel min uld maids: tea and scandul are always roupted tugether; but whell nations get to their cups the consequencrs are more srtious. The Bostonians threw come hundreds of cherts into the sca, and after baving made that enormous cup uf tea in the bay with salt water, peace was unknowll for many yrare. Now we shall have a arties of cembats amone terysticads of sugar, unese in lammatory than bartels of gunpowder.

MII,ITARY CELEIURATIUN IN BGUTII CAROLINA.  From the correspondence of the Portland Daily Adrertiser.  Charleston, otpril 1, 1833.

ft is A prit-fools day, and I have been to eee the nullifiers play the fool, and love bren exceedingly annesed, though the rain has heen pouring duwn in tofrents, and the mud and elush are over our whoes. The nullitirn bave bad, and are yct having a graud parade. The voluntects if charles ton have turned out, in foll uniform-and with all the show of war, war, horrid war. The truth is they are becoming crazier anul crazier. Thelr late suceess has made them fully mad-and for aught I sere, in a short tume, Unele Ean will have to bandeuff the med andlock up the buys.
This moming, aecording to order from brigadier gen. Hamilton, the vulunteers of Cilarlestot, nullifying volumierrs, who were tu lave fought like tigers it the event of war, and wiou are good looking fellow: enough, but whin prutahly fove gun powder no better than Yankces-asnemblded to the number of -about fire Aundred! I'lirre was the rupublican artillery, with brapa pipces-the calrt mitillery-Jeffemon artillery-(alas for Jellenson)-the Pinckney artiliry, the Scotch influtry, riffemen, and I know uot how many other erunjaniles of the sbo,von, whol were pryparmig ta fing the whole l'uitud states of America, all arrauged uy anh down Mecting street, with horeec, orduaree and servante, by 12, A M. Kion general Hainithon, emperor of the nation of South Carolima, the grent zod of war in this guarter-a Honapartean kind of tuan by the way, with black whi-kern, not tall, lout campact and stont bodied, rode up and down the ranke on a fine hay elarger. He liad on iwo epauletts, ycllow plunes, and blue coskade, and drove a horse as well an any Virgoitan horse racer. Ancol there canse along and the sountimg of $A$ fror and doums, and trumpets, and the waving of culors, and swords, his excellency, governor Hayne, followed by five aids, all in bufl kerseymrie breeches, well aworded, well epaulettid and well lioned. The line of mareh was soon formed, and thry, the miltary, in the middle of the etreet, and the lords of Carolina on horse, and wa the people, and they the slaves on foot, somm made our way to the cisadel, there to talk of Itberty and death and Carolina. Durimg all thts nothing happened except some of the horses attached to the heavy urdnance threw off the negroes from their backw into a doft mual hed, aud sume of the gallant cavaliers in uniform had hard work to loridle up their snortiog steeds, terrified as they wete by the mu*ic of the black band, and the glittering parade of great guns and little guns.

Arrived at the eitadel into which marelsell the military rauk and file-and there we the people, oversettiog and mullify in the state gaard by the way, whit in sais attenpted to keep un out. The citadel bad bost the awnugg wheh over-arched the area. The medallions were all these. The paluwtos wre ali there. Tibe intitation llags were alst there. The area betow was pretty well occupied with the military. Uniformst of all colors handeonely variegated that part of the bouse. The ladies bordered the zalleries, and we, the people, did as we eould, among the mulutuden th the partico. Soun governor Hayne eane torth from a balcony about 20 fect high, overshadowed by two tall palenettos. Ils five aids came forth with hun, one bearing in his baud a flag.
Governor Hiayne then aldressed the audience for ahout ff. teen mintites, or rather his "feliow soldiers" as lic termed them. He told thean that south Carolina bad eflected the late change to the tariff-that sbe had ptood atone, and never quailed, when the eouth had deserted luer-when a part of ber citizens had betrayed her, and when the whole union seemell to be preparing war against her. She had done her duty. Nhe had beaten off the myruadons of power. She had destroyed the Anserican Symem-had given it its death blow, and had achieved a glonious vietory over tyranay and oppresaton, ovar the men who had been taken frum liet her property to pay their taxes, and who would bave added murder to robbery, by sweeping lier cilles, desolating her thelds, aud destroying her ciuzens. Then taking the flag from the bands of the and, be shook open the foldon, and displayed the arinn of the ntate, and Carolina's palmetto-and larpe gold letters engraved upon it-"iliberty, it sust be preserved," (though a hundred black slavea were gaping abont)-and after unaking some fine resuarks on the value of the ght, as the higheat houor he could bestow, hauded it to a staging nome feet below hias, to brigader general Hamilton, as coramatider of the volunteers of South Carolitia. During Una speech, whirlh was defivered with gov. Hayne's usual eloquence, the volunterer. were eonstamuly hurrahing, clapping, vociferating and thumping Heir muskets on the flour.
General Hamition received the standard from the executive, wom the state had made ita organ, waid that he valned it flearly, bet valued it mote preseuted by such hands-and after cannouading the unlon, aud exhibltise chivalry, Carolina attachment to liberty, Carolliaa activity, and ealling his uhl frimnl gen. Jackson, whom he inale preadent, "an lufuriate despot," who would murder Carolina's sons and whose myrmidons were realy at bus commaud to make the streets of Cbarleston fun blowd-avesred, that Carolina had aot a gun, nor a magazinc uf gun powder, nor a prece of orduance nonunted when the tarif was nullified, yet in five weeks slie had four thousand men, enough to take the eapitol, and powder enough to blow it up!' Hurrah for Jackeon! Meo, eirls and boys clapped this sentimsent. Ilurrah for Carolina! Ilurrall for If amilton!

Geaeral Hamilton then handed over the flag to one rnsign Frowt, who received It and made a speceli which I could not bear.
When general Hamilton waved the fing, the volunteers elapped beyond all cateulathin. He and llayne were both received with great enthusinsth. They are commanders-in-churf of the bearti of the nullifiers, as well as of therr forces. I could not but note, that when general llamiltan averied he had mell enough to take, and powder enough to blow up the capitill, a new torrent of rain innusediately poured down on mat bare lueal, for his cap was off, at he adiressed the soldiere, but I did not see that it cooied the fire within, for not long after he said, "all the land our enemy could stand upon tu Carolina, was laud enough to make lis grave."

This afternoon we are to have a salute of a hundred guns near the batiery. The military with general Itamilton at chrir head, are returning trom the dimmer at the citadil, and if the rain has not suffieiently cooled thelr ecurrage, will finish off the day in as fiery mode as they have brgin. 'Troly the nullitere are odd men. I know not what to make of thent. They liave heads, ears and bodits like the rest of us-ant are no uon-tere in form, but they talk so bohlly and act sis madly, that I can't but think it would be a gond plan to induce the unlon mell th s) to Alabana and Missisaippi, and selte on government laudn, aud then make this "the Bedlam" of the uniun, a hohse for mad politiciane, and give gen. Ifanilton the command. 'Toungh I have been here but a forthight, I liave mevn no much of arme, and heard so much of war, that I sigh for a land of peares. Charleston is too much of a camp fot me.

CASF: OF TOHIAA WATKINS.
We lorrow the followine nent, anl, wo dontht. faithful abstract froun tie Ilaitimore Anserican of Werluenday lawt:
The National Intelligencer of yenterday eontaing the opinion of the I wited Ntatew circuit conrt for the cirenit, in the case of the 11. States es. Tobiar Watkins. It occupics nearly five of the apacious eoluinas of that paper, but the particular points of the decision are fuw and casily abstracted for the use of the gencral reader. 'T'be reanonngs and authoritices coted are for the lawyers alune.

Watkuns was sentenced, on the conviction in August, 1899, to three terms of imprisonnsent, of three montis eacht, makng nine montis in all, and to pay tines to the anauut of $\hat{f} 3,050$. The court did not oraler hmo lo stand comminted until the flies were pand, foaving the U'uted states to thu ervil process of writ and execisuon to recover the annunt. Writs of executuon azaiust at Hee May terin. 'J'tie Writs wers never rutarned, and the de fendant remaneal in frison. Nothing appeared on the records uotil Jantury 10 d , ult. when the papers were filed by the late marshal, endocaed "Cepi, delivered over to any succensor in officu."

On the 14th of January Inat, the defendant sned ont a writ of habeus corpus in the supreine court of the United slates, as Ineretofore pubhshed. 'I'se eourt granted the rule, and bo ingtmeut made it absolute, and grantod the writ. 'The defendant was aceordingly mivebarged, but was inmedialely arrested ipon mew write (ot en. wa.), without purpartiug to be aliss (write pencting tie lasung af the former writa nisuccesmfully), and without laving revised the judguent by scire facias, alluuggh veveral y nars liave elapsed.

Cpun the retura of these new write, the nantion was thade to connmil, whieh was reaisted by the eounsel for Watkme, upou tse fillotying wehucal grouudu.

1st. That the defendant could not lawfully be arrested and heid in eastady upan these writs, after havisg theen taken and diseliarged upun the luruner writs.
$2 d 1 y$. 'Puat thene writs uught toot to have been lsaued without provbons scire facias, inure than a year and a day liaviag elapsed between the isaulize of thent and of the nert preceding writs.
Jdly. 'That the hues wore execarive, and amount to a sensumee of perpetual imprisuninent.
The court decided in fisvor of the defendant on the firat point which inade the discussion of the other two numeceesary.
'I'lie opanion af the cnurt placed tie discharge of the defeniant upon the teateral principle that no man shtuid be arrestest twice for the same cause. Wiskins having lieen arrested on a ca. st. and disclarged upon the return of the habeas corpus was legally out of arreat; the only exception to the general rule belug a case of escape, in which, by legal eonstruction, the prisoner is still under lawful arrent. T'le United states uight have had the full benefit oif their judgrnent and execution if the varahal had duly returned the first writ of ca. sa. and the counsel had appeared for the Jnited states, and moved the commitisent. But haviog neglected their rights on that occawing, they are estopped from pleading the negligence of their agents, ant the reention uf the prisoner beyoud the returu day of that writ was illegal.

An objection was inade In bohulf of the United &tatew that this rale applecs to cfeil cascs, and that the present berng a criminnl case waw not within the rule.
The eourt ruled, that the process which the United States aued out to recaver the fue, in founded upon the law and practice of Maryland adopted in the district. 'I'hat Inw, in granting such writs fur the recnvery of Aues, requires that 'sacheh proceeding slould be thad therean, an in cases when pinular writs are issuad na Jndginents obtamed in permanal suits." The Vulted states, therefire, furneted cinilly in the wenvery of thes, by the express granta. The suproine conrt discided on the applieatiou for the habeat corpus that the United States are bound, by the Maryland praetace, to proceed ciriliter.
For Hatse techascal reasous the unation to commit was overruled, the writs ordercd to le quashed, and the defendant Watkins diacharged.

In thia abstract we lave, as the reader will ohaerve, noticed nnly the leadusp puintin, not preciscly in lise order of the opimion, int briefly eondintated for the sake of perfucuty. The court were unanimutes in the opinisg.

COMM HMIRE JUEKER.
For the following luteresting akutehof this veteran, lately de-

Iheil-In Bremen, Mo. Iomb. Ravitat Tocker, Ito was born Int Noveraher, 174; 6. A. at Marhlebwad. At the age of 11, he was placed lyy his father, a rrapuetablis whip mastref, ofl board ol the liayal liporge, it British frizate. At IT, he porformed the of the moats buruic acta of liss lite, in rescuing a schopser and erew from $n$ tsalume and Atgrione froste. It resening this vexall n day ${ }^{\prime}$ anil from livlonn, he was enmpelled to lioree the cuwardly mater (who was intivicated at the time) below; and as 'Tueker's lrother wae mate, the eommand devolved us lim; but lie fenring to take tho helm. our young liern seizod it lithpelf, Infforl up nullor the low of the windsard frignte, being beIwsen the two, and laving previmuly arrangell adlinimal sail, and donsed the sienal lanthorn at the yarl artu, be wat for soune tune exprifed to a shower of srape within alianst pixiol shot. llut by a series of taeking aud retacking, the enol enurage anil nuperior seanaanship of 'rucker, hrought boih erew and ves,nel wafely withon the liarbor of Lisbon the nevt day. No snoner was he ancluncd, than lie went below, and wilt an mpalozy for the eouren how was couspellfil to pursup, gate up the vossel in luer lawfin cominanler. Init this cowardly and ungrateful inan, placed hiu nuder a falie prelence, oul board of a British frigate then in pori. The captain of the frigate was sot slow in learning the true paiticulars of the cave, and the result wan, that the eutomander ot' tive tigate took the firm apportunty to reward Tuckef's niefit by promotion, and from this be attained the rank of one of the usust accompliahed sbip manters in this cauntry.

In the Dritish scrvice lie studied the naval tacties of the day with great success, and his knowledge of their systen gave hun great alvantuge over them afterward. Just before the revolutionary wat, lie satled as master of the slip thenix, from Boston for Loudoa, and not long after his arrival, learned the conumbiceument of hosulities, and the news of the Hunker-latit fight. Sonselline before his departure froin Londun, as he wan unit day cunverying with an American eaptain, (Fotger) he wave a number of louses of armos, &sc. dirccted "Boston," and as the otheer inspecting their shipuaent passed, Tucker observed in the licaring, that "Lic would go 100 miles batefont if thase anass could so far mistake their direction as to arrive at Cambridge Instead uf Boston." Not many daya after this, be was offered the connmaud of a Hritinh armend veisel, or a coumuinsion under Gage, which lie indignantly refused.
L.ate in September, 1775 , he took paseage in a sbip belonging to the celebrated Hobert Morrin; and to lats great preaence of mind and superior seananslup, (which saved both ship and lives in a tremendous gala home), was Tucker indelned for that introduction to Mr. Morris, which secured to lum ever efter, the active patronage of that distuggished statwstan. He reported bimstilf to the canip of Whahington, at Cambriage, and tiere received a commision as fietutenaut under las friead col. Glover, even before lie visited his own family. While at Cambridge he had vecasion to ohserve a singular coincidence. T'Je very boxee of arins, kce, that the saw in London, marked "Boaton," had been captured by captaun Manley off eape Ana, and were then uctually before his ejes.

Ile load been at lonse but a fow weeke, awaiting the orders of his commandnf, when, as he was matusurg himself by catshing soine small fish though holes ln the ice, not far from his owtis bouse, an olficer in full dreas rode up in great haste, and isquired of hini" "if he knew where the bon. Samael Tucker lived"? Tise hou. Batumel Thelker, (nuttered he, with unthempharie on the word luonorable), it mint be one of the famuly ia Salem. The offiecr replied, that could not be, was be heard col. Glover direct gen. Washington to that part of Marblelsead near where thoy now were. "My name is sam Tucker," was the reply, "and I an the only Nam 'rucker hereabout; so, sir, I think there unst be some mistake in the name." Tiye efficer began to sunpect that he had found his man, which Tucker as resolutelv depied; and after a most ansusiug dialogue, on personal identity, Turker sued for a truce, by inviting the officer into his bonse, aud afier a glaws or two of old parliculsr and a cold shece, tive otficer, whosu orders wnuld not admit of delay, leat the package and took Frunch lesave, knowimg from mome circainstance concealed from 'Tucker, that he liad found the rightfal ownor. In willing to break the sual of so lupertant a parkage, Tucker in the evening invited his frienda col. Orue and Mr. Gury to nncet him, to wion lie comnmunicated all the circuna stances. Col. Orae without luesitation opened the package, anul found 'Tucker's first commasmion in the navy signed by Geco. Waalungton, wuh lis jurivate seal attached, with two blank comuissions for his licutenauts! In 1777 , to negoliate a treaty of allinure with liat nation, caph. Tuckef was empuloyed to courey the anobasador in the public shog which los commended. The captain had positive ordere io make no delay for the purpose of taking any pnzes from the enemy, and run mo risk by any conflict on the passage that be could avoid, but to convey his passenger with as much expedition aud saffity as possible. Brithst vessels were frequently seea on the passage, which would make ine prizes, and were suffered to pass untmolested. The officers began to importune the captain to inprove bts advantages; but he cuntd not distibey bis orders. At leugth a fine Finglish ship appeared at a distance In good weather, and the officers dexired the captain to ga below, and they would take charge of the ship. Having got the command they hove down tor their expected prize. The enemy's vessel made no attempt to escape, but as the Americuns appruached, suddenly opented her port holes and prepared for cetion. It was an armed ship, and of equal size with the Amenean. An otheer went below and inforated the eaptain they had got into difficulty and must have his afsistance. Tucker came on deck, saw their sitnatimn, and gave orders to prepare for sctuon. He then went to the cabin and told Mr. Adaine that they were under the neceswity uf an encounter, nud that he must keep where he was. The cnvoy chose to go in deck. Tueker thld him an, he mast not expose bitnself to danger. He Lhen ran to the deck and speedily propared for actoon As the shaps drew wear each other, the enemy fired a broadsile which uok od one of Tweker's upper spare, and it fell suldealy mpon the desk. 'The captain look oll at the spar, and very urar where it fell, ntond Mr. Adame; he had found a gun nud with hisknife was fixing the fint. The encmy, seeing they had not disabled tive Anerican, hauled down their colors, before captain Tucker had fired a shot. He iomediately hailed them and directed an officar to conie on boaril. The officer came, and looking mund, says, "If we had known yot had been no stranger we would not have subusillud so." "Very well," says Tueker, "we take no advantaze, go back and we will try it out." "if I have such uen in deal with," said the otticer, "I will let it go as it is." Captain TJucker twok postession of lits valuable prize, and arrived safely in France.

FINANCES OF PENNSII,VANIA.

Report of the committea of ways and nueans to whom war referred vo much of the governur'y message an relatea to the subject of finance. Mr. Read, chairman. Read in the house of representatives, March 22, 1833.
The committee of ways and meana, to whom was referred on much of the executive message ins relates to the subject of fluance, report:

That they bave had the ruloject under ennsideration, and have not failed us perceive, that under existing circumstances, it is a eabjeet of ail absorthing intereat to the commiunity. The committee bas also nouced, that in refererce to this aulject, mweis mipapprchension and error is pervading the minds of many citizens of the commonwealih; that being a subject too abstruse and eomuplicated, to be fully inveatigated in the tums that can be epared from the ordinary avocations of tife, by the grcat magority of the pcople, the timid prlitician and the curwory whserver have taken such an indistinet view of its outlines, as in alartu thetaselves and their neightors; white the interested and deagning polntician has seized ugon it as a politienl lever, in move the masiona and raive agencral panic. The sulject of Gaances nut having leeen generatly underutond, and often hav. inz been whfully inisrepaescuted, some deppondency has been firl, and satne Gears liave been and perhaps are entertained, of inte insolveney, or at lpast of impaired credit and perplexing emhariassasenti.
The execurtive department informs us, that the treasury at the present time, "exhilits a state of prosperity highly propl tious to the credit of the commonweath," and "disprnses with the necessity, at present, of frrming plans for the future increase of the stata revenues." And yusp conmittee cannot but congratidate the bonse, upon the unexampled propperity of out fimascial dondition, as demontrated by the flact, that the requisite loans are obtained, at a higher juremium than has ever been received by thu simitar operations of any otate or country; and upon the inmearurable benefits, which are reasonably and copfidently antieipated ta result th the commonity, from tise expenditure of large pums of moncy in public inprovement. To conoriteract the deleterieus effects of misapprehension, mipripresentation and mercer; npma $n$ *uhjert, though uot gens rally understond, yet univemalty and personally interesting to every citizuln of the state-to show that there is no foundation in fact, for apprehension and despoudency, and to correct the errors aibat in reference to this suliject-in corroborate the sentiments exprepsed by the fiecal departinent-in compars the resnuress uf the combinn wealth with the liahintics incurned, and thereby exhibit the solid foundaun on which the pubitic credit is based
-and to Justify the congratulations tandered, by demonatrating the truth of the position, that the national wealth of Peansylva uin has dot been diminishest, but on the contrary, has been inerpased and permanently secured, (provided the original design be consummated) by the expenditure, or tather, by the investment of large sums of money; have been embraced in the purposes of your committee, on the present occasion. In what degree these purposes and intentions have been realized, is most respectfutly submitied to the house, and to the country.

As the ordinary revennes of the stite, independent of the additional snpplies pruvided by the act of 1830 , are more than sufticient to meet the ordinary expenses of the government, it is not deemed neceswary by the enmmittee to comsider the subject of finance, in any other point of view than, lst, with reference to those mensures which have induced a resurt to a system nf loans, fur the purpose uf maintaining the character and diguty of the state in its wational capacity, and of inereasing The weaith and promoting the prasperity and happinesk if its ctizens in their individual capaestics. And, secondy, in reforcnee to thome measures renulcred necessary to secure the payment of the interest on those leans.
Much difticulty lias necurred in the seience of politicat eeononly for the want of teclinical terme, and undisputed definitimens. The term wealth, for inatance, has been applied to states of nations, and has been understnod by the great mass of mankind in the rame sense in which it is used when applied to an individuni, when no two thines ean he innre distinct than the wealih of a nation and the wealth of an indivilual. He therefore who tatks about national wealth withnut thaking the proper distinction, will jnot as certainly come to an erroneons conclusion as lie who leaves ont one term in a mathematieal entculation. It has beeu perhaps unfortunate that the term wealth wan ever applied ton nation, or that some other term had not been invented and appropiated to the idea, which we attach to tire terin individual weatith. But as we have only one word for two distinct ideas, it becomes neceswary to the correct inderMlandiug of a subject requiriug its use, to give clear and distinet definitions of its meaning, when usbd for ditferent puiposes. Indiridual trealh in such an accummatation of property as will endble a man to procure the necessories and comforts of life without his own labor, mentat or manual. Every mall thne witnated ie termed wealthy, while nn man, who is ebliged to eultivate hie farm, superiatend mercantite op-rations, or exerclse his trade or profession, whatever may be his nhility to acquire property, pan be so demominated. Indivintual wealth may conrtist of lands, miney, or milier property; but in order to constitute wealith it must be convertible inth the necessaries and comforts of life at the pleasure of the prossessor.
If a man hax mullions nf acres of land, which he ran neitlie sell nor rent; or if he is master of the minrz of Mexico, and enn neitier loan this money hor cxichange it fon the necesmation and comfints of life, lie in absolutely destitute of wealth. Sn be may, by oncans of a profession of otherwise, possess the alitity to acquire tinse necessaries and comints in the greatest profinsimn, ght if hix ineome does tut accumulate so as to rnable him to receive thrm, by the nse, wale or exchange of propetty, the it equaily dentitute of wealth. Thus we luave a curreet definition and perception of the term, ne applied to an individual. In this wense of the term, a nation (considered as it should be, a unity with a unity of rights, possereions and interesta), cannot pos sess wealth. No nation evar has arcumulated, of ever can mecminulate so mach property, as would furnish it with the necessarivs and comforts of life, for a month, or a week, withnut in dustry. A nation cannot shftain existence, ns euch, withou labor; it eanuot rent or scll its territury withont committing politieal suicute; and if it had mountains of goid and silver, the phipping of the world constantly employed, could not lupport the necesearien and eomforts of life required, not would the surplus productionn of all otiver hations conatitnte the necessary supplies. It is evident, therefore, that a nation must onstain itseif by ite labor, its active industry, or it mont cenate to be. If cannot, for the plortest periot of time, rely ujen arcommlated trasure; it cannot possees wealth, as thaf term in applied io an itdividual. What then la national wealth? It ta a crpucity to aequire, by its ourn exertions, the neresacrien and comforls of tife. It is rather a faculty, than a poipserfion. It doces mit depend on the greatet or smatier smonint of the precimus mrtats, (the representatives of necessariez), that miny to drposited in a publie treasury, not does it depenil on the accumulation of surplote productuns, as that surplus ent never bent ant comparishm with the wants of a nation or state. It may be afferter in some degree by Fatubrity of elimate and frrility inf roil, but it cannot chirfly depend on these; wr eise why du we see IInlland, (orighnilly a eold and unproductive narath), overffowimg with nationof weaith and prosperits, while spain, with tibe finext chanate and most luxuriant poil, is phor and wrak, and wrescloed in a thatimal paint if view? Wily do we arce New Hanophite with ifs long wintera, its raged eimate and ite sterile aranith ont-and the Carolinas are groaning under the presesiore of national poverty and tireatened banknoptry, notw blastanding their advantages of clunate and productiventese of toil? fi is the dition ence in national industry, it is labor, the empisyment of the lonne, the sinews, the fecultien of man that has prodiced this diffarence nf condition. What has mintriptled the popnlation, enhanecul the value of land, inereneed tive agricultural producthons, donbled the nereswarics and conforts of life, and trebled national weaitit and resources in the states of New York and

Nintinnal iulustry may be more materially affectenl hy measures of governmont, and before we deternine what effeet any mensure may have, in resperet in national wealth, we cobst institute the inquiry, whint will be its influence on natoonal iadus. try? The atme measure may prominte both individual and na tional wealth, but not neressarily. The encouragement of int teries, of the mantufincture and divtrilution of ardent ppitits, or of a slive tmde, may, usually does produce grvat fulivilual wealth: while the eonsa-quetites to natimual prosperity nor- deletirious th the estreme. 'This resnits from the parnlysiue utiluence of these and stmilar parsuits nit lomeat indmatry, the eutivatimn of the earth, and the developmanat of ite extomosiless treasires. The sentence bas been promumecd, that "man shall eat hix bread in the sweat of tua how, "nad if nome lasivitoals have racnped the penalty, no nation can aeoid the seatence. The earth is the only Inuntain, babor, mental ur manual, the nuly cause of nationnl wealth; it does not deprend on liseal attuation, luxuriance of sabl, the presession of capitat, or surplus produc tions, a* lias bren sliewis.
It follaws then as n sequence, that whatever measuren promote the industry, necesmarily increase the natinnal wealth of Penneylvanin. If slie expende $n$ unitrou nf donlars in pulder im provementa, on onherwise, and therihy increases industry th the amount of a millom and a holf, she is the gainer by half a mullinn, onotwithstanding the remsival of the spere from love vailta That netive industry line liren promoted and incrensed in thix state, by an amount wheh is represented by many millions of dollare, by the constrnetion of uir pablie warks, tuit one will pretend to dreny, as it must be ndinitivil, that while the finbor whs heing performed on thore wurks, the erration of' in home warket preceptibly auzumented the quention of mereluameal anal ngriewltural matuatry in the cammanwratith. Nothing can be efrgrer, titan that itulepradently of the tabor of ematruction, and the Incaleulalile amount of active industry ereated in the devitupurnt and distriturtion of our minernl irensures, agrieuttural and merhanical lahor has been imerwased, an amonnt rutieient to produce the necpssaries of life, for on many laborers as linve been actoally rmployed in those works and in the coal trade. In promote the internsts of the principal, from whom it derives its existetrec. it thight as well be coutended that an individual can in no pase promote his own interests, by a transaction meepesarily incurring $n$ debt, as that the agent of the people cannot, under any ctrcumstances, advince the general uterest of sncicty, by measures reatiting in a state debt. It is of no importance what amount of hathity is incurred, by the corporate arlifictal agent, provided it promotes the prosperity and tapptness of the peopile. Any debt contracted by a state, within the compasan of tta resources, and the proreeds judiciously expended in betteriag the coultion of the people, by crentung domesHe, nnd opening conumumicatinns with foretgn markets, and in attmulating national iudustry, ia a nationnt blessing; or more correctly speaking, the concomitants of the debt are national blesainge. Sweli in the opinion of the committee, ts the state debs of I'enusylvnnia.
Nome lave been alarmed at the idea of "bequeathing to poneterity an muerons public debt." This idea, as it to combnonily received, is a mere climera of the tuagination. The thang is inticrly, natually mponsalble. The credit msde, as well as the dollt rife of the account, must ilperend to n nubsequent generation. The rifivet ot a nitional delit may tue, to require one porthom of ponterity to pay nsum of money, or the intetest of it, to another portion of posterity; If the money is to be paid by our denernilante, an equal sum is to be received by them. If the money be by an expendrd, in permanent improvenvents, those of bur ilowerndiants whos misy be required to pay will have recelved a valuable constderation, and will therefore be indebted; aud those wha receise will be of the aame generation, and will linve interrited the boon from the smase age which tranamitted the lialiitity to pay. Where, then is the injustice complatined ir? Thure to not the olightuat. To require future generations to pay for as, to our use, is an imposwhility. A mation bs a unity, nul the lialility of one integral part to pay to amotber, eanum, in tive sligliest degrese, affert the wealth of thnt anily.

Vour commitien are nnsions lurther to remove the prejs licrs that nasy, ant undoubtedly do exist on the subjeet, by con*Herng it in a stricity pecuniary potut of view, and by presenting the putsic expeniliturvs merely as an investment, isnlated (rmin nil the benefits anticupated in reference to the character of the state, the elfert on natomal industry, the enhanced value of renl and persumal proporty, and inerwane of individual wealth. In toing *o, however, your comnuttee will take uf for granted that the arginal design if the fatbers of our improvememt mystem is to lue rarrited intorffrel; that the waters of the Jellaware and lake Firie are to be united. "The "first impurtus," it has been sadd, was eiven to the "rplendid prujpet" by the canal convention of 1825. Hut what gave the firat impetus to the opint of infuruvement in Prennifivania? What ronsed the penple on the atilject? What induccil their primary movemente-the election offletegatm to asemble in eonvention? The notorious fact patpatily wible to the most superficial observer, that while public inguoveruents wrie projeried and being exceated in New Jurk, thuo, Maryland, N. Jermey, and many other ptates, it would he utteriy Imposable fur Pennsylvania, (posessing mas othe dul, wealth and resoureca beynnd any atate in the union), to inaintnin her high characser and "noble bearing," in the sisterhonit of the ntates, if she Ionger neglected to jom in the mareh of improvement. Penetrated with theze viewr, and instrueted by the people, with ecarefly a stissenting voice, the delegatesthit $#$ agra of the commouwealith-assembled in convention at Ilarri-burg. In that convcution, comprising, as is universally ackuowledged, the enileeted wisdom of the commonweath, wan concoritd the apirit of improvement which thad agitated and anoved the perpple-wan digexted ind arranged, a system of improvenient bighly interepting to the atate, and without whieh, wise muth have gralually sunk Into, obscurity and contempts inust have become, emmparatively speaking, a drrary and a dresiate waste, in the midat of rich, flouriming and happy repuldies. It was ninre a matter of necessity, than choice, that urged Pennsyivania into these measures. The convention of le25 naw, with a proploctic vikion, the proud monuments of nation's giory-the splendid improvements-springing into be along our boriers, th the north and the nouth, in the east the west, the direct teadency of which mitat be, to paralyme our mational industry, to eramp our cnergies, to mituee the value ar our lands, in provent the sctitement of our forests, to entice away our citizens, and in a measure, to depopulate our country; unless these Injurinns, these appaliog results enuld be cotanteracted by enrreapanding improvements in the physical coninteracted by eorreopronding improvements in the physieal and political conditinn of Penisyivaaia. It was nit a spirit of envy, lut of honornble and Eloning competition, nad a neeessity of splf-presarvation, that aetrated the eonvention in to axamination of the premonitory symptome of disease and decav in the bady politic, and induced the seareth, the discovery and the recomimendation of the unly antidote that eould restore un to political hentilt and vizor. That antidote to prematare treay and national dotare, was nothing short of the construetion of an entive, uninterrupled urnter commomication between the river Delaware and take Erie, "by the best and most feasible rmite."
That anch was, in truth and in fact, the object designed by the original ponjectors and friends of the intprial improvement system of Pennaylvania, y nur committee need not stop to demonstrate; nther, than by a reference to the panceedinga of the convemtion, to the reaponsey of the people, in numerous acts of asapmbly on your tatnte book $=$, and to all the reenrds and documentary evidence on the snbject, in the legislative arehives, and Pensey/vania library. This poliey has been npprnved and mustained by minecessive Iegslathres, comins fresh from the austained by mecessive leasplathres, coming fresh from the people, dowu to the present time-tenporarty suspended, it is admittid, by sectuonal fertimgs and local prrjudices, but in the anhoitcol, hy sectional fertings and lucal prrjudices, but in the guain alty ted, when we rethect and are sattstied, that the thouve and the necessity which now nrge as on to the final eounpletsos of the works origimally designed, are stronger, and more omperauve than those which first awakened onr slumberine enurgica, and warned bs of the dangvrous ennsequences of contunued inaction. Whes we reflect on the amount of treasure alieady expended, which must be accountrd as measurably Iost, if the tmprovementa are to terminate with the present contracts, and the system to he absudoned; when it is recollected that such abandonment would perjetuetc an onerous nystem of taxation on our eitizens, withont the hope of relief or mutigation; whell we anticipate the deeper mosilfication we whould feel at the taunts anil shrerse of our weigliburs, afier having abandoned one boasted sistem of rival miprovenients than we mould have experieneed if we had uevir heen roused frmo our lethargy. When it is remembered, that a few of the petbie sptrited eituzens of Philaildiplia, liave within the law few years, cxpended more than rightit intilimns in pubtic works and Uuat the great state of fronnylvania possessing, as she does, tennhle property to the value of more than thiree hundrid trailions, eannut shmik from an expendture treble the amonat of that of one of her towns; that our improvemetits, when finighed, are to exienil to the rimotert cornera of the pominonwealth, and to milock the agricuitural and mineral treasures of every portion of our territory; that the ennpumption and demand for mineral cosl outrun the supply, and will continue to do so for half a century to come; that Pennsyivania munt furnimh that imtuppensalte artiple of life to nearly all the states in the confederacy, and to the Briti-lt domintions on the north; that the coal beds of Pennayivania, without the meana of sending them to market, are valueless front their inexhanstible abiondaner; bitt if unlieked, by a wise and fraflime policy, those thack maserg are convertible into gold and silver, and what is otill better, the necessluiteg and comforts of life, beroming in faet, bettomless reservotrs of indivulual wrahh, and never failing fountanns of national rewources. Then have all thr exertioss of our patiots disappeared the the morning dew, and atl the xplendid prospects of I'ennuylvania vantiloed, "Wké the baseless fabric of a vintun." In that event, this report with The fround deetdraly mmoneou In many of its bearinge. It hat viewed in a different aspect. Nutwithetanding the oppomition raised by the terrora of the wrak, the apprehenstems of the timud, and the maclanations of the factions, your cominittee eanuot alopn the opunion, that Pronnsylvania, herriofore foreminst in the march of improtempat, will hesitate, fatter, and finally reuograde, in a contres of prlicy exsential to the prospefity, the claracter, and the bert interest of the commonwealth, and etronsty enrrafted on the affections of the people.
In extiuating the debte duse the entmmonwealth for lande, it is diffieutt to find any eertain dnta on which to found a cnlevtation, and we have been obluged to adopt what is believed to be a medum of all the formor pextimates. The revenues derivable frum that souree are rapidly diznininhing, and it is feared, witt shontly dowappear, if indulgence be much louger extended to the holders of unpatented lands. And it wonld seem partial and unjust, furluer to extend indulgenee to itev wrathy sections of the state, where the lands have been enjoyed from forty to eughty years willont the paynurnt of the purchasp money, the lands in the mean time losimg greatly advauced in salme. (V) liee by subsequent lawn, the citizenx of the newer and poorer eomn ties bave been requined to pay in alvance fur their landa-expecially as the cilizens of the urtv connlies are now taxed to supply that defirieney in the treasury, eaused hy withioldine the purclase money of the lands in the old and rieh counties.
The estimated valne of the public improvements, in tabular Hatempnt A, may startle int first view, but the committee in dulge the bopno, that when the tabining athtementa $\boldsymbol{I}_{\text {and }} \mathrm{C}$ are examined, atid the primetples upoin which they have hees formed are sulficeted to the most rigid tert, the estumate witl appear to be a safe one, resulting from fair comparison and ariuthetical defluction.
The completion of the state improvemente, would, it ta believed, give such an additionill impertha to nationial indautry and active butiusae as to render your turngike ptocks, after that event, an avaitable nource of revenne, and lierease rather than diminsth the receipts from the mads. Such undoubtedly has been the effeet of the eongwtirtion of the Erie canal, parallet and near to the grent lrading turnpikes of the state of New York. Penasylvania possesar- shumilatice of mineral weath thinse crude and pouderous sithotancos the beat calculated to furnish employment for ramis, while the state of New York pos sessen comparalively few, and the commilter, for the parpose of Fatisfying the Inereduloss, and snhmittinc a wnfe estimate, have dieenriled this advantage, ingritier ovith the slitference in extent of our canals over thone of Niw York, as alen tise discouraging effrets of the unnaual ice flowe uf the hast seasen, and have instituterd a compariann in the tabular statemente R and C, founded on the actinal operations and tolls, of the improvements of the respective statex,
It will he perceived, in those stntements that the estimated olls the first year after the coupletion of the Pennsylvana canals, are ge05, 73200 which sum is found by the following mathematical process. The nagregate ainount of tolls actually tuceived on the Nuw York canals for the three thret gears in which tolls were charged and while those canala were in an unfinished state, whs 893,096 II. The aggregate amount of colls actually recenved on the Penneyivania canila for the three ilrat ycara in which tolls were charged, and while those canals were in an untinished state, was $81: 20,50330$. The nmount of solls actually received on the Nuw York canals, the first year after they were fintined was 8750,759 , thas we have three given terins to And a proportional frurth terin, by a fumiliar arithmetical procese. As the atgregate reccipte of the three first years are to the amoant in the lirst year after the New York canala were finisised, wo are the astregate receipts of the first three years on the Pennsyivania canals to the anoount that will be received the first year after those canals shall have been thished; which is the aforcsald sum of geat $5,73 t$; whieh num is made the drst terin in the statpruents $B$ and $C_{\text {; }}$ then adopting the average annual increase of the New York canale, and the elgith year's operathons afer the completion of the Pennsylvania cabals will proof thirty inilions. The saine legitimate eomparison with the seluylitil navigation, a coal region improvement, as exlubited in statement C , producesa result almost incredible, and yet we lave not been ablie to detect any error in the primesples which have led to the fattoring conclusion.

By a reference to statment I , it will be perceived that the entimatell balance in the treasury on the 3lat day of Cetober, all the toans of the present ressjum shall have been ealled in brifore that day. Nhould this not be the case, the halance will be less hy the differeuce betwean the interest and the premium on that portion of the loane not extlesl in. And should forther indulgence he extended to the loolder: of unpatented lands, an proposed by a bill noww penoling firt that purpose, it in frared that the condition of the treasury will be injuriously affected by the meanure.

It only remains, to explain the reanons of the delay till the present tune, of this report. It has heretofore been destrable to have an early report from the committee of ways and means, that the legisiature inight act with a full knowledge of the state of the finances. But since the passnge of the act of the 16ah March, 1823, "requiring the state treasurer to make an anhual report on the subject of finance," the reasons for an early foport, from the commitice, have ceased to operate. In purabance of that act, the state treasurer made a full report, on the 6 th day of December last, giving an account of the fiacal operationa of the government, more in detail, that could have been done by the cominittee, at the commencement of the session. That report, however, did not anticipate the new liabilitied, that inight be incurred, during the present aession. A report from the commitiee, not embracing the important actis of tive legislathre, subsequent to the treasurer's report, would beve been an idie ceremony, as it would not have farmished any asditional light on the subject. Since the pasange of the act of March last, it ls expedient to delay the report of the eommittee ull near the elose of the session, in order that the large appropriations of the current session may be taken into consideration. The committec have crabraced in this report the liahtlifies incurred by the leglislation of this session down to the 12th of March, instant, together with one important bill, which has not yet passed, to wit, bill No. 297, as it passed the housse of representatives, suthorising the loan and appropriation of © 830,000 . The probahility is mo strong of its pasxage in some shape not materially varying from the said sum, that it wat thought advisable to include it th the extimateq.

0\%-We have been, and quite unexpectedly, led into the mating of a long article on nullification, in its prineiple and practioe, and particular application. On first taking up the article from the "Telegraph," we designed to diamise it with a few bricf observations; but our pen got "a running," and it did not seem easy to stop it. So we "let it go a-head"-thinking that, perhaps the present was as good a time as any other to say certain things which we hed intencled to any, at a future periocl, and or another cocaaion. The general direction of the argument, however, does not appear to have much practical utility, at present, and will not be pursued. We shall not now go into a regular diseussion of the points stated, or made, mach as we desired it with the senior editor of the "Richmond Enquirer" some few months ago, under special considerations and peeuliar circumstances-from which Mr. Nitchie "backed out," and, as we thought, rather unhandsonvely. Hut that was his own affair. The time may come, and the existing condition of circumstanees be so ehanged-that we shall be willing to take up that gauntlet whieh Mr. Gireen offered-after Mr. fitchie had both aceepted and retired from that which we had thrown down: but of that time, and those cireumbenees, we must judge for ourselves. Without any interest at atake, personal or partisan, in this matterwithout a subseription to the opinions of any man, or set of men-and in a eonscious independenee of all men, exeept is the fitness of things, as apparent to our own unclerntanding, we have devoted ourselves to a promotion of the industry of the laboring people of the U. States. These have a greater interest in this subject than we; and if the working man "goes supperless to bed," the sin liesnot with usthe wrong is not of our making. We have had "wo part or lot in this matter"-either in private practice or public performanees of what we thought duty. We have not yet said, however, that, -when there shall be a "moving of the waters," by the apirit of truth-when a love of "the light" shall supersede a devotion to idols, annl privation reform the affeetions of men by operating on their bellies -we shall refrain from again giving up our heart and soul, with every rightful effort of body and mind, to the enuse of our fellows-TAs phodectivk labomkis of TEE Usitid Statas.

OS- The treasury instructions exfablishing', (if not xx active), the tariff law of the United States, are ins.rted in a subsequent page. Among our most deeided objections to the act of the lant session, was the power which it placed in the hands of the seeretary of the treasurywhoever he may be, and for eight years to come-if the act remains undisturbed; rendering that officer, under direetion of the president, commander-in-chief over the tariff, whether regarded as a matter of protection, or a thing of dollars and eents only, receivable at the tronsurya power. which, we think, congress ought not to have parted with: for if the secretary has, or hereafier shall, exert that power wrongfully-grent injury may arime before a eorreetive enn be applied. We have no personal alfusion to the present secretary of the treasury, wor fanle speeially to find with his proceedings now before us-but would not have consented to the investment of so great an amount of puldic authority, and pritate infurence, in any individual; and to relincuish, as it were, a holding of the nation's purse-strings.

Mr. Whelane has put down all speculation as to the operation of the law, and his opinion is in conformity with the generally accepted meaning of the act. The sum of the reductions is to be calculated on the reported, or ascertained, real value, or forcign eost, of every artiele; and the minimum prineiple and specific sluties are subject to those rules which every one saw was applicable to simple ad valoremarticles. 'This will dissipate the funeied security of some engaged in particular branches of manu-factures-and saruarise others who seemed to entertain a "notion" that the specific duties were preserved. We could not see any reason for hoping of expecting either of these things. As a levelling sy stem hanl been resolved on, we supposed that all the duties would be eut down on the same priuciple-though some articles will bear a reduction mueli better than others; some thrive the better for it, (at the cost of consumers, becasae of a retiuced competition), for a while to come, and otliers more speedify be given up to "our workshops" in Europe.

It will take a goodly number of elerks, we suppose, to figure-out the amonit of the duties accorvling to the treasury instructions: yct always having bern in favor of specific appropriations and specific duties, we wish that a specific manner of applying the law had been established by the makers of the law. But "what has been done cannot be undone." It is prohable that the act, because of its own imperfections, will eome up for eonsideration, explanation, &ce, at the next session; aml if so, we hope that time may be allowed to ascertain and preseribe the particular dutics which shall be payable on particular articles. We apprehend that the pablic safetr, as well as individual sceurity, are considerably involved in this matter; and, when encountering an evil, as we believe that this law is, it is important that all its metes and bonndarics shonld be clearly before us. Fistablished by law, and not liable to construction, misconstruction, or reconstruction, as the case nasy be, at different times, under differentsiews of things, anti by different secretaries.

The modus operandi, under the instruetions, we suppose, will be thus:

1at. As to articles subject to a minimum, such as cotton yarn aud cloths, certain kinls of woollens, &c.

The misimum of white cotton goods is fixed at 30 cents the square yard-and the duty is $$ 0$ per cent. on this value-that is, 6 cents the square yard. The foreign actual cost, let us say, is also six cents. The duty then is at the rate of 100 per cent. on the forcign cost. As it is only the duty over 20 per eent, which is to ba acted on, one-tenth of 80 per cent. or 4.8 mills of the duty on a aquare yard, will be the amount of the first reduction, and so on, until the duty slaall sink to 20 per eent. equal to one cent aml two mills on the square yard, if costing six cents-and in that juroportion.

2/1. As to specific duties-a numerous class of articlek,
The daty on a ton of bar iron manufactured by rolling, is 30 dollarmand such iron, of an inferior quality, has been often sold in Fingland for 30 dollars. The present dity is 100 per cent. - 80 per eent. or 84 dollars the ton, is then swhject to the rerluction, and the first fall in the Inty, (one-tenth), will he 240 cents per ton. At the end of the period, the dhty will be six dollars perton.
Srid. As to sluties which are both specific and ad ralorem.
Wool costing more than 8 cents per lb. pays a iluty of 4 cents per 1 b. and of 40 per cent. ad. val. If its foreign value is 20 cents, the present duty is 12 eents per tb. or 60 per cent. ad. val. The evecess duty for reduction it 10 per cent. equal to 8 cents per 1 b . and the tenth is 8 milfs. Thr ultimate amount of the duty on such wool will be $$ 0$ per cent, or 4 cents per 16 .

It is harrily necessary to spenk of the simple atl valorem duties, for no deulit has existed as to the operation of the new law npon ihem.

Fivery particnlar package or parcel of goods," will be sulject to particuiar valculations on its cost. The duty on sugar, for example, which costs 5 cents per lb . and now paying 50 per cent, ad val. will have its first reduction in one-tenth of 50 per cext. which, at $2 \frac{1}{2}$ eents the present duty, will be $1 \frac{1}{2}$ mills per Ib. and the final duty on such augar be ore cent per lb. If the sugar costs $2 \frac{1}{2}$ cents, the duty being the same, the rate is one hnodred per cent. 80 per cent. is then the excess, and the first reduction will be $\mathbf{2}$ mills per $\mathbf{l b}$.-and the ultimate duty only half a cent per lb.

05-We publish a sensible report on curreney, capital, interest, &ce. recently made to the legislature of New York -and recommend it to the careful examination of those who desire to investigate elementary principles of important things. It would appear to us that, notwithstanding the "safety fund," ke. the state of the currency is not such as it should be in the state of New York. It might be eensinlerably "reformed," perliaps by forbidding the issue of bank notes, or bills, or any thing in lieu thereof, for a less sum than thice dollars, as a preliminary stepto extend to five doll: rs, in a year or two thereafter; and then ceasing to manufacture wew banks, the law should interfere and prevent excessive issucs by the old ones. A sulden contraction of the currency always causes the rtin of many worthy men, and sometimes produces general distress; and, an contractions will oecasionally happen, the safety of the people is best aysured in restricting the currency-which restriction will increase capital, whenever tliere shall be protitable employments for it

Nulification. The United States Telegraph of the 25th ult. had the following extract and remarks:

It will be seen by referring to Mr. Calhoun's letter, and the speecbes of gov. Hayme and gea. Hamilton, that an exereine of the "right of nullification," by the state of South Carolina, having csised the recent adjustment of the tariff, is hereafter to be held as the "rightful remedy," in either of the twenty-four atates, for the redress of any real or imaginary evil, arising out of the laws of the United States, or the decisions of the supreme court.
And though nullification has not been formally acknowledged n congreas, as the "rightul remedy," it certainiy has been respected as an efficient one.-Niles' Register.
Is the editor of the Register really ignorant of the priaciple of nullification, or does be intentionstly misrepresent thems? We are loth to belteve the latter; bat he ought to know something abont theun before he utters the aweeping denunciations which have appeared in the Register. The mdvocates of nullification bave never pretended to consider it as a meana of obtaining redreas, for "any real or imaginary evti arising out of the laws," te. It is only In cases of violations of the constitution, usurpations of power, not granted, and perversinus of granted powars, that we coatend the nulififing powers of a state can be rightfully wxereised.

If abuses which do not extend to perversion, exist in the ex. ercise of granted poweri, the remedy is in the ballot box. If redress cannot be obtained through that, it rsmains for the people of the state or states to decide whether they will eubáit in the oppression or will secede. They would hava no right to nullify the lav. They would be bound to subait to the requisitions of the law as long as they remained members of the unton. If the oppression be too grievous to be borne, they have no redress but eecesaion-unleas the preparatory ateps for secesaion should induce the majority to relax in their oppression.

It is true that there may be cases in which the aboses of even a granted power may be of such a nalure, as to justify a state in nullifying an act of eongress. Thus, when powers granted for the atuainment of one object, are perverted to the attainment of another object, not contemplated by the framers of the constltution, mor deducible by fair construction from it.
If the editor of the Regitter has not accurately comprebended the doctrine of nullification- he seems folly convinced of its efficiency. This is by far the most important part of $t \mathrm{t}$.-And aithough eongrees nay not have acknowledged it as the "rightful remedy," yet aa they have "respected is as an efficient one," we are well watisfed of the state of the case-having fulf reliance apon the prudance, patriotism and good sense of the pectple, that they will aot have recourse to it, but when it would ben "rightrul," as well as "efficicne." If this be not a safe reltance, let us at once establish a race of kinge, to save the people from thernselves.
The clanors against nallification are uselean. He is little aequalnted with the nature of political inatitutions, who does not see that aulification has become a principle of our goverument. It is useless to attempt to diagnise it. The people know it and feel it. It is a principle that necessarily lies dormant antil there is a nacesaity for ite action. It then riaes with the strength of a gisat, and with the energies of an uppressed people. If plumhers until oppreseion calls it forth. The Virgibia and Kentseky resolations gave it birth-the ordinance of South Carolina matured it. And the people, whether at the north, south, estst, or west, will always recur to it, to ressit ancoastitational oppre sston.

We give to the editor of the "Telegraph" the benefit of all his remarks on our brief paragraphis, and whall make some observations upon them-hot intending, however, at preseut, to enter into a consideration of several subjects which are held ready for discusaion, when the utility of an argument concerining them slall becoune more apparent than it is now.
Though we never kismed the "blask stone "n ind swallowed the president's proclamation "whole, "we gave a hearty consent to the general principles of that paper, heeause that they were really our own-having, for years, apprehended more danger from the factiousness of states than on aceount of an inervased, or consolidinting, power in the federal government; though free to confess, that several things happening in the last four years have induced us to apprehend the existence of a greater centrol dominion than we had supposed was adminable-or would be endured. Still, there are parts in the proelamation which go much beyond that political heresy which we ("genuine democrats of "98"), imputed to the old "federal school," and not at all neeessary, in our humble opinion, to a broad and conelusive argument ugainst oullifieation, as expounded by its advocates in South Carolina and elsewhere. But we have fallen upon strange times. A little while ago, and no persons in the United Siates proceeded so far in expanding the powers of the general grovernment, as some who now are the most prominent in contracting these powers, and contending that each alate is a "sovereign" interpreter of the rightfulness of every procceding of that government-for to this extent the doctrine of nullification reaches, else the elaims made in favor of state "sovereignty" are as well seandalous as they are peurile. And more reeently, only two years since, others who have gulped down the "entire" procla-mation-s yoting robbins swallow all things which are offered-in authority, or "lby muthority," or on their "allvgiance," abused Mr. Wehster with "rank federalism," beeause of his specch on Mr. Foot's resolution, and extolled Mr. Hayne for his correet and "truly republican" constructions of the constitution; and yet it is found that almont every generally accepted prineiple bid slown in the proclamation may be clearly traced in Mr. W'ebster's "federal," or "blue lizht" speech, as many of the "collar presses" bawled out that it was-concerning which we have many curious artieles in "pickle," and shall proxluce some of them-when necessary."

We neither unkerstand the mefaphysics nor the weTAMPAYChosLs of NULLIFHCAT'ION. We are "ignorant" of both. But beg leave to think, that we have looked as long at fracticat things, and, perlaps, may have as good a juingment concerning them, as the editor of the Telegrapih. At any rate-we eannot eleet him our sehoolnaster. He kays-" "I'he advocates of nullifieation have never pretended to consider it as a means of obtaining redress for "any real or imaginary evil arising out of the laws,' &c. It is only in eases of violations of the constithtion, nsurpations of power, not granted, and perversions of granted powers, that we contend the nullifying powers of a state ean be rightfully exercised." What more is needed to the argument? A "sovereign" state decides on the constitutionality of a law-and may call its passage either an "usurpation" or "perversion" of power, at its own diseretion-for the "sovereign" admits of no superior. And whether the act of "the sovereign" be on account of "a real or imaginary evil," the right of netion is the ame, and unimperachable! Fiven comson sxssx has nothing to do with this natter-has no influence over it! To speak to the case in point:-not more than four or five of the states consider the tariff laws to be unconstitutional, and twenty-three, out of the twentyfour, repudiate the doctrine of nullification-casting it

- T'lie proclaniation was very troublesome to our old friend, the ealitor of tha Richmond Eaquirer,-but, at last, be seeme of have "paken" it, and become very moderate about staterights. When the proclaination had just issued, some Fankee editor thus happily deacribed the siate of the caser-" Mr Lischie handles the proclamation as a hungry mas would a loo roll whicis te had stolen, and whicishe was anxious to swallove but which, as he felt it buruing in his hand, he wis afraid e put it in lis month, white lie feared delection, if he dud not hide it effectually." off as a political leprosy; so it is also with a large majority in cungrems, and, perhaps, in the unanimous julgnent of the supreme court: yet a protecting tariff is unconstitational, und nullification the "rightulremedy," be-catse- $\quad 0$ South Carolina wills it! And the state being "sovereign," is unter no legal obligation cither to comsply wish the wishes of a majority of the states, or submit herself to the common sense of mankind! The "sovereign"' is absolute. And if, as in the late war, the United States should again Ievy a tax upon coacher-South Carolina may pass an "ordinanee" changing all her "coaches" into apugens, and thus aullify the act. What is it to her that every lexicographer makes a wide difference between "coaches" and "wagons"" It is in the power of the "sovereign" to render "fleas into lobsters,"- though Sir Joecph Banks, after "philosophically" boiling a pot-full of the latter, certainly ascertained that "fleas are not lobsters ${ }^{3 \prime \prime}$

Such is the power of the states-in nullification! We do not mean to speak lightly on the subjeet. If the third elause of the cighth article of the coustitution, which glves eongress power to "rygulate comnmeree," sloes not authorise the enactment of protecting tariff laws-the power so long exercied, (and still in action), imposing discriminatory duties on tonnage, or prohibiting the coasting traile to foreign vensels, is surcly iunconstitntional, and ought to be "nullified!" The mule which applies to goods is applicable to the ships which earry them. We dely the whole host of metuphysicians to draw a line between then, -and the entire tribe of "philosophers" to present a elause in the constitution which cither separates these bmenches of domestic intustry, or prefers one over the other. There is no sucls elanse. If the grant of a full power, to "regulate commeree," does not contain subordinate, or incidental jowers, an sone of the state-rights men reem to eontend, a South Carolina planter may employ a Bermudiun vessel to earry his eotion from Gizorgetown to Charleston, or New York, and bring back to him wines and negro eloths, race horses and cotton bagging; and as the power to prohibit such employment of toreign vessels is not statell in the constitntion, sueh prohibition may either be called an "usurpation" or "prerversion" of power. 'His, however, is not now affected. But the same clause that protects, or prefers, American navigntion, protects or prefers American manufaetures-and the power gronted is natural anl unalienable, in both cases. Withoust-the United Stutes has no sovereign authority. If the power of self-defence is deaied-dhere is no other worth insisting upon; and the government of this great republic is placed in the condition of a negro's dog, which danes not return even a snap for a bite, when assailed by a white man's cur. We way, -that the power to eneourage ansl protect the navigation of the United States, which has been mightily exereised from the heginaing of this goverument, ainf, In a very important part, to A BnoLUTx Pwoisartion-has the same, and no ofher, constitutional authority than than that which is given to encourage and protect the manv facture of mouse traps. Both are derived from the fill power just above thated. The right to tax foreign bips entering onr jurts, to any amount, for the eucouragement of ship-building in the Enited States, is universally eoneedenl-but the right to tax foreign products and manufactures, that other American products nud mannfactures may be substitutell for them-is "millified!" Neither ships nor mouse traps are mentioned in the eonstitution. They are both articles of "conmeree," and the right to regulate the importation, or introduction of either, is precisely the same. For a long scries of years, we taxed all foreign vessels one dollar per ton on their entry, our own being almitted on the payment of six eents. Ships are oulv the agents of "eommerce," ani so are camels and mules. Vinvigation has less to do with "commeree" than agrictltrre;" and is, by

[^13]far, the lesser interest: yet some years ago, when Franee imposed a sluty of 18 dollars pur ton on $\mathbf{A}$ rnerican vessels entering ber ports, a law owas passed, by the cxasisious vote of both louses of eorngress, imposing a duty of 18 dollary per ton on French vessels entering our ports; and if Frunce had also taxed-out our cotfon, should we not luve taved-out F'rench goods? Hut the ease is "'materially nlsered" when wheat, and not cotton-and English, not Fretuch, goods are concerued! We want no wire drawing about this natterma attempts to shew the differenee between the north and north-tast side of every bristle on "whole hog's" back, from the "snout to the tail!" We demaunl it, of our quoulam ficiend, Mr. Obsta Principtio, and present cotemporary, Nous Ferrons, "e由quire"-and of $k e n$. Green, who has steppetilinto the east-otf slip-shods of Mr. Nitchic, sinee the days of lis abjection, deereed in the proclansation-to put their "finger upon that part of the constitution," (as Mr. R. wevd to way), which prohibita the coasting urade to foreigo vessels-alfows the imposition of discriminatory sluties upon them and their cargoesor anthorises the employment of the American navy for the protection of American commeree-even at the antipodes, or in the Mediterrancan, and at a greater expense to the puhlie, in that-sca, than is the amount of ift the private profits which acerue to us from its trade. These powers, however, are natural results of the acknowledged independenew of the United States, and are not dimputed-still the right to nullify them eannot be question-ed-for a sovereign state cannot err! A power to protect the labov and property of persous, engeged in any particular pursuit, is not given in the constitution; yet every citizen believes in the existence, and sees the perpetial action of such a power. It is onily eoncerning its appliestion, or a sheer question of expediency, about which individuals differ. On what prineiple is it, that the importation of slaves is prohibiled? Because, as we suppose, thought to promote the "general welfare." May not the "general welfare" be as well promoted in excluding the frodluction of white slaves, as the persows of black ones? The constitutional rule which is appliesble to the last, minst hold good with respect to the first. South Carolina, in lier wisdom, continued the importation of negroes to the latest moment that she coul! -and, down to 1808 , the Clarleston new spapers were filled with advertisements of cargoes of them for salu. The law which now prohibits the importation of slaves, stands precisely upon the principle which prohibits the coasting trade to foreign ressels, imposes discriminatory sluties on goods imported in such vessels, or if from berond the cape of Good Hope, or atsesses other dutics for the further eneouragement of A merican industry: but it plesses South Carolina, in the powrer of her own indivilual "sovereignty," alone in her own might, to pronounec the latter class of duties anconstitutional! It is move lawful to protect home-manufactured Funkee shijus, than home-made Yankee "palmetto buttons?"
But if we hal ever held an opinion that "nallification is a rightful remedy" for the reulress of "real or imaginary evils," the earrying-ont of the doctrine, in South Carolina, would luve rendered it contemptible. We allude to the aet of the convention nullifying the late law, "further to proville for, the eollection of duties on im-whips, as well as of ention and wonilen eloths, and hob-nationot tess tian 375 mulitions, or throe-fiourths of the annual aggregate, belongs to the agricultural or land holding interest, in one way of another, chiefly for mubsistence and materials, or means mupplied-mincrals and carths, water-power, timber, wool, and a thonsand el ceteras.
As many copics of this article will probably out-live a dietinct recolfection of the seurvy political terms and polities of the day, it nuy be proper to nharre, that, when a man calls himseff a "winole hog," be intends to eompisment himeelf-and If The aflds, "from the snout to the tail," it means that he feels qualifiud for a acat in eongreas, and, perehance, a miseion to represent the dignity of the linited stasea at a foreign court. We once heard a perenn say, in the presence of his wifes't'm whole hng, and so in my whic." Bit the hady, and such she really was, olyjected-she was not willing in be called a female hog. There an nolhing new in this. We have been told that, in eerIan pariy of Mifica, afer burnping the zroiznd nine times, it is the portoculn of politics to say, "your majesty's dog te erawline beiore you." We to nos much admire thin modern hoggiom or aneipnt dozgism. But-de quatibus non dispulandurn; "rewards" must be obtainod, and "punishmeats" avoided-if poesible.
ports" The convention might as well have nullified the aet of congress making comprensation for "Amy Darden's stud horse"-dor, having repealed her original ordinance, this law of the United States was rendered a dead letter to the people of that state-unless a sovtiarn Eixemom on confeperace was still contemplated, or some other violent intent entertained, for further use, by persons that would "rather reig" in lsell than serve in heaven." It was an act of baby-spite-the pouting of a spoiled child, (excepe as above excepted), and reduced nullifieation into the meanness of a besotted faction, or cast it into the "keeping" of the Catalines of the day. Let us look a little more elosely at this subject. Fivery "Jeffersonian densocrat," in the time of the embargo, supported a law much more extensive in its powers, and furious in its character, than is sle net which Sonth Carolina has nullifiel. Ayc, and the first was a numeli stronger constitutional case tlan the last, in many respects. We shall refer only to a single point, bechusc it Is that whiels directly bears upon the giverzal sulpert to Which the "movereign rigltt of nullifieation," was lirst applied: but ennst previously state-that every man who regarded the embargo laws an unconstitutional was put down, by the "democratic pariy," and marked as an" "ohi! tory," "apostate whig," "British refugee" or "hireling"_-"monarchist," or the like. ling"-_"monarchist," or the like".

First. There is no expressly delegated power in the constitution to lay an embarko. It is inciclemal, either to the power of "declaring war" or "1v gulating conmerce" for "the general welfare." Very few persons questioned the right of congress to lay an enibargo, nuler the warzmaking power; and, while it lield the character of a woar-measure, not nunch, was said about its nneonstitutionality. But being unlimited in its duration, anil nneovered by a declaration of war-and continned until the Ameriean lagg had disappeared from the ocean, the phases of the law were altered, and then it was supported by its friends under the elause which nuthorises the "rogulation of commerce." An ardent diseussion of constitutional principles ensued. 'The "feuleralists" sain that "rrgulation" and bestavctiox, were not synonymous terma!that, as with a view to the enconragement of American industry, the constitution having forbidalen the imposition of a "tax or duty on articles exported from any state," is was absurd to suppose that a power existiol to prevent all expertations, at diserction, anil without limit?' 'They insiated, that the positive denial of a power to tax exportations, shewed that the people, in adopting the constitution, had reserved for themselves an uncontrollable liberty over all exportations, Hat we, "the democrats," juit the "federalists" down, as well through "king numbers" as by argument! We said, that the right to "reggulate commerce" as should, (in our opinion), best promote the "general welfare" was undoubted; and there were not wanting many "sturdy democrats," who held forth coneerning "our restrictive energies," and descanted upon the greal benefits resulting from the improvement of our conntry, and its anlvances in prowperity, becanse that it was being rendered independent of foreign nations for manufactured goods, &ce, and, if we are not innch mistaken, some of the messagus of president Jefferson thus encouraged us to perseverance in the embargo law-which, as a war measure, or a regulation of commerce, or as a means of piromotitig the "general welfare," wee marle it out clearly was boifi constitutional and experlient! We well remember writing a parphlet on these subjects, which was so well approvel by the "demoeratie republican committec," $t$ 'sat 10 amm copies of it were published to eulighten the percipir of Maryland! Such an edition was not a common thing in those days Ayc, anil out of that pamphlet was olitnincil the chief matter for two great "embargo spercehes" marle in congress-without the least credit being rendered to the humble and obseure author of it-or any admission, that certain original statistical statements were borrowed!

Seconally. On the other hand: an expares power is given to congress "to lay and colleel taxes, duties, imposts and exeiset-to pay the pulbicaleht, abli juovile for the enmmon defence and general welfure.". Tliere is no limit (nowe) to this power, either eoncerning the imposition of tazes, or the disposition of the funds puonlaced by them; nor ought there to be-we speak on general principles. The power to raise a revenne nevessarily involves a righ to disburse it. Now in this nower, or in that to regulute commerce, or in both united, Mr. Jefferson and the "Ae-moerate"-the Giles's, Macen's, and so forth-found authority for the seizure and condemnation of British goods imported, &c. though we were not at war with Great Britain! Britain had passed certain orders in council for the regulation of trade with the continent of Earope-and. like the poor worm, which, "if trodden upon may turn," there existed a natural right to meet regulation with regulation; to say mothing of our proud elaims to sovereiguty and independence! We prolihited commerce with Gruat Bribain-we made a law to confiscate British goods when insported into the United States-bercause, mark the leceause-Great Hritain had embarrassed our trade with the continent of Europe, and restrained us from semiling our flour, cotton, fish, ecc, to the various nations with whota she was at war. This was the "flemocraey" of Jefferson'a administration; but now the more lofty "democracy" of the: "ehiralric and generous south," having an ofen markef for ifs cofton, deems it unconstitutional to improse protecting duties, that iron and cloth may be manufneturedl in Ancerica, though lie British duties, as to our flour, meats, fish, lumber, anil every great staple, eotton exeepteil, are prohibitory in their opermion! The poorr ill congress to "regntate eommerce" has been strieken from the constitution-by construction; and an exercise of that jrow er may be rightfully "millified!"

But let is look a litile more at the constitution. We have just above sad that the power "to lay ant colleet taxes, duties," &cc. is now without limit-ihat is, it is a cmplete power, and as stromgly granted as any form of words can express. And that it was so understood by the francers of the constitution, who had a full sense of the ineaning of the phrase, "to menthate cnmmence," is inlubitably proved from the following execpition, (aned the only one) to that power, and for a limited time:
'lie migration or impertation of such persons, as any of the states now existing shall think proper to allmit, shall not leveprohihited by congress prior to the ycar one thousand eight hundred and eight; but a tax may be imposed uponi such importation not excreding tén dollars for each person."-Coms. IV. S. Sec. 9, Alit. 1.

This miticle alluiles to slaves-though the convintion was ashamed to put the wort into the constitution; and it was a concession to the wishes of South Carolina, perhaps, nt the time-for she was the unly state which persevered in the importation of live "wool and ivory". up to the peirod preseribed.

The introduction of this clanse into the constitution, as wrill as the manner of its matter, is rery remarkable. The importation of slaves was not to be prohibited until I K 18 , nor a tax of more than ten dollars a head laid upon them: the power then to prohihit the importation of every other article of merehandise (!), or to tax it at diseretion, was instant and full on the adopution of the constitution. If there had beell any doubt eoncerning the powir to "rrgulate trade," to "promote the general welfare," this exception Mould have quieterl it. So it was in the: beginning of man. The fruit of the "tree of kuow ledge" being only forhidden to. Idam, left no doulst of his entire discretion over all the rest of the fruits of "lie garrlen."

While thinking, then, that the original pretencet for nullifieation in South Carolinu was lame, amt weak, anel [^14]irapotent-we have ooncluded that the recond nullifying ordinance was as well profigate as contemptible: that if there had been any seeming dignity in the "rightful remedy" assumed, the practice under it was better suited for an assembly of "black spirits and white," at a cross roads tavern,-than the convention of South Carolina. We think freely-and, if we spenk at all, are apt to say what we think, in all possible plainuess. We believe that we understand both the principle and practice of nullification-aud, white yielding nothing to the argument in favor of that heresy, would resist, to the utterniost, the preaumption of those who have embraced it,-ayc, who tell us that the contest has only just begun, who hold themselves up in a military autitude, and still threaten these United States!-though having obtained what they regard as a triumph; whith they should not have obtained with our consent. If general Hamilton would have gone "to the death for his sugar"-he might!

The "play" of the editor of the "1elegraph" upon the admission made by us, that nullifieation, if not a righuful remedy, "has been reapected as an effieient one," is not "worth the eandle." We ought not, perhaps, to have used the word "respected"-for Mr. Clay, and ealsers who supported him, had no sort of reapect, in the ordinary meaning of the word, for mullification-sueli as regard, reverence, honor, awful hindness, or partial regurd We know that many who voted for Mr. Clay's hill, supremely despised nullification, in all its parts anm parties. But "great effects from little causes flow." The soiling of a duchess of Marlborough's gown, once involved Furope in a general war! and simple matters of aecident oftestinses make great men out of blockliends or knaves. Nullification has been "efficient"-but not because of its own power. A modification of the tariff, (whieh it was chought would prove aeceptable to South (arolina), has been made. Had the new tariff aet stood alone-it might vell be said that nullification had been respected-"duly reapected," as the Turk bows his head when the silken cord is presenterl in the name of the sultan, to strangie him; but the enforeement bill was also passed-and every body knows that no morlification of the tariff would have been sulmmitted to, at the last session of congress, had the enforcement bill failed. Alul the latter might hate stood alone-but for the feur of an unchue or indiscreet exercise of the poavers which it gives to the erecutive.* We feel searly authorisell to say that we krow it was the latter eonsideration which powerfully influenced enough of the members, perhaps, to have defeated Mr. Clay's bill. And to the consideration just mentioned was superadded other hand, look at Alabana, Louisiana, Mississippi, and even ticorgia. The general atnount of wealth, has, perthaps, beell at least doubled in these statea within the lant eight tariff years. Aud see what is going on in Piofida! A Bavanuah paper mentions it as an extraordinary erop, that col. Dummott, of Tomboka, Florida, recenily manufactured imon one acre of sugar canc, fivar hogsheads of sugar, averaging more than a thousand pounds each, and worth mue and a half eents per pound. The roop of this single acre will therefore bring three hundred and rophy dollara. Pretty well for Plorida. Col. D's enture crop will amount to near one hundred hogisiseads.
And at this time too, it should be added, an a monument to the memory of the tariff haw of te28-though it lived not long enough to develope its blessingo-that, in nearly every part of the United Atates, a general promperity nasy be aaid to aboundwhich has no parallel. A greater shew and buatie of business, may trave been seen at partieular periods-but safe and solid acquisitions of wealth were never before so extensively tnade, and in spite of unwise procrediags, on the part of the government, in many respects. Trie whole secret is in this-that the cartements giren to industry eauned every person, as it were, to obtain constant employment, and at liberal wage*; hence mighty cireulations of values, and quick paskapes of money from hand to hand. Suppose there are two mitions of persona to whom arages are paid for labor performed, and that the present average is only so eents per day-cast one half of these out of emplovinent, or, becanve of excens of laber, reduce their comprneation io 25 cent and the diffrence of the values earned and circulated is in the enormous sum of veventy-flue nillions and cirenlaird is in the enotmous sum of reveniy-five nilions 3 year? We bescech reflactung inen to examine into this matter. Here in the true camse of ine general prosperity that pre-rails-and watich ought to be mulatimed.
-The enforcement bill was necespary, as the majority thought to vindicate the constitution, and prevent such excesses as had been contemplated, and provided for, by Bonth Caroliaia-but with that vinaication, many believed, it was prudent, and for the reason stated, to wilhdraw from South Carolina every prostert for perseverance in her measures-and so practically "nulufy" a present use of the enforcement law.
the operation of a generous apirif, which has not been handsomely returned by some in whose behalf it was exerted. On the expediency of the new tariff law-we frankly expressed our opinion to its honored author, a considerable time before he offered his bill to the senate. That opinion has suffered no change. On the contrary, every day's observation goes to confirm it. The reasons which induced us to oppose that bill are being rapidly develojed. Partial evil may be general good-or temporary suecess lay the foundation of permanent adversity. But we shall not now discuss the questions involved in that law. Things are not ripe for it; and the course to be pursued on the general subjeet has not yet been determined. 'I'be occasion, however, is fitted to say-dhat this difference in opinion has not alienated any of those affeetions which, for more than twenty years, we have warmly entertained and skeallily cherislued, for one of the most honorable and highly-gifted men of the age-and perhap: also, the most cruelly calumniated and wiekedly abused. We have known him long and well; but, while feeling all confidence in the purity of bis motives, and paying as minch deference to his julgonent as any human being inay rightfully ask of his fellow man-we must aditere to our own opinions until eonvinced that they are invalid. "Collared" persons cannot understand this. It is their dnty to have both hande dinengaged, that they may take off their hats, and hurrah on the right side or the left-as direetud in "geseral orders." 'Tens of thousunds were in this dig. sified and beautiful posture, (holding both hauds up?) while a doubt remained whether the president would approve or nullify the bill for rechartering the bank of the United States-and those who hurrahed most loudly because of the veto message concerting that bunk, have also hurrahed tnost lustily for the proclamation, though the scope and bearing of these papers are about as mich opposed as the "etcimal" ice of Chimborazo, and the "eternal" fire of F"esuvius. Some "philosophers," we believe, contend, however, that the elements of heat and cold are the same. It may be so-for there are many strange harmonies in things that are apparently in opposition? And, as the instunt sensation of ice annl fire is pretty nearly the same, it is enough for politicians that a seeming affinity exists for the moment-the present purposes being ace complisherl, die "collared" gentleme'" have served the umn required of them.
The last paragraph in the article quoted from the Telegrapli needs no remark except to say, God forbid that mullifieation should ever leceque a "settled principle" it this republic! 'That it is not-we well know. I'wentythree out of the twenty-four states repundinte this heresy. Even Virginia, the partent and hot-bed of state-rights metaplysicians, las cant it off. It has an abiding place only in South Carolina-and, we think, will not long endure even there. It has, however', proved itself "effi-eient"-but not, (as above stated), in the operation of its own power. We like it no better lior that. We rejeet it in all its plases, anl uuler all circumstances, and regard it as an abomination.
"A mudost oy hacinens." We meet with the following in the "Washington Glube, credited to the "Georgia Courier" - Trick. It is assented in Niles' Regiater, that into the hili aubstitued for Mr. Clay's, there was furtively inserted a seetion by which certain manufactures of iron imported pay lese duly, than foreign iron itself. It was not read in the senate at all; Mr. Clay having aumwered Mr. Girundy that he had eomopared the two bills, and found them exentially the same! "ll was read by its title three times and passed, all in less than five minulew." Then Mr. Itickerson discovered the fradulent secion, and eomplaised of the violation of the eompromise; that the senate tefused to recousider or strike out 17 to 8 .
[Georgia Cour.
It is not easy to apprchend how so many mistakes eould be committell. The bill of which we spoke was not substituted for Mr. Clay's bill-Mr. Clay did not answer Mr. Grumily, nor say that he had eompared the two bills $\rightarrow$ anl we know furtier that Mr. Clay was not in the senate at the time. The latter parts of the statement in the "Courier" is true-but the bill alluiled to had not any eonnesion with Mr. Clay's bill, except that its provisions violated the principle of the "compromise" whieh had just been made, in the passage of Mr. Clay's bill. It is true that the bill, if it hall been read in the senate, would not have passed that body-and that it became a law, if not by "fraudulent" intentions, in what may be esteemed [almost] eriminal carclessusess, and four-s'clock-in-themorning legislation.

Aseaican mankin-a valuable article, manuflactured from sotton raised on the estate of Mr. Forssth, one of the senators of the United staten from Georgia, is ndfered for rale, in congiderable quantities, by Mr. Natinniel P. Gillann collega. The treasurer of the Girard trust has acknowtedged by letter to the city councils of Phitadelptia, the recelpt of two millions of dollars from the trustees of the Girand bank, to be appropriated to the erection of the Girard college.

The architect of the college has erlimated the expease of the plan adopted for the building at $8900,000,9700,000$ of which will be expended nut the principal huilding, aind $$ 200,000$ on the cut buildimg;-and thatsix yeats will be required to complete it.
It is furtiter estimated by the committee, that there will probably be no necessity for eneroaching upon the chpital of the fund for the crection of the bailding. From the gradual progrems of the work as projected, it is helieved that the antual interest will be nearly, if not quite sufficient for the buildings.

The erection of the new college will be modelled after the banking hnuse of Mr. Girard, - the old United States bank, and the whole building will, in the opinion of the conimittee, "remain a lasting montument of his fame, as well as a model of architectural beanty."

INSURRECTION IN FORMOAA.

From the Canton Regieter, of December $20 t h$, we derive the following particulars of the inaurrection in the beland of Formosa. It appears to be of a formidalite charscter.

The iasurrection commenced near Chang foo-heen about 40le from Tae-wan-fon, (the capital of the islasd) where twenty-six mandarina, gieat and small, together with ebout two thousand men, were killed.
The inhabitanta of the western alde of Formoes are nativee of the Lsiand: Chinchew men, and Caston men; and the afray originated aboat fiva piculs of yams, which some Chiachew vagabonds took away from some of the resident Caston people, Who immodiately applied to the beads of the village where the plunderers lived, and received redresa, but thinking that by applying to the Chang-bwa-heen they might prevent a recurrenc of simitar outrages, they did 00 , and tha Chang hwa-heen direcity cafted upon five of the heads of famifies, and demanded money to the amount of 1,000 dollare each, the paymient of which they resisted alleging that the affair was aiready setted.

To this he lent a deaf eal, keeping them in prison ulit the money should be paid. When they had been thus, for seven of eight daye in conflnement, finding them tutractable he raked up a stronger charze against them, cafling upon them to produce a Ladrone, who had escaped, and who could not be found. The head men concerned, esasperated at this nacxpected demand, gent to the village privately, and offered a reward of 5,000 dotJars to any one who would kill the Chang-hwa-heen. The vil agers listened to the proposat, and in open day attacked the house of the officer, killed him and his attendants. The Tae-wan-foo, bearing of the affair, wellt in person, attended by about five handred soldiers, when he was attacked, kilted and all his force destroyed. Several other bodies of troops advanced, under various officers and were also beat off with grent laughter.
When the last accounts feff, the Ching tsung pingkwan was misalug; the cuy of The-wan-foo in the posmexpion of the Tae-wan-tae-yay, and about 30,000 men thured for the occasion. The villagers under the five head mien; were adyanced against it more than 50,000 strong. From Amoy, 5,000 irnops had emharked for the sland under the fand and water 'Tetubs. so the affair rests for the present.

TIE GEORGIA GOLD REGION.
Charleaton, Aprid 16. We have received the first number of a new weekiy' paper, called "The Western Herald," published by O. P. SHAW, and edited by A. G. FAxamoront, at the village of Aceasila, in the gold region of Georgia.
The village of Auraria is situated on the ridge dividing the waters of the Chestatee and Eioah rivera, in Lompkin (origla-ally Cberokee) county. This melodious and appopriaing ally Cherokee) eonnty. This melodious and appropriate namm was adopted on the cuggestion of Mr. Calloun, when at hus mines in the neighborbood, last November.
The firyt eatin was erected in Auraria about the first of June last, by Witham Dean, esq. who was followed by Nathaniel Nuckolls, eng. who opened a house of eatertainment for the acconunodation of those dasposed to examina for gold in the surrounding country, and soon had it crowded. Around this nucteus a population soon gathered, composed of all clasees and conditions of the buman family, and there is now in Auraria one hundred family develtings; eighteen or twenty atores: (welve of fifteen law offices, and four or five taverns, &c
The town population is estimated at one thousand, and that of the county at ten thousand, and constantly becreasing with a rapidity almost too ineredible to relate.

The Indian population is small; their right of oceupancy to the soil having, in most cases, been extinguished previous to The survey and distribution of the country.
The mines already drawn in the vicinity, (not involved in litigation) are yielding to the proprietors in fich abundance, the anticipated fruits of the mosi sanguine speculator.
The price of gold in Auraria io from 85 to 92 cents per dwt according to its fineness; that collected in the neighborhood will average 90 cents, when well cleansed; when fluxed and run into bars, 92 cents.
Mr. McCollom, late of Tennessee, has constructed in the neighborhood a boat with a diving befi attached to it, for the purposc of raising gravel and collecting gold from the bed of water courses. The "Herald"gives the following account of "golden xpeeimens" found in the vicinity.
"A. Mclaughlin, esq. of our connty, exhibited to our inspee tion, a few days since, a specimen from his mine, weighing upWards of ferty dwis. supposed to be four-finhis gold, the rertasinder rough sand, which, from every appearance, must have been cemented to the butk by heat at the tume of its formation.
Coi. D. C. Gibson has also brought us a apecimen taken from the bed of the Chestatce river, on the lot owned by himaelf and col. Calhoun, weighing nine ibs. and three oz. with one hundred and twenty-four particles of gold upon its ourface, plainly ped ceptible to the ryw.
On gen. Iawhon's lot in Cherokee county, we inderstand that a prere of pure gold wan found last week weighing upwards of thirty dwit."

DLACK HAWK AND THE PRERIDENT

 From the Globe of April 27Black Hawk and his son, the Pruphet and his mon, and the other Indian howtages surrendered under the late treaty, waited on the president yesterday, to receive his ordern. The presiden met thetn kindty. He directed the articles of dreas provided for them to be exhitited to them, and told the principal chief that the whole would be delivered to him to be distributed, what view to their enmmon confort-that they must repal with a diately to Font Monroe, and remain there contentepair immegave them permispion to return to thelr homes that the the of their detention depended upon the conduet of their respera tive tribes-and that they world not be restored to their fainities until it was ascertnined that the stipulatinns of the treat fahad been complied with by their people, and alt the bad feelin which had led to the hoody scentes on the frontiers bad feeling
The Prophet replied to the president, and said, that baniahed. pected to be permitted to retum Immediatety to thair penpie; chat tha war in which they had been involved, grew out of their attempt to raise provisions, where they supposed they had a night to do so; that they had lowt many of their people, as well an the whttes; that their tribes and families were now exposed to the attacks of their etremics, the siour and Menominees and that they hoped to be permitted to return to take care of them.

Btack Hawk added to the remarks of the Prophet, that they comsidered that, like Keokeck, they had come to vinit the preadent, asil, like bum, would be permitied to retarn to their momes. He entered into nome brief explanation of the eaune of the aggressions on the frontter.
The prenident told them, in conclusion, that ise was weif apprized of the circumstances which led to the disasters alluded to-that it was unnecewsary to book back to them-it was his purpose now to aecure the observance of praee-to prevent the frontuers from being again stained with the blood of its inhabitants, the peacefol and belpless-that they need feel no uncasisess about their own women and ehildren, they shonid not suf fer from their enemies, the sioux and Menomanees. He mean to compel the red men to be at peace with each oticr, as well as with their white neighbort-lhat he hat taken measures with this view, and when it was awecriatned that they were effectaat-when the tribes had learned that the power they attempted to eontend with, was equally able and dasosed to proect the penceful and to punish the vislence of aggressorn-whet his information aseured him that their peopte in particular were covinced of this, and were disposed quiedly and in good fhith to observe the terins of peace granted to them, then they wouid be restored to their familics. He then gave his hand to the chiefs and dasmissed them.
Binck Hawk is not at ilt-looking man-his countenance is jatelligent, and not savage. The prophet, we think, has more the iook of the niscliuef inaker, and, indeed, he assumed to be the principal in the interview with the president. Ile was, we suppose, the instigator of the massacres perpetrated ofl the frontier. His uttcianee and manuer, as well as his countenance, indicated a dark and ferveious character.

SPERMACETI WHALE FISHERY: From the Nuntucket Jnquirer, of March 9.
For the foltowing sutistical views in relation to the spernaceti whale fabery, we are indelited to a merchant of thus place, who has carefully compiled the in from the most authentic ources. We believe it to be the onily accurate account yet published, of the itnportations of spernacell oil, at the various porta of the United states duing the pant year; and of the exact namber of vessels actually engaged in the fishery at the commencement of the current year.
By comparing the importations of spermnceti oil in 1832, with those of the preceding year, it will be seen that the supply was dimisished miore than 25 per cent.

INTERNAL. IMPROVEMENTS.

In our eolifection of pamphlets, there is one publinhed at Baltimore in 1825-recoribag the poceedings of "the [Maryland] otate convention, on internal improvements," ke. will an "appendix, containing the viewa of Thomas Ellicof, esa." whieh latter so much accords with our own opinious un the general subject, and are so important in this age or vetoke, that we are intuced to make a liberal extract-as tinllowa:
"If it be an asiom that tabor is the souree of wealth-Ubat the thost fertile lands possess no intrinste value, unieas iabor be united whil them in producing those commudities which add to the convenience and happoness of man-the richest mineral productions of nature have no Intrinsic value, unless labor be applied to convert them into convenient forns for use; hence a country abounding in the most fertile soil-ali the various mineral productionn $\rightarrow$ the tinest rivers and water powers for prosecuting the incehanic art-with a varied and bighly genial elimate, may he so poor as not to aflird a conifortathe subsistence for a siugle individual; breause the absence of Inbor prevents the bounties of nature from being called into action to supply the necessary wanth of human infe.
"Ali plans, Userefore, which are calcutated to produce tive application of iabor, to bringing into operatinn thove Iatent bounties of namre, which, but for labor, would remain in the boweis of the earth, are plans that are hinhly worthy the eonsideration of political economiste, and are legitimate objects for the exercise of sovereign power.
"It is a prineiple in political, not less than in domestic economy, that when the expenditure exceeds the incoue, puverty must ensue. A nation can no more sustain, in faet, a balance of trade againyt her, for a long time, than can an individual Though an individual may own tracts of the tinest lands, if be neglect, either directly or indireetly, to apply latior to cause them to produce the commodities that witl suppty, not only wuch of his wants as they are capable of, but in addtion to this, alao, a surplas sufficient to exchange for such commodities as his happiness requiren, and which has own domain will not produce: such an individual may exist, but his reasonable wants will not be rupplied; he can netither bear his portion of public burtiens, nor educate a family in such way as shali preciude the certainty, that a fow gencrations oniy will elapse. before such family will have sunk into tharbarism. A community thus circunastanced, would, by parity of rearoning, pase few generations befoie it would becone semi barharinn.
"if an individual shonld possess an island so remote from the other partis of the worid, that the produce of his ferilie soit, brought forth by the mnst judicious appilcation of labor, will not bear the expense of tranaportation, to effect an exchange for artleies produced in otiser parts of the world, and which are neceasary to supply his reazonuble wants, his labor would be Inat; inis firtile soil withont value, and he miserable. No stimuius exists th labor beyond the amount necessary to sustain life, and he dwindles from a useful member of a social comanuaity on drone, existing in coinmon with other animals, by the same means, upon the comsmon air.
"Thus the United States, extending over a region containing every variety of climate and soll; every where irrigated with Uhe purest stream"; with a population uneqnalled, for induetry, Intelligenee and enterprise, ppread every where nver her territory may, nay, must become, in a few generations, less industrions, less inteligent and less enterprising, if labor shali continue to recpive no reward, owing to the expeuse attending the transportation from the grower to the eonsuner.
"If a barrei of flour shnll be worth, in the island of Cuba, areven doilars, and It will enst to the grower of the wheat, seven dollars to transport the flour from the place of its production to Cuba, he will receive no reward for his labor: hut, if a barret of flour will sell In Cisha for reven dollara, and the grower of The grain can convert it into flour, and transport it to Cluba for ive doliart, he will receive a reward of two doliars for his laber.
"tinder such cireumstances, iabor in most valuable near the seaboard; becanse the expense of transportation from the proAncer to the consumer is tews-a scale may he graduated from a point on the seatoard where labor is moat vatuable, to a point in the interior of the country where it is of no value, as an neans of poducine wealth.
"P'or instance, suppose a ton of Imon in Eingland be worth fifiy dottara, and the freigit even in a foreign vessel, will cost four dollars; If this iron the profuced in Baltimote county, Baltimore connty will gain forty-sis dettars for that which eost nothing but the applieation of tabor upon inert malter, for neither of which she would have received any thing but for the market afforded in England. Bnt if the ton of iron is to he sent from Pitistourg to Fingiand, the enst of transportation from Plitsburg to Baltimore muat be also deducted from the Dingtish jrice; which world be an great thal there woild be no reward left for the labor reqnited in converling the mineral into malleable iron: it woild therefore not be produced at l'ittsburg; both the mineral and labor would he of no value at that place.
"A ton weight of ouperfine flour iuav be worth at Baltimore, for exportation to foreign enuntries, finy dollare, while at the distance of two tiundred and any milen from Baitimore, in the Interior of the country, it will be worth nothing fir expartation, becanse by the ordimary means of tranuporiation, even on good turnpike roads, it will cost fity dollan to tratheport it to Balumore. The sont, therelise, must reanain uncecupied, because the busbandman call receive no reward for hit latoor-and thy aation will be none the ilifier for posseasing beth land and labor, at the di-tance of two hutulred and fifty milen from the enaboard, unless the value uf agricultural productashall incteane in foreign countries, or labor be diverted to other objeets than the growth of grain.

"The expeure of tranaportation on the most perfectly constructed turnpike road, per nille, will be urarly an follows, viz. "For twenty miles, which in a day"s travel, it wilirequire, to carry two tons, six horses and one math-

"The expense for transportation by a good eanal will be as follows, viz:
"For twenty miles, which is a day's travel, it will require to carry twenty-five tons, one horwe, one man and one boy-

"Which, divided by 25 , the number of tons, will give 8 cents for transporting one ton twenty miles; which & ceats, divided by 20 , will give less than half a cent per mile for a tos weight.

IIn this ealeulation there is no charge for wagon or linat; nor It there any charge for toll, because these would be nearly equal in either mode.
${ }^{\text {"Let }} \mathrm{it}$, bowever, be assumed as a fact, that the cost of transportation on a road is twenty ernts per mile, exclusive of tollia, for each ton weight; it will appear then that a ton weight that is worth 6 fity duliars on the suaboaril, in worth to the promiucer of the article one dollar less at the dintance of five miles therefrom, and mon for every five milen as he recedes into the interior of our country; antil at the distanee of two hundred and afty onites, it is worth nothing with the ordinary means of transportation.
ft will then follow that all the labor which tie population of that portion of our eounny which sa situsted zwo buituled and fify milles or more from a shipping port, with all the fertule lands aqually distant, are worth untising, us n source of national wealth, The labor can only be employed in agricultural pursitits, of in the production of artickes of no greater value than wleat; beeavee there is no inducement so employ Inbar, which is the mother not only of indivudual, but of masional wealth.
"The demand for the prudnct of our sont, it is true, may become greater that it now is, or lian been for the last acven years; and consequently, the valne be increaned on our vea coast, wo as, at times, to extend the limit beyund two hundred and fifty miles, from whielt the great staple of the middle states may be exported; but this will not alter the priaciple; the rebative value of land and latoor will reunain the same, agrevably to the ocale of distances atated-for, admiting that a foreign demand shall inereare the value of a con of thour to double of its present value, or one hundred dolhars at titn port of exportation, the same article woult be worth mothing, as an article for esport, at the distance of five hundred miles from such port.
"hlaving now, as I suppose, vatablished the premises, that nether labor nor land, with the ordinatry means of irnusportation, are of any value an a source of national wralth, during the present pacific atate of the world, at a distance of two hundred and afty uniles from navigalie watern; it will follow that, if the means of internal transportation cannet be rendered lesa expmisive than it now is, that at leant two-lintis of the physical power of the nation, with rizit tenthe of its moat fertule soll, nunst remain thoperative, unthl ealled forth euther by incrensed demanda in foreign marketa for the produce of our soil, or until the means of eonveyance from the grower to the conaumer shall be rendered lesn expendive.
"If it be admitted now that the exports of the United Statea amount to fify millons of dollars ansinally, with but three-fiths of the popalation emploged in prodictive balor, it with follow that, if the remaining two-gfihs car be employed with equal inthat, if the remaining two-afiths cart be employed with equal in-
tation will be eighty-thrme and one-third millions, therchy adding to the national wealth thirty-three and one-third millions of dollara annually, from a souree now producing nothing beyond the means of subsistence of the propulation inhabiting a remote, though the mosat prolific portion of our country.
"This weath may not, it is trise, return to uf in the prrcious metals; but if it is more than sufficient to supply our wants in the products of other countries, the ditference must remsia with as in thone metals. Experience has shown, however, that with the meane of gratifying wants, wante increase; and hence it is fair to presume that an inereased importation wouid naturally follow a greatly increased exportation: tue effect of which Wonld be, that, supposing an increazed iuportation to the amonnt of thirty-three and one third millions, and the imposts to be eoflected upon the amounat an averaze of twenty per eemi. the renonrces of the national treannry would be angmented up wards of sis and an half milliong of dollars annmatly; or in ten yeare sixty - live millions.
"Hul there are other conaideratione of great weight, which oughin to urge the general guverhment to the adoption and execifion of an enlarged wystem ot internal improvensent.
"Nrarly the wisule fondy of public land luen far in the toterior of onr couniry; too reauote fron the sea ruast ta justify a hoje that it ean be soid to seiticfe for the purpose of cultovation, tat til a cliannet is opened by which the surgulus produce of the sout ean he tran*purted to maiket.
-The United sitates is eupposed in enntain two millions of mquare miles, and, at the rate which Furope is populated, mon pable of sumtaining one husdred and twenty tailisomse of soulsone million square miles are matumed to be arable land. The Atlantic etatra may contain about three bundred and soventyfive thousand minare miles, of which one-half or one linndred and eighty-seven thousand are supposed to be arnble; this anount deflucted frois one million will leave for the western atates and territorics, eught husdred and thirteen thousiand square miles, or upwards of tive hundred millons of neres of arable land. Of the whole quantiny of land wout of the Alleghany notantsins, there is but an ineonsiderable portiou wold: parhaps not more than two hundred thonsand square malest and this is Incuubered with a dobs due to the goverisinent of about twenty millions of slollars. There must, therefore, remain in the bands of invernment upwarts of six bundred thousand square miles, or three handred and eighty-four mitlions of seres of arable Innd. A greal portion of this land, it is true, may not be required for settlement and eultivation for a long time; but it is a inine of weath, which the antion may, with much eertainty, look to at sompe time both for direct revenue, and indirectly through a vastly extended population, as reacurce of incalcula hie uational wealth.
"The population of the I'nited Statew, which now ammunts to ten millions, may be reasonably expected, within the next thirty years, to ammunt to twenty millions, and will raturally seek to pprend lamelf into that region of ewnintry where land is to be had upon the cheapest terms and of the best quality, T'his lucrease of popalation wilh firminh purchasers fas lands that would otherwike remain nerleas to itre nations. A reasonit ble entimate would be, that mene-balf of this increase will be toeated in the valley of the Missimalppi, and that tea nerem of publie land will be purchased for each inhabatiant. 'this, for five miltions, in addition to the inlubbitnats which that region now contains, would require fify milliona of acres of lanils which, at one dollar per acre, would produce to the nstional trearury fint milions of dollare, at the end of thirty yeare. Great as this consuderatwin in , it is, hewwever, of minor imfortnnee, when tt in considered that the labor of thas five millions will inerease the whole exporta of our consutry onn-balf more than they would be, if the land remnins uselews fire whit of a cheap and easy ehannel of comnnunteation with other parte of the world.
"Undersuch views, can a doubt exist that it is the true policy of the national government to use all the constitutional power it posargaes to call into action the force af the nation, in prodneing from that which is now useless, that which is valaable and necesary to the whole human family, It would seem that sound reason, not lesm than self interent, would forlid a differput concinsion. The ohjeet then, is a national one; the nation at largeis to be benefitted hy an angmestation of its wealth, and the treasury of tise government in tos be enriched from that catuec. Who then ought to effeet the work? The government of the natwn. Who ourfte to pay the expense? "The national trensury. "But it will be asked, almitumg that the governibent of the Faited Atates Itaw ample powers, and the nathmal rewources would be angmented to the extent rupposed, what mrasures must be adopted that will produce the resailt? It may be answered, canals, ir rail posds, if experionce phall prove them prefernhlo. Dit cannim have been proved in Fiurope and more recenily in our own country.
"Heet us therffore, examine the reault of a eabeulation upon the meana of transportation hy candis, and are whetiet that portion of the Iahor of our conntry with the frrtile Inmle, which lie beyond a distanee of two handred and fify mules from the seaboard, may not he lorniglit into operation.
"The expense of tranwoortalunn upon a sood canal, exelusive of tolls, does not exceed for a ton weight, by actual experiment, one cent per mile. If, then, $n$ ton of flour at Rallimore be worth fint dislara for exportation, at the distance of two bnis. dred and fift miles from Baltimnre, it will the worth forty-sevea dollarx and finy cente, or at the diutance of tive hundred miles, it will be worth forty- five dollans; affording an inducement vuffielently atrong when their more fertile sall la conatidered, 10 call forth the energies of the population of that portion of our conntry whicit lies more than two husided and finy miles from the sra coast.
"If the Introfuetion of eanal tran*portation whil, with a popwIntion of ten millinns, increase our exportw of domentic articles from fify to cighly-thrce and one-third millionn, it will follow, admuting that onty one-half the increase in the nest thirty years, shall sctile on the west of the Alleghany monisiains, and that no increased export shall take place in consequence of an inereased population on the east of those mountainy, that at the end of thirty years our exports will ammint to one hundred and twenty-five millions of doliart annually; and coneequenty, if the porceeds of this shall be returned in artieles paying the same duty that is Imposed by the prement tariff, the revelume of the government will be further inervased five millions of dollary; makine in the whole, an increased revenue of eleven and an haif millivas anaually, in consequence of caliung into action addicional Labor, by affording the means of canal tuansportation to the products of the west, at the end of thirty years; to whieh may be added the addition of filly millions of dollars, the proceeds of the sale of public lands, that otherwase would remain ungroductive in the hands of government; and, also, enable the debtors to the United states to poy for laud already sold, iwenty millions of dollars, by affording thens tie meanu of transportathon for the produce of labor tw market. These reatite being ousceptible of mathematical demonstration, require no tiriber elucidation; nor can it be supposed that the enlightened body whe compose the governacht of the eountry, eati require arguments to convince them that the true principles of political economy require that ineasurea should be adopted, without delay, which shall in the shortest time possible, effect objects so haghly beneficial to the con
"If the preceding views be correct, it would seem elear, that the people of the Uumed States, as n community, are all deepty interested in opening a comatsuaication from the waters of the Atlastie to those of the valley of the Mississippl. At what point this coanmunication ought to be made, ean only be ascerained by actual survey and admeasuremsut; that which phall be the abortest and most certain ought to be adopted, without regard 40 local prejudices of partial considerations. And it is of secondary importance to the nation, whether the expense of construction shall be ten of twenty tollions of dollars, seevig that it will be paid for by money, which will have been drawn from the poekets of the comasunity, and which, after boving recarned to them, will again find ito way in the slaspe of linposta to the public treasury.
"But the recent instance of the construetion of a canal from the Hudson river to take Erie, a diatasce of three hundred and sixty miles, by a single state of thas unon, without imposing a dollar tar upon her inhabitants, shews that mo fears are to the entertained of increased public burthens, tven by those whe watch over the treasury of the nation with the most Arguz-like eyea.
"If it be admitted that the canal to unite the eastern and western waters, were to cost twenty millions of dollars, and to be ten years in the construction; that the whole money to be expended ohould be borrowed, upon all average of tive years tine, at Ave per cent. interest; the cost of the canal would then be, when finished, tweniy-five millions of dollars, the interest of which would be one miltion two bundred and afty thousand doliars per year; for which, in the first place, the nation would increas its exports thisty three and one-third millions annually, with ita present population, and Increase its revenue six and a half millions annually, in addition to whatever tolls shall be imsposed upon the navigation.
"Thene considerations bave induced me to believe, that the only question with the general government ought to be, is the comtaunieation between the watery of the Atiantic and those Aowing from the lmanense valley of the Mississippi, practicable, either by canalx or rail roads, with locomotive and stationary engives? and not what will be the expense in the consiruction? seeing that if it be at ali practicable, no expense can be incurred but what the nation can bear without cuppression in the firat place, and whicb, in the end, will be ten fold remuserated.
"Aad here, permit me to state, that I entertain none of those ecruples whieh appear to prevail in some parts of our country, upoa the legitimate powers of the general government, extending to what is emphatically terined works of internal improvement; provided those works are caleulated either 'to pay the debts of provide for the common dufunce and general welfare of the United States;' or 'to regulate commerce among the eeveral etates,' or 'to establish post offices or post roads;' inasmuch as congress posvenses the power 'to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying the above objects into execution'-l entertain, mid it tust the general governmeat will entertain none of those scruples, becnase the secessary powers appear to be as elearly granted to that body an any other implied powers nader the constitution.
"If the adoption and execution of a system of internal improvement will not aid in the 'payment of the debis of the United States,' by inereasing thelr nbility to prodace the menma of payment, or will not aid in the 'eommion defence,' by providing channels of enmmunieation for the transportation of the means of national defence, from one part of the union to another, or will not 'promote the general welfare,' by increasing the resources of the nation, and eementing the union, by the tics of intercourse and common interest; or will not 'regulate enmmerce among the several staten,' between whieh no commerce ean exist without anch impravement; or will not 'establishl poat roads'-if none of these objects will he effected, then, indeed, Is the general governinent precluded from lezislation upon the subject: but if any ons of those nbjects are to be aceomplislied by the consuruction of roads and canals, then the general onvernmeat eeriainly possesses the constitutional power 'to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for earrying such objects into effect.'"

100-The rent of the matter is generally local, and is therefore omitted, exeept the last paragraph.]
"Having endeavored to slonw, that the interest of the United Atatea, at large, will be greatly promoted by the prosecuition of a liberal and extenaive ayetem of internal limprovement, which shall extend iss beselits to every portion of the union, and ahat no constitutional impediment now exist to their government imnoedmely commencing pneh workr; and almo, that the atate of Maryland is equalty nsterested in the adoptum and primecution of a liberal pystem of internal improvememt, within ber own limits: and thint her resouress are amply sufficient to meet any expense she may incur in effecting a work, calculated in so great a degree to Jncrease lier poputation and angment her wealth, I commit the resoluitons, wheh I have had the honor of shbturting, to your candid consideration, whith an awsurance that if the proneiptes they enntain slall be found objectionable, that any otlers which may be proposed, and which shall pre ment a reasmable prompect of accomplishing a work in which I feel that all my Interesta are united, shail have my most cordial approbation and support."

LEGIRLATURE OF NEW YORK.

IX REVATE-APRIL 12. Report of the committec on finance, on the bill from the arsembly relatife to reduring the rate of interest, and sundry remonstrances against the sume.
Mr. Bronson, from the commitice on finance, to whom was referred the bili from the assembly to reduce the rate of interest to 6 per ecnt. and dikconnt to 35 , and guard these rates by the existluz usury penalucs; and to whom also was referrad the several remonstrances from the enties of New York, Hindson and Albany, and from the county of Bt. Lawrence, againat the passage of said bilt, reported:
That the inportant bearing of the proposed emactment upon the industry of our state, the elaborate diacussions had thercon, the anxiety manifested in relation to the meavare, and the diversified views of Iegislators, commend it to the careful consideration of ihe eommitiec, and alrmind thelr hest efforts to etucidate a subject sosmewhat perplesed by subtuleties and ppeculathon. Thiry propase,
1at. Tu explain the diatinction between eapital and eurrency 2d. Describe the appropriate office of oach and the laws which govern them, nad allude to our banks:
3d. Inquire into the necessity ur pinpriety of regulating by Law the bire or linterevt to be paid fur caphal.
And 1st. Capital compuiser all the eumbonlitiea of a conntry which tove value, including the soil, mines, nuatufartorien and their products, as weli as metreliandse and the artificial channets, the vebicies, eraft, ships, ke, whel citculate it.
The amount of eapital thus defined, owned or possessed by the citizens of this state, nr inseated in it, we estiunate at a $\quad$ am not less than 800 millious of dollars.
The valuation by lie iown and eoninty assermenens, includIng the stoch of elaartered banks, would monout to nhout haif that kann, allowing for other corpurate property not relurned by them, for under valuation, for personal property whelb eseapes the assessor, and it is believed the above entitate ia below the truth.

The currency of our state amounts to aboit 14 millions, of which say 12 millions are bank paper, and 2 millious are metal. Our currency, therefore, bears the proportion to our eapital of If per cent. that is, for every hundred dollars of capital we possess one and three-fourilis dollinrs in eurrency.

Office of currency, and the laws uhich gotern it.
The office of currency is to measure eapital when it ehanges ownerw, or pasies from producer to consumer, saving to parties the trouble of seeking out rach other and exchanging their producta. Thuw, a person pozeexsing a contmodity and wishing to eschange if for another, first converts it to currency, and with that seeks out the arlicle whels he dexires to possess. The eurrency is not an olject of desire to either party, except *o far as it facilitatea the exchango of the coumadnties they wnuld part with for those they would pooxers, and it is always dismissed so sonn as It has performed this office of measuring the value of the article exchanged, and in nanin required to asinister to the convrnience of others in the pame manber.
It has bren estimated by writers of authority that one dollar of currency woull exchange five dollars worth of commodities cach year, thne our 14 milliona would excluange 70 millions annuatly. Athough erurency bears so eniail a proporilon to capital, yet it is of the firm limportance that it should be well regulated, messuring capital with preciaion and eteanly uniforminy; for it is this small amonitt of currency, (1 doflars to the hundren!), which *tamps on enpltal ite emparent value; we way apparent, for it dhea not affeet ita real or intrinate value. A well regulated essrency, or in other worde, a unlform measure of capital, performs not only oar domestic exelangea faithfolly, but the forrign aloo; it regulates our exports and importa with all the preeision of which exchanges are anaceptithe. Bnt a deranaed currency not only exchangen our domesile produclas imperifetly, but perptexes firtign trade, drranging exports and imports, and hafting the shill of the merchant in lis efforts io equalize the markels of the eommereial worbl. Thine a snperabundant enrrenry oprrates upon the capilal it mornourea like a abort yard ofick, a light weight, or a sinsll meneure: while a contrarted ellrrency operates like the iong stick, the heavy weight, or the large mrasure. Each extreme is nlike minchiev. ons. Abundant or degraded currency apparently swells the valne of emmmontites, and we say housex, lands and merehandise are dear, wherens in trnth, money in chrap, or eurreney is degraded. Thus, a man purehasing a farm, or inerchandione, at ame when ehrrenfy wha dograded, heing tan almnerat and ton cheap at $\mathbf{Q}_{5}$ per cent. and being obliget when hiv paymunt Galis due to convert the samie farm, or merchandise, into a currency zestored to ite true standard value, would tind to his cosi that the captal whuch had beet measured to tun at 84,000 , and for which be bad uthigated himself to pay tu curreticy, would, by sbe corrected aud tue standard, be measured back ai $\$ 3,000$, and that lie ball jont by this derangement uf currency 25 per cent. of his estate, while the estate itself, the farm or merchan dise, had nether gained or loat it its inirtinic vilue; but his loss had been produced by the use of a ductunting measure or standarif, $n$ lose as fatal to hum as if the estate had aetuatly withered tu two-thirds of its dimientiona under his posesesion.

The currency of $n$ country will alwny be beat regulated when leff fre to obey the impulse of cutnmetce, unsliackied and unembarrassed by legistation. Such tupulse will expand and contract its volume, expel it fronn n country when it has becone abuudant, and reatore it again when it has become senrce. Conmmerce tends with alt ite foree to equalize currency as well an all exchaagenble commoditien anoong trading comanaitiea, at hotne and abrond; and nlthough, like the ude, it is perpetualiy ebbing and flowing and never finds the exact and quict level, yet conmmerce will not thlerate great innquall Les in the curreacy of the trading world, unlese thwarted by political events or legislative enactuments. It is thes approach on equality of distribution which constituten both the unlity and perfection of currency.
The process of regulation ls as follows: $\boldsymbol{\Lambda}$ auperabundan eurrency at a given place becoures a degraded currency, comparen with uint of the rest of the world. It gives to exchangea bie commulities a falae value, raising the price of exportable articles until they will not pay cost nud freight; then the dullar, the guinea and the doubloon drup their character of currency or messure of value, assuane that of merchandise, and take the place of the muhel of wheat, the barrel of flour and the bale of cotton, which the merchast rejecta, nad gut abroad in lieu thereof to pay a deht, of in seareh of furcign conmodities with which to gorge a mirket reudered voracious by this execss o currency. An equilibrium is soon restored by the fost fold operation of refusing to export the domestic products which accumulate at home, where they are unelcas, by sulueradding foreign commoditues to a market alrendy overstocked with them, and by transferring specie from a country where it is abundaut and cheap, to one where it is scarce and dear. Thus money rises, commodities fall, exportation increases, inportacion disaluishes, nad the vibration thus produced is not arrested ant the redundant currency bas become a contracted one; con modities In their turn becone too cheap, nind money too dear, and the former are sent in search of the latter to restore again the equilibrium.
Bueh are the laws by which commerce and eurrency mutually onvern and control each other, and when the currency cmasists of metal alone, lis ebb and how is so gradual as ncver to produce agitation, unlces limpeded or inplolled in ts progrees by political eonvulsions or nowise and fickle legisiatoon; au abunance or mearelty is hardly felt before it is cinrected.
Not so, when 12 parte of the 14 of our currency is paper, which cannot like metal assume the chmacter of merchnndive for exportation. Commerce is then compelled to nake all her drafs on this small stock of metal which the banks have collected to her haada and hold ready for banishment at the shorteat notice. And at the monipnt eommerce begins to exbaust the metal, the banks, under the inllnence of a panic, and in obedience to the law of self-preservition, withdraw the largest possibte aunount of their paper carrency in the shmertest pernul of time, 1 nith by the combined efforts of all the merchants mud all the banks, a piaciting and crucl dearith of currency is suddenly produced, measuring out the debtors' enpital to his more fortunate creditor with uncelvating extortiun. It is true lifis severe process shon resturcs order and beath the commercial eommunity, but like the tornado, which replaces a pexthont by a snlubrious atuovphere, leaves abuudant traces of its devastatimg march.

Baaking.
This important subject, which the bank commissioners have discuserd with ability, demands from us a brief notice, from its cannexion with tle subject under conslderation.

If our banks could be restrnined to their legitimate office, of furnishiag our currency, and affordiog a safe deporite tor the idic eapital of our citizens, and possessed the power of withdrawing at pleasure a portion of thas currency, as it became reitundant, willout promucing revultions in cominerce, they would fuifil the uffice for which they were crented, and prove abundantly useful to the public.

The bank eapital uf our state amounts to abont tiventy-five millises

If we assume that fourten millions of eurrency are renured to performs the prehanges of our state, then bmining capital to an equal nemount, yay fourtern millions, it in brlieved would be adequate 41 our wants, and sufficient for all usetiul purposes.
(If these fimitera millions of capital, ten might lie invested in public stocks, or permanently loaned on band and mortgage, white the remainiag four millong were ineld in specie; with the capital thus disposed, these bauks might safely eschange ther credit in bank paper for good commercual bills or notes, payable at two, three and four months, and thus would the banks fur wish the louiteen unitions of bank curreney required, ntad would hold, $m$ nddition to thear enptal tus secured, lourteen milions of connmercial paper, represethung the exehangeabie comasod ues of the connuty, always convertible to currency, and nowaye to be converted nat applied to therr payment as the discounted bills reached matuity; every enncellimg or payavent to befollowed by the dlscount of a uew bill, nud a new issue of bank pmper; and thus wiuld a sum equal to such capital be loased and redeentied four tunes each year, minounting th the aggregate to fifty-sis millons. If each 90 days loan of bank paper per furmed two exchanges of propeny betore it returaned is pay mient of the bils discounted, one husdred and twolve militons of commodities would te exchnnged ansually with ths bank currency, a Inger sum we doubt not than would reguire the agency of cuireacy.
With such a reservation of epecic, say four millinns, and with good bills equal ill amouot to the currency in circulation, and payable at the rate of more than one per cent. or one bundred and afty-five thousand dullars per dny, betng about one milion per week, the braks could never be embarrased, or alarmed by miny conmercial revulsions, and inght witnese the exportation of their spucie with calm inditlerence, thowing that a lew day receipts would be equal to any redundancy of currency, they might have lasued in exchange for businese paper; for it will be recollected that this redundnncy cannot be very cxcesative when conflied to sueh mperations, sind it should also be borne in mind, that the banker has to provide, in case of envergescy, to redceul an amount epual to the difficicnce between the mini mun and inasimum of the circulation. If ten milliuns shall be the mininum, and fourtecn miltons the masimum, then font millione wilt be the most that can be thrown back upon the banks, leaving nt tie leant ten millions suspended in circnlation.
We have thus endenvored briefly to describe strich, rigid and usetul banking, a system by witheli the banker contd contract or enlarge his buamess gradually, and would never, ubder the influence of a panic, dimmish the currency so murh nad wo ouddently as greatly to distress a whole community, and would possese the means in his specie nod business paper, to inect nlt ex igencies without rewort to his bond nnd anortgage debt, or to his. public seeuritien, both of which would etand npart as a safety iund for bis bill holder.
If it were necessary to wind up the whole system, and abotish the bankz, a wingle gear would suffice to accumplish it, and replace their paper by precie to the amonnt of furteen milliones a year of seatcity of muncy and low prices to be sure, but bot of severe distiess.
If it be true, as wo belleve, that fourteen millions of capital and more than two-thirds of that permaneatly invested, can be made tu susimin a currency adequate to all the wants of nur pophlous and conmereial states, a currency convertible to specie at pleasure, and expapt from frequent nad excessive fluctuatons; the impury may well be inade, whether there are tot defects, dangern and drlusions, contrected with a system which preteculs to hnve absurtied alrenty near twiee that amount of capial, and clamoronsly demands much more, me potion of wheh is permancully invested, but all held, or pretended to be held, in a condituan to redeein bank paper, if oceasion obould put it in requisition.
Not oaly thin bank capital of twenty-five millions, but niso the drposilie of ten millons idle funds and the fonrteen millione of bills receivable, tior which bank paper bas been exchanged, anounting togetier to foriy nine millums, pretend to stand ready to redeem at short notice, may portion of these fourteen nitlhons, or ralher, that portion which can require redemption, betig the ditterence between the atiaimum and maxiotum circulation, say four mullimas. With reaonrces nppareally so ample, the call of commerce for a single million of metal produce a serious bank panic, and a sudden contraction of bank currescy.
This debt of forty-nine millions, which ought, if made upon banking principles, to produce epontancousty for the redempthon of paper balf a milizon per dny, requires a severe and protracted pressure upon it tu produce two or three millions for an emergency; and if firced to yield fout or five millions, a sum cqual to eizht or ton per cent. of the debs, such pressure is attended with wide spread ruin and general consternation.
Tormonclie such apparent power with such Impotent and freble reault, we nre forced to the conclusimn, that many of the rules wheh obght to govern good banking, are disrrgarded. That much of the stock, Unough apparenily paid for is withJrawn, and the folders' paper subsituted therefinf, in the rame of some otior bank. That mucli of the capital in Inaned for long-winded operations, an faımine, shijp-buildiag, long voynges, the crectim of manifactoriex, inilts, &e. That mith of the discountivd paper punfessing til be cominercial, and representing commodities which can be converted to cuitency for the paymeat of the bill, is not wlicilly wheh, and that such paper, altuongh paid at maturity, is indebted to mome of the many exprdieats fanituar to commercial ope rathons for surlo payment espediente, bow ryer, which demand uew loane, equal in amount th those rancelled, and thes the merchant conninues to the debtor to the hank, not for a smali and tenopornry loan in muticlpation of lita lills receivable, but for a large proporiton of his espital; which, though borrowed temporatily, is retained permnnently, and cannot lie birrendered ith thes of pressure withour great sacrifice, if not ruin.

The committee cannot command the time of space necussary to explain intelligibly the evils resulting from tie combination of so much eapital with our enrrency，compelling them to mhnre the fate of each other，nud valuly attempting to subject them to the same laws，by which means both perform their office imper－ feetly；the capital bat haif nubserves the intereats of the borrow－ er，as he boide it by a tenure so precarious as the wanter nod ne－ cesaties of the banker－wants and necessities which are sure to presen both banker and borrower at the same time，while cur－ rency is contracting and exjanding by an artificial ionpulse， whieh greatly impairs its ntility．

While we entertain no doubt of the solveney of our bank and their ultimate ability to redeem their currency，pay their depositors，and restore their capitals to the stockholders，escept in the event of a commercial convilsion，yet atl this is deemed seenndary in importance to their duty of furwishing a uniform and stable currency．It is a law applicable to currency，that it increases in value as it decrenxes in volntne，and decreanes in value as it increases in vilume．Thus， 10 milions of curteney would exchange $n$ given amuunt $n$ f eomumodities as effectnally se 14 millions，with this diffirence；the contracted standard of 10 millions would give to them a valne of about 78 millions， while the 14 millams would expand the same eotmmodities to 100 millions：and if this wat the antual amount of orte excbang es，a varintion of 4 millums in our currency，the difference be tween the extremes of a contracted or an expanded circisation， would raise or depre⿻丷木⿴囗十一 their value by $2 d$ milions in one year，a sum equal to twice the ampant of our cutrency；and when we extumate the mischiefo produced by applying a flucluating and mnatable currency to such an aenount of excianger；its gam－ bing influence uneettine prices，enriching eome，impoverishing others，and embarrassing all，by baflling and mockinz their eal－ cuintions，the consideration that our aafety fiond of a few bun dred thousand dollars will protect us againat an oecasional low in the eurfency of a broken bank，foafs alinta importance．SHeh fillure and loss would be ahandantly compensated，if they woutd teach caution to the pablic，and skill and prudence to the banker．

Notwithstanding bank cliarters have absorbed so much of our active eapital，to the prejudice of long winded and permanent operations，mimulating trade and commerce almont to intosica． tion；notwithetanding that many villages of the interior are laid under contribution for their last dollar to gorge with capital and otimulnte to excess the favored few having bank charters，stil the manin for charters threaten＂to swallow afl our finaling ca－ puta，leaving no other resource than banks frif horrowers．
It is believed that restraining banks in their dsecount to 6 por cent．would tend to improve the character of their ileld，by in－ ducing thes to reject long loant and collect more rigilly．And that restraining them in their ispues to the amount of thelr pa pitais，（Instead of twice the amonnt），would clisek the efforts of a part of the small country banks to extend their circalation； anks which with limited means for redemption，and embold－ ned by their high eredit derivrd fiom the safety fund，puyh their operationd beyond the limit nf prudence，and fil up by their circulation，the vactum，if any，len by their noore eau－ tious competutors．Such restraint mipht reduce the circulation of the country bank：from rizht uiflions，its present amount，to seven miltoons，of from nimut the amount of their ageregate ca－ pitals to seven－cightis of that amount，counteracting the general endency to overiond curfency．
Both erstrainta wonid tend，in anme small degree，to clieek the flow of capital into the bank channel．

> Of capitat.

In diseussing the subjeet of capital，the lawn which govern it， and the inturest or price paid for its use，the committee wili study to a void all allusion to currency；aud when they apeak of interest they are in be underntood as meaning the hircof capitat， by which moans thry hope to relicve these subjrets fiom the perplexing obscurity which has enveloped them when eapital and eurrency wrere coufoundef．
Capltal doos not expand and contract with the wame clasticity， or ebb and flow with the mame rapidity，as the curreney by which it is mensured；not does it incy the name laws．It is the fruit of industry，skill nnd economy．Inder $n$ gond zovern－ ment，nuil in n comiminity well regulated，lia recumnlation is constant and rapid，and the largest nccumulationse are found in the oldeat cauntrics thus governed and thus regulnted．Its eon－ tant tendenct is in flow off frome these abunitant and ewolien foantains，and in the direction wheh promisers tic best return with the grateal security，whether tint return he gichied in the thape of interist for Iosrs，dividendic on Invesalinenta，comines． cial and manufacturing enterprises，of land apecuiations．
The same law which diffuses capital from foumtain to rill， frm an old to n new country，also requires at sil pmints its per－ petual and ceaceless change of investmrnt，as one sulijeent al． ures with more forec than another；and thas do the various bramelies of indlustry approach and molntain their invel．

It is believed that of the eizht hundred millions of capital be－ longing to and in the pmomession of the citizens of onr atate，at leatt four hundred miltions of doltnre are Irnt and borrowed at from four to fourteen per cent．Intereat per annum．Whrn it is eonsidered that the bond and mortgame deht of the citv of New York exceeds forty millions；that the ilebt on permanal srentity must be still larger；that our bank loans of capital，eveluding currency，are betwcen thirty and forty millinne；add to these large item，the debts dus the fosieign innd－holders，as the Hot－ large itemn the debte duse the fornpany，the Puttency，the Farish，the Chaumout and the

Uomby estatex，with many others of less magnitude；the three inillons loaned by the Life Insurance and Trust compeny，and an equal amount by the savings＇banks；the Censectiett schoof fund debt，and the vast amount of foreign and domeatic deb due to and from individuals；this estimate will not be deemed an exagneration．

With a debt so vast，being equal in amount to twenty－eigh times our currency，and with such a propensity in our cirizen un borrow and lend，it may be well to inquire whether its influ－ ence is salutary or pernicious，whether it shoald be tolerated or prohibited，encouraged or reatraiued；and to the committere it is consoling to belifve，that thin debt，vast as it is，produces public benefits proportsoned to ita magnitude．

The coumintee will assume thint capital cannot be soo ablan－ dant in any country，of two widely diffused，provided that difir won is gradual．To deny this proposition would be to assert that we liad cultivated and slocked too many farmi，had buik too many hoases，mills，manhfactories，and ships，of had acen－ malated too much merebandise．

Hire or interent of capital．
Capitnl cannot be made to yield capital agnin，without com－ bining with it skill and lahor，nor can＊kill and Inbor be made to yieht captan，（beyond the bireling or Eervant＇s pay），withona combining capital with them．Now it so bappens in the wise ordering of nature，that the ability of the possessor to apply the labor and skill to the management of his captal，diminishes in the ration of the increase of sueh capital，and that from two canses；first，from the incrrased labor of managing such aceu－ mulated cupitnl，and sceond，from the decay of pliysieal anil mental powers by the apprnarb of age；hence the man who has acquired weath，finds his interent in lending or in investing it to be loaucil or matuaged by corporations．While every man in our commanity，where the field for enterprise is hroad and am－ ple，whose education，talente，occupation and akill fit him for n riation above the scrvant of day laborer，being destitute of tncans，funds his interest nlso it borrowing，to the end timt he may turn his talento and nequitements to profitable account． Even the mechanic，without a patrimony，contd not avail bum－ self of years of indented serviee，unless he could borrow a shop and toole；nor the ntudents of law and medicime if their mental aequircments，withont their borrowed lithraries：or the indigent farmer or merchant of their ykill，without the borrowed farm or merchandas．Both parties therefore，find a mutual intrrest impelling them to Ifnd and borrow；nor does the interest of the parties conllict with that of the puhlic，as these loans diffuse and anginent eapital，affording aliment for labor，and yielding to humble inllasery an ample reward．
It is helieved all these objerta are best promoted，and capital most widrly diffused，by loaning it in minute portions；thus combining the greatrot amount of lahor and will with ngiven amount of capital，yielding in the aggregate the largest amount of revenite．
To illuatrate：If a eapitalist possensing \＄100，000，should in－ vent this wim in the purchase and culture of one hubdred farins， worth cach 81,000 ，these hundred farnus conld have the benefit of the superintending skill and labor of one man only，and it cannot he doulted that sueh an Investment woulal be wiblly unproductive of revenue；wherens these hunderid firms loaned o one hundred young，efficient and skitful farmers，would have the henefit of the superintending skill and labot of one hundred men，vielding to the lender 今anch or an aggregate of $$ 7,000$ and would yield to the borrowers the support of one luadred Camilifa，and n gradually ineresping surplus，butil the whole debt of $$ 100,000$ shond be uttimately extinguished and the farmis floulled of trehlet in value；anch in the rapial procese of acenmatation in a ponstry like ours，by the jodichme combima－ fion of rapital and lahor．
The capitalist undertaking to manage a hundred ships，mills or storm，could not prosper liettre than the farming experiment． Athough capital thos dividen into minute parcels yields the largeat return，nud ean afford to may the highest rate of interest， et it may be alvantageonsly borrowed in larger mims，and for nore extended and contly operations，as uran川fleturing，naviza－ tion，\＆ec．and the eapitalist is ennitent in such cases with a lower rate of interest，as the is savert ther tronble of multiplsing litw transartions，and of re－investine so frequentlv．Capital，there－ fore，when loaned，has its wholesale and retail price or rate of intcrest．

the law should impore upon these contracts. The most essential part of the contraci, that of fixing the nalue of the capital birrowed, or the suno on which interent sis to charged, when that capital doem not uadesgos the process of tramsmutation to curreocy, but passee ditcet lion leader to borrower, fass never loern der-mird a subject proper tin regulation by legislanive enactusent or supervision; thus the price or value of the farm, the conton mill, if the ship, is left tu the excrcise of lodividual dincretion and skil, and even the formearance of interent, technically culled rent of charier, may be wetiled by the parties in all cases whure the wame tarm, eotion mill or ship, are to be returned, no satter haw renote the porionl of reatoralion; but when the valse of the farm, colton hull or ship, is to be restored in their sevecal prodscts, agricultural, manotactured or conn mercial, and thesse priducts are to be converten to currency, Ureu legislation has decuded that the case comes within its province, and the itsterest, hire, charter or forberarance, is no fonger a fit sobject for the exercise of indivitual skill and agreement. Nor Is this all, or the worst of ail. Legislation has also decided, (if the agency of curreney liappeas to be Invoked), that all leming and borrowing slatil conform to one standard, and that an arhitrary one, which ywids to no exigency, a staadarit at or below which all must lend aod borrow, without regard to aboudance or mearcity of capital, anoust of loan, na thre of security, prospect of gall or lazard inf loes.

And yet this legal ptandard, whols professes to reguiate interfest on rigiblly, performs almont any other office than that uf rozulating. W'hen the snark't sate of internst is below the logal rate, the law haw mo regnlutiong foree, capital is thea loaked at the suaket ratr, the law being a dead letter. W'lica the market rate at one place is below, and at another above the fegnal rate-for Instancesix p+r cent. on lowng Island and eight pur ceat. at Chautauyue, the legal rate of weven per cent. gitarded by penalties, inatead of equalizing the iaturest of the two jhaces, as it profosses to dn, would tend with all lis fincer ta increaw the dimparity, by cliecking the flow of capital from the cheap to the dear region, depressiag the market rate to five ps cout. on lonnt I riasd, and raising it on aine per cent. ia Cinantamque, deromging instuad of regulating. When the market rate of imerest at retanl, or for stuos of small amount, exceeds seven per cent. Instead of regulationg for this valuable class of borrowers. the law deoves to them the use of capital, and is etfect forbids their borrowing at all, while it speures to the large borrower and the best security the monopoly of borrowing.

Another class of horrowers, though not regulated by legal enactments, are zreatly embarrased and oppromsed by them. We allude th the flasm whose moral integrity forbide the sitw picion that they will avail theumplvom of the pematics of a law, the protic red protection ar which they are willing to waive; and it proticred protection ar uhich they are whiling to waive; and it comprising, with many athera, almost the entirn anercantice popolaton; but as the elass of lenders are far Irss numersus than the borrowrre, and ryany of them are ileterred liy moral rw. straint, aud others by suspicion and timuluty, from maklug loant at high interent, this larac class of Jommable borrowers are conmenved to the nusrey of a few lenders, and thase the mont enterptiming and least arrupulous of thrit order, whie their apore serupulnos econpmetiturs rebire from the field to aval themselvew of the thousand doors thrown wide open for the profitable inventument of their capital, by measas of a temporary scareity thos aggravated by their own change of purzuit. Even tho: lender humelf, wlinse cronacience would not inlerate a ten prir cent. Inan, may, with a clrar conscieace, and under tioe protection of law, purchase the cetate of the perwon to whom lis had refuned the loan, at a price whiplı wilf yield twenty per crnt, profit, and at a wale rendered necessary ferlaps by such refomal.

It is aotorions that the market rate of interest in often, and at places almont always below the irgal ptandard, as at prearnt regulated. Auch stamiant, therefore, rialy operates wherm the masket rate cxceeds this limit, and thon it works ponsitive mis. chuef by checkiag an infux of capisal, which a higher markit woold Inre frons alorond; Iocking up at lonne hy inventment what had bera limaner, denying to the borrower hit accurtonned supuly, expelling capital and turning it Iato tew channilu, rais. ing the market price rxtravagantis, and eecnring to n fow the munopuly of leasling at such exaggreated rates, deranging iadns. try, and forcing our citizens to a frrifuent clasiog of purminit; and all this withont, aw we believe, one solitary beneft to atme for so mbeh mischief.

Tise consanttee are aware that Improvident and ruinoon foant arn coniracted ${ }_{I}$ and would contiaue to be with or without legal reatrant; but wo far from requiring legislative interposiegoas, thewe losses are the only legithuate aisd effectual restrasists bopa inprovident borrowiag.
Cajuital is borrowed solely with a view to main; a pledge is required by the lender equivaleat to the loan, which pledge is asprendered if the capital is dissipated. Here then are two molives of equal force to guide and control the burrower-the hope of gais and the fivar of lows. If the hoper of gain be strong, the fear ot loss is equally so: if the desire for acquisition be inondinate, the far of loss will be equally coatrolling.
With hopes and fears thas balanced, experience and observation alone are required to guide the jndgroent, and nothing can be mume impresrive and admonitory than to wituews a neighbor wtruggling tur years, and sinking ai last under a load of debs charged with h high rate of interest; all who witnessed would avoid the daager tas they value their furmar acquisitions or their future hopes.

The committee have come to the concluston that the best interest of the state will be advanced.

1at. In promoting the free circulation of foreign and domestie capital over our wtate, by giving stability and security to fits investinent, and by extending legislative facilities to associations who borrow and lend capital uneonnected with eurrency-a saving: banks, trust companies, 2 c .
9f. By restraising banks in their circulation to the amoust of their capitais, and by resirathing them in their discounts to 6 per cent.
3d. By repenling the usury penalties, except in relation to banks, and $\overline{5 x a y g}$ the logad rate of intereat 6 per cent.

11, bowever, the usury penalties should not be repealed, we would objcet to reducing the Jinit of interest frem 7 per centWhich seldom presses opon the tnarket rate, creept in the nev parts of onr state, and fising that limitat 6 per cent. which in thaby parts of our state, and at all times, would press upon the market rate, aggravating the evilid incident to the present standard of intereist. If these anjeadmuenta generally stoould not prevait, then we would respectinlly recomuend that the further progress of the bill under consideration be arrested, in conformity with the prayer of all the memorials addressed to the senate.

REMARKE OF MR. DAVIS, OF MABgACHUSFTTS, In the house of representatives, February, 1833, on Mr. Rool's amendment to Mr. Heardsliy's amendment to the part of the Wit which retates to teoot.
Mr. Speaker, (aaid Mr. Daris), It is worth our while, befort we vote on this incasure-as it is the first, and will be followed by others of inke claracter-to understand what principles we act inon. The amendacat proposea to reduce the daty on wool, in lirce yeare to 25 per cent. ad valorem; and the amendmeat to the amendasent proposes to leave that daty as 30 per cent. Ile should, the thooght, vote for both, wol beckuse he approved of tisem, or consitipred them no suitable acte of lecislation for this government to adopt, bnt hecause the considered them more favorable to the great agricultural latereste of the couniry than the bill; and this was the only reason why he should give then his nopport, if be gave it at alt.
He would, while up, take the occaaion to say that probably few members on the fioor felt more anxious than be did to see this all-stirriag subjcet pettled-to nee national harmony reotered, and the Jarrisg opinions, if ponsible, recoacilsd. He had from the ontset entertained this sentimeat, and while all around hita seenapd to concur in it, and seemed anxions to allay exctiemornt, a ad to cherish better feeling, It gave him pain to observe that the honse, after more than four weeks of intense labor, hed approximated hitie towards it; indeed, he sald, the signs of the tuncs were such that he despaired of any reasonable adjustineat.
Ile saw the bill of the committee of ways and means erecrated thronghout the conatry as a mensure unesitable to be the hasis of future revenue. He used no harnfier laaguage than faeta justified, for it given satixfacton no where in the portions of the union aitached to the protection of nur industry; and he was rqually cosfident it was reprobated where he supposed it Wha designed to give eontentment. We had now had it uader comailf ratlon a awnth, had eodeavored to amend, alter, adjust aad bring tt fato an acceptable form. We had labored early and late, and what had it all eome to? Would any ose say we are now apparently anv nearer tu the object of desire than when we cunnmencrd? Fivery motion, avery propiosition to modify Uns Inll, unsatisfantory ras its provislons are, has been steadily aud resolntely resisted by tire sooth, and we have this painfol evidence that ins bwiter propmitionw, so terms more just and bensficial to the country, are in be offered to us. The bill, therefore, aad nothure else, has the apprnbation of lhose opponed te
bnt to resist a measure so unjast anil injurious; aad this, for oae, he should do to the last, if hi were nut inphoved.
The $peaker. The gentleman fion Masachusetts must confine his repuarks to the mineudurent.

Mr. D. inquired it'it was not to order for hiur to argue that the proponed decreane of duty was impolitic and bad legribation? The speaker assented to this.
Mr. D. observed, be beheved he had conflurd himself within the strietest rules of order, and should continue so to du. He had syoken at lurge, ou a preceding day, of the injurious pulicy of reducing wages, and of the pernichous tebilency it had to make a poirr, ignorant and miserable populatuon, like that in Eurupe. He had said that duties could nur the reduced on proteeted urticlea without prishacing this effect to an extent ptopmortioned to the reduction; and ths would not reach manufacturers alone, but nil laborers in the country. He had therefure paid, a quertion of reduction was one of sernous import and should be well eonsidered. And he woulh now inquire if the avowed ohject of the bill was not a reduction of revenue because thete would be a surplus in the treasury? He dint not coneur wilh the gentleman from New Yotk, (Mr. Beardsley), that we had any evidence before us of nuch an excess of revenue. The secretary of the tiea*ury proved to us last sumbier, nue. The secretary of the theli did become a law, that it would raise only a revenue of $$ 12,000,000$; but he now alieges, only n few monthn baving nlapsed, that it will produce $$ 18,000,000$. It ie not pasy to undcrotand his reasons fior this change of estimatex; nor to it easy to eettle which opinimn is entitied to masal eonsideration. If it will raise wo more than $12,(000,000, tive government will need that suut, and there is no wecasion for futher reduchion. The secrptaly, hiwever, does not pritend that even if the sum of $$ 18,000,000$ is raised, that there would be any surptus thin year, for the whole will bu almorbed by the demands of the government. No excess can acerue, therefire, before the cluse of the year 1834 , and it is by lis Alatement problematical whether there will be nuy then. Why should we be pressed so urgently on this subject now, as if it was a matter of certainty, when it is only a cemtingrnt? 'Why sloould we be forced to go forward hlindiold-th grope along a path which the secretary himself secons not able to point out with any certain knowledge? Yet thin reduction is alleged to be the main object of the bilf, and we are urged to act liere an if we knew thet the laws would place in the treasury six millions of surfilus revenue in 1834; and this is the reason pressed unecasingly upon us to pas the bill.
Auch matters, he said, the caune properly before na he was willing to consider. The public debt was neatly paid off, and we shall consequently have lenw occamion for money-we must tberefore raise less that we hitherto have tlone, but we had not been unmindful of this cvrnt, and had prepared for it by lexnening the revenue ten or twelve milliuna in a short period. Ile whinitted that the argument agninet an accumulating surplus in the treasury was sonnd, and did not deny that the gnvernment must be lienitcd in its incorne in ilu neeusarary expenditures, but the enemies of American industry insist on lerseming the protertion of the latorer, on the gromid of a surplus. He dlesired asaurance of the existence of such surplus-hefore he acted on this question, he wished to bes made reazonalily certain that lonatility to our industry did aol outrun ail other consaderationw.
In voting, he raid be should keep these considerations steadily in view, and would reiterate that he stmuld support no bil that abandased the prineiple of protection. In reducing the revenue, let ut, he said, understand what we do, and ujon what prineiples we act. It seems th be asyumed here, that the only mode of reducing reventue, is th reduce all duties on imports equally. IIe protexted against this, as a false, unsound theory, designed to destroy by its insidious action, the protective doetrine, withont accomplibthing the olgect it professed to have in view. The bill before us, whirh is recomenended becaure it is alleged to be neeesonry to reduce revenue, contains ltema that hy this process will increase, instrad of dhninishing revenue. Take, for example, modent spirits-the duty on whichis perhaps one hundred aud fifty per cent. and suppasp this dinty reducell to seveuty five per cent. will not the importations which are now restiained by the very high duty be so increased as to increase the revenue? The committee of wayw and means, he said he believed, admitted that this would be the nosult. The same may be sant of other articlis.s.
Mr. Wilde rore and inquired if it was in order to discuss the whole suliject?
The spenker said no, the argument inust be conflued to the minendment.

Mr. Dacis devired to be informed if it was not is order to shew the inpolicy of reducing duties on wool in the manner proposed.

The speaker replied, yes. There was a cry from different quarters, "go om-c" on." The argument he had u-wd, whs til that point. The general proposition is to rednce the revenne, anl to neeomplish this ohjert the ameminent proposes to reduce the duty an woon. To this lic, in the form in which it stood, was oppesed, and hix argmment he considered direet and legiti. mate for this purpose. The speaker nentilefl asent. Certain and fixed principtes, hen sath, ought to govern $t$ e in this and all voters thai we give on this and all other propmoitions for reduc. then-and at the head shoultd statal constanty the primeiple of protectuge American industry-no measure should mect with counterance that anms to abolish this.

The gentleman from New York, (Mr. Beardsley), said, the only wise way to reduce is to do it gradnally. With that sentleman, he waid, he concurred thus far-but we onght to look as well at what we bad done as to what we were called on to do. In July last, enugress ernsidered this mitier with the most anxions and deliberate attention, and lowered the duty greatly, and this shouid not excape ubservation, as any attempt to demecend further may be nitended with grent peril, and may be followed by gifevons calomity. Nutwilhstanding this, he observed, greater reductionn were demanded to counpose the irritated state of feelling which os aligged to paist in the eountry, and how ean it be donc? If done at all, it can be aceomplislied in but ine way, withmut violence to private rights and grent private sutiering. It thust be gradual-very gradual-and in long ume, and arringed with great judgement and discretion. There in an tmmense interest at stake, and the prosperity-aay, almost the existence of a vast vopulation involved in it, and it should be approached with cantion, and changes affecting it mode with sound judgenent. What, he naid, he would repeat, do you propose to do? Last July a great change was made, bet the law goes into operation in alarch next; tatat change which was in reduption of twenty per cent. of the present duties on wool is atill future, and will congrees add th it the present proposed reduction of fiftern pur ceint. of the duties of $1 \times 02$ ? Can the esuntry bear thise? for it is to be lollowed up on wroultens and other artieles. Will the woul grower lop wathitied to bave his property made thus the sport of this body? But this is not all, for this reduction ix to enntinne for three yearm after the same rate. This is not gradual, but rapid-very rapid-and full of hazard. The time to not long phough, espectally for men in debt. The descent mhonld be slow; the annual reductinn momnil, that by inereased skill and economy, men may not only exelt themwelves, hat may succeed in uecting it. If, he said, you descend sixtren or twruty per cent. in a year, they will sit down in deopair, being unable to zrapple with it. Men phould have time to prepare for changes in their businewa. This proposition of the gentleinna from New York goes by long strides; it is very luurried; and though, said he, the prineiple is the right one, yet the detnils are oljectionable.

He waid he had occupied the attention of the house mueh Innger than he intended when he rowe. He would not, in con-clu-tion, nay the woul glowers of the nianulacturers would bear any change frobt the bill of '32, without hard preesure and suffering. He belinved they would not, but hoped they would willingly make great pacrificen for reprose. They were wearied with tht endleas warfare. And believing such to be their feelings, he shault, for one, take the rempan=ibility of voling in judicirum and gradnal redortion, if the diecontented would sit down and be at prape under it; otherwise he would not lif has finger in eary thy measure thronali. He fose to express these general views, that has courme on tha, and the mensures which will succeed, inight be minlerstond. He did not propose, it prusent, to introduce any measure, lout thopen, if the amuth desired, an they had often exprezed the mmelves, to wave nur manufactures, and ot the name time to compuse all controveray, that some gentieman from that quater wouhl uffer mimetinng beside thia bill, whicfin mo man is favor of protectinn ean support.

TREASITY CONXTRUCTIONS OF THE TARIFF.

CIRCULAR TO OV年CERE OF THE CKPTOMs.
Treasury department, At pril 90hh, 1833.
The Th sertion of the ant of the Ith July, lia2, entitled "nn net to alter anil ampend the several acts imponing duties on hasjurts," plovideg, "that in all cares where the duty which now is, or hereafler may be inppsed on ang tonds, whies or maereliandiac, imported into thr United stater, phall, hy law, he regulated, of the directed to be catinnated of levird upon the vnlue of the minare yard, or of any other qurntily or parcel chereof; and in all cawes where there is or shatl be imponed any ad valoren rate of duty on any goods, wares of merelandise, fimported into the Cniteil states, it shall be the duty of the cnllefor, within whose distriet the name shail be lunported of entered, to canse the actual value thereof, at the time purehaspa, nad jlace from which the qume shall have bern imported into the United States, to ba appraised, estinuted and ancertained, and the number of suol yarils, parcels or quantitios, and snch actual value of every of themi ns the cnac may requirr; and il shall, in every cace, be the duty of the appraisers of the V'uird States and every of them, and every other person who shall act ths such appoaiser, by all the rrampnatile ways or means In his or their power, to nsccrtain, ertimate nod ajprat;e the trme and actual vatue, any invoice of affilavit theret" to the contrary notwithetanding, of the vaid goods, wares and merchanilise, at the time porchawed, nith place from whwure the same shall lave hern imponted into the United Etates, and the number of noch ynri, parecle, or quantities, and =uch netnal value of every of them as the ease may require," &c. & c .

The 9ur section of the shme act provides, "that it shall the the duty of the speretary of the treasinry, under the direction of the prexident of the United statrs, from time to time, to extabli=h such rules and rogulatione, not incurisistent with the laws of the Tinited Stutey, he the presillent of the tinited Statrs shall think proper, to secure a just, finthfort, ant linpaitial appraisal of all youds, waren and merchandise, as aforreaid, imported into the limicil states, and just anil proper entries of *neh arInal value theipof, nud of the manare vards, parcela or other quantiocs, as the case may require, and of such actual value of every of them; and it shall be the duty of the eecretary of the treasury to report all such rules and regulations, with the reapons therefor, to the then next session of congress."
The Ist section of the act of the 24 March, 1833 , entitled san act to modify the act of the 14th July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, and all other acts Imposing dutics on hundred and thirty-two, and all other acts imposing dutics on imports," declares "that from and after the 81 st day of Decemimports" declares "that from and after the asst day of pecember, one thosand eight hondrud and thirty-thrce, in all cases where duties are impowed on foreign imports by the act of the 14th day of July, 1862 , entitied 'an act to alter and amend the several acts Imposing duties on Imports, or by any other act, shall exceed twenty per centum on the value thareof, one-tenth part of such excess shall be uleducted," &c.
It is believed that by this provision, and as necessary to the etecution of the law, hll dutiee imposed by any act nf congress, upon foreign imports, are substanitally regulated by, and are directed to be ewtimated and levied upon, the valne of the square yard, where that is the form, and apon somie otiser quantity nr parcel In eases where the daty is not imposed by the square sard, and that consequently the anthority conlerred by the 9 th seetion foresani, mupt necesarily be exercimed, for the more effectual execution of the said act of the 2d March, 1833.
The following rulus and regulations are therefore eatablished, under the direction of the president if the United States, for the purpose of securing a just, faithful and impartial apprisal of all goods, wares and inerchandise Imported Intn the Cuited States frown and after the 3lat Ihecember next, and for she just and proper entrics of the actual value thereof, and if the square yards, parcels or other guantities, as the case may require.
Is all cases of all valorem dutiem nompr the act nf the 14ih July, I832, or any nther act, the regnlations at preecnt anthorised by law, for aweertalning the actual value, will remain unaltered. With respect to those articles liable to a opecifie duty, or other dity than that of ad valorem, the aetuat valise thereof at the time purchased, and plare from whleh the snme shali at the time purchased, and plare from which the same shaif wherein the same may have been orignally inanufictured of produced as the case may be, will loe apprained, extimated and ascertaised, and the number of yards, or square yards, tons, pounds, galions, buslich or otiser parceis or quantitieg, and such actaal valuc of any of them as the case may rwquire, and just and propor entries thereof be made, In the same manner and according to the same remblations, as are required by the wand act of the 14 th Jily, 18652 , and other acts now in force in regard to articlea paying ad valoreul duty; and in all cases the wame verifiestion of invorces and other pronef will be required and priduced as are at present authnrised in rezpect to articles llable by previous acts to an ad valorem duty.

The value of all such articlea belng thus ascertalnod, the proportion which the duty now paid by snch articlon bears to the sald value, will be calculated, nind from the excess thereof heynud twenty per centum: that is to say, where such praportion shall be equal to fify per centum, there shall be deducted ten per centum upon thiriy per centum, or three dollars; and from after the 31 st Deceinber, 1835, the like deductinn shall be made from the same pxcess, or ten per centum upon thirty per centum, being three dullars anore; and in the same inauner, at the several periods apecified in the eaid act of the 2d March, 18\%3, until the 31at of IVevember, 1838 , fromt and afer which, nue-haif of the residne of such excesm will be deducted, and the other half thereof from and after the 30th of June, 1842.

From the propnrtion of the duty thas ascertained upon the wines of France, in additinn to the said ten per centum, there will also he deducted such further per centum ns will be necesenry to preserve the discrimination in favor of such wines, suptiated in the conventinn between the (rmited States and Iis majesty the king of the French, concluded at Paris on the 4 th of July, 1831, and authorised by law.

It may be proper in nbserve that alf manufactures of cotton, or of which cotton shall be a component part, will be appraved, estimated and ascertained, and the number of yards, square yards, of ntlicrwise, parcel or quantities, and of such actual value thereof as the case may require, will be ascortained, and just and proper entries thereof made, according to the foregoing regulatinns.
It is believed that the value of foreign imports referred to in the act of the 2d of March, 1833 , is not the assmmed value on which the duty upon all mannfarturvs of cotton, or of which catton ahall be a enmponment part, is dircetred to be entimated under the act of the 14th of July, 1832 -viz: of thirty cents, if not dyed, colored, pointed or stained, thongh valued at lese than thirty cents; and of thirfy-flue cents if dyed, colored, painted or staiued, thnigh vained at leas than thirty.five cents the square yard. This value is merely artificial, and assimed by previnus laws as a means of anginenting the ad valorom rate of duty imposed, for the purpose of protectim, upon such urticies; and the amount of the duty, although ascertained lyy the adoption of the minimum priweipte, in the proportion which the sum collected ty the government heare to the actual value of the articlea and, thereFore, a quantity of sbeh contons, costing in fact eighty dollars, bet valued fivt the purposes of the set of the 14th of July, 1832, at iwn hundred aud forty dollark. really pays a duty nf 75 per centim nряин the irne valise thercof.
The act of the g.l of March, IR33, lowever, proceeds npme a different principlr, and aims at a different pirpose. It nbviously Intends to make an eqnal dedoction finm the duty na all foreign import, and sitimately to reduce it in a rate not & xeeedfige twenty pur ceuttum upon the rcal, and not an assumed, va-

Iue of the articles imported. This lant purpose is explictily stated in the last clause of the sth sectuon, which provide "that all Imports on which the Ist section of this act may operate, and all articles now admitted to entry from duty; or payine a less rate of duty than twenty per centas ad valorem, before the wad thirtieth day of June, ove thousinnd eight huadred and for-ty- two, from and after that day, may be admitted to entry, wabject to sueh duty, not exceeding twenty per centum ad valorem, as shall be provided for by law." And the first section, which has been already referred to, expressly provides for the deduction, after the 30 hh of Junc, 1842 , of all escess of foreign imports above twenty per centum on the value thereef, which shall have been imposed by previous laws, and to which they may then be wubject.
The object of thus establishing a general ad valorem duty on foreigu imports, and of equalizing the rate can only be attarned Jy calculating the duty on the real, instead of the assumed valuc, This purpose is inore particularly manifest from the last clause of the third section, which provides that from and after the 30th of June, 1442, "the duties required to be paid by law on gordis, wares and merchandise, shall be assessed opon the value thereof at the port where the same shall be entered, ander such regulations as may be prescribed by law." Each of these clausen relaten to the actual value of the foreign fmport, and they differ only in estimating that value; previously to the 30th of June, 1812, the value In the foreige country being taken, and after that time, the value at the port of entry. The object of neither can be accomplished at any period, by adhering to the nominal value assumed by previons acte, or to the rate of ad valorern founded upon such hesumption.

In all impnrtations of manulactures of eotton, therefore, or of which cotton shall be component part, after the 3ist of December, 1833 , the value thereof will be ascertsined in the manner aforesaid; and from the amount which the rate of duty under the aet of the 14th of July, 1R32, or any nther act, shall exceed twenty per centum on such value, the deduction required by the act of the 9d of March, 1835, will be made according to the foregoing rulet.

Though these rnles and regulations wilt not go into effect until the lst of Jsnuary nest, they bave been thus raily adopted and malle public for the purpoee of giving timely natice to the nannufaefurers and merchants, and all others concerned; and eopecially as to the verification, hy the comsuls abroad, of the involces of importatinns to to imade after that time.

CONFI.AGRATION OF THE TRFASURY BULHDINGS. Treasury department, Apoil 12tA, 1833.
In the late conflagration of the treasury building, nearly anf the correspondence of the secretary of the treasury, from the entahllshment of the department to the 3lst March, 1R23, was deatrnyed, including, as well the original letters and communications addreased to the scerctary of the treasury, as the reenrds of the letters and communications written by him. With a vlew fo rupair the loss, as far as may be practicable, all officers of the United Siates, are requeated to cause copies to be prepared, and atsthenticated by them, of any letters (excepting thona hercinafler alluded to) which they may at any time have written to, or received from, the mecretary of the treasury; and all thone who have been in office, and nther individunls throughnut the I'nited Staten, and clsewhere, are Invited to do the saine. That this correspondence may be arranged Intn appropriate bookw, It is requested that it be copied on follo foolseap paper, with a shffeient markin on all sides in admit of binding, and thet no more than one letter be contained on a leaf. It Is alpo requested, that the coples be written in a plain and distinct nr engrossing hand. W'here the original letter can be spared, it would be preferred. The reasonable expense incurred in copy Ing the papers now requested, nnt excecding the rate of ten cents for every hundred words, will be defrayed by the depertment.
The correspondence which has been saved, and of which, therefore, no copies are desired, are the records of the lettern written by the secretary of the treasary to presidente and casliters nf banks, from the lst October, 1819, in the 20th Febmary, 1833; ail the eorrespondence relating to revolutionary claims ander the act of $15 t h$ May, 1828 , and to claims of Virtinia officeri to haif pay, under the aet of Sth July, 1832; and to applicants for the benefits of the acts of the ad March, 1831, alld $14 t h$ July, 1892 , for the relief of certain insolvent debinrs of the United States. ## THE PAST-THE PRESENTMFUR THE PUTCHK,

OF-A violent asosulh was eonntnitted on the person of the presidemt of the United States, at Alcisadria, on Monday Jast, hy Mr. Randolph, lately dismissed from the navy-the particulars of whieh will be found is subseyuent pages. We have no contanents un make on this outrage. It,reguires noue. It will, as to ought, recerve the ungualified reprobation of every good cini-zen-w hether the offence be considered with respect to the pubfie office held by the ansailed, or his advanced age and long and disthaguished services.

We have inserted, (as was iatended before an account of the assault reached us), Mr. Randolph's address to the pubitic, sel. tiag forth tis case-and added an article, on the same subject, which has sioce appeared in the "Globe:" but the merits of the anatters stated cannot be allowed to have any sort of influcnee either to ercuse or aggravate the offence of Mr. Rawdolph-it adunits of no excuse, needs no nggravation.

07 -We preseat a collection of law cases, briefly deciding certain inportant points concerning mattera of ceery-day intorent to the pablic, and sueb as every-body ought to be well acqualated with.

00 -Under the bead of "Foreign Articlea" we have inserted an accouat of the passage of the "I rish disturbances bill," and certais intereeting views of the origin abd prospectif of aegro alavery in the Britiah Went Indies. If the government slat! carry-out its plans eoocerning the slaves, a coupensation to the owaers of them eannot be avoided without comaituing a figgrant aet of injustice-for it was the [British] government whieh establisted the right of property in oue mun over the person of his Rellow betng, in the British West Indiew, &c. On the policy of the project, and concerning its effects-there is much room for diserssion,

07-We twelh desire to publiwh and reeord, Mr. Burges' able speech in the house of representatives, at the last session of congres, on the tarifl-and eapecially because of its important atatistics. Its length bas heretnfore prevented its insertion-but we expeet soon to have room for it. It will not suffer by the delay, bor "perist ia the using."
"Yanges notions," We inserted an article in our last, stating that Mr. T. H. Pcrkins, of Hoston, had given an property worth 30,000 dollars, as an asylum for the bind, on the condition that $50,(100)$ dollars should be raised as a fund to support the institution-adding that Mr. J. P. Cashing had put down 5,000 of the $50,000,{ }^{*}$ and that others were expeeted to contribute large sums, &c. The ladies of Buston lave "notions," as well as the gentemen, and they got up a fair, at Fancult Hall, on the fist inst. of whieh we have a long and vivitl account, but eanoot make room for. The display of laclies, and of the work of their hands, seems to have been truly maguifieent; and the reswlt was-that the receipis smounted to about ten thatcsasel dollarg, in aid of the final for the instruction and mupport of the blind. A blessing will attend sueh "notione" and, though some have preferred strong objections to such exhibitions of ladies, and we certainly think that they ouglot not to be frequem-the objects aeeoraplished powerfully plead in favor of them. And besides, they afford convenient opportunitien for persons to contribute such sums as arc best suited to the eondition of their purse, or fiow of their heart, withom an apprehension of shame for a "mite put into the treasury; " or hope" of applause for a gift bestowed. A gentleman, whose nanie is not stated, sent $$ 300$ to the fair, with orders to invest the money in a pen-wifer!
"Mone Yanker notions." The quadrant, the idea of stearn wagons, the practical application of steam-power

[^15]in propelling bonts, the eotton gitr, lhe eard making machine, and a multifude of other important and aseful ma-elinte-are "Yankee notions." And the following, eopied from a New York paper, adds asother "notion" to the list:

It is we believe, getwernlly understool, that in conypleting the manufucture of a single pin in the ordinary method twelve persons are employed in various branches; and Mr. Babbage in his treatise say: that the lowest number employed is ten. We were this morning invited to examine a beautiful piece of meehanisan ruade and patented by Ir. J.J. How, of this eity, by which a pin is completed from the wire by a single turn of a crank. By dhis ingenious invention from foity to fifty pins are made cach sninute, and they are produced more perfeet than those mate in the orvinary way. Dr. How goes out with his usehine to Finglund in the packet ship Montreal, whieh is to sail on the luth instant. He intende to take out a patent both in England and France. Tlue maelsine was made at the manufactory of Messrs, Hoe & Co. Gold street, where it ean be seen during this day.

Invintione, \&ce. Judge Hinkle, of Hanover, Pu. has invented and obtuined a patent for an apparatus, which lse calls a "steam generator and refiner," and which from the certificates published, appears to be an important improvernent in steam machinery. A distiller in Heidelberg township certificates that by means, of the apparatus, he is able to procure in one hour from twelve to fifteen gallons of whiskey, while by the old proeess from six to eight gallons onty were procured in the same time. Mr. Mumina, the propurietor of the steam mill near Hanover, says, that before the introduction of the apperatus, when the mill wus in good order, $61 \frac{1}{2}$ bushels of grain could be ground in uine hours with a half a cord of wood; but that by means of the improvement, he ean now grind 82 busbels in eight hours, with the same quantity of fuel. These are important advantages, and an invention eapnble of producing them, cannot fail to get into general use.
A watchmaker of the nume of Buschman, living at Sisenberg, not far from Attemburg in Saxony, has contrived a piree of machinery, which without the assistance of steam, has been found strong enough to move a heavily laden wagon, plaeed in a fresh ploughed feld, with the greatest ease, although sixteen horses could not stir it. The machine may he casily handled, and the vehiele moved by it most safcly managed. The inventor has been offerved $4 \times 0,000$ slollars for the seevet, bat as he had obtained patents from all the primeipal Gorman governments, he has refinsed all offers.

Massacutsetrs. A seeond fruitless attempt to eleet a member of congress in Roston has failed. The votes were for Mr. Gigy 1733, Mr. Livman 1,138, Mr. Greene 776, Mr. Walker 521. So the first falls short of an eleetion by 562 votes.

Consecticut. No choice of govermor and lieutenant governor having been made by the people at the last elecfiou, Henry W. Falwards has been elected governor, and Fibenezer Stoddard, lieutenant governor, by the legislature, us follows: for Mr. Edwards (Jackson) 147; John S. Prters (national republican) 70; blanks 10 . The Jaekson lieutenant governor was chosen by a larger majority.

New-Yonk. The great fire in the niyht of the 30th ult. is thonght to have dispossessed 300 families, and more than 1,000 persons of their homes, losing also the chief part of their effects, and generally of the poorar elasses of societyr On all the property lost, only 45,000 dollars were insured.

Philadklphis. It is well known that when Philadelphia was haid out, it was the design of its fousder, Penn, that all the space between the west side of Front street and the Delaware river should be kept open for the benefit of air, and the preservation of the health of the future iuhabitants of the eity: but this ground has been closely built upon, having one narrow street ןassing from north to south (Water street) and many marrow lances and alleys from thence to the wharves; and when an epidemie has prevailed, the loss of life in this part of Philadelphia was excessive-for persens of the worst elassers of society are sometimes huddied together, in great numbers.
As the means of the eity, by the bequests of Stephen Girartl, are now very abunlant, it is groposed to restore, at least in part, the original plan, and remove the buildings located on the east side of Front street between Mulberry and Vise. The building are not of great value. The distance proposed to be thus thrown open, is about one-eighth of a mile long.

It is also suggested, that laws will be passed to prevent the opening of other streets and alleys than are now laid down in the plat of the eity-and that the front on the Sehnylkill, on whioh vast improvements are makiug, shall be kept open, sce.

Baltimong. The new line between this eity and Philadeluhia, via the eanal, commenced operations on Saturday last. The steambont Kentucky, in the Chesapeake, aud the Ohio, in the Delaware, are admired by all who have seen them. They have few equals, and no superiors.

Baltimote axi Oifo rail moab. We understand that certain negotiations entered into between this rail rond company anal the Chesapenke and Obio canal company, have resulted in an arrangement by which the Cormer work will proeeed throught the difficult passes of the Potomac to Harper's Ferry. Water powen. We reoently mentioned the creation, or acquision, of a great water-power, at Trentou, on the Dela ware, and now notiee a similar improvement of that hitherto neglected on the Passaie, also as the head of the sloop navigation, and ouly 11 milea from New York. It

Shir seilisige. The manufacturing of ships is, at present, a great business in the United Stutes, notwithstanding we have "gained" the West Indin trade, and lost the tuansportation of many torlky articles to that part of the world. Four first rate ships, ant many sonaller vessels, of superior qualities, are now building in Baltimore. The tariff has not yet ruined the "commerce" or navigation of the country.
Gold. It is estimated hy the smperintendent of the United States maint, that one half of the gold found in this country, is coined at home; and that the aroount of last year's probluction was a milliou and a quarter of dollars. This is estimaten to be cyual to onv-sixilh part of the entire quantity produced in Furope amil Ameries: and as the amount gathered by us inereases annually, the proportions will be in all probability for some gears extending in our favor.
[The gold business in the United States has then aboust the same value as the button manufinotoring-perhaps rather less than more.]

Gold lands. The capital prizes in the gold lottery, which have cansed so many wishes and raised so many hopes, have at length eome out, after having modestly kept in the back ground for a long time. The great prize, lot 1,052 12 1, was dirawn by Alfred Allisom, Greene eounty. Thic next greatest prize; lot 1,0s1 te 1. was drawn by Lewis Hays, of Henry county. We wish both of these fortunate drawers long life to enjoy their success. Fame has put the lot 1,052121 at the hígh valuation of $$ 100,000$.

Savannah Georgian.
Ma. Manisos. Extract from his message to both bouses of congress, Deo. 5, 1810-
"I feel partioular satisfaction in remarking that an interior view of our country, presents us with gratefal proofs of its substantial and increasing prosperity. To a thriving agriculture, and the inprovenueuts related to it, is added a highly interesting externion of useful manufactures; the combined product of professional occupations, and of household industry. Such, ineleed, is the expervence of economy, as well as of policy, in these mubstitutes for supplies heretofore obtained by forcign commerce, ihat, in a national view, the change is juulty regurded, as of itself more than a necompenee for those privutions and losees resulting fiom forcign ingustice, which furnished the sencral impnulse required for its accomplishment. How far it may be expedient to gumrl the infancy of this improverneat, in the distribution of labor, by regulations of the commersial turiff, is a suljeet which eatunot fail to suggest itself to your patriotic reflections.
"It will rest with the cousideration of congress, also, whether a provident, as well as fair cheouragement, wonlld not be givet to our nar igation, by such regulations as will place it on a level of competition with forcign vessels, particularly in transporting the impertant and bulky productions of our own soil. The failure of equality aid reeiprocity, in the existing regulations on this subject, nperates, in our porta, as a premium to foreign compelitors; and the meonveuience must increase, as these nay be multiplied, under more favorable cireumstances, by the more diat countervailing encouragements, now giveu thein, by the laws of their respective countries.

Mu. Gallatis. Extracts from his report to the house of representatives, (pursuant to a resolutiou) on the sabjeet of manufactures, A pril 17, 1810.
"From that imperfeet sketch of Arnerican manufacturea, it thay with eertainty be inferred that their asnual product exceeds one hundred and twenty millions of dollars. And it is not improbable that the rave materiale wesed, and the provisions and other articles consumed by the manufacturers, create a noxe MAREET for asricultural products not very inferior to that wolich arises from foreign dennand. A result more favorable than might have been expretell from a view of the natural eauses which impede the intonduction, and retard the progress of manufactures in the United States."

4The information which has been obtained is not suftielent to atumit, in confornity with the resolution of the liouse, the plan best caleulated to firotect anal jromote American manufactures. The most obsiouy means are boustiks, increased duties on importation, atd loass by goverument.
"Oocasional puesiugs might be beneficial; but a general system of bountie is more applicable to arrickes exported than to those somulactured for home consuniption."
"Since, however, the comparative want of capital, is the prineipul obstuele to the introduction anil udvancement of manufaetures in America, it seenas that the most efficient, and most obvious remedy would consist in smpplying that eapital. For although the extension of banks may give some assistance in that respeet, their operation is fimited to a few places, nor does it comport with the nature of those institutions to lend for periods as long as are reyuisite foy the establishment of manufactures. The United States might ervate a cirenlaning stoek, beariug a low rate of interest, and len! it at jor to manufacturern, on principles sonvewhat similar to that forsnerly atopted by the states of New York and Pennsylvania, in their loan offices. It is believid that a plat might be devised by which five millions of dollars a year, but not exceed ing in the whole twenty millions, might be thus lent, without wny naterial risk of ultimate loss, and without taxing or injuring any other part of the commonity."

The failure of the great house of Alexander & Co. Culcuta, for four millous sterling, had caused an extraordinary sensation among the monied men, and interests, in London.

Cpon the annomisernowt of the veralict, the prisoner, John Redtuonsl, in a firm and distinettome of voice, said-

This deelaration furduced a thrilling effect, as well upon the bench anul jury, as upon the by-standers, all looking at each other in intupor and silent amazement.
"Yes," reaumed Redmond, "I am the man who committed the murder, and for which I mm willing to suffer. Had landlords and bad agents have driven me to commit the desperate deed. My old father, who had grown prey upon the farm, and his numerous aad belpless family; being thence expelled by them. My father was in arrears five pounds; it was the last five pound note lie had, he went and paid it down, and after all was ejected. I say agaia, bad landiords and bad agents have forced me to seek this desperate redress. $P$ was resolved upon vengeance, and now that I have taken it, I am conteut to die."

Poor Jackman, who all the while stood in a trembling attitude; his face as pale as death, now fell upon his knees, saying-
"My blood be upon the jury who condemned me, for as I hope to appear before my Creator, I am perfectly innocent."

POHTUEAK

The London papers have long details of proceedings at Oporto. It appears that the Niguelites had made two fierce attacks on Oporto in Mareh last, in both which they aeem to have been defeated, with a heavy lons; but nothing definitive has happened.

Al attempt has been made to arrest adminal Sartorius, but he made prisoners of the persons appointed for that purpose; aad thiags had proceeded so far that the admiral would probably bloekade Oporto! But a nother account says, that the misunderstandiag between him and Donna Maria's regency, had been settled.

A Russian aquadron remained in the Bosphorus-which gave much uneasiness to French politicians; and it is intimated that some coldness existed between the two courts on thia aceount.

Ibrahim Pacha has taken possession of Smyrna. He made the governor a prisoner, and seized all the Turkish property on board of vessels in that port: and yet it is given out that an arrangement between the sultan and Mehemet Ali had been made. It is said that M. claims only to hold Syria as a pachalie nnder the supremacy of the porte, to which he acknowledges himself tributary, and to have Egypt declared an hereditary government in his family. It is added, however, that Russia is opposed to the independence of Egypt, which is advocated by Frmuee and England.

The St. Petersbury Gazette, contains a report of the proceeding adopted by the emperor towards the Ottoman empire, and of their results at Constantinople. 'The sultan is reported to have been highly gratified by "the splendid proofs of the exalted regard of his majesty the emperor, for the interest of the Ontoman empire," and has made arrangements to avail himself of the aid of Russis, should events require it.

EERMANE.

The king of Wirtemburg has had a collision with the assembly of the states, and abruptly dissolved them. The reason was their refusal to sanction and adopt the tyrannieal ediet of the Frankfort diet. A rumour was current in Paris on the SOth, that the Prussian ambassador had received an offieial notification of a resolution by the fier man diet to suspend, for five years, the representative chambers throughout Germany.

Trieste, Warch 18. The last accounts from Corfu confirm the news, that all parties in Grecee have made their submission, and that universal tranquillity prevails. Trade is resuming ils activity. New ships are already constructing on the south side of the Morea, as well as is the dock yards of Galixidi, in the Bay of Corinth.

FOREIGN ARTICLES.
Irien distwrhances BiLL.
A motion for the third reading of the Iriah dirturhaaces bill was made in the Britsh house of eommons on the 29 th of March. A long, but not very intervating debate eusued.

Mr. Cobbeft moved, no an amendmant, that the bill be rend a third time that day sia monlhe-Mr. Fieldew seconded the amendment.
The third reading was opposed by Mr, Clay, sit 8. Whalley, Mr. Lsingdale, Mr. Ruthven, Mr. Aarron, Mr. M. O 'Conneli Mr. Hume, Mr. Baflew, And Mr. E. Ruthvea; and was atupported by Mr. Wilbraham, Mr. Poulter, Mr. Barnard, sir H. Venney, Mr. H. Dare, Mr. G. Young, Mr. Werd, Mr. Lamont, Mr. G. Mrown, Mr. Petre and air J. Tyrrell.

Mr. O'Connell, in opposiag the bill, warned the house of the coasequences of pmasing such an act, which would exasperate the Irish people, and be the sure meane of effecting a separatina between England and Ireland; for though the original borrors of the bill had been mitigated, it was sufficieatly atrocious to rouse the indignation of his countrymen.
Lord aluhory replied. Crime, he said, wae as great an ever is amnount, lifo and property as insecure, ts when the bill was first brought in. The loonorable and learned geatleman, (Mr.
 but if they did require perpethal agitation-if freedom coubd not exist with peace aad order, it was ont the freedon, of the deinition of the freedom, which be had been taught from this youth upwarda to love, (hear, hear.) Oue of the grvat mertis of liberty-oue of its most endearing qualities, was that it pmvided for the peace aad happinese of all. Liberty was aot that state is which one party ouly could express its sentu. meats, (hear), in which men who voted nceording to courscience in their legislativn capacity, were to be denoanced as traitorn to the beat iaterests of their conntry, (eheers.)That was not what be called liberty, (bear.) Again, the bomorable and learned gentleman had asked what country remorable and lesrned gentieman had asked what country rerather aisk what country required quirt more? (Cheers.). The honorable aud learned gentiemaa also said that Ireland had aever been injured, save by her owa sons. In that position he fully agreed with the honorahis and learned gentlensan; and would further add, that it had never beea more grievously injured by her own sons, than of late years, (hear, hear.) Alf trelaad's real grievaacrs had been freely adaitted by the governianent and the partiament, and both were steadily beat on ap-mole plying proper renedies to them, (eheels.)
The house then divided-for the third reading, 345-for Mr. Cohbett's amendment 76-tnajority 969.

The bill wat then read a third time aad passed.

Lord Suffeld said be had several petitions on the subjeet of slavery ia his hand, which he was induced by pecaliar cireumstances to present to their fordehipm at an earivet period than the had at brit iateaded. Certain rumors had lately been aftioat respectiag the plan of emancipation to be proposed by governmeat, which be confeesed had produced la bias mitisd, and he hefieved Is that of the pubtic, the greatest consternation. He did not mean to nay that those rumors had lessened the general confidence which be was disposed to place in his majesty'd misisters, or catise hial to regard with diatrust their intentuons with reapect to the particular queation to which the petitions be held in his hand referred. He felt conviaced that the pronciples of his aoble frieads aear him were sound and right, and be had no doubt that they were filly disposed to act upon them; but yet he was not blind to the formidable array of prejudice sad falue notiogs of self interest with which they had to contend. He was anxious, therefore, to obtain for them such support throughout the country, and auch a decided axprewwion of the aatonal feefing, as cuuld alone eable them to eacouster the opponeate of the settlemeat of this question. The pethioners proyed for a thtal and immediate emanctpation; and he could newure their lordehips that mothing but cotal and immediate etnanacipation would antiofy the couatry. He wished, however, to explaia, that by the erpression "impunediate emanelpation" was menat-sot that the slaves should be at onee liberated on the sendiag out of a despatch, or the salitiag of a ship-but that at the eariiest possibte period there should take place a sntatituilins nf legni restraiat for the present absolute and irresponsible power of the slave master.

Lord Goderich said it was obviously lisapossible for him to give any answer to the rumors which bis noble friead said he Ined heard reapecting the sapposed intentions of gnvernment on the sabjeet of aegro emancipation. He did not think it at all lacumbeat on government to offer explanations relative to rtmors atated on sueh lonse authority as aewspaper report. It Whas not his duty to state nt the preseat time what enmminniratioms had taken place between the goverameat and differm parties on ihis subject; but, aware as he was of the importance nf eubmittiag it at the earlient pomathle period io the decisvon of parliameat, yet we must take the liberty of saying that if the wash of the noble haron opposite-that thit quertion had beea brought under the notice of partisment before the prepent time-had been realized, the result would have beea any thing but advantareona to the safe and antisfoctory settlemeat of the question. (Heal hear).
The dukp of Buckingham regrotied that the aleasure of gnvernment on the whbject of emaacipution had not yft bern brought forward. To the goveninent asd mot to the Weat In. dia proprietors, was in be allithuted the blame of all the delar. The government had commuaicated with a portioa of the Weat

India incerent, and to them they had toid their bopes, their wishee, and their disputes, which were kept a secret from the general body of West Iadia preprtetors.
Earl Grey said there was no douth that this qaestion was one of deep importance; and however anxions he nught be to have it soctied, he was stin tan aniots that all circumatances connected with it would be cnrefuliy examiaed, and the co-operation of all pertiee intereated procured. However eany and popular it sight be to actack ministers for delay, he was content to submit to any imputation of that kind, provided that he avoided the greater danger of procipitation, of which the only renult conid be an unastisfactory and unsafe sellientent of the question. An to commanications that had taken place betweel goverament and other parties on this sabjuct, fie did aot think that the aoble duke would inpute it as a crime to them that they had endeapored to accertain the opinione of the Weat India budy, and to obtain their co-operation in a work which was beset with diffowly and danger.

The motile dake compiained that the government had commusicated with a eelect portion of the West Indian proprietors. How would he bave had the government act? Would he have had the ministers go to a general assembly-to a meveting at Ex: eter thall-and there pubticty deciare their intentions? All that ministers could do was to consult those privately whom they knew to bopposed to them, bat ia whoma they had the zreateat consdence, in order to ascertain in what way their objections could be mech. Of course it would be inconsistrat with his duty en chraw oat any bint reapectiog the nature of any plan which $k$ nrigite be in the eontemplation of ministers to propose. All be would asy at present was, that the attention of government generally, and of his muble friend acar him, had been directed carefully to this great eubjnet, with a view to bring it, as apeedily as possuble, to a matisfactory setilement. He could not say what Whe rumors were to which his antile friead had alluded; for sach rumorn the governarent were aot reaponsible, and it could not be erpected that they shomld enter into any explanation with mapect in thean. To deelare inmediste emancipatiou would uncoubtedly make short and easy werk of the matter, but be confessed that that was not the way in which he wisbed to deal with the question; and he was glad to hear frow his noble fieud'a explanation that the word "immediate" was not to be taken as meaniag immediate (Iagghter), but the earlicst period at Which emancipation could take place with asfely to all the interesta concerned. He (ear Grey) wan anxious for the abolition of alavery, but be was not prepared to declare for immediate eananeipation, without consideriag the consequences that might dow frous such a measinre.

The duke of Richmond berged leave to emphaticaliy deny that there were say dioputes or differences in the cabiaet in reLation to the West Indis quention.

The plas of Uheration.
We extract the following from the London Siandard, in which If was given as a faithful oortine of the government plan, for the sethlentent of the Weat India question:

A lona of 90 miltiona is to be negotiated apon the credit of the eotanies. The legisiative assemblies of those coloules which have any are to be called upon to gaarantee this loan, and ia the colonies which have aot legislative asocmblies, sonee agrtement is ta be conse to with the planters for the like purpose. The laan is to pay an iaterest of five per ceat.-oae per cent. betag reserved for the creation of a vialting fund and the remainling tum to be payable to the subscribers.

The money so raised is to be applied as follows to the immediate emancipation of the whole negro population:
The plaature are to be paid an ad valorem price ranging between $\mathbf{\& 1 0}$ and $\boldsymbol{\alpha} 20$ per head, for their meveral slaves. The slaves then, de ficto, cease to be the planter's property, and become the indented laborer, an it were of the pablic. They are, however, to be beld in gangs apon the estate in the castivation of whieh they are espployed.
They are to be compolice to work six days of the week and the compulsory instrunest is to be oupplied by a anmerons and eflicieat white police, actiag under a sabordination of magistraces consemunicatiag with the several colonial governors.

This and 704,102 that the great mas of the people of Ireland are cxtrumely poor. The number of inhabited houses, since the above date, has much iaereased: in 1821, it was $1,142,602_{4}$ but the condition of the people has probably not been on the whole, improved. "Four mad walls with one entrance, and frequently without rither window or chimney, constitute an lrish hovel. 'I'lie rent of these cabiss is from one to two guineas a gear. To each cahin there is commonly sanexed about one aere of ground, which is cropped with potatoes, onts and flax. There are numbers of peasauts who have not a bedstead, nor evea a truckle bedframe. They sleep on a bundle of straw or heath, laid on the olay floor; sheets are scareely known, and their blankets are scanty and tattered. Their food is almost entirely potatoes and milk, and their fuel turf."

The habitation of the Irish peasant is described by Mr. Bicheno as follows:- "1t is built by the occupier of the soil out of the materials which lie finds on the spot. The four walls are of dirt, mixed with rushes or stıw beaten up with it. The floor is the earth. The roof is constructed of bogwood fastened together with pius of the anme, or tied with rude cordage made of grass or ryestraw, which is a favorite material. The covering is sorls or perhaps a thateh of heath. If a window be indulged in, it consists of a single pane of giass, built in with the wall. There is a door-way, but frequentily no door: its place being aupplied by a straw mat. The chimney, if there be⿻ one, is a square frame of wool work, wrapped round with wattles of hay plustered with clay. The sunoke indeed seldom escapes by its la wful channel, but makes its way as it eans, by ever'y pore through the roof, walls and door. The general aspeet of these hovels at a listance is that of heaps of dung reeking with the steam of their own fermentation."
"No country upon earth," says Mr. Bryan, in his Practical View of Ireland, "has exhibited so stern an evidence of the fatal power of an oligarchy to counteract the bouaties of heaven as Irviland. Her suil has been proved by the cliarest experiments to be superior to that of Einglaind; yet $5,000,000$ aerees are at this day undisturbed by the plough or aparle; her seas ahound with fish, and some of the finest fishing banks are in sight of her shores; yet the Irish peasant on the first failure of his potatoe erop, dies of hanger. In this country we behold eapacious jails, exteasive barracks and erowded hospitals; and in their vicinage the elay-built loabitations of the people, whose food is roots-drink, water-and beds, straw:all manifesting their moral and physical degradation. In ote year 20,000 persons have perished from famine and 8 millions' worth of produce exported. Mr. Nimmo, the government engineer, states the yearly expenditure on Iale beggars to be $£ 1,500,000$ : soldiers cost $£ 1,500,000$ : police, $$ 250,000$ : total $$ 3,050,000$ for idle consumers, to keep Ireland in a state of misery, fanaine, idleness and insurrection, where there is no security for life or property."
"More than $£ 12,000,000$, " says Mr. Bryan, "is anunally taken from direct investment in lrish industry: $£ 4,000,000$ of abseatee rent; $£ 2,000,000$ invested in the funds; more than $£ 5,000,000$ of taxes; $£ 600,000$ for tithes, if we consinler the whole island brought under the eomposition act, and make our estimate from the 1,900 [purishes now under it; $£ 600,000$, the reat of glebe and bishope' lands. The tyranny of the Irish landlords is almost ineredible." "The rents," Dean Swift sffirmed in his time, "are squeczed out of the very blood, aud vitals, and clothes, and dwellings of the tenants, who live worse than Finglish begkars "Mr. Bicheto remarks, that "there are many liberal landlords; but still as a class, they are needy; exacting, unremiting, harsh, and withont sy nupathy for their teuants," "The Irish londlord," says the Quarterly a Review. November, 1831, "is not even restrained by the cheek of fear which operates on an eastern despot, lest extremity of snffering should drive his ryot peasants to desperation and endanger the security of his power and property. He depends on anl Einglish army, inaintained by Engligh taxes, for the collection of the mmount of his bond, and for scenring the passive suhmission of his tenantry to any exactions he may choose to infliet. There can be no question of the various classes of peasantry, the Irish cottiers stand the most thoroughly deatitute and alone in the time of ealamity, are the most entirely at the merey of their own landlords, and, as a borly, oecupy the lowest, the most helpless, and utterly hopeless position. It is only the circumstance resulting from the proximity of England-the facility, namely, of proeuring money and suppressing insurrection-which ereates the peculiar powe er of extorting high reuts possessed by the landlords of Irelant, and places the cultivator of the soil of thut country in a sitnation of unexampled harilnhip. May the common legislature. by extenting the benctit of the Finglish poor laws to thent poytion of the empires, spewtily remove this ilreadfinl stute of thinge, which, sol lons as it exists, is an inlehble dingtace to a wation that prides itself on standing at the leesd of civilization, on the bencsolence of its charineter, and on the equality, the justice, and impartiulity of its institutions!"
"The 1rish proprietors," says Mr. Bryan, "reside chiefly in Englanl, indulging in luxurious cate and comefort, and participating in all voluptumes amuseburots, purchased by meaus of the toil and bloon of Houssunds of their fellow ereatures." 'The caltivator receives hately what keeps hion alive. "Tlie potatoe is the only pronluce he reserves to himself. All the rest, cattle, corn, lintter, pigs, poultry, "g6", go to the lanillorl." Bicheno. ""l"he awerage tate of rural wages for then, in the whole country, is $104 l$ a day; in sone clistricts it is only $81 /$. And When the slays, way, weeks and months, in which great numbers of laborirs cannot obtain conjloyment, are dedaeten, what a wretched remumeration is ceven 10./. a alay? When the cmploymesit is constant, this remuncratiot is insufficient. It is but 5s. a weck: ont nf whielh devluet 10d. a week firr loouse rent, aul 3s. bil. for potatore to give a faroily three theals a day, allowing 28 llis. for each day, at 3 d . a stone, a low average for the whole country year would remain to provide fire and elothing for the tamily. There would be nothing for salt, milk, or any kind of snstenance other than potator's washed dow in with water. The lrish are not singular in heing tubulent, when suffering privations or opprension; but fluey are singular in bearing so sunels of hoth heforr they beeonse turbulent." Comnentaries on Ireland, 1851. "The jreople, naturally hardy, ensily subsisted, and singulaily vigorous, laborious and intelligent, when we consider their opportunilies," says Bryan, "ure yet one-eighth of thent paupers, and aluost all restless, insubovdinate, anal embittered agaiust the laws and presint system of goverument."

ORIGIN OF TIIE BRITISII SLAVE TKADE

The following statencuts respecting the origin and history of the Britibl slave trade, are frum the Comion Courier.

The slave trade was instituted in the rcign of queen Elizalieth, who personally took a share in it. At that time the West lulia coloties did not exist.

In t602, Charles II. granted an exchisive right in the slave trade to quien Catharine, the queen alowager, the sluke of York, atud ollerers, who finmerd themselies into a tranding company, they undertaking to supply the West India planters with 3,000 slaves atnusally. In the same year that monureh issued a proclamation inviting lis subjectsto transport thenuselves to Jamaica, agreeing to allot landa to every inhivihanl who would go to reside in the ialaud, and signify his resolution to plant there.

The shave trade continued to be fostereal during the reigns of Charles II. aud James It. but still under a thomopoly.

In i679, petitions from the mannfacturers in Great Brio tain of woollen annl other cloths, annl the nakers of the warious articles necessary to the slave trade with Atrica, were prosented to forrlianient, alloging that the trade was cramped by being in the lands of an exclusive conymany, and praying that it might be opened.

In ennsequence of these aml siruilar petitions to the hnuse of enmmona, a committee of the whole liouse, in 1695, remolved, "That for the lrester 制pply of the plantations, all the suhjects of Great Britain shoild have libortv to trade to Afriea for negroes, with such limite as should be preseribeal by parlianuent;" and by stetute 9 and 10 William III. c. eff, the trade was accordingly laid partially open, the preamble of that act stating, that "the trale was highly beneficiaf and rdrantageous to the kingdon, and to the plantations anal colonies theretint lelonging."

The manhfarturrs of Cireat IBritain, lowever, were still dissatisfind with the rostrictions imposenl upont the trade. They enntinued to ply the logislature with petitions to give greater lautude to a traffic, by which they exchanged thrir goonls for negroes, and solil those negroes

From 1711 until 1749, the demands of the manufactur ers for a more unrestrieted trade continued to be the subjeet of parlianuewtury investigation antl dispute.

At length, in 1749, the statute os, Geo. II. c. 51 , was [asasell, which rumavel all obstruction to the operations of prisate tradets, eleclaring "the slave trade to be very advantageous to Cireat lbritain, and necessary lor supplying the plantations uml colonies thereunto by-konging, with a sufficient number of begroes at reasonable rates.?
To show the light in which the courts siewed the slave trate, the following is quoted from the reprort of a case reterred to the judges for their opinion by the erown on the Ausiento coutract. The jurlges say: "In pursuance of his majesty's order in council beretuito annexed, we do lumbly certify our opinious to be, that negroes are merchandise; that it is againut the statute of navigation uanle for the general good and preservation of the shipjing and trade of this kinglon, to give liberty to any alien to trade in Jantaica, or other his majesty's platatations, or for any shipping belonging to aliens to trade there, or to export thence negroes," &ce. And the eertificate is signed by lord C. Holt, justiee Polexfen, and eight other judges.

Neither dies the ease rest hore. The eolonies anxious in limit the trade, prassed la s imposing a sluty ou negroes inuportall. Great Britail refused to sanction any Jaws laviug such a tendency. The exlonies began in 1760 . Soull Carolina, then a British colony, passed an act to prohibit further importation.

Givat Britain rejected this act with indignation, and theclatell that the slave traile was beneficial ant neeessary t) the mother conntry. The governor who passed it was reprimameal, and a cireular whs sent to all other governors warning therm against a similar offerce.

The colonies, howeser, in 1765 , reprateal the offence, and a bill was twice read in the assembly of Jamaiea for the same purpose of limiting the importation of slaves, when Gircat Britain sopped it, through the governor of that island, who sent for the assemily, anil told them that consistently with his iustructions lie could not give his assent; upon which the liill was liropped.

At a later period, $17 \overline{74}$, another attempt to the same jurpose was nade hy the assembly at Jamaica, who passell two bills to restrain the Importation of negroes. Thia was met by lettors from lord Dartmouth, the secretary of state, to sir Basil Keith, the govertar of Jamsica, stating that, "the measurea had created alarm to the merclansts in Great Britain engaged in that branch of commerce," aml forbidding him upon "pain of removal ftom his goverument to asment to stieh lares."
"At the sance tiner, I am to saeqnaint you that the alarm tuken by the tucreliants of this kingtoin, on account of that act, las been greatly increased, and fresh complaints of a wiry urgent uature, have been made by them, from their having reecived advice, not only that such additional duty has been continued for another frar, hy an act passcil in November last, but that propositions have been adopted for laying the slave trade umler further restrictions, ant sulyecting it to impositions that will have the effect of an entire prolibition.

Paris, March 81. Yesterday, at noon, the court of aseizes assembled to pmonuance jodgment in the affair of M. Panlin, editor of the National, and that of M. Cuchet, editor of the Charivari. The judges remained in deliburation in the eouncit ehaunber till a quarter past five, when they entered the court and detivered judgment. M. Cuchet was deciared guilty of having, with bad hath, given an mufaithful report of the proceedings on the late thal, and condemned tha amonth's imprisontnent and a fine of 5,000 . with prolithitiom to make in the Charivari any report on Judieial proceedinga for the space of one Year. M. Paulin, for the wame reason, was almo condermned th a fine and terin of imprimonatent, with interdiction to report jadicial proceedings in the Nationai for two years.

The 'remps has the following:-"If these judganents are enrried lath execution, there is ats end th the freedom of the preas. However much accuatumed we way be to the enornity of jndg. meats by default, this surpasses all our powers of expression. The restoration, which for Giteen yeara wan engheed in marrificing our liberticu, presenti only oare ezauple of nuch an excess of power. ## OLD OPINION ABOCT NULLIFICATION.

The operation of a state veto on our foreign relations is not matter of eonjecture; it is history, and is strikingly exemplified in the following letter from the duke of Dorset, to the American oommissioners in 1785 , at Paris. They, it seema, had made overtwres to enter into a treaty of commeree with Great Britain: and this is his grace's answer. If the doctrinea contended for by the Cooper party* in South Carolina, and his disciples Calhoun, Hayne & Co. should be established, waeh would be the language of every power in Europe to whom we might

A committee of North American merchants have waited upon his majesty's primeipal seerctary of state for foreign affairs, to express how anxiously they wished to be intormed upon this subject, reprated experience having tanght them in partienlar, as well as the public in general, how litule the authority of eongress conld avall In any respect, where the interests of any one individual rate was even concerned, and particularly wo, where the concerns of that partieular state might be aupposed to militate agninst such resolutions as congress might think proper to adopt.

"THF, STAR SPANGIEED BANNER."

 From the Cincinnati Republican.The circular, copied below, has been receivert by a gentleman of this cits. To say that the object intended in it meets our eordial approbation, is but imperfectly experessing our feelings. We love the American umionand we love every thing connected with its histery that tends to throw gfory and benuty arouncl it. Sometime last winter, we published the speech of Mr. Poinsett, (made, we belisve, in a meeting of the unionists, in Charleston, South Carolina), in which the almost magic triumah of our American flag, in Mexico, was related. No Ameriean, whose heart is stili alive to the revolution, ean read the little incident referred to in the circular, and which is so touchingly and eloquently described by Mr. Poinsett, without feeling proud of our union. The intention of the cireular is to procure the means of embodying that one glorious triumph of the star spangled banner upon eannas- 10 ; construet from the eircumstances a memento of our national greatness, flattering alike to our patriotism and our taste. Copices of the circular have, we presume, hoonn sent to all the other cities in the U. Statea, and the funds secessary to the exeeution of the design will speotily be raised.

Charleston, S. C. April 11 th, 1853.
At the period of the revolution of the Acurdurla, which computied the congress of Mexico to reverse the election of Pedraza and piace Guerrero on the presidential chair, the eity was taken by assault, and the army of Ginerrem attacked and plandered the irouses of the European Spaniards, who were peculinaly odious to the native Mexicans. Many of these had taken refuge in the house of the American mandenssador, and it was pointed out to the exasperated soltiery as the esylum of their enemies. They rushed to attack it, and in a few minutes would have nuasmecred all within its walls. At this moment, when handreds of muskets were levelled at the windows, Mr. Poinsen, with his seerctary of legation, Mr. John .Mamon, jr. threw themselves into all open batcony which overlooked the erowf, and, unforling the STAR SPANG: I.ED IAANNF.R, tlemandeel that ah permons in his house should the protected while the flag of his conntry waved over them. The scene changed as by enchantsuent, and the sery men who were alont to mike the attuck, elicered the standard of our union, and placed sentinels to guarl it from outrage. The history of the world presents no parallel to such a seene: and its moral beauty and grandeur should be equally preserved on the page of the historian'and the canvas of the painter. It is therefore proposed to raise by subseription a sufficient sum to have thin illustriotas triumph of our national fag represented on canvas and ufterwards engraved. The painting will be presented to some pablic institution of the stite or United States.
The minute partieulars attending the unfurling of the United States flag at Mexico, furnish materials for a splendid oational painting. The seetioral exeitements, at the present existing among the states, are obliterating national feelings. These must be revived, the arts are powerful in their operation, and lasting in their istluence. We must have uational paintings, national songs, national celebrations, to exeite and perpetuate national enthusiasm. Though it is diffieult for the mind to caleulate the value of the union, yet the hand of a master may saecessfully exhihit to a single glance, Unat national proteetion, which, like the pressure of tive atmosphere, though omulpresent and powerfui, is neither seen nor felt. The flag of every country is its emblem. It should command respect abroad-adoration at home. The man who loves and revrres not his country's flag, is prepared to violate her laws and destroy her inatitutiona. To pourtray then the Star Spangled Banner overawing, in a foreign land, an infuriated and inwless soldiery, and protecting from revolutionary violence the objects of politieal hatred-ia to sirread before the eyes of our countrymen, and particularly of the rising generation, the unseen, but high moral protection afforded by a great, because a muited people. The chief object, however, is to bave this seene engraved, that the flag of our country may wave in every house, in every entage, even every log house beyond the mountains; that our children may learn, before they can read, to love and reverence the emblem of their country's power, and may realize that it is tiveir guardian and prorector, not ouly on their native soil, but in a land of strangers.
The amonnt of your subseription you will please transmit to the joint addrcess of

The letter eloses in the following manner:
"Scarcely any thing is doing in American stoeks: there are, however, fewer sellers, and confidence is, in a greit measure, restored; but it will be a long time before they recover the favor to which they bal reached before the violent proceedings in Carolime"
Here is evidenee derived from the most respeetable source, of the evil effeets of such prinelples and such condiret, in one of the United States, as have been lately manifestell in South Carolina. They neeessarily shake all confictence in the eloaraeter of our system of government, anl the stability and permaneney of the union of the states. The first visilile effect is ín the injary to our eredit. It is impossible that it should be otherwise. When foreignurs perceive that one of the stutes of which the union is composed, elaims right to prevent the execution of the laws of the nation within its limits, and, in the pro-seveution of its opposition, adopits measures entirely suliversive of the national mithority and power, seting that nuthority at definmee, noul nrming its inlubitunts to resist by military foree the exceution uf the law s, it is not ponsible in the nature of thitugs, thint they shoulil not lose their coufidenee in a goverumurut, which to them must appear so weak and insceure, as strelt a state of things woulrl neeenserily indicate. And it is worthy of remnork, that the evil thus producet, does not prinarily fall upon the state of South Carolion. Its effects nerv realized by the governnent of the United States, and in nuany inslanees by the people of the other states.

It is not likely that the Caited States will ever be redueed to the necessity of going abroall to borrow thoney, and therefore they will not be exposel to the effeets of the loes of eredit In that jarticular way: but whin the eharacter of their goverument is injurchl, and iloulsts of its stability nod seeurity are raiseal, the loss of erealit necestarily follows, anl every state, as well as intividunin, must be, in greater or less ilegree, sufferers. The eredit of many of the individual states has hitherto been, nud atill is good, abroad as well as at home. Much of this eredit, however, arises from their relationship to the union, and its continuance in a great measure depernds on the permanency of the national governament. Let the union onee be ilestroyetl, and the states be "shlirown hack upon their novereignty," and not only South Carolina, and ether small staters, but the great states of New York, Pennsy Ivania, Virginia and Ohio, would be most materially affected by such a state of things. Nor coulll any fature union that uight be fornted between any unuber of the states, restore thein to the ground they hatl lest; becanse the first nttempt to maintnin un united repuhbican government over such communities loving failesi, and for no sibstantinl canse, it in puritecily apparent that the worlil at farge would place no confulence in the mote fortunate result of a scoont experintent.

We are perfectly aware that rasoning against pride and passion in a hopeless tank; and thent nien whonare under the influence of the latter, and who wholly tisregard the former, consither it a monter of far greater importanee that their will shouhll be gratified, than that the gencral interests of the country shrinhlal be cotsulted, or the union and the constitulion be presurvetl. This feeling inay lant for a while; hut the twmpers of tuen must evertually cool, and grow more moderate; and when the consequences of rush and violent meunures are realized in their full extent, conviction will force itself upron their minds, and will adil much to the poiguancy of unavailing regret.

For thise purpoaee offers were invited and many made. The highest price for the bill lowwever was offered hy the bank of the Unitud Pates, being of for if $37 \frac{1}{2}$ celtumes. A bill whe aecrudingly drawn by the seervtary of the trpasuiy npon the Fremeh ministen of fimance in favor of the bank of the Uutied sitater, and the pro-

We mive porne nmusing information to eommanic nte, thuebing the frrinel indemnity for spoliations upon American commerce, nnd the couparative eredit abriad of the paverninent, and the hank of the liutiod stintes. It will be recolieeted that near the close of the late seasion of congtwse, nn apt was pased requiring the peeretary of the treanury to invest the moneya to be received under the F'rencli treaty of indentity, in the stock of the bank of the t'mited status. This net, however, as will nppear in the sequel, was $n$ least unnerissary-If the government is to net upon the principle of the escetlout Mrs. Glase, whor, in her directions for comking in turtiot, ruminenershy saying-"Airst eateh a tnrimt." In other wonls, it appears that there is no money fortifoning, just at jrearnt. © the engltiness of Latuis Phitgagronents, Mr. Melaaie vermis not to have heren aware; and linving litwilly "seraped" the botiom of the treasury, as was remaiked by a member of congreas nt the elone uf the pespion, his only means of partially replrmiling it was thrcugh the arsistance of the much nbused l'nited States hank. For this purpose the bank, in necommodate the secretary, purehased a draft upon the French goveriment, of abont in million of dollins, heing the amount, ins we understand, of the first instatinent which Finnce was to pay on the first of February. The laank remitted the bill to the Baringe, by whom it was sunt over to Paris for phyment. But the French governmient pefised to bonor the draf, nid the bill wha proterted! ## THE ABSAULT UPON THE PRFSIDENT,

 From the Alleandria Gazelle, May 7.An incident of a mort juinfiul nature occurted on board the steamboat Sydncy, as she stnpped livern on her way downa, yesterday. An awault was made upon the president of the United states by Mr. Ramdolpah, Inte of the navy. At the first blow, we underxtand, alinost a humirvd arins frill upon the assailant, and lue was with duthe ulty reseued and carrind on shurr. We have never known mire pxcitemeat nor tare feeling to be maniferted by all our citizens. We are Induced to mention this matter, which onght indeed never to be publistied, ouly beratse we know that riports of it will be circulated throughout the country, anill printed elsewhere. It was an affair of a moment; but it is sant, that, fionn the feeling produced, it is wonderful that the aseallant encapeil with his hife.
So great wan the public indiznathm at this outrage, that we belleve almost any mearure would have been adopted to exprews it. The president was naturally highly ercited and exasperated. Ife departed amidat thm eheere and good wishes of the great erowit which load awsemblecd.
In the eonftision of the momment, no attempt was mate th ar reet Mr. Randolpht on the install; but, the esant being in semsion, the was tumediat'ly prepented by the grand jury, and a bench warraut forthwith lisued tior his apprelnension.

A gentieman just arrived from Atexandria gives the following secount of an atrocious attack upon the prevident of the United States, as ha was on his way to Yredericksburg, where he had bees invited to lay the enrner stone of a monument about to be erected to the mmther of Whahington.
"The steamboat Cygnet, [sydney,] in wheh the president and several members of the eabinet, accompanied by many other gentlemen, were going in Fredericksbarg, stoppod on her way for a few minutes at Alexandria. Many pernons from the wharf came on hoard, and among them Mr. Randolph, latea lieut. in the navy. He made hits way into the calitin, where the president wassitting reading a newspaper; and, advancing towards him, au if to addrems lsin, hegan to draw of his gloven. The president ont knowing him, and supposing it wan anme person about to saknte him, and seeing him at some diffenty in getting off his glove, atretched out his hand towaris him, *aying "never inind your gluve, Eir." Handolph, having then durngaged himself from his ghoves, thrust one hand violeatty into the prepident's face, and hefore the could make wae of the miner, reccived a blow from a gentleman standiug near with an nmbrelia. A1most at the same time twn other gentlemen in the eabin apruug upon him, and he wan pulled back and thrown down. The moment he was a*saulied, the prewident peized lis cane, which was lying near him on the tahte, and was foreing bis way throagh the gentlemen who hall crowded round Randolph, Inaisting that no man should stand between him and the viltaln who had lavalted him: that he woould phastine him bimsolf. Randolph, by this time, had been borne towards the dimer of the cabin, and phshed through it to the deck. He made his way throagh the crowd on the derk and the wharf, lreing assixted, as is believed, by snme mufian confederates, and made his escape. He stopped for a fow minutpatat a tavern In Alexandria, and passed on beyond the distriet line. The grand Inry, then in session, in a fow minutes found a piresentmect against him, and the court terbed a benelt warrant. A magistrate liad just previously inkned a warrant; but before the officers conld arrest him, he was gune."

Robert B. RundolpA, late licutenant in the navy of the United states, having recenty anuounced his dismiesion trons the service by the prenident, will now undertahe, for the informanthon of has fellow cilizens gamerally, and of bis late asnociater attarhed to the navy, to exponet the circumstances which have led to this catantiophe.
In the apring of 1 k 2 s , John H. Tinnberiake, pnrser of the $\mathbf{U}$. S. trigate Cinhstitution, diad at Port Matien, tronathe effects of derangenuect, in a tit in which he hat untortunately manned emumander uf the irigate, dirreted ue, verbally, to aspunue the dutics of acting purwer, an the succespor of Mr. Timbetlake. Ahout un become the repipient of the monipy, whips, and otber etfecte belongug to the Umited states, which were lelt by my predecessor, it was not niy duty to couth the money, or take an inventory of tun etirets. Common aense might teach any one that the counting of the mency, and survigug the effects, devolved upon otlura, before I could be tuade rrsponsible. I partielpated in aeitier.
It has heen testifed, Inowever, by eaptain Patterson, that be gave verhal orders, to his first lic utenant to cause the bothey to be counted, and aut account takion of it to be delivered to met: and also to dexignate three nifieers of the sbip, to make an isventory of all the public effects, before they miould be delivered over. Captain Patterxon has further deposed, that heutrnast Valette, the gentleman to whom these verbal orders were given, reportent to him that alt had been dowe as comnaanded. But the persons named by lieutenant Valette, as those derignated to perform the dutiee before mentioned, disclaim their apponistment, and positively assert that they had no agency in making an inventory, or counting the aminey, and never had any knowledge of the money or cturcts lefl by Mr. Tiusberlake, except from hearsay.
These strange discrepancies in the evidence of entilituen, made under the obligatione of their oaths, necessarily ealled for the minatest examination by the court and my cutnself when, at length, it was positively ascreritined that there had beess ao inventory takell of the public property; an eapuain Pattonwon countermanded his own order to that end, upon the representation in hun, by lieutenant Valleite, that Uie slops and stores were so situated as to render it very inconvenient to mate an inventury thereof. The survey was postpuind by ninder of capLain Pattersnn, nuth after the arrival of the Constitution at the navy yard, Charlestown, Msssachumetts; when all the slops and stores were, by order of captain Gallagher, aurveyed and tururd Into the navy store, and recelpted for by Mr. Hates, the navy store-keeper on that ntation.

So much for the rmported inventorien made at Port Malinn. My ordery of captain Pattervon. Here the Invewtigation concerning the myeterinus inventories, which from the begtinning had esist ed only In firtion, might be terminated, but for the evidence of eaptain Patterson, before the enurt of inquiry, who swore that when the Constitution eame nenr the light house, and before the mervey tonk place in the navy yard at Charlentuwn, he inquired of me, whethrr it had forwariled to the fourth auditor, duplientes of the inventories of these same slops and stores, and re erived an nffirmative answer! The reader has seen, above, that no inventory had befire bein taken, and this with the knowIedge, and in porvuance of the orders, of eaptain Pattereon himaelf. It is searcely whrth wifle to waste one word more on this anbject. How captain Patterenn eould lmagine thnt I had tranemitted to the fimrth andisor duphientes of inventorien never made-or how $I$ could answer in the afirmative, never haviog hrard or wren any anch Inventhriex, 1 Irave to every one to ennj+ctise. It surpasses all my logle. Sneh, howerer, it will be seen, is the president's tetter of dismission, ( $A$ ) is the testimnay on which he has arrived at the decision, that I avo unworthy of the naval service of thes republic!
Had the preatdent bech acluated by correct motiven, ioflu. eneed by the proceedinge and judanuent of the court of ingury, and wought information from the bemoks ard vouchers in the navy department, he munt have coone to othet eonclumious. baay, however, put up with my share of bisdenanciation, when in the same morawl he stigmatizes the integrity and implitzence of the latre eturt uf uipuiry in miy caar, composed of othcers not surpassed in character aud sespectathlity by any in the service of the country.

With any stops that might have been in board when Timberlake died, I aut whully unacquainted. For some tiue belore his death, and witil the day of his interinent, Noiman and Norris, Timberiake's elerke, had charge of all the shop winch had beea open for the use of the crew. Wibat they murt have insued, i had no meaus of knowing. It having heen drtermiued by eaptain Patteraon, that the slops nud public stores in the bold, and other departments of the ship, should not be disturbed, 1 obtained, and reecipted to our collsul at Port Mahun, Mr. Ladico, for $n$ small amount of stops, which have been lolly accousted for with the government. During the inquiry concerning ony stop account, the court were of opinion that I had a eredid for the amount of $$ 188$ in slops mot belonging to my parcel. I did not feel dieposed to dispute with my Judger on sen surall a matter; and therefore, in forming my account current for the consideration of the accounting officers, I admitted that charge, although perfeetly ignorant of any mixture of my slops with any reminant of those of noy predecessor. Thus wers closed, gratuitousiy on my part, any claims which the governinent might have on me for their shops tef by Mr. Timherinke, if any there were. In view of thi miscrable remoant, fowever ithconsiderable, supposine if actually to exist, the peesident, in his pecultar candor nad magnanimity, designated the slopm and atores turned into the navy wtore at Charlestown, ns the property of the Eaited Etates, "gome stores which were stored away uader the ship" provisioos," amnunting in all to more than three thossand dollars? some stores in comparison with the saormous quantity supposed to have cost slic8?

In relation to the slops and publle stores, it will be seen that che president recites "that verbal orders were given, directing 3 inventory to be taken according to law," without intimationg ty whom given, or $t$ whomg given, leaving room fire the Infereace that the larkes is imputatile to me. That it may be sern how accurately the prnsident has interpreted the iaw, screening the gaily, and impugnimg the innocent, I here inaert two ex tracts, Nos. 14 and 15 , from the rutes and regutatione fine the savai mervice of the United States, under the liead "of atorem and pmviaions." viz:
14. "Oa the death of an officer having charge of storen, his public popera shall be separnted from those of a private nature, the former to be forwarded by a safe convcyance to the fourth anditor, and the latter, together with bls private effireta, to be put ia charge of aweh officer as the enptain of the slitip may ap point for that purpose, to be preserved for the benefit of the leoal reprementatives of the deceased, untess, from particutar circuratances, the captain shall deen it sdviable to diapose of them at public sate; in whth ease a duplicatn of the inveatory, with sa acenunt of the disposil or sale, shnll be tranamitted in fourth auditor of the trearury.
15. "If an officer having charge of stores, should, from any secidental circumetanees, be separated from his ship, the cap taid shall proceed to survey and ascertain the state of the stores, as though sweh officer ware actualiy dead or discharged; and he chall, as in a like case, appoint anothry officer to act in his place, giving the eadiest intefligence of his proceedings to the fourth auditor of the treasury."
So mueb of the rales and regulations at 1 have here inserted, enosiat especiaity of Instructinns to cartates, and they are fow podreed to whow in the prople, and my tate trother officers, how unjustly and tyrannicaliy the president has acted tawards me, while he suffers the nezligent ond gaiky eaptain to remain in command of a sqeadrmi in the Mcditerranean. It is somewhat mintelligitie to aliy one not eonversmm with the history of my ase, that there should be a motive with thr presifent to harass asd degrade me, who acted In all this affair in a subordiuate eapacity, nnd hy the commands of eaptain Patterann.
With respect to the smalt stores on toard belonging to Mr. Timberlake, the explanation io short and simple. Mr. Timberlake died Indehted in Mr. Norman, his clerk, something more thes eix hunitrud dollara, and sefore hie denth expressed a desire to secure him out of his emall atores. He directed Norman to make a selbedule of them, that he might aneign them to lim; hut before the article could be prepared, he grew sol ill, that he was baable to erreute it. Captain Patterson, knowing the wisbes of Mr. Timberlake, requested me to execate the arranzement for Norman's benefit, as If it had been eompleted by hina before the sunk into the arms of death. These stores wern and at anction by orter of the seeretary of the navy, and out of the proceede I atiaficd the elahn of Norman within a very few dollarg. This is a eimple and sfue arcount of a traneartion uposa. Thieh the persident attempts on fis upmin me an interfer. ence will the priatee of Timberiake. Nothing but the most hideous obliguity could have on distorted his poor blind vision.
proceedingr of the late court of inquiry will abundantily prove, and when, aceonding to the letter of Mr. Woomliary below ( H ), bad been examuud and returned by the prertident without dis:

I shait, in the sequai, tas the reader with a history of the money leit hy purref Trmberinke on the dromice. The atnount was reported to me, hy thone wioo counired 11 , to be $11,4 \times 1$ doltars, of which 1 tousuediatily marle a menuorandum. 'I'the mesoorandum I voluntarily defivered to the court, to save aft fuittens inquiry abont the money, baving no motave to conceal the truth. Mly first umpression was wehnrge mywelf with that sum -open a now account with the governinent, and at any risk fis. burse it in the service. This was positively prahibited by capt. I implicitly olieyed; and in paying bat rolls, amil disching ging the outatanding debts tul lie Stit Marcts, fots, exhatesed the tast doflur; masmuch, that with the periussion and apperbation of the commander of the Constitutma, a thatsand dablars were borrowed of the Dutch consui, to enable the ship tur depart in Credtt iron Port Mahom. Alf the vouchers taken tive the payments, upon Titnbertake'w bookn, and of tus outstandurz debta, made out of th aforesaid - 11,403 , were surned in with bis books anil papers for the beneth, of rather the benefit of his exnte; fur at! which be lins reeeived luth credit, white I, who perforined this task, by irder of my auperior, whthout ewolument of compensation, hnve been denied the credit of a smgle dolinf, in the very face of the judgment of the late court of timputy, and the records of the tite of the department.
With the sanction of Mr. Wondbury, I had access as well to my uwn accounts ne to those of the tater purser; and I presented Gin the cobsitleration of the accountung ofticers an account current, covering the whole sum wheh cane into my handp, every iten of which is wupported by a logal vonelier, presisely as if the necount had been originally mine. The two accounting oticers did not drign to aak or ruceive the slightest explanation; but rejeeted the whole as inseparatile in any particular. Upon their iniquitous report, the president acted; haviug, as I believe, never seen one of the vinuebers. Upon anch $n$ report, he rharres me with presentiag an aecoant eurrent, composed, in a "greaf" degree, of thems which have notormusly passed to my credit, or are uufounded and frivotous. A more bare-laced wrandal was never penned, alike unimertied by me, and unworthy of the chief magistrate of the United States.

Helow will be found my acconnt with the government in settlemcet of its new elaims nomin me (C), and I mall now wai two eveute-a ruit at law, which I fearlesaly chatienge, and the meeting of congress, to which ishall nppeat. In the mean time, I elnim, for the defence of my honor, and protection of iny dear bought fame, a genemas interponition of ail my late brothers in the pervice, no one of whom will linve heard of the bigh handed oppression with which I have been aseailed, witiout the deepeat grief. I know they will beartestimony in my fivior, even at the risk of an odious inquisition.

It there be not honesty and frmaers ennueh in the officers of the treasury department, to inveatigate the state of this concern, I wifl take it upon myself to hring it to an iesue.

The president of the I'nited Atates has carefully examined the proceedinga of the court of inqniry, charged with the Invertugation of the condact of liettebant Robref 13. Randolph in connection with his aecount as acting purser of the frigate Constitntion.
It appears by the evidence nf enmmodore Patierson, commander of the shlp, that upon the death of ptirser John B. Timberlake, at Port Mation, on the 9 d day of April, I R2s, linutenant Randolph was apporinted acting purser; and that verthal ordera were given direcling nn inventort to the taken according to faw of all the money and stores, publie and privntr, len by the said Timbettake, whiclt were ahout to pass into the posaesaion of the aeting punsef; and that it wha emported this duty had been perfotined with the exception in some stores which were stowed away under the xhip's provisions, the being nearly ready to sall for the Vaited stater.

It appears by the same textimony, that whon the ship arrived near the light howse at Boston, commodore Patterwon inquired of lleatemant Randolph, whrther the invintories nf the money and property left hy Mr. Timberlake, had been sent to the fourth audutur of the treavury, and was answered in the affirmative.
Nevertheless it appoars by the evidence of those who were directed to take the inventories, that althongh the money was counted, no inventories of the stares were taken, and by the reenefs nnul files of the fourth auditor's office it also appmarn, that un aceount, either of the money of atores, was furnished to thut ufire by lient. Randolph, or any other pernon.
It further appears, that in the settlement of hie aceominte at the office of the furth auditor, lieutenant Randolph neither charged himaelf with any portion of the money or stores lef by Mr. Timbertake, nor gave any Intimation that any had come into his preseasion.

It furtier nppeara, that after lieut. Randolph had completed the payment of the dhip'a company on her arrival in the Unitesl $y_{\text {tates }}$, he had left of the pubilie money put into his handa for that Purpose, upwards of $\$ 700,600$, of whirh, upm the settement if his aceounta, he returned into the crearury a litile more than

It further apmears, ithat in the wriar 1N29, having arrived io the Imited statos in Juiy, I&2s, nud his accusnts having bepa sotthed in Oetsotber of that year. licutemant Rasulolph paid to Tluonas Notman, stiot of tie funds remsitung in his hasio os account of purser T'imberluke, proving thut lie was not ignorant of the fact Llat all thore finids had mit loreth aceounted for is his pres-

It furtinv appears, that the acesuanting ifficers of the trensury were ignornint of the musery and storea leth by Mr. T'iniberiake, until an usaconutualo default exlubited is the wetlletneat of hts accounta, led to inquiry into the ancens lsy which it had teeen produced; and when, in the course of that inmwiry, it was aascortainod that inoney atad atores left by lim had conse into livut. Randoiph's possessbon, the latter, when ealied on, refised to state the ampmat, ir render any acconit of them, bichangh to neknowiedred Utat he had a memoranium of the amount of tie of the navy, and not to ber espected fron a man of conscions integrity.

Consulering these thinge en elearty entablished by the testimony, the president casmot approve of so much of the finding of the coust as cleclares, "th Hoes not appear that lieutenant Randoiph sand any thing with an intentuon to nisleas or deceive articies ief by Mr. Tiusberlake, or uf the disporition made of stoeas" mur can the apprave of the opinion expiresped by the eourt, "that thon before mentioned neglect of lieutesant Randulph, and theirregularituen in his mannet of performing the daties of acting purser, and In keepung and making out his acermata, did unt groceed fromnany intention to defratsd the United Atatem or Mr. Tinniverlake."

T'hese eonclasiona, in the opinion of the president, are inemmpatible with liett. Randolph's finlure to charge hituoelf with the anoney and effects of Mr. Tinsluerlake, with the nasianformation given by hin to cotnmmore Pattrans is relation to sending the inventories th the fiuturth andutor-with the appropriation to his own use, bufire tive muttersest of his accounts, of near ten thousasal drilian of the money sent to hian nt Roston to pay off the abip's coinpany, showing that he had an neearase knowledte what woutd be the reetait of that settlement-with his payment of क्000 to Mr. Norman after the settlement of his aceavint, which is a confestion of his knowledge, that he had retantied money belonging to the Initod Atatee or to Mr. Timberlakewith his rafiaal in give infigranation in relation to the mosey and property left by Mr. Tintberlake an lie was bound to do, as purser of the navy, by Iaw-and with the manifestation of exeltoment and the violent language used by hita when called upon far explanations.

And finally, instead of comine forward and correethit the errurs of bus account which have beese developed by the casurt of anquiry, and returning into the treashry the $$ 4,303$ II-whieh that eotirt after liherally admitting every claim sivasced by biat with in show of evidenee, flud is be ptill in his hande unaceonet. ed for, he bas presented to the accounting officers of the treasu. ry an acconnt curreat, comaposed in in ifieat degree of items which have notoriously pasesed to his credit, or mie unfousuded nud frivolous, showing a balaace of about $$ 600$ in his nwn favor araunst the United Stentes, thenreby evinciug a determinntion not to refund any portion of the anmey which be has inspoperiy applied to Jik awn uee, if it be posesible to nvoid it.

In the opinions of the presialest, the facta which appear in this cave, nad the cooduct of lient. Randoljh throughout the inveatigation, prove lim to he unwortity the naval service of this re, pulbic, and men ufit amoclate for thome wone of chivalry, integrity and honor, who adorn nur navy. The sceretary of the navy Is therefore directed to dismise lieut. Bubert E. Randolph from the naval mervice of the tisited States.

And the president trusts that the most efficient means with be rearted $\mathrm{at}^{\text {b }}$ by the tavy department to prevent in future that totai nuglowit and disregard of the rights of deceaved ofscer and their faniliea whiclt form sirikswe elonarmeteriotica in thite came.

TOWM MEETING AT ALEXANDRIA,

On the outrage committed on the presilent.
At a public meeting of the cituzens of Alexandria, held at the market syuare, on 'ruesdny, the 7th of May, 1833 , aggreeably to public notuee, Bernurd Hooe, esq. the mayor, was ealled to the chair, and on motion, Charies Neal, esq. appointed secretnry.
The mayor bnving brietiy explainet the object of the areeting, Thounson F. Mavov, eaq. in in oioqueat and animnted andress, embodying the parport and amplirying and Hiustrating the priaenples of the following resolutions, offered them to the coasideration of the people assemblied in the public squnre; and the resolutions were severally mad unanimotisly adopted.

Resolved, That the citizens of the town have tearned, woth mingled weatiments of regret nad indiguation, that in Hagrant violation of the public peace, nad of the sanctity of the lawn, was yesterday committed on board the public uall boat, whilst lying int our wharves, by Robert B. Haudolph, on the person of the preaident of the United states.
Resolved, That whilst despoise covernmeate, restiag on principlea of fonr, have bieen necessarlily sustained and protected by force, and in the milder furms of tuonarchical goverumenter, though in some degree distiaguished by greates security to the perions of their chicf executive officers, it has aeverth-less been thought necesary to surround them with armed guards; it has heretofore, been the proud boint of our repablican institutions, that obedience to the constiteted anthorituen, was upheld by in macred reverpnce for the pubtic will-and that the moral force of public opinion, nlone, sprend in phnoply of defence arond the penon of every officer in the discharge of his official duties more endaring and certain than the array of armed men.
Rewieed, That ia the outrage which has beea committed, the priaciples of our free lastitutions have been violated; and that in the manner and circumstances of its perpetration, there is mothung found to extesuate it or attay the frelinge of an injured and indganant people - thust la the history of our couatry, it is the first tiure within the kaowledge of this people, that an nttetapt has been inade to gratify a personal vengeance-for the Prowts of an tigh officinl act-nitil this blow nt the fuislameatal prisciples of our institutrons has been struck by mis nriu to Whach had once been confided the high trust of uplonlding then Aag and defending the charncter and bonot of his country!

Resoled, That this nutrage on the dignity of the people, in the prown of their chief magistrate, ealls for a general expresston of public indignation.
Resiced, That the chaurman be requested to encinec a enpy of the proceedngen of this mecting to the president of the Ualted sutes, and also cause them to be publisilied it the newspapers of this town.

Totnl recelpts

811,74250 Ife is eredited with paymeats to officers and men, dimburaethents in the Mediterranean, slopp aud storea issued, and slopps rebraed to naval store, 820,72998 . Excess of payment over receipts, $88,98748$.
There was no known fand out of which this could bave been irawn, other than Mr. Timberinke's nowey received at P'ort Mahon. But io nddition to these payments, he paid for tobaceo at Gibraltar, 14872 , little of which was sold to the crew, in consequence of its inferior quatity; and a considernble aum for other stores. Llow much of thia was replnced by ispues of the asime nores, the paprers do aot enahle tue to ascertaia.
Afer arriving at the nhove seault, I examined into lifutenant Tandolph's reccipls and payisents nfter the arrivat ia Bowton. The result exhibited in batarre of receipts, nver payments cor repponding with the excess of paynucate over receupta before his arnval.

From these views of the aublect, it was apparent to my tnind, that lieutenant Randotph aust luave had left in bank nt Bostom nfter paying of the erew, appropriating all his own commissiona, eompeneatioa and expenses, and after returnhug into the trensury the anount found due from him on settlement, at least for his baus miy requent the secretary of the treasury applled for his bank accouat. The reply of the bank with lieutennat Randol ph's account, is mnnexed, marked (25). It fulty confirman my previous enclusions. It shows that, after lieutenant Randolph had fiaistied all his payments, he wtill had lefi in bank $\$ 19,873$ 23. Before the lef Boston, he drew out 9,07323 , of this suin, 871806 un cash; 15517 , in a check on the Norfolk branch, and 89,000 in $n$ etieek on the Richanind branch, lenving preciseIy 810,000 in bank. This, with $\wp_{257} 43$ nfterwhrds depoeited, was all of the $819,873 \mathrm{ox}$, whieh ever came Into the treashry.
But in comparison of lieuteanat Randolph's bank accoust with his aecount In this office, asakes it npparent that he had durisg the progrese of his paymente, drawn out considr rable sums on hid own account. His account current, and sbotracts from his pay roll, are nusexed, miuked (97). Hind he deposited all the nonicy he received ia Boston, mad drnwn nut antuc except for the plament of the ship's erew, the balaire in bank would have excreded fige, ovo. Acarcfut exnmiontion of atl the accunnts gives the following resultu; which I have no doubt ase acenrate within in few cents-

J.aw of Patewta. We luarn from the Greenfleld, (Miass.) Gazette, that a case of some intrreat wan latcly decided at the upreme court in that county, of which the foliowing is an abstract:
George fliekinwos, rs. Richardeon Mall. It was an aetion on a gote of hand for g200. The defence was that it was withuut consideration. The defendant proved that the pote, with neveral othery, amountiug in all in about gi, 000, was given in consideration of the eonveyance to himstrif and othera for the esclueive right to make, ame and vend Hines and Baims" int proved patemt machine for dresaing Aax mid bemp in five tuwn in the county of r'rankitn. He theo attempted to prove that the pateut was void for several reasous. It seeus that in 1823 a patent was granted to Ifines and Bnins far the whole machine, and afterwards, in 1826 , they ohtained a patemit for the remainder of the tetm for the application of the broil whecle and rade shafte fir the purpose of thrning the flotmd roliers only-snggesting that their fornury pratent on the same pubject was void on account of a deficient specification. T'ise former patent was accordingly cancelled. The machine was proved to liave been in general ose between 1838 and 1826, and the defendant contends that this destroym the validity of the aveond patent, as by the provisions of tlie patent law, valid letters could only be granted for an invention "7not used by the puthic before the application." But the court held that the invalidity ariring from a prior use depended upan the intention of the party-the presumption thut he had abnodoned bis right and dedrcated his invention to the public, and that the eircunnstances of the ose in this case negatived such an intention the objection conid not be sustained. The defendant then contended that Ilie patent was void-because the "improved machine" was wselces, and the Improveuneot patented not new - and a variety of ovileuce waa gone into upon these point no both ridew. The chuef justiee charged the Jury that it would bo a good defence to the note to show that the patent wan void: that in order to a valid pausnt, ilie machine of inveation patent ed must be both "nese and waefol,"-thut in order to tasefulness, the machane of supposed improvement patented mast be applicable th heneflcial use, and that if'it clparly appeared that no man is any part of the United States, under any eircunutances, could erpel such a machone without lose, that it conld not be usefol within the oncaning ond the law. He also directed them if the parented improveonent contained neither any now prineiple, of any new cotmhitation of old prituciplen-ar a enmbanation for aew purpure-tien alan tive patent would be void. The defeudant did not eontrovert the fact, bat rented his defonce upon the ground that the forteiture aecrued only where there was a dysign to defraud the revenue and that the addhional articles laving been put in by accident or mistake, Une jury mizht expreise dincretion in eandemaing the prosperty. Ca the other hand, it was conteuded by the United States attorney, that the quewtion of fact being adainted or proved, the positive directione of the law dermanded the forfeiture, and that the remedy for a party innoceut of Iraudoleat intention, is, a subsequent remission of the peoalty in the mode estahlished lay law.
Judge Ifopkinson reviewed at length the acis of congrese bearing upou the question, and clanged the jury, that by the Inw; the whole packnge was forfeited by reason of containing articies nut mentuoned in the in vouct; and that neither the eower bor the jury had any thing to do with the question whether the articier got into the package by mintake or accident, or the intention, fraudulent, or innocent with whieh they were put there. STEALNE DNE OWN'e paopentr, From a Lomdon paper:At the Manchester quarterly spupions, on Saturday, a mau named Richard Ilarris, of reppectable appearance, who had formerly knpt a public house in Manehester, was fadscied for having otolen, at Manchester, on tha 2tth of Decensiser last, ouve bax, the property of Mesmrs. Pick ford the cartsers.
The case pxetted connaderable intereal, as it involved a rather singuiar and novelquestan-via: whether the grisotier had or hed mot been guilty of etealing bis nwn pooperty? Accordung to the evidence adducer, it appeared that on the above mamed day the primoner eniled at the warehunse of Messrs. Piekford & C'o. the well known carriers, and ased if they lad a box for him, whleh the expected would be went, addressed to hum from Burminglam, by their conveyance? Tive purter of Messra. Yickford, whou he questioned, told him that it had arrived, and Was in the warshonse; but that be had better go into the clert's ofice, and pay the carringe before the bos was given to him. He accordingly went into the office, and arked one of the clerke whut was the charge for carriage.
Thie clerk toild bim, and be went away without paying any thing; but he mais that he would call again aboot it. In two of three daym afterwards he again ealled at the ofthee, and asked for the bos, saying that lie had brought the money to pay for the earriage. On searching for the box in the warehouse it wast nut to be found, and the jwiwoner appeared to be exceedingly eriraged, declaring that he wottld hring an action at law aganse Mesers. Pick ford for the value of the box and its contents. The cirrks and warphoumemen had a eobversation on the oubject. and after connidering the circumstances of the prisoner'e previous visit to the warelwuse, together with fact of the box not bring seen since that visit, they bugan to suspect that the pen soner hisself must liave taken it away. Messrs. Pickford in consequence applied to the nagintrate*, and obtaised a warran to search the prisoner's premises, which they did, and there fonmed the identical hos, enuptied of its eontents.

Evidence to the above effect having been adduced, the jary atopped the chairman as lic was abont fo sum up, observing that they were guite watisfied wius the facts of the case, but they wised th know from him whether it was "a felony for a sam to steal hit owa gonds?"
J. H. Nopily, maq. the chairman, said thet, under the circemestancen, there could be no doubt that, if the prisuner was gailly, it would amount to felony.
The jury immediately returned a verdiet of guilty.
The ehairman, in passing sentence, aad that the priseper war a inan of very considerable and acute intelleet and bad managed thin robhery with a deal of tact. He was liable to be iraneported for life, but the eourt would not go that length. THE PAST—TIE PRESENT—YOR THE FETEEE, QO-There is nothing important, just now, to las before our readers-but we have endeavored to give them an interesting and well-flled shect. We intend, next week, to redeem our promise to publish the report of the minority of the committee of the lvouse of representatives, on matufactures-and shall give it entire, by the aid of extra pages.

nef-The shreda of foreign newa that we have would seem to shew the probabitity of some collision between Great Britath and France, on the one hand, and Rusaia on the other, as to the affaira of Turkey. The former will not agree that the latter shall take the sultan under the "protection" of her army and navy. But sooner or Jater, unlves Russia slanll fall into piecen, beealise of her own weight and power, the powsessiou by her, of Turkey in Earope, must be couflently expected.
$0 \mathbf{c}^{-W e}$ had hoped that any further notice of that abominable affair, the asanit on the president, by Mr. Randelpht, at Alex-andria-would not appear neceskary; but a proceeding as abnthe record. A base attempt is making to intict a wound upon the national character, by representing that attack as a party matter; or, to render it a sorry tool for party to work with. One might almost thask that certain miscrables are pleased with the assault, becauze of fornishing matter to feed their scurrilous appetites upon. The exclusiveness of this party in such, that it would rather degrade the whole people of the United States, as it were, for the act of an individual-ilian permit them to have a common feeling on any sulyect affecting the national repusation: and these have forced a consideration of the merits of the case of Mr. Randolph, which ought to have had no sort of influence over the minds of men, with respect to his attack on the person of the president. We have laid aside several articles on this subjeet, and shall register them-but take nw other part in the matver than that of a "faithful chronicler."

United Statga mank. The lionest gentlemen who Wrorthily obtained, through some incorruptihle public offiver at Washington, a copy of the presitlent's mussagec before it was delivered to congress, and, in honorable Gairuess, speculated in the stock of the bank of the Uuited Stateo, at New York-we have the pileasure to say, have been handsomely rewarded! It is jrobable that the $$ 50,000$ which they so reputably poeketed by the "chivalrie" proceeding just above stated, have betu "nullified," three times over, by the confidence of the people in the bank. On Tuesday last 150,000 dollars of its stoek was sold at $1133<1,1137-8$-probably to meet contracts for delivery. "The biters have been bitten."

Ma. Ravpozph attemled the New Market races in Virgrinia, a few days since, and addressel the party at the Juekey Club ilimer. Richvovm. From the Whig. The foundation of an imrunse flour mill, is now being laid by Mr. P. J. Chevallie, adjoining hin lumber house at the foot of the Basin, to whlace the Giallego mills, lately destroyed by fire; and it is contemplated also to ereet a cotton faetory immediately below it, the machinery to be propelled by the sance water that will be required for the flour mill-the fall being over thirty feet, after the water leaves the latter. We shall thin have the unseemly ravise, which has lithrrto been a nuisance, converted to a useful purpose, and the farmers will lose only for one senson the market for over 200,000 bushels of wheat, which were ground by the late, and will be by the new mill.

Georgit. A convention is sitting in this state to redvec and equalize the state representation. Mr. Wayne has been chosen president-for Mr. Wayne 151, Willam H. Craveford 88 , seattoving 9 . The political charaeter of the boily may be guthered from this election. It is against nullification-and so forth.

Alasama. We have the first report to the stockholders of the Tuscumbia rail road, now making. It is to extend round the Muscle Shoal Falls of Tennessee (of 142 feet) and is in length 45 miles. From thence there is an uninterrupted water navigation to New Orleansabout 2,200 miles. The work seems to be going on with both prudence and spirit.

Sottaran maturas. Choice coffon. We have before us (says the Mobile Register) samples of general Chambern' cotton, which brought the extraorfinary price of 12fe. It was selected from his erop, and in point of color, oleanliness, staple and handling, (as it is termed hy growers), is equal to any we rumeriber to have seen. The priee paid for this beautiful ootton should serve as ats encouragement to the planters to be-atow due attention on preparing their crops for market. Choice eottons like thewe will always conimand buyers, at rates sufficiently above the market to repay any expense in its preparstion.

What a comment upon nullification! Surely the good peopule of Alabama condd not wish better times. They will yet bless their afars, and eschew the Palmetto.

The mail. Ninety-nine permons in a hundred, when thry speak, or hear others speak, of the mail, think it ouly a bag the size of a school boy's satchel, made to earry letters from one pulace to another. How they would stare to see three leathem portmanteaus and twelve canvass bags, each of which might contain two or three bushels, and be told that was the mail-Unele 8am's satchel. They would not beliere it. Yet such is the faet at New York, and proportionably so at other cities. Tianspontation. The Cleaveland paper sayn-The earrying trade between Philarlelphia and Pittsburgh has been somewhat reduced the prenent sason. All heavy country produce is casried from Pittslurgh to Philadelphia at 75 cents per 100 llss which reduces the transportation of flour to about $$ 163$ per harrel. This is probably the lowest price of transporing jroduce from Pittshurg to Philadelphia, anll is a higher jriee than is paid for the transportation of flour from the Scioto to New York, by way of lake Erie.

Only ten years agn flour could be transported from Pitssburgh to Philadelphia at a cheaper rate than it could be brought from Chillicothe to Cleaveland, 600 sniles distant from New York.

The yan wint. Goods have been reerived at $S t$ Iovis in 15 days after tlury left Baltimore-fifteen days! This operation will yet be performedl in about half the time, the rail road to the Ohio being finished.

BrFtish "EREE TRADE:" EXPORTATIONR It is positively tateil in the New York papers, that the parish officers of Middlesex and Surry, having resolved to rid themselves of small chieves, vagrauts, and pauyers, as much as possible, have taken up several ships at London for the purpose of spewing them into the cities of the United States. New York and Baltimore have been mont favored with such eargnes of miserable beingn, bat it is now said that Boston and Providenee will be chiefly honerel with present exportations. We hope that there is authority in the corporations of those cities to send back these British "wares," or to tax them se heavily that they must be entered for exportation, only, like eoarse British cotton goods. We are lappy 10 beliese that there is not cruelty atod rascality enough in any publie offieers of the United States, to expuort cargoes of old and wormout negroes to England; but, and except on that account, wo should like to ascertain, by experiment, another proof of what British "free trade" is, by canting a few thousands of such "surplus population" into London.

Bentinat Taxth. House of commons. Mr. Robinson rose to make motion to the following effect: "that a select committee be appointed to consider and revise our existing taxation, with a view to the repeal of those burthens which pressed most heavily upon productive indastry, and to substitute an equitable tax on property in lieu thereof." As this motion has been for the present lost, and as we are most sadly presser for space, we shall deapateh the debate as briefly as possible, as we have no doubt that the necessity for a property tax will very soon be forced upon ministers by the irresistible press of eireumstances. Mr. Robiuson maintained at considerable length, that the taxes, as now imposed, were of ruinously unequal operation; that the working classea could no longer bear them; and that their continutution zoould be of the most clisastrous comsequence to the best interests of the nation. The increase of the poor rates, the progress of crime, and the reduetions in the savings' bank teposits, prove how grievously the working elasses had been affected. He therefore urgenl on the house, before the financial statements were brought forward, to express its opinion, not as to the reduction of taxation, but as to the expediency of ascertaining whether it eould not be differeutly and less injuriously imposed by means of a property tax. Mr. Warburton seconded the motion. After considerable diseussion, the government not aceeding to the motion, wishing to have the opportunity of making the financial statement, and not desiring to be pledged as to the tax named, the motion was negatived on a division. The numbers were 155 ayes, and 221 noes.

Dex.awaig areakwater. We leam from the Philadelphia Commereial Herald, that upwards of 130,000 tons of stonc have been contracted for, to be deliverell at the Delaware breakwater during the prement season. The whole length of the foundation on which deposites of stone had been made at the elose of last autumn, was 1,883 feet (something more than a third of a mile), of which 1,419 feet had been raisel $3 \frac{1}{2}$ feet above the level of low water, sud 474 feet to its destined height. The lee breaker had been enlarged during the season to an extent of 575 feet in length by 60 in lureadth, and 151 feet had been brought up nearly to the height contemplated. The expenditures upon this work, for several years past, have amounted to full $\$ 200,000$ per annum. The whole cost was estimated by the commissioners at $\$ 9,916,870$. The amount hitherto expeuded is not far from $\$ 1,000,000$. Two or three years more will be required, in order to earry the work to its completion. When finished acoording to the original plan, it will afford a harbor sufficiently eapacious for the anchorage of upwards of 60 vessels. "The water surface will comprise an area of one mile square, having a depth at low water of from 3 to 6 fathoms, between the piteh of the cape and the western extremity of the ice-breaker. This space will be completely secureal from all gales from the north-east and north-west, these being the only points of attack from which there lias been a necessity in the plan of the work to secure and tortify." 'Ilsere is but one breakwater in the world which cans clam a comparison with it, viz: that at I'lymouth, Eingland, the length of which is about a mile. Its eost was upwarde of $£ 1,000,000$ sterling, and the quantity of atone employed in its cowstruction, about $2,000,000$ tons.

Missocui lead sixgs. Official information has been received by the superintendent of the United States' lead mines, at Galens, that the lcad mines on the west bank of the Mississippi, recently eeded by the Sae and Fos Italians, will be opented for loase on the first day of June next.

A writer in the Galenian states that new and valuable discoveries of lead ore have been male upou the east bank of the Mississippi river, between the Platte and Graut rivers, in lowa eoounty, M. T. The ore is said to be of the best quality, found in large bodies, and over an extensive tract of the country. Among the most valuable discoveries is a horizontal cave, the entrance of whieh if about 150 feet above the level of the river. It ia from two to four fect wide, and from six to nine feet higho From this cave, about 400,000 pounds of lead ore have been taken with litule labor, and the operation was stin continued. The land is of the best quality, and covered with timber. A town, ealled Van Buren, (whieh name has also been given to the mines and cave adjacent), has been laid out, and that part of the country is rapidly increasing in population.

Contention of rege persona of colol. Delegates of color have been selceted from most of the states in the union, to assemble next month in Pliladelphia. Their avowed object is to devise means to elevate the charneter and improve the condition of the colored population in this country, and to fix upon a suitable place whither they may ernigrate, and where they will no longer endure the depressing iuferiority to whieh, so long as they dwell among the whites, they must afways be subjected. It is understood that the delegates are generally, if not altogether, opposed to the colonization society-averse to going to Liberia-and that they have it in eontemplation to plant a colony in the Texas.

These prejudices entertained by them against removing to Liberia, have been ercated and fostered, as is well known, by the deluded advocates of imnecdiate evaneipation. Minguinled fanatics often oceasion more misohief than avowed infidels, for their honesty of purpose may sometimes give them influence, when the personal character of the latter might prove an antidote to the perversity of theirdoctrines. We cannot but regard these persons as the greatest foes to the best interests of the African race. Their nuraber, however, is few, and though the noise they make is great, their influence is small. Yet if it can be clearly shewn that a sctulement in the 'Texas would answer the purposes of the blacks, we would not lay a straw in their path. We are quite certain, however, that they will find obstreles in their way; mueh more diffieult to overcome than a settlemeut in Liberia.

LIEEL cask. New York couvt of acsaiono-the people verass Edwin Cromwell, [editor of the Albany Argus]. This cause being called ow, Mr. Hoyt, in belinif of the defendant, presented the following paper to the eourt and moved that it be filed:

Edwoin Cromvell ails. the people, &ce.-In reference to the publications charged in the indietment, Mr. Croswell, the defenclant, says that the artieles were published on the strength of expressions said to have been made by Mr. Blunt, and rrpeated to Mr. Croswell by responsible persons, and whieh Mr. Cronwell at the time believed to he correct. He however afterwards became satisfied that the information on which the articles were founded was erroneous, and so stated in his paper. Mr. Croswell is ardvised that in law these publications are libelloas; and as he is desirous to exonerate Mr. Blunt in the fullest manner from the imputations contained therein ${ }_{2}$ he re-queste permistion to withdraw his former plea of not guilty, and in lieu thereof he freely admits the pnblications eharged, and repeats that he is satisfied that they were erroneous in point of fact, and unjust towards Mr. Blunt.

Mr. Blumt then rose and stated that he had not brought the prosccution from any personal feeling, but solely for eonvincing the conductors of the public press that private eharacter was protected by the laws of the land. So far as he was personally concerned, he was entirely satisfied by the submission of the defendant, and hoped the court would nequiesce in the motion which the district attorney would make. Mr. Hoffman then moved that a nolle prosegui be entered, and the same was ordered accordingly.

Musk in cholkra. From the "New Monthly Nagazine," probished in London. "Among other matters resorted to by the faculty to stay the progress of this terrible disease, one has been published of so singular a character, that we do not hesitate to extract the statement into our columns. It is contained in a letter from Mr. Richard Laming, of No. 48 Finsbury square, a distriet in which the ravages of the plaguc have been very great. Mr. Laming sayo-
" 1 have lately employed musk in several eases of eholera with a success so uniform and decisive, as to make its introduetion desirable, without loss of time to the notiee of the whole prolession, &e.
"The salutary iufluenee of the first dose of musk will be found to become mauifest by greatly mitigating, in a very few minutes, and in many cases, by effectually removing the eraunps, the purging and the vomiting. My plan has been to give at once fifteen grains, rubbied in a draught with a lump of sugar and a wine glass full of cold water; and I am justified in reporting that this first step, if taken promptly, will searcely ever fail to arrest the progress of the disease, as to leave the patient to engy and ordinary convalesence.
" So evident is the action of musk in cholcra, that the practitioner will experience no difficulty in determining whether he need repeat its exbibition, or whether, having subdued the immediate cause of the disease by the firmt dose, he should direct his attention to the removal of its cotsequences by the ordinary means.'"

COBBETT AND PAINE.
The followisg which happened in the Britinh house of commons oa the 2 lad March, we supposed had about as nuech effect ou Mr. Cobbetu's feelings, as the falling of a drop of water on a wek's back is asenoying to him?
A asmber of petitiona were presented for the better observabee of the Sab bath, which Mr. Cobbett condemned as originating in poands, shillings and pence feelings, aad not in a respect for the gospel. In observiag on one petition presented in favor of the emancipation of the Jews, the same hon. member said chat the presenter of the petition (Mr. E. J. Stanley) had declared that the Jows were one of the moat industrious classes of bie majesty's aubjects. Now, he would aak the hon, member whether he could produce a Jew who ever dug or went to plough, or made his own eboes or cost; or who ever did any phing cxeept get mouey from the pockets of the people? Mr. E. 1. Ftanley, in reply, said that as the hon. member had once condemned Paine as a blasphemer, and yet aferwards assisted at his apotheosis, it was to lee hoped that he (Mr. C.) would exhibit a similar change of opinion with regard to the Jews.
Mr. Cobbett denied that he had ever held up Mr. Paine as a Marpacmer. He had always, however, drawn a distinction between Mr. Paine's political and religions opinions. With respeet to his bringing Mr. Paine's bones to England, all he should tay wres, that in dotng so he considered be was ooly doing his duty, out of the reapect to his writings on the subject of paper money; which, If they had been atteaded to, and his advice followed, would have prevented the present dificulty of dealing with the eurrency.
Mr. E. J. Stanley said, that after what had fallen from the hean. nember for Oidham, he must he allowed to justify blaself by reading the very wurds of the publication of the hon. memser himself "In no part of the Aze of Reason does Paine speak is terms of Impioss irreverence of God; be praises God, and calls upon hia name, and that too, in a strain of eloquence the equal of which I have mever heard in any sermon." Vol. 25, p. 725. The Age of Reason is as despicable as its asthor. The wreteh hat all hils life been employed in leading fools astray from their daty. His religion is of a piece with his politics, the one Incuieatea the right of revolting againat governinent, the other againnt God." Vol. 3, p. 399. "Though Thomas Paine was no Cliristian, he was no blasphemer. Hle offers uo indignity to God hinself." Vol. 35, p. 735. "Paine was a cruel, treacherous and blasphemthe rufinan; be was a traitor, and a traitor is the foulest fiend on earth. Vol. 4
This little expose is m characteristic of Cobbett that we have unacribed it, although we bave repeatedly publisted thees and hundred other equally palpuble contradictions. There la a titue book called the "Beauties of Cobbett, or blowing hot and cold," enturely filled with his assertions and contradictions, as palpable as that here exposed respecting Thomas Paine.
The speaker enncluded, we presume, that Cobbett had reeetved a regular fiworer, and interfered to prevent Mr. Atanley pumapelling a fallen man. The rigit hon. member, to said, had how anawered the hon. member for Oldham, and it would be quite ous of order for him to proceed.

Aad there in a general excest in the vaiue exported is the year 189, ever 1851, of two millions of dollars. We une round numbers.
The valne of the producta of the sea has increased in the sum of (say) 6.50,000 doliarm-in the tatter year.
The value of the products of the forest has a litule increased, and so has the value of the product of anituals.
The vilure of vegstable food has decreased more than $5,500,000$ -but the vaiue of cotwn and wobacco has increased in the sum of $7,500,000$ dellars.
Under the head of manafacturas are included iold and silvor coin. The general agaregate, in 1802, is alonut 600,000 less than in 1831; but in the sum for 1831 was incladed $9,0,38,474$ dollars in gold and silver eoin, and in 1872, oniy $1,410,941$ dollark-or 650,000 iess. Ho that the value of manufactures exported (in the cormana use of the word) was nearly the same in both years.
Now, $i f$ the export of domestic productions has any thing to do with the prouperity of particular sectiona of country, it will appear, that the cotton and tnbaceo planters have had no reason to eomplain of the tarif! They arlded 25 per cent. to the value of their "xporto-while the farnuing intereat, or prodncers of bread-stuIfs and meati, lost 33 por cent. on the value of their exports!
We do not build mueh on these facte! We know that they are "as a drop in the bucket" to the value of the internal commerce of tie Unlted staten-thinge only of "moonshine;" thit in may be that we thall hoid a "talk" about them with "the for-ty-bale theory philosopliers," and others, who seein th think that all value is confined to imports and exports!-that a bale of cotton, wold at Boston, for four eagies, le not worth as muelt an another bale sold at I.iverpool for the same welght of golit! and that, If the four eagles laid ous in corton, are made worth twelve eagles at Boston, it is better to pay twelve engles for the eloth at Liverpod than in Beaton; though into the value, at Liverpool, not one cent's worth of American breat nr meat enters; whereas at Boston the home made cloth represents four eaglow, worth of our break and meat, just an erriainiy as it represents four eagles worth of nur raw coutnn. Indeed, in almost every fonr engles worth of our raw cotinn. Indeed, in almoost every important indtance, bread and meat are the moterich of chief vilue, used in manufactures.

We extended our handu which tiney mose to grasp, and to our questiou "how d'ye do?" they responded in the natme words, accompanyiug them with a heanty whake. After the salutations were over, we had letuure to observe inove closely the appearances of these sons of uature; they were elad in leggins and moceasinm of buck-kith, and wore thankets whilh were thrown arousd thetn In the masier of the Romun togn, eo as to leave their right artoa bare: whes reclining or lying down, they geterally allowed their blankets to fill from then. The yoongest among them wera painted on their neeks, with a hright vermation color, and had their faces transvervely streaked with alternate red and black rtripes. From their hodies and from their faces and eyebrowes, they pluck out the halr with the most assiduoss eare; they also shave, or pull in ont from their heads, with the exeeption of a tuf of about three fingers width, extending fiom between the forehead and crowu to the back of the head, this they sornetimes plait Into a queue on the crown, and cat the edges of it down to an inch in length, and plaster it with vertaition which keepo it crect and gives it the appearance of a cock's connh. The time and great eare bestowed hy them at their toilette, would pat the foppery of a eivilized beas eompletely to the blush; the poiat of a vingle hair emerging from their eyebowes, nr the wlighteet pimple visible upon their facee, awakens their anxious solicitnde, and they proceed to eradicate, or erase is with all posolthe dexpateh."
He says that the whole of them were truly interesting, and had "has (Jack the eldeet ant of Biack Hawk) countenance not been wasting in that peculiar expresaion which emanates from a cuitivated intellect and whieh education alowe can give, we couid have looked upon him an the living pervonigeation of our couid have lonked upon himm

Prom the St. Louis Times, of April 13.
We regret that the public anind is again exctied, by the unfinusded reports concerning the Indians. There are aome who wish $w$ keep up an excitement on this subject, for the purpose of preventing the lead region from being overrua with miners. It is very protable that the present competution among the inlsers wil be iujurious to thowe concersed-and empecsally so, if It be increased. But we care mure for the gencral interests of the country, than for the progress of a particular brauch of ithdustry. We think, however, that the truth wifl, in tie long run, promote the public welfare to a far greater esteut, than the circulation of error. If it be a fact that the ludians are determined to igght, prepatations should be made for the defence of the frontiers. But if they are peaceably donposed; if their situamence a waf, why should emogratuma to the chuutry be checked, and g*ueral prusperity retatded for the benefit of a fow? it Io at all tituen, prositble to murse hitle difficulues until they beconse of iuportance.
The president was informed, long before the war of last summer, that the lindimus could be peacealily removed from the east to the wew side of the Mixsiseippi, for the sum of 6 or $$ 8,000$. Ite wan told in the presence of a member of cougrose that the laquiry liad been made by a persou competent to judge, aud that the fact of their willingluess to goy had been ascentained. The secretary al war also was made acquainted with than satue ineportant truth. No attempt was manle to investigate whethor the preaident and secretary had beett correctly infirmed. By the late appropriatosin bill six humdred and thirly thousand dollars were applied us the payment of the thinuis mitua for merving agatnst Black Hawk and his party! Here is econoun!! We pans by the other expenses turect and incinental, wheli were indeed beavy, and (in the apirit of those who cheristi and foster, and aggravatc privatc disturbances so as to create a war) we also pass by thr great sacrifice of human life, and the cruelties practised upon those whal have only weakness and tgaotance with wheh to coutend aganet power and knowledge. We pasa by all this as nothiag that the administration may bave futi scope to boast of its rigid econonay and its extensive bumawity.
We knew that the principal Pottowattomie ehiefs, who control their nation, are anstous to cultivate all the relauns of peace. We know that when they were hunting on grounds which befonged to thenu for titat parpose, by treafy (if trenties may be regarded as good for any but the strung) they were forbuden thus to supply their perisiling familites with thenr ordiasry food-and we know, that in order wo contimne friendly to the goverumanit, at the requeat af their ehiefa they retired, and suffered much, thaving fett the nuiversal scarelty of crupa the previous season. We are promaded thent tise Winturbazoes are, in every way, molicitoun to live undiafurbenf without trenpawing on the rights af others. 'Tline pronof are ainple. ## IRFLAND.

Mr. O'Convele's specch in the house of commons, on the third reading and finul pasacagre of the "coercion bell"
Mr. O'Connell said that he did not rise to iuploreto entreat-innch less to eringe-on hehalf of the ration to which he belonged, which, thongh subject to this, was yet a distinct one [ "no, no"]; he called upon the house not to pass this atrocions, this audacious bill, which, though it hat recuivel some improvementa since it left the other house, where it lad been supported hy the lord clatiscellor; thongh the press had been left safe, and many of its originad horrors had been mitigated, yet was still atrocious enough to justify him in calling upon the house not to insult the Irish nation by puttisg down their right of petition, and by treating crime, not by the ordinary process of law, but by opposing crime to erime, and revenge against revenge. The bonorable member for St. Alban's hiad said, that there had been few petitions from Englunal -not fifty-against this bill; he [Mr. O'Connell] asserted that there had been at least seventy. But when it was considered that the leading press of Lonclon luad either been silent on behalf of thein (the opporents of the bill), or had taken part against them, was it sturprising that the feelings of the people of England should not be expressed loudly in their be'alf? The bill had two parts, one unfounded altogether, the other foumien on sone melaneholy facts, to which an unenostitutional remedy was applied. He still contended that no ease hal been made out for a recasure which enabled a lord lieutenant to prohibit any meeting however peaceable. What became then of their offers of generosity; give him justice; he laughed to scorn their offers of generosity. Were there any grievances in Ircland? When he was asked why he regretted the loss of neectings, he asked in return, were there no grievances in Ircland? No one hat been larily enough to lleny there were grievances in Irclams. If there ever was a country in which agitation was necessary, where it became a sacred iluty, it was Irelanl at this momene. Shew him, in their agitation, that they had ever statel as a grievance what was no grievance. [Ilrar.] He challenged muy one to point out an instance in whieli a grievance had heess exaggerated or inaginary. The conmon law annl the magintracy were sufficient to put down the evils complained of without recourse to this measure, If you put down agitation, you put down the prineiples whicl! recently renovated your constitution, which wire earried too far when they brought one monareh to the seafiold, and were not carried far enought when they only banishull another from the throne. Hut it was said that this bill must be mave a law, because it was to be necompanied by liealing measurcs. Ilealing masures! lie defical the prement ministers to point out any loealing measures whiel they had proposen for the betefit of Irelatul. The Irisli reform bill was said to be one; that hill thit, indert, follow the English reform bill, but it was a narrow, insufficient, oligarelieal, ant insulting bill. What other tueasores could the ministers point to' Not one. And set Ircland hat griesanests, even the right lionorable gevilloman ailmitted that, ant one of its ehief grievancen ut frrevent was an arlministration which hat deecived it. [llar.] Thuy load nade great promises to the propile of Ireland, but they bad ilone nothing for its bent fit. "That people labored under greal grievances-what onght to be flone to relieve them? 'l'o allow them to meet pracrably atal to pretition for their removal, and sen to ohtain the conficlence even of their most disturhed diatriets. He exdaimed against the injustice; he abominaterl the calnmany; be treated with scorn in an asscmbly of freemen the assertion that the language nsed at puhbie nuertings in livelund was too mrong anf lolit. This was the language whieh lovil Castlereagh applied to the petitions of the people of Fagland, when he smught to gag them with the siv aets. This was the language: which tyrants always used whon they wished to vartish over the oppressions w hich extracted the groans and lamentations of turmented inilions, If the grierance was real, the terms in whieh you drpieten it could unt ls* too bolth, -if the suffering which it catused was past coulurance, the terms in which you theseribed the manuer in which it wasle the ivon to pierere into the soul emald not the ton vinlens. He hat now tone with his objections to the first part of this hill; he now carme to the second puat of $i$, which containetl two frightful clauses. One of them instituted courts, which, for want of a better name, ministers liad been pleased to eall eourts-martial. Courts-martial they were not; they were, as he had styled them, revolutionary tribunals. But what signified the name by which they were called, when the country was conupelled to hear the frightful thing' The clanse appointing them annihilated the Irial by jurydrove from the bench the judge who havi been taught by long experience to distinguish what was evinlence froun what was not-tmried out of the box those whom the accusel might elallenge, even if their countenances displeased him, got ritl of the forms which were cstablished for the protection of innocence; and of those sanctions which were inslituted to prevent even guit from being unjustly convieted, and in their stead erected a new tribunal of five or six military officers, seleeted at the arbitrary discretion of the crown.

Such men-he spoke of them in their judicial eapacity alone, for in their private capacity he did not mean to impeach their honor and integrity - such men had not either the cducation, the babits, the patience, or the assiduity which were requivel of juilges. He had never yet been satisfied with the deeision of any court-martial he lad seen. ["Oh, Oh."] That might be his bad taste; but lie would even go firther, and state that be had never heren satisfied with the decision of military men when acting upon otlier tribunals. That might be bad taste also: but it was his opinion, and therefore he was bound to state it. Ife therefore asked every honest Euglishman who heard him, not to hansl over the people of Ireland to these nongrel peeudo-military tribunals, which were ealled courts-martial, but were so in nothing but the name. What evidence had been submitted to their consideration to justify them in establishing these revolutionary tribunals? F'irst, there was a red box, then, to make the evidence stronger, there were ten or eleven anonymous letters; and, lant of all, to crown the elimax, there was a a vulgar ballad. Woulil they, upon such evidence, annihilate the trial by jury? 'l'lis court-martial clause was accompanied by another, which gave the most unpreceIlented indemnity to every military man who acted upon it; for if lie was guilty of ontrage in the execution of it, the coulil only be punished by court-martial; and if he left the army before the court-martial was summoned, he coulit not lee punished even by that. As to putting down predial agitation, he had himsclf suggested a clause by which it cunld lave been put down legally, and by whiek your constitotional law would have been made stronger than it was at present.

Hut that clanse they luad refused, because it eame from him-from him who had twice the anxiety which they lual to put down alisturbance and ontrage. ("Hear," and a laugh.) If lic had doubted before regareling the policy of repealing the union, could lie entertain a doubt regarding it after the transactions of that evening, in which he lual seen his honorable frient, the member from Kildare, reccived almost with a vell because le slared to raise his voice in behalf of his injured country? The rulers of Fugland thought that they might oppress Ireland, because luer poople were divided among themselves. Separated thry inficed were; hut let them once become united, as lie trusted they would soon he, and they would tell those who talked to Ulem aliout the generosity and kintiness of Funlsurl, that it was not generosity and kindness they wanted, but equality anul justice. They woulnl say to the minimters of Fingland, "govern your own heautiful country as yon pleas-legislate for Britain wisely and weltbit we lrislmen, bearing allegiance to a common king, and living under a common constitution, will legislate for ourmelves." (iovernment might depend upon it that thry were not putting down but strengthening the ery for the repeal of the umion by these coercive measures; that licy were urat retarding but accelerating the progress of Ireland to that great act of justice of which he was the lumbile advocate, and that they were adding energy to the dermands of the poople by refusing to hear them when calnuly and sliqsassionately urged, and by aneering at the bundis of fialway and the uncouth names of Irish parishes, as if the peopule of Ireland were their subjects and not their coequals. He repeated that the people of Ireland were not $8,000,000$ at present, becanse they were divided, but they would be $8,000,000$ whet they had

Citizen akpasinestatisk：
Whes in 162 A I adopted the voluntary pesolution of pelf－ba－ sisherent，to save my country from the hirtur＊of civil war，my conmant prayer to heaven was，that il I evef prefryred my private interests to the public wellare，the punishumet to whechil had thas freely sulojectral myoelt maght beconne perpetnat；lout that if my life and conduct had lsecth conserenated th the good of the na－ stuas，slive might romenber and restore one tu liet inestinnable an． ciety．And，in fact，the sovereign statew，the liseratumg army，and a vat majonty of the people，pruclaimed my return；ath frona the abject clave of the proseribed．I wan raised to the honaralile poationt of supretne elinef of the rppuhlic．In that estraordinary event，מu secret aprings－no family intereat bad any phare；ztill lese was it attributable to the demands of poweiful relative－ the affecting sapplication of a teunler apoune－the piteous grief of chidspu，or the ever repeated etforts of a lirother who identi－ fied his fate with mine．Such inditatons brouglit back to lionne Popilus，Cicero and Mariu－－hut I was realled th my conntry by the apontawenus accianations of the arny，thit by the free aneient Boare were reptared tion bani－linmot by the death of their enebiles；whalat i bave espayed the pame hleating，when those whose influence conupelted my rile were still in the fill enjoynent of power，and elobtributid inn－t diemseives to re－ store me to the brasom of iny country；Whacver owed more generous return th the people than i？To the Mexicana，I owe every thing；and thost who were my enemica，have over－ whelmed me with honors atol distinetion．

On my arrival at Vera Cruz，partios were engaged in a mortal atrugle．Tlue ehambers rejecting all mesures in conciliation， elosed the door to all accommbiation．The lilusals，who could expect nothing front the pullic power，balanced on thetr vworda their own fate，and future diatiny of thes eountry．War raged in every quater，and the krenest foresight comid diseern no hooit to the bluody stragile．Nueli was the state of the rapublic， when I landed on its whores．

The belligerenta，concentraling their forecn，were apprash－ ing each other；timse of genecial ituxtamente moved Itom the states of the futrion，upant the egrital of the confriteration： thoee of general Santa Anna abrandimed the sipge of Mexico， and advanced to meel thrm．Ali．in a whril，annonnerd a new Pharnalia，as decisive of the fate of our nation as that was of the dentiny of Rome and of the world．

Under these circumstancea，I directed my conrwe in the city of Pucbia．The afmies wore approanching that capitni．The blood of the Mexicans wan fluwing in torrents，and the fichos of Posudas，strewed with entpsis，enlled aloud for an anhlunitntive intervention by peaceful reference．The nature nf the atiair， required it at the moment．A truee，during which the eonsent of the states to any treaty might be solicited，wha of dilficuit at catameat in the lieat of passion，whowe angry violence tronka no deiny，Seviral Icgisinturen，whose ophnious were known， had rejected anch conchiation as the ease required，and at brist the truce could only have produced the fatal effects whieh othera had done－Hamelv，to give tune to the paties in repair their tossea，and to unbridied rage minre：aclivaty and dariug．

These powerful considerations，the outry of aflieted huma－ nity，and the most hoiy doties which my return to my eauntry imposed upon me，deeided me to improve the happy monernt to conclinde a prape．The milld and geprerous elasyeter of the Mexicant，and the philnemphic dispowition of the genrrals and chlefs of both armies，infinied me whit the bilen ot iniuatius a Craternal reconciliation；but political opinions beine variuus， and tadividual interests opposed，it was indspensable to recur to a errtain，recogniked，incontroverible principle；and this primeiple is the nambial scovereignty，the fountant and onagital of puthic power．What intier juiseiple but thes eonid in a da－ Toibed cumbunity，＂gisiate cantrary spintons，arconaudate miverse interest，and reconcile eontiadictory views？Wbilet a quastion wheh embraced the very existeare of our esvil wollety was diachased by force of arnin，where was the au－ turt tibunal to decide it Undonbtedty there was none other thatl thee jrople，for in it alone repides that boundiens powry indiaponamide fur the solutian of such doficultued．The his－ tony of the ancient republice，and even of monareltes，de－ monstrate this truth．The most deepotic king in political crisus， have turned，as to the ark of salvation，to the cenvocation of shaten geveral，extraordinary congresern，diela and other repre－ sentative bodecs，which，ander diffrent denominations，liava had no other steject than to convult and revere the will of the perple．Withit the peogle，all citizeni are comprehended－ all private interests are there enbraced，and partien and pas－ sinus vanish or are hevtrahzed it the comiuon mase，where，of cournu，alone are fouud ewtain and iunpartial decisions．

Nuch wrere the guiding prineiples of my conduet in December lant．Nociety obowk to its foundations－public contidence vio－ lated－the law contemined－the state was on the britk of a frighful crisis．The perwonn occupying the supreme authority； were in cotsfict with a majority of the nationt，and instead of dircting these wonderfui nvents whith phill and tact，by an lit． expluable perversty，obstinately rediated the public wish．Te attath th a proper resuit in this general confusion，it was neers－ sary to stirnce the nobsy strife of arms，and then Histen in the ＊ugreme will of the sation．Tise manistic concluded on the 9th Irecember，accoaplislied the first object，and the cunventiont of Zavaicta fultilled the fast．Were this a proper place，I night thewribe the memorable interview，held at that estate between the grnerals，chiefs and officers of the eunteuding furces．Be－ urath the duaty roof of a rustic and namelews ediffe，guestions ail important to the pubbic wrifare，were freely diseuswed：there guced faith，republiean liberty and pire patritatiom shone re wpilemalent：there pivate pasolutis were repressed by sound rea－ mull：and there，In fine，the military gave a new proof of thous and eivic vittoe，by genertualy yiehliog up tbeir commimann， and bowing with reveribee to the shpreme will of the peoptr． The meeting at the estate of Zavaleta，presputhed a picture of deep intereat to the phitosaphac observer：there shone forth in splemior all that was august and tooble：the taten who eompored It－the very men who two short weekn befare，nomidat the snoke and roar of artillery，songht each ottiens extermination． there presented in their sedate and eomposed countenancer． the magnificent apectacle of a patriarchal axipenbly．Never did an insolent aristocracy in its orgiey uffer to the world a reuntoa of cituzens as divituterested in their views－as moble in their conduel．
Tlise，eitizen representatives，is a passing＊ketrlt of what of rurevol at the ertate whuls gave a wame to the coniventimis of pariffeation：a cenvention at the time applauded by those who now lrait it with invectives，and which has nüce lieen waine－ tioned by the nation isseti：
1＇hes plan－the work of phitomplay and sound judememt，bit－ ter us it may be to the eneuies of dernocracy，wilf stand for us a Howument of honor，and a lenson inatructive to our postertiy， for it records furever to Mexicalns，that in the people，awd in the peopte alone，resides the mass of ancerelgn power，which is all sufficient to rescue them from the greotest perits．W＇hell the in－ thanmatory panplalets－now seatterrol in profusinn，and the names of their andtors slatll be aunk in ohlivion，thim plan of parifieation，the object of their prement rancour，will vecupy a brilliant epot in the thetory of the worhif．

Ilut in proportion as this Horentront affirms the luportant dhema of populat woverrignty，it has been a ecaudal to the arta－ tocratie party，for in it neetn regaril their privileges an all outwork to their wletiour pretensions－it is buit wonderful，therefiore，that they attack will rage，a plan which has forever prosuated a pawer they have an terorionkly atmomed．
Invested on the 2fith becember，with the auprome power， endeavored as far as hwouan urthre allusta to rise superies to mran pmasions，and to divest myspif ot all party sporif－-1 matk． ed nut for myrell＇the path ut＇justice in my condemet，impartiality in uny juilgmiente and tolerntiun towards all．＇Jlue slificultice i have had to overrome，admit of no explanntion．I hnow twot whether I have suerusich in the aduinistratian，nor is it easy for me to puss juigment thereon．If 1 mizht have performod my duties hriter，and lid＇not attain to that perfection，that na－ tum which has Ioaled me witts so unauy favort，as a last indul－ genee，will overlook my errors．

At my entrance on power，I found an exhansted treasury， loanril with an Imusense delit，conntlese arreara in pavinent－ widow，orplanns and pen＊ioners pinnged into misery．Themish the penper ivpartment，I phteraif into arragements with the mereantule interest，wherehy，with perfect sceurity to it，the terasury has realized recripte to watidy lts must pressing clainas far bevoud what enald have been anticipated．Cireat eennomy has heen efferted，and national eredit amil public contidence restored．If the wame systum of economy slall be maintained， if the matitime rustom hotye shall be parral in better regula－ tivn，and if the important hank nn the pullice eredit shall be es－ tablisind，ont income will augment，and the expenses of govern－ ment，and the immenae delt that weichs upon $1 t$ ，will he pro－ tpeted．The meeretary of the trennury will promptly take the necessary initiative ateps，the early adoption of which，I moat earnestly recommend to the legislature, as upou theas depends our political existence.

Nor of minor ultereat is the arrangement of the adminintration of justuce. With a bwart deeply pencirated with the evis of the country, and anamated with the anost hively deare to correet thena, on the very day on which I entrred upon the tederal goverament, I devoted myself to an attentive caamuation of the actual state of the adoinsitration ol justice. Convinced that apon it depend essentialty the blewsings whel the conststation and the laws secure to the citizeus under the name of mivate righte and guarantres; the fulthinent of whict produces jublic and private morality and the solta happmens of man $n_{1}$, tron time to time, isaued such orders as my lunchour authorised to Invigorate this branch, which was tound but too nuch delolitat ed by circumatances. 1 recommend most earucatly the early adoption of the reforms which wall he duly preneuted to the cuas gress of the union, by the secretary of that branch.

The departaents of war and the marine, will also, in proper ume, initiate the inearorea which I suputated for in the pian of Zavaleta and othera, which mayy lead to the indiapenable reform of the active aud peruatient army. That army, the taank of obtoquy to the ungrateful, bas sucesively resolved the two important problems of independence ant liberty; and althongh it fad failen into the disorganization attendant upan revolutions, the uase has arrived to re-orgasize it in a manser phited to our republic. The elements of which it is compnsed preseltt fine materiale for a useful reform. The generals ansl chuffu in command of it, wish to see its discipline restored. To the generai eongrese if appertains to prescrite organic laws, adequate for the purpose.
In the development of the past revolution, more than fourtees thousand men of all arms were agsembled In the captal, from the most remote points of the republic. The troops of the lise witbdrew, and have already reached their respective ntatea -thoee of the militia bave marehed to their several districts, and it being the conatitution of these useful corpa, furmed frum the industrious and labosing citizens, to withdraw from active cervice when the etuergescy is past which calls them forth, the greetert part of them bave relired-producing an anninal saving to the peblic veapury of three millions seven hundred and odd dollars.

In regard to our foreign relations, they remain in a favorable state, and nothing has occurred recently but the notice (although Imeficial) of a pofitical change in Epain. The governinent has not neglected the national laterests in this particular, oof forgoteen the legislation therewith connected. Ihrre renson to be regeneration, and will shortly give us proofs of it. The culightenFeg people of the United States of the north, elierishes our social felicity, and spplauds the triumph of liberty.

Here terminates this very rapid expose of the state of the nasion. Actnal witneases of the events, the Mexicans require no detaila to judge of the eondition of the republic. The civilized world is regarding us, sad desiren to be mote intimately informed of our situation-we are batund to satisfy this desire, anul it will be complied with by the reprots which the four secretaries of the republic will present, within a few dayn, to thas anguat asembly, and whichaccompanied by a brief ingnifesto, will be printed. These documents, written with republicall sineerity priated. These dicuntions wad ermors; but they will show ai Whe same time, that if the Mexican people has defisetin and viems, as every nation has, it is also endowed with skill to avoid the precipice, with energy to reclaion its outraged rights, and to cause ito sovereignty to be respected.
Having concluded the listorical part of our ocenrreners, may I be perimitted th say a word on the political course of my administration. It has beeu maznanimons, frank, ard liberal; and be the sarcasins of the oppositiou what they may, it if manifest, that from the 96 th of December, when I reevived the reins uf goverament, a gun has not beet fired, a tear haw not been bhed, none have been arreeted, none pervecuted-in a word, the action of the governineut has been energetie and ennstant but unperceived. Who can argue against facts? LrgiAlatorn! may Almighty God grant that Mestenns may for ever enjoy the peace and liberty whilh the plan of Vavalcia oblained for them. Some senerals and a few ifficers alone, thronglt crror or caprice, Incurred the paiu of deprivation of tincir ratsk, tmporeal hy The 11 tharticle of thatcompact in those whon did nim ailliere til it. 1, as the suprenie mangistrate and guarantor of the convention, fisund myself uader the painful necessity of derlaring then within the terus of the sand penaliy, until the decision uf the aeneral cungress could be had. I protent most molemaly that such an order cost me an effort to rive ahove the acntimutats of my heart. The iden of an abuse of pawer never occuncd to me, but as a man in pultic station, I was compelled to execote a painful dusy-it whes performird; but when I this day render an account of iny procecdings to the represcntatives of the peoplethis day, when 1 an on tive uve of retiriug far ever to oblivion, allow ne to present my earnest supplication as a sinple isdividual to every one of the tmotobers of this diznified assembly in favor of those citizents. The reprosentatives of a generus people ought to be mazuanimoun. Iflatter niyself that my entreation will be heard, and I already antioipate the ligh zratitheation of knowing that those geucrals, chinfe, and othicers are rewtored to their rank, emoluments, and fill enjoyment of all their privileges, It in but juat that I should at the chaee of my public career, recomnaend that concord which I invoned when I arriverl ai Vera Crus so fulfil the orders of the soveretgi people.

MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT EANTANDER.
Presilent Santande's uessuge at the opeuing of the congress of New firaoada, March 1st, is nearly as long bs the lart uters. sage of premblent Jackson. We translate a few pasagraplas. The foreign relations of the republic are represented as genepal Iy patinfactory.
[Jour. of Cown.
y ratirfactory. The cebtral republic of Colnmbia having been keparated into public tronties celebrated with the United $nates, Gieat Itritain and Holland, doing justice to the clains founded upon thuse traties, and although the iewpective diplonatic agento of the natinus with which the Colombint governurent extabished rela timns have rema oed in this capital, recognizing de facto the hew political form which New Ganada las silopted, France aloue haw, ne yet, formally appointed a charge d'aflaires near the goventionent of New Granala.
With the now American rrpeblies, among whirh an Indrntity of principles has formed a etrirt aish nalural alliance, the suicable relations which before existrol have nist bren changrad.
It is a entibfactinn to the esecutive to announce, that thronghout the vast exton of the state, peare and tranyuillity afe ellayrid, as the immedint effect of the adhesion of the sreat majorlty of the people to the exbiting ithatitutions, and the care with which the executive and jts agents cause the laws to be strictly obeyed. * - The nation ought to tmake anch provislon that every chizen miny leanin to rend, write, and calculnte accounth-by applying, for the prosent, a certain portion of the natiotsal fusds for the eneousagement of parish sehonls.

The recripts into the treasury during the year pading 30th June, 1832 , were $\$ 2,525,310 \mathrm{i5}$, and the extimatel vxpendlthree of the present year amount in $82,171,6 \geqslant 147$, excla-ive of 8346,000 for ilie purchave, freight and transpustation of tobarro.
The forcign debt is one of the gravest matters which engage the attcution of the government. We are dehturs, and ought th pay. The constutucut cunvention bas recognized the fireign delt in the proportion which lelooge to New Granada, and it belongen to yourwalves of dictate some means hy which its payment any he gradually effected. Whatever may be the rewnit of the mecting ol comumasioners from the thrye states, Now Gramada is already pledged to satisfy a purt of the debt which the republic of Colombia contracted. It will be hourorable to the conntry and the rrpresentative hody, t", adopt some means at the prenent time, going to show that we desire to fullil nur wolemin promisea. Fmitunately tiere are now in this eapital representatives of the stochbolders, duly authoised in make certain propositions relative th ecenring the interest of the debt in future, and to a definuive arrangament of thin afflair. I entrnat yon to turn your attention to this delieate matter-to pirovide for locaring, by means of a committee of looth houces, the ingtitries and proposala of the repuresentatives of our creditare-ani to base the arranzement upon a puudent ealculation of the share which falls to New Granada, le it more or lews.

ERMAEES ON THE PRECRDING Law
A'rom the Albany Argus of May 2.
We omitted to notice ie our sumbinary of the inore importan public acts passed at the late scsoion of the legislature, the bill
"to sublect to taxation certain debta due to non-residents." It is a bill which must affeet (whether favorably of unfavorably remains yet to be seen) the Iaterests of thone sectoos of the state in which the lands of the Holland tand company, the Pulteney and other entates are sitnated; and which are now nnder mortgages, probably to an immense amount, for the orignal purchace monsy; all of which are intended to be reached by the bill. We shall publish it to-morrow.

From the New York American of May 6.
The law to taz debts due to non-reaidente, is pabhished in our columns to-day. It is of this law that the Argus, the officual paper, says, with 'bated breath, asd in most cautious plisase, "that it remains to be seen" whether its effects will be fur gond or evil; juat es was well put by a Balumore paper, it remains to be geen whether the sun wili riae to-morrow, but with mo other uncertainiy as to the result. A more iniguitous law never was passed; and certaisly no one which should be anore resolutely questioned and oppoped through all the courts, by the parties, or the agents of the parties, whom it is meant to despoil. The city of New York bas looked quietly on the perpetration of this injustice, as though it were an act by which ber iminediate interests would not be affected, and reasoning apparently upon the perilous fallacy, that others' property may be etrack at with impunity, wo her's be untouched. Bat there are clauses in this act, if we mistake not, which are intended to reach every debt due upos real estate in this elty; and every dollar loased by the resideats of aey other state in this union, as well as by those of foreign countries, it now made hable to pay for watching, lighting and paving ourstreets, and even for the turtie feasts of its aldermen. How far the enterprizieg mechanics, who, upon this borrowed eapital, have constructed, aed are constructlag, very masy houses, will resist this law-which, If pronounced just and constitutional, must have the effect of driving away the foreigner with his wealth, and leave the iesident borrower In the mercy of resident lenders in legal possessios of a monopoly of the money market-we will not undertake to say: but it can hardily be doubtral, that when they are made awnre of the truth, they will not see any cause to thank their "Solomon's in council" for such an act.

MOTHER OF WASHINGTON.

Fredericheburg, May 8.
The preaident of the U. Slates, gov. Cass, secretary of war, Mr. Taney, attorney general, major Barry, postmaster general, and major Donelsos, the presidest's prirate secretary, arrived in town on Monday eveníg. They were accompanied by a number of citizens from the Distriet, eaptain Moore's company of national cadets, from Washington, captain Kinsey's company of riflemen, and captain Brockett's light infantry, of Alexandria, the marine band from the navy yard, as well as many strangers from the castern towns. They wete met a short distance beyond Falmouth by the marshals of the day, the Fredericksburg guards, the rifle company, and Fredericksburg blues junior, by whom the president and suite werc accompanied to their lodgings.

A troop of light horse frora the connty of Fauquier, under the command of eaptain Tho's T. Foundleroy, also arrived the same evening.

Layixe the conner stone. This eeremony took place on Tuesday, with very imposing effect About 9 o'clock the president was escorted from his lodgings to the town hall, where he was introdueed to a number of citizens and straagers, who called to pay their respects to the chief magistrate of the nation. The day was fine, and the oceasion attracted a large concourse of persons from the adjoining counties. The proecssion set out from the town hall at half past ten o'elock, and moved according to the arraagement of the committee, in the order and through the several streets previously designated, to the site of the monument.

As the procession moved up Main street, the extended line, the various uniforms of the militery, the glittering arms, the music, the dense mass that thronged the side walks, the crowded windows, overlooking the whole scene, altogether presented a view grand and imposing.

Arrived at the spot, after an appropriate prayer by the reverend $\mathbf{E}_{0}$ C. McGuire, an address was delivered by the president, and also by Mr. Bassett, the place with the inseription deponited, and the other usual ceremonies were performed. The procession then retnrned to the town hall, where the proecedings were coacluded, and the compranies separated.

The Fredericksburg Arena furnishes some further partieulars of the ceremony above referred to, and of cireumstancea connected with it. Among them we find the following-

A bardnreue, in the old fashimed Virginia style, was prepared nuter an aumple awning, in the beantifnl groumbls of Hazle Hill, whieh was partaken of by about five hundred persons. Among the invited guests present were the presinlent and hearls of chipartinunts, the military companios from a distanee, anl all strang'rs of elistinction. A hont 4 n'clock dancing commenced anif was krpt up with emusiderahle spirit until near snnset. The arrangements were excellent, anl the entertainment slid great eredit to the contractors, Messers. Blackburn & Curtis. There were, of eourse, neither toasts nor apeeches, but every one seemed to enjoy himself, and the most perfect order and harmony prevaileal throughout the evening.

Mueh credit is due to the monumental committere, and to the narshal-in-chief, colonel Bankhead, ant his assistant a for the jufieious arrangements mate on the $^{\text {a }}$ ocrasion.

We must not omit to mention the liberality of the steamboat and stage proprietors of the line between this and Washington, ins well as the assislance renterell to and Washington, "is well as the assislance remlereil to the:m by the proprictors of other lines ilivenging hence. T'he giathitous use of the boat amil eosaches was tembercil to the use of the connmittee, for the president anl suite, abul the marine hand, and but a very trifling charge mande for the transpertation of one of the military companies hither, and nothing for taking them back.

The wovenental cenemany.
Adtreat of the chair nan of the momumental committee to the president of the l'niled Slatet, at the laytng of the corner atone of the monument to the mother of Wahington.
In the name of the monutnental committee, i present ynu, general, the plate which is intended to diatliggusth that atone just adjusted by the thaster of the lodge as the corner stone of this pile. I am happy, sir, that he who has defended his country's rlehta when peritief in the eause of freedom, hor cities when the hanghty foe, confident af nuccesm, presped eagerly to weize their beanty and booty, has bled firy lier, risked life, fortune and bonor in her cause, to here to add to the honors of this necasion. Who ste meet to make a pilgrimage to this klirine of nallowed relicm? Who mat fo seal the stone which crowns the comer of a monumunt to the mother of Washington, as be who nhw ocenpirs that exalied station first filted by the son of that now oecripirs that exalied station first filied by the son of that minther? Liet the oecamion. general, and its eirrumatiances, excuse this, while we turn to remark more iminediately on the objeet of our present regard. If we look to the page onf history, or vurvey the earth, we see monumeuta have in evcry age and every chme, inarked thosn apots distiugbished by the happeniug of some grvat event, nr risen as memorials of the once active virtues of departed worth. Frail man is ever apt to frrpet the pearua froin the experience of others the means of attaining what he aims at, and too often stumbles nver a new, nobroken tract, tumumdful of the brightent objects by which he might trace his foad to thene diwinctrons after which natural desire so ardently tonls. Hence, enloghtenvd poaterity canonize the fame of their ancestora by emblens the most unfading their minds can devise or their powers esecute.
Sncli is onr constitution, that the etongest appeals to nur better feelings is through the medium of ourgroaser facultien. Thus monuments are lasting incentives to those who view thein, to Initate the virtues they commemorate, and attala by their life and rpirit, glory and houor. Nations share in the common sympathies nf nature, and partielpate ia all the honors heaped upon their mighty dead. In looking apoat this manument, (raised chiefly hy the munificenee of a patrintic individual), the eitizens of there atates will remember that they are brothers. They will remember that here lie the ashea of the mother of the "F'ather of his enuntry." They will aeknnwledge, too, this just trihute to the taerits of her who, early deprived of the support of her eonsort, encouraged and fintered, by precept and example, the dawning virtnes of her illurtious min, and nurtured into matnrity those anbler faculties, which were the ornament and glory of her waning rears. They will aeknowledge the hallowed eharacter of this rotanatic spot, ever to he remembered as the eharacter of this rotanantic spot, ever to te remernbered as the phace chowen for her private devotious-the spot to whieh she place chosen forr her private devotions-the spot to which she ofen led her offorwing, and pointing to the order and beauty of the works of nature, here so eminently displayed, she zuided their youthful minds to enntemplate the power and benevilence of the great Author of their being. Here she taught the attributes of Goll-that to him, as thelr Creator, alt praise belonged -that to glorify Him wat the object of their creation, and to this end their every energy should he devoted. Here she asked, on a dying requent, that her mortal remaina might rest. Hallowed be this wish-wacred thix spot-larting as time this monument. Lat us cherish the rememberance of this hont. Let us earry with us hroce, engraved on mur hearte, the memory of her who is here interred. Her foriunde her, plety-her every grace of life-her eweet peace in death-through her sure hope of a bleseed immortality.

Tb eridich the prenident of the Uwited Steter replted ans follows Sus-To you, and to your colieagnee of the Hotumpentas cans mittre, I return my weknowledgments for the klad sewtiment you have exprosed towards mt, and for the flatterimy termin in Which they bave lieen ennveyed. I eannot but feet thas i as Indebted to your parilelity, and aot to any serviees of my ows for the warm hearted reeeption you have given me. On thi for the warm hearted reeeption you have given me. On thi oceasion, as well ass on many others, in the course of a life nov drawing towaids its clowe, i have found the comfidence and at tachment of my countrymen as for beyutidmy merita as my expectations.
We are ansembled, fellow cftizens, to witness and assist in art interesing eeremony. More than a century has paseed away since whe to whom this tribute of respect is aboat to be paid, en tered ujom the active reenes of life-a century fertile in wonder fit events, and in distingnished nsen who have participated is them. Of the evevents our country has furnished ber full share and of these distingulwhed men, whe has produced a Washiag tun. If he was "first in war, firwt in peace, and first in the henrts of his conntrymen," we may say withnint the impntation of nmtional vanny, that, if not the fint, he was in the very fron rank of thnae, too few indeed, upon whose eareer mankind eap lowk back withowt regret, and whose memnry and example will furuiali themes of enlogy for the patriot, wherever free laatitu tions are honored and maintained. His whs no false glory, deriving its lustre from the glare of apendid and destructive ac tione, comblifucing in profeakions of attachenent to his comntry and terminating in the wubvernion of her freedom. Far differea Is the radnance which surrounds his name and fame. It shine mildly and equally, and guides the philanthropiat and eltizen iv the path of duty-and it will guide them long after thoee false light which have attracted too mueh attention, shall have been extingulikied in datkness.
In the grave before us lie the remains of his mother. Long has it becn unnoarked by any monumental tablet, but not unhonoted. You bave nndertaken the pious duty of erecting a column to her memory, and of inscribing upon it the simple bet eulogy could be bigher, and it appeals to the beart of every American.
These memorials of affection and gratitude are conseerated by the practice of all ages and nations. They are tributes of reapeet to the dead, but they coavey practical ieswons of virtve and wivitom to the living. The mother and son are beyond the reach nf buman applause. Aut the bright exauple of parental and filial pxceltence, wheh their conduct furnishes, cannot but produce the most salutary efficts upon our countrymen. Let their egample be before ins, from the first lessons which hataghs the child, till the mother's doties yield to the courne of preparation and action which nature prescribes for him.
The address which we have heard, portrays ia just colors this most estimable woman. Tradtion, saym, that the eharacter of Washingion was aided and strengthened, if not formed, by the care and precepts of his mother. She was retharkable for the vigor of her intellect, and the frimness of her resolation. Left In eally life, the sole parent of a youag and numeroas fumity, she devoted herseif with exemplary filelity to the task of gulding and edueating them. With limited resources she was able, by eare aud cconmmy, to provide for them, and to enpure them a respectable entrance mpon the daties of life. A firm bethever in the sacred trutha of religion, she tangts its prinelples to her ehilidren, and inculcated an carly obedience to to injumetions. It Is paid by those who knew her intimately that she acquired aad maintainsd a wonderfol ascendancy over those armand her. Thin true characteristic of genias attended her through life, and even in its dechine, after her onn had led his country to indepentence, and had been called to previde over her councils, he approaebed her with the mame reverence athe had taugtht hum to exhibit in early youth. This course of misternal discipline, no doubt, restrained the natural ardor of his temperament, and conferred upon him that power of self command, which was one of the most remarkable traits of him mand, which was one of the most remarkable traits of his eharseter.
In tracing the few rceollections which can be gathered of ber principles and condnct, it is impossible to avoid the conviction that these were closely interwoven with the destiny of her son. The great points of his character are before the world. He who rus may read them in his whole eareer, na a ettizen, a soldier, a maglstrate. He posscssed an unerring Judgment, if that term can be applied to human nature; great probity of purpose, high moral principles, perfect self-possession, untiring application, as inquiring mind, sceking information from every quarter, and arriving at its concluelons with a fall knowledge of the stibjeet; and be added to these an inflexibility of resolution which nothing eould ehange but a conviction of error. Look back at the life and conduct of his mnther, and at her domestic goverament, as they have been this day delineated by the chairman of the poraties and have been deseribed by them, and they will be found admirabiy adapted to form and develope the elements of such a eharacter. The power of greatness was there, but had it not been guided and directed by maternal solicitude and judgment, its possesant, instead of presenting to the world examples of virtue, patriotinm and wisdom, which will be precious in all succeeding aqes, might have added to the number of those master spirita, whose fame resta upon the facuties they have abused, and the Injuries they have commitied.

How important to the females of our country are these remintscences of the early life of Waahington, and nt the materual care of her upon whots its future coarse depended. Afficetusu luses regulated by diserrtion, mught have changeat the cliarncter of the eots, and with it the dertantes of tive sation. We liuve renson to be proud of the virtue anti nutelisences of our frmalos. As mothere and sisters, and wives and daughters, therir dutios are perlorneed with exemplary fidelity. Fellow eiluzens, this district of eoutitry gave birth to Warhingion. The ancient commonwealth within whose lonirere we are awsembled from every portiou of this happy and flutrishing nnton, renowned as she fo for ber institations, for her devotion to the cause of freedom and for ber serviees and sacrifices to promote ft , and fir the eminent inen whe bis sent forth to ald ows country with heart and hand, In peace and war, presents a claim still stronger than these upon the grastude of her sister states in the birth and life of Washington. Most of you, my friends, mudi speak of him from report. It is to tne a source of high gratification that I can speak of him froun personal know-I-dge and observation. Called by the partiality of my countrymen to the bigh otation once so absy filled ty him, and feeling, that in all but a desire to serve you, 1 am unworthy to occupy his seat; but sensible that in this position I owe the honor of an invitation to ubite with you in this work of affection and gratitade, I am unwillitig the opportunity should pass awny without bearing iny testimony to his virtues and services. I do this in justice to my own feelings, beiag well aware, that his fane needs no feeble aid from me.
The living witneeses of his public and private life will soon follow him to the tomb. Alrendy a second and a third generation are upon the theatre of action, and the mor and the events of the revalation, and of the internating period between it anil the firm establiehment of the present constitutum, must ere loag, live only in the pages of history. I wituessunl the public conduct and the private virtues of Washington, andi I waw and partucipated in the contidence which hee inspured, when probably the stability of our institutions depended upinf lis permosial influesce. Many years have passed over me aince, but they have increased instuad of dimiuishing my reverence for his character, and any confidence ia his principlas. Iis Farewell Addresn, that powerfol and affeeting appeal (i) his country men, that mamanal of wiedom for the American citizen, embodtew his sentiments and feelings. May He who holds in his hands the fate of nations, impress ut ali with the eonviction of its truth and importainen, and teach us to regard its lessons as the precious legracy he hes bequeathed ua. And if, in the Instability of luman affaire, our beloved country should ever be expoard to the thraseters which have overwheimed the other republics that have preceded us in the world, may Providence, when it suffers the buur of trial to come, ratse up a Washugton to guide us in averting the danger.

The Chesapeake and Ohio eanal company, and the Haltimore and Ohio rail roal cunapany, by their rexpectuve cammitece, covenant and agree tu the following terabs of conpromise, sub. ject to confirmation or rejection by their reapect companies:

1si. To aecept the act of the general assembly of Maryland, entited "an act to provtde for the continuation of the Baltunore and Ohio rall road to Harper's Ferry, and for other purposes," within the time limited by the said act for the aceeptanee thereof by both eompanies, so as to securc to each its mitended benefits. And as the purpose which the legislature of Maryland had In view in passing the same, will be more effectually attanced by a modifieation of some of its conditions, the said companies inatually and reciprocally covenant and agree, in the event of auch acceptanee by boib faithfully to fulfil the conditions hereinafter inserted for their common benefit, and so far to modify those stipulated in their behalf by the aet aforesaid, viz:

The Baltioore and Ohio rail raad company, in consideration of the damage that may be done to the canal, and of the interruption or hazard to which its havigation will be unavoidably exposed, in the construction of the rail road along the marain thereof, bind themuclvea to gay to the C'ineAapeake and Ohin canal company, for grading the four imiles and one-tenth of the road between Harper's Ferry and the Point of Rocke, hereinafter described, the sum of twu hundred and sixty-six thousand dullars. The said four miles and one-tenth of the road shall consint of a opace to be laid of between the entrance of the bridge at Harper's Ferry and a point two miles therefrom, according to the focation of the said road, which point will be below Mhllar's Narrows: of one mile and one-twentiath, extending fromn a point opposite to the door of the chiaf public house, at the l'oint of Rocik, ap the valiey of the Potomac, comprehending the lowar Poist of Rocks; and of one other mile and one-twentieth, extending above and below the upper Point of Rocks, so as to comprebend the same; embraeing all that part of the canal border at those places in which an interference exiati between the location of a canal and rail road. In making as well as locating the said road, the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company shali act in conformity with theif own Judganest, subject to the conditions, as to the curvature, Incliaation of surface, and the breadih of the said toad, which the act of the general, asmembly of Maryland preecribes, axcept that so much of the said road as is expected to be hereafter commen to the Frede rick and liarper's Ferry turnpike company and the rail road co mpany, shali be of the breadth at the surface, of not less than thii ty feat, instead of twanty, for the better accommedation of both these companies.

Should the canal eompany prelier it, thay may begin the lowent section of the said road at any elevation oppowite the tavern at the Point of Rocks, not exceer' ing fuur feet abova that of the road now conatructed at that pla ca; and, in case of a change of the present eisvation, the expens, $\}$ of raising tha present road and ite appurtenant fixtures, so an to a. Jjust the same to the road below and to Its extension abova, shal I be at the cost of the rail rond company; and staill be done at si reh tima na they may please to direct: provided, however, that at the fowar termination of the pase, through Millar's Narrowa, bbove mentioned, at both termisations of the pase by the upper: ? ?oint of Rocks, and at the upper termination of the pass by the I ower Pount of Rocks, the Baltimore and Ohio rail road compar iy may, if they please, in faing the elevation of these pointa, $\in \mathbb{I}$ termini, unite an angincer of their own appointment, with ti in emgineer of the eaval conpa-ay, charged by the same to m . ine the location thercef, so as to adjust those pointi to the intermediate rail road, according to the terms of the said act of the general assembly of Maryland; and the eanal company may, in like manner, unite their eagineer with tha anginemr of the rall road company, in fixing the intermediate tocation of the rail road, according to the said terms.
In the construction of the graduated road aforesaid, for the four miles and one-tenth, before mentioned and in satisfinction of all injuries that may be done the canal in the construction of the said road, and as indemnity for any injuries that may bo done the navigation thereof, during the eonstruction of the sajd road, payments of the $$ 206,000$ sliall be made monthly by the aid rall road company, in the following proportions, viz: onetwelfith part thereof on the ist day of June next, and one twelfth part on the firat day of each of the following monthe, until the zaid graduation shall be completed; bet if the same be completed earlier than the twelve months, allowed therefor, the residue unpaid, at the time of such completion, shali be paid on the tirst day of the month next ensuing the same.
The passage to the ilarper's Ferry bridge, acrose the eanal, from the rall road, whall be by a pivot, or draw bridge; the as pense of attending which shall be equally divided betweea the two companies; and the elevation of which, above the bottom of the eanal, shall remain; as at present adjnsted, at thrse feet above the bridge aeross the Potomac, noless it be, hereafter the plasure of the rail road company to elevate it still higher. And the curves of the road, at the entrance of the drfila or pass at the Point of locks, and at the crossing at the pame point or draw. brifige, loing not provided for by the aet of the general assembly of Maryland, shail be adjusted to the residue of the road, as ennvenimuty as ean be dons, in the graduation of the rail read by the canal company.
All expenses to be incurred, In condewning, or purchasing ground, or materiain, for the location and graduation of the ral road, through the four and one-tenth miles aforesaid, shall be, an, at all other placew, where the land rechired, met now, the property uf the canal company, at the proper cest of the rail road company; and where the said road shall ocebpy groand, now the properiy of the canal company, the rail road enmpany shall obtain, and convey to the canal company, an equivalent breadth of ground, along the noribern side of the rail road, for the future upply of materials to the eanai.
It is already, herein provided, that the portion of the rail road, at Harper's Ferry Narrows, shall be thiry feet itl width, for the common use of the Ilarper'w Ferry and Frederick turnpike, and the rail road companies. 'The eanal company will allow the ase by the rail road company, of any authority whicb thay possest to obtain permission from the turspike company, to the rail road company, to lay their rails on the part of the sand road commen to both, the canal eompany being bound by their articles of agreement, only for the graduation of the aid rond, from the Harper's Ferry bridge, dow'l to the point at which the sad turnpike will diverge from the rail read, to ascend the bill above Mislar's Narrows; and the rail road company shall, also, adjust the suiface of that bidga to the elevation of the pivot bridge across the canal, at their own coat.
The ratl road compuny agrees not to continue the rail road fortiser uif the valley of the Potomac than Harper'n Ferry, batil the Chesapeake and Ohio canal shall be completed as far as Cumberland, provided that the eanal be completed thereto, within the term allowed by the charter of the satd eanal company.
The period of twelve monthe from the date of the acceptance of these aruclen of compromise, shall be allowed the canal company, to complete the graduation of the four milcs and one-tenth of rall road before deweribed; but the president and direetors of the eanal company, sliall urga the contractors who aay undertake the same, to proceed with diligence, and to complete the graduation in the shortest time practicable, consisteatly with the health of the country.
In case of any possible difference of opinion, or diangreement between the two compasise, in relation to the construetion of these articies of compromise, such difference, or disagreement, shall be settled in the moda provided by the act aforesaid, for the setuement of the construction thareof, by the samm parties.

This report of the president and directors was, after debate, referred to a committee, consisting of Richard S. Coxe, John Mason, Arehibald lee, Thomson F. Mason and Henry Huntt; and the general meeting was adjourned to the 9th instant.

Yesterday, aceordingly, the general meeting re-assembled. Mr. Coxe, under the instructions of the commitve, reported against concurrence in the proposed arrangement, at the same time expressing his diseent from the conelusions of the cominittee.

A debate of considerable length ensued; after which, the question being finally taken on agreeing to the arrangement proposed by the president and directors it was decitled in the affirmative. The aggregate vote being, in favor of the comprotnise, 6,904 ; against it, 1,300 .

A compromise is therefore at last effected of this longstanling controversy, the Baltimore company having (as will be seen lyy the proccedings in a subsequent column) given full anthority to the president and directors of the company to ratify what they have already in fact agreed to.

The phesinaxt's visit. Some who ought to know, have thrown it out that president Jackson will be too much indisposed to proceed on his eastern tour, as was intend-ed-others, however, say, that lie will start vext week. The "New York Courier" gires it to be unlerstood that the president will more probably retire to Tennessee, and prepare for resigning his office; but the "National Intelligeneer" thinks that sucha retirment "is about the last thing in gen. Jackson's mind"-adding, it is "more likely that lie is looking forward to a re-clection for a third time." The latest accounts say that the presillent will start on his journey about the first of next month.

The present, it seems probable, will be a great scason for travel, usiless we shall be revisited by the cholera, or some other alarming disease. The secretary of the navy is now on a tour, and the "Pennsylranian" informs ns that Mr. Secretary McIane and Mr. Sceretary Cass will accompany the president, being joined at New York by the vice president; and that Mr. Secretary Woodbury having returned, he, with Mr. Duane, to be appointed serretary of the treasury, (in place of Mr. McI., who is to be transfesred to the department of state), will remain at the seat of government, and have charge of the publie affairs; for it is stated that the postrmaster-general will make a tour through the west. It is adiled, that Mr. Clay vill pay a viait to the eastern states, anll reported that Mr. Webster will make a journey through the western.* Mr. Randolph is aboot to make another voyage to Eng-hand-but, this time, at his own cost! Many other jour nies are assigned to other distinguished Indivlfluals, with what truth we know aot; but it scems certaln that we are to bave a "tavaclling equinct."
